1. Estoppel of assignor.]—Certain bonds belonging to the estate of D., deceased, had been exhibits & marked as such in a case in ct., & were afterwards lost & advertised for. About ten years afterwards W., the administrator of the estate, had the bonds in his possession as such, & pledged them to a broker for advances on his own account, the bonds then being long past due, but payment being provided for under statutory authority:—Held: neither the advertisement nor the marks upon the bonds, nor the broker's knowledge of the agent's insolvency, were notice to the pledgee of defects in the pledgor's title; & that the owners of the bonds, having by their act enabled their agent to transfer them by delivery, were estopped from asserting their title to the detriment of a bond fide holder.—*YOUNG v. 694. Admission of satisfaction—Deposit as security—Collusion—Action for delivery up.]—In 1869, B. gave a bond to H. for payment of money in 1874, with interest in the meantime. B. & H. both admitted that the bond was satisfied in July, 1870, but before complete satisfaction H. had deposited the bond with his bankers, who claimed a lien, & expressed an intention of suing at law on the bond when it should become due. The bankers had given no notice to B. of the deposit until after the alleged satisfaction, but they charged collusion between B. & H.:—Held: in 1873, a bill would not lie for delivery up of the bond.—*BINNS v. SECT. 3.—BY ACCORD AND SATISFACTION.

695. In general—Joint creditors.]—To an action by two obligees of a common money bond deft. pleaded accord & satisfaction by delivery of stock & goods to one of pltf. :—Held : (1) accord & satisfaction must be taken to be an answer to an action for a specialty debt, but according to equity joint creditors must, prima facie, be taken to be interested as tenants in common & not as joint tenants, & the defence was good only as concerned the claim of pltf. who was party to the accord & satisfaction ; (2) the defence was defective & should be amended.—STEEDS v. STEEDS (1889), 22 Q. B. D. 537 ; 58 L. J. Q. B. 302 ; 60 L. T. 318 ; 37 W. R. 378, D. C.

696. By acceptance of—Goods.]—The condition of a bond was such that, if a stranger should pay £10 to the obligee on a day certain, the bond should be discharged. Pltf. sued upon the bond & deft. pleaded that a stranger had on the day given to pltf. a horse of the value of £10, which had been accepted by pltf. in full satisfaction :—Held : this was a good plea, although it would have been otherwise, if payment had been due to a stranger.—ANON. (1543), 1 Dyer, 56 a ; 73 E. R. 124.

697. — One thing in discharge of another.]—The acceptance of one thing will not discharge an obligation to do another.

Debt upon an obligation conditioned that if he appeared before pltf. at D. such a day, then, etc. Deft. pleaded that he appeared before pltf. at S. before the day, which he accepted of, & allowed for his appearance to be at D. etc. :—Held : a bad plea, for the acceptance of another thing was not a discharge of the obligation.—NORTON v. RISHDEN (1596), Cro. Eliz. 458 ; 78 E. R. 711.

698. — Another debt.]—A bond conditioned to pay money on a contingency raises an immediate debt, & if the acceptance of another debt be pleaded in satisfaction, it must be of the money, & not of the bond.—NEAL v. SHEAFFIELD (1810), Cro. Jac. 254 ; 79 E. R. 217.

699. — Agreement for annuity.]—A plea to debt on bond, that pltf. accepted a feoffment in satisfaction, is bad.

Debt upon an obligation for £80, conditioned for the performance of covenants contained in articles of agreement. Deft. pleaded that it was agreed between pltf. & deft. that he should grant an annuity of £5 out of such land for life, in discharge of that bond, which grant he made, & pltf. accepted it in discharge of that bond, etc. :—Held : a bad plea, for it was but a concord & verbal agreement, which could never be a discharge of a specialty.—NOYES v. HORGOD (1622), Cro. Jac. 649 ; 79 E. R. 561.

700. Statute staple—After day of payment. Debt. Acceptance of a statute staple after the day of payment :—Held : no plea.—BRANTHWAIT v. CORNWALLIS (1627), Cro. Car. 85 ; 79 E. R. 675.

701. — Another bond.]—The acceptance of one bond cannot be pleaded in discharge of another.—LUTTERFORD v. LE MAYRE (1620), Cro. Jac. 579 ; 79 E. R. 495.

702. — —.]—In debt on a bond to pay money, deft. pleaded payment of part after the bond was forfeited & as to the balance that he had given a bond to pltf. in exoneration of the bond in suit :—Held : the plea that deft. had given a bond in discharge of the other bond was not a good plea for they were of the same nature & one did not determine the other.—MARSHALL v. FREAKER (1622), Palm. 287 ; 81 E. R. 1086.

703. — —.]—Debt on a bond. Deft. pleaded acceptance of another bond in satisfaction of the first obligation :—Held : not a good plea.—MAYNARD v. CRICK (1599), Cro. Car. 86 ; 79 E. R. 675 ; sub nom. MANHOOD v. CRICK, Cro. Eliz. 716. Annotation :—Refd. Blythe v. Hill (1676), 1 Mod. Rep. 225.

705. — — Payable before first.]—An agreement to take a new bond is no bar to an action on the first, unless the second is payable before the first.—STREET v. BUCKNER (1671), 2 Keb. 804 ; 84 E. R. 508.

706. — — By representative of obligor.]—To debt on bond against the heir of the obligor, deft. may plead another bond given in satisfaction by the administrator of the obligor.—BLYTHE v. HILL (1676), 1 Mod. Rep. 225 ; 86 E. R. 844.

Annotation :—Mentd. Weston v. Foster (1836), 3 Scott, 164.

707. — — —.]—An obligation given by an exor. in satisfaction of an obligation given by his testator is no discharge of the latter.—LOBLY v. GILDART (1681), 3 Lev. 55 ; 83 E. R. 574. Annotation :—Mentd. Rippinghall v. Lloyd (1833), 5 B. & Ad. 742.

708. — — By principal debtor on death of surety.]—A father gave a bond to secure repayment, within four years, of a simple contract debt due by his son. The father died, & the creditor commenced proceedings against his estate for the recovery of the bond debt, but subsequently took a fresh bond from the son, who was the father's heir-at-law, & from the personal representative of the father, conditioned for paying the same debt by instalments, the creditor at the same time retaining the original bond :—Held : the original bond was discharged, on the grounds (1) the father was only surety for the son, & the creditor, by giving time to the principal debtor, had discharged the surety ; & (2) the second bond must be considered, in the circumstances, as having been given in satisfaction of the first.—CLARKE v. HENTY (1838), 3 Y. & C. Ex. 187 ; 2 Jur. 918.

709. — — For larger sum.]—To an action on a bond, accord & satisfaction by delivery of another bond for a larger sum, is no plea at law, but the ct. having given judgment for pltf. upon demurrer to such a plea, at the same time gave liberty to deft. to plead the same facts by way of equitable defence, & intimated that, upon a demurrer to the plea so pleaded, their judgment would be for debt.—PETRE (LORD) v. STUBBS (1855), 25 L. T. O. S. 81; 3 W. R. 406.

710. — Security—For lesser sum.]—Acceptance of security for a less sum cannot be pleaded in satisfaction of a bond to pay a greater sum.—GEANG v. SWAINE (1687), 1 Lut. 464; 125 E. R. 244.

711. — Bill of exchange.]—A bill of exchange may be pleaded in satisfaction in an action of debt on a bond.—HILLIARD v. SMITH (1685), Comb. 19; 90 E. R. 317.

712. — After day of payment.]—To debt on a bond conditioned for payment of money, pleas that after the day of payment, & before action, the obligee received certain bills of exchange not yet due, on account of part of the sum due on the bond, & certain money in satisfaction of the residue:—Held: ill.—WORTHINGTON v. WIGLEY (1837), 3 Bing. N. C. 454; 5 Dowl. 504; 3 Scott, 558; 1 Jur. 183; 132 E. R. 485.

713. — Maintenance—Interest.]—A. gave a woman, who cohabited with him, a bond for £2,000 & interest quarterly during her life, & after her death to her children, but from the date of the bond to the date of his death, which was four & a half years, constantly maintained her:—Held: the maintenance must be taken to have been in lieu of interest.—LLOYD v. CARTER (1740), 2 Atk. 84; 26 E. R. 452, L. C.

714. — Bill of sale—After act of bankruptcy.]—If a bill of sale of goods be given in satisfaction of a bond debt, & it is afterwards discovered that the obligor had previously committed an act of bkpcy., the obligee may abandon the bill of sale, & sue out a commission against the obligor, & a co-obligor cannot plead this bill as an accord & satisfaction.—HALL v. SMALLWOOD (1795), Peake, Add. Cas. 13, N. P.

715. — Shares in partnership.]—A father bound himself by bond in Nov., 1868, to pay his son £10,000 on Apr. 30, 1872. A few weeks before that day he took his son into partnership, it being provided by the articles that the capital should consist of £37,500, to be brought in by him, of which £19,000 should be considered to belong to the son. The father died intestate in May, 1876, without having paid the bond debt:—Held: the gift of the share in the partnership was a satisfaction of the debt under the bond.—Re LAWES, LAWES v. LAWES (1881), 20 Ch. D. 81; 45 L. T. 453; 30 W. R. 33, C. A.

716. — Rentcharge by annuitant.]—Pltf. being about to be presented by testator to a living, which was inadequately endowed, testator in 1852 entered into a bond in the penal sum of £1,000, subject to a condition avoiding the bond in case testator, his heirs, exors. or administrators, should during pltf.'s life, if he should so long continue to be vicar of the living, pay pltf. an annuity of £80. Testator died in 1861, having in his lifetime by a deed, dated 1859, charged certain fee simple estates with a yearly rentcharge of £220, of which £80 was to be applied for the perpetual maintenance, or augmentation of the maintenance, of the resident vicar of the living. The deed was not registered till 1876. Pltf. knew nothing of the deed until 1872; he knew that arrangements had been made for payment of the £80, but the deed itself was not communicated to him. From 1872 debts., testator's exors. & devisees, paid to pltf. £80 a year, as if that sum were payable as rentcharge, so long as the rents were sufficient, but, owing to the great depreciation in the value of land, the property on which it was charged fell in annual value. To an action on the bond the defence was that pltf. had accepted the rentcharge in satisfaction of the bond:—Held: (1) pltf. was entitled to treat the question whether the exors. were paying the £80 as rentcharge or annuity as one with which he had nothing to do, as it was testator's duty to make provision for the annual payment, & pltf. was only concerned to see that he got his payments half yearly; (2) pltf. had not accepted payment of the rentcharge by satisfaction of the annuity & had not equitably released the obligation under the bond.—Re NEVILLE, WEBSTER v. NEVILLE (1886), 2 T. L. R. 714.

717. By delivery up of—Another bond—In which obligee bound to obligor.]—In debt on bond, debt. may plead an accord & satisfaction by delivering up to pltf. a bond, in which pltf. was bound to him.—MARSHALL v. JENNISON (1680), Freem. K. B. 532; 89 E. R. 399.

718. When available—After forfeiture.]—Accord & satisfaction cannot be pleaded by exors. to a bond after it is forfeited; it should be either a release or payment.—GROOM v. GROOM & BARNES (1850), 14 L. T. O. S. 377.

719. — Before breach.]—Covenant by the mayor, etc., of the borough of B., on a deed, by which after reciting that the council of the borough had elected D. treasurer of the borough, debt. became surety to the corpn. for D.'s accounting to them during the whole time of D. continuing in the office, in consequence of the election, or under any annual or other future election of the council to the office. Averments that, by subsequent elections, D. was continued in his office, & did not account. Breaches, non-payment by debt. Plea that, before breach, ptfs. accepted a fresh surety bond in discharge of the deed sued on:—Held: bad, as pleading accord & satisfaction to a deed before breach.—*BERWICK CORPN. v. 728. To whom made—Stranger.]—The condition of a bond was that if an apprentice transported merchandise beyond the seas & made a return of them, & made an account, & paid the money upon the account within a certain time, then, etc. Afterwards the obligee released by deed to the apprentice & not to the obligor:—Held: by the release to the apprentice the obligation was saved, if the release were made before any forfeiture, or before any breach of the conditions by the apprentice, but if after breach the release to the apprentice did not dispense with the obligation which was made by the stranger, because an obligation once forfeited could not be saved by any release made to a stranger.—ANON. (1572), 3 Leon. 45 ; 74 E. R. 530.

729. By whom made—Illiterate person.]—In debt upon an obligation conditioned that pltf. should enjoy certain lands, discharged or otherwise saved harmless from all incumbrances, & that the obligor & his son should do all such acts for the better assuring of the lands, as the obligee, or his counsel, should devise, debt. pleaded that the obligee had enjoyed the lands discharged, & kept indemnified from all incumbrances, & that pltf. devised a release to be sealed by debt. & his son, which debt. sealed, but because his son could not read, he prayed the obligee to deliver it to him, to show to a man learned in the law, who might inform him if it were according to the condition, & if it were according to the condition, he would deliver it, which the obligee refused to do, wherefore debt. refused to deliver it:—Held: where an illiterate man was bound to make a deed, he need not execute before it were read to him, but ignorance of the legal effect of the instrument was no excuse for not sealing it in due time, & in such case he must execute it immediately when required, without taking time to advise with counsel.—MANSER'S CASE, PAINTER v. 734. — "All claims & demands"—Whether indemnity bond included.]—A., the mother of B., having entered into a bond, on his behalf for £1,000, B. executed an indemnity bond, of the same date, viz., Apr. 26, 1800, in £2,000 conditioned for payment of £1,000 three months after her decease. On Feb. 9, 1801, A. made a codicil to her will, by which she relinquished two debts due from him, one of £1,000 & one of £500, & desired him to be punctual in indemnifying her estate against the £1,000 bond of Apr. 26. Three days after the execution of the codicil, A. executed a release to B., in which, after mentioning a sum of £500, for which she had his bond, & two sums of £480 & £300 due to her from B. for which she had receipts, it was expressed that she had agreed to release B. from those sums, "& of & from all or any sum or sums of money, claims, & demands, thereby secured or intended to be secured, & all other sum or sums of money, claim, & demand whatsoever," & released him from those sums & all claims on account of those sums, "or for or on account of any other matter, cause, or thing whatsoever":—Held: (1) the release did not extend to the indemnity bond: (2) no extrinsic evidence could be admitted to explain the intention of A. as to the release.—BUTCHER v. BUTCHER (1804), 1 Bos. & P. N. R. 113; 127 E. R. 401.

735. SHORE* (1847),

k. What amounts to—Acceptance of resignation of office.]—Pltf. resigned his office of sheriff, & deft. was appointed in his place, & gave a bond to pltf. for the due fulfilment of a condition. Finding that the revenues were not sufficient to pay the amount, deft. resigned his office, & soon afterwards was re-appointed under a commission without any such condition:—Held: the Crown had the right to permit, & did permit, deft.'s resignation & by accepting it made it effectual, & thereby discharged the condition & all liability on the bond.—SMART v. DANA (1905), 3 O. W. R. 89; 5 O. W. R. 387; 9 O. L. R. 427; 23 C. L. T. 170; 25 C. L. T. Occ. N. 456.—CAN.

The estate of the new firm was liquidated by arrangement under Bkpcy. Act, 1869 (c. 71), ss. 125, 126, & the obligees proved & joined with the creditors of the new firm in resolutions accepting a composition, payable by instalments, the deed reserving in terms the rights of creditors against sureties, though the resolutions did not:—Held: the obligees thereby released the retiring partner.—*WILSON v. 741. — Payment not enforced.]—A father, on adjusting the pecuniary difficulties of his son, took a bond for the amount advanced, which was deposited in the hands of two mutual friends, & it was agreed that they should have the power within six years of directing it to be cancelled. It was proved by parol, that the bond was required as a sort of security for the future good conduct of the son, of which the father was subsequently satisfied. The father died twelve years after, the bond still remaining uncanceled:—Held: the

742. — Whether intention sufficient.]—C., who acted as the confidential adviser of testator, was the obligor in a bond to testator for £2,000 conditioned to be void on payment of that sum within six months after demand. The exors. demanded payment of C., which he resisted on the ground that what passed at an interview between himself & testator amounted to a release of all obligation, in respect of the instrument. The ct. having found that the evidence of what passed at the interview amounted to no more at the utmost than an intention to deliver up the bond as an act of bounty, which intention was never fulfilled:—Held: much more was necessary to establish the release of a debt, & payment of the debt decreed, with interest & costs.—Re HOLMES' ESTATE, WOODWARD v. HUMPAGE, INSKIP'S CASE (1861), 3 Giff. 352; 5 L. T. 382; 8 Jur. N. S. 256; 66 E. R. 445.

743. — Release of principal debtor—Release of surety.]—To an action on a bond debt. pleaded that it was the joint & several bond of himself & J., & was executed by him as surety only for J., that afterwards a composition deed was made between J. of one part & pltf. & another on behalf of all the creditors of J. of the other part, whereby J. conveyed to the parties of the second part all his estate to be administered for the benefit of his creditors "in like manner" as if J. had been adjudged bkpt., & each of the creditors released J. from his debts "in like manner as if he had obtained a discharge in bkpcy.," & that pltf. executed the deed without the consent of deft.:—Held: a good plea.—*CRAGOE v. 746. Subsequent bankruptcy of obligee.]—A., having previously borrowed £1,000 of B., executed to him a bond for that sum, & B., two days afterwards, executed a deed, whereby he covenanted that the bond should not be enforced. Some years afterwards, B. having become bkpt., his assignees brought an action on the bond, & filed a bill to have the deed of covenant declared fraudulent:—Held: the ct. would not interfere against the legal operation of the deed, there being nothing to show that B. was insolvent when he executed it, & there being evidence that A. had also at that time pecuniary claims on B., & that the execution of the bond was accompanied by an agreement that payment of it should not be enforced.—SLACK v. TOLSON (1826), 1 Russ. 553; 38 E. R. 213.

747. What amounts to—Verbal declaration.]—A declaration by the obligee of a bond that he will never sue for the bond debt:—Held: not sufficient to operate as a release of the bond debt.—REEVES v. BRYMER (1801), 6 Ves. 516; 31 E. R. 1172.

W., two years afterwards, compounded with his creditors, testator agreeing to become surety for their payment, & to relinquish the bond debt, with interest, & to give it up to be cancelled. Testator did not do the last act, it being alleged that he said he could not find the bond; testator subsequently, & shortly before his death, gave W. £60, telling him that such sum, & all other money which he had received from him & had not repaid, were to be considered as gifts:—Held: the debt remaining due at law, testator's declaration of his intention not to sue upon the bond was not sufficient to release the surety in equity.—*CROSS v. 750. ——— Followed by indorsement.]—A., being indebted to B., C., & D., three sisters who were his near relations, partly on his own account & partly as exor. of his father, executed to them a bond for £500. At the time of giving the bond A. objected to giving it, & only agreed to do so on a verbal representation that it was not intended that the bond should be enforced, unless B., C., & D. should come to want, which never happened. The bond remained in the hands of the three until the death of B., & after her death in the hands of the survivors until the death of C., & after her death in the hands of D., whose property it was at the time of her death. The bond was found to have the following indorsement on it: "This bond is never to appear against A. Witness D., C." The date of the indorsement was eleven years after the bond. The signatures "D., C.," were apparently in the same handwriting, & it was said to be that of D., but it was proved that if D. signed for C., she did so with her concurrence & approval:—Held: independently of the question whether the indorsement amounted to a release, there was an equity in the circumstances against enforcing the bond, & if an action were brought on the bond it ought to be restrained, & nothing was due on the bond.—*MAJOR v. 756. ———.]—B. & debt. gave pltf. a joint & several bond for £600, the condition of which recited that B. had requested pltf. to accept bills for him, & lend him money, which pltf. had agreed to do on having the balance for the time being secured to pltf. by the joint & several bonds of B. & debt. as surety, but neither B. nor debt. were to be liable for more than £300, & declared that the condition was that, if either B. or debt. should pay such sums as should become due to pltf. by means of the acceptances or loans, the bond should be void. Afterwards, pltf., by deed poll, without the knowledge or authority of debt., released & for ever discharged B. "of & from all & all manner of action, causes of action, suits, debts, dues, sum & sums of money, accounts, reckonings, bonds, bills, specialties, covenants, contracts, controversies, agreements, promises, variances, damages, judgments, extents, executions, claims & demands whatsoever, at law & in equity," which pltf. had or might have against B. upon or by reason of any matter, cause, or thing whatsoever, "provided always, that nothing herein contained shall extend, or be deemed or construed to extend, to prevent" pltf. "from suing or prosecuting any person or persons, other than" B., his exors., etc., "who is, are, shall or may be liable or accountable to pay or make good to" pltf. "all or any part of any debt or debts, sum or sums of money, now due from" B. to pltf., "either as drawer" etc. "of any bill" etc., "or as being jointly or severally bound with" B. "in any bond or bonds, obligation or obligations, or other instrument whatsoever, or otherwise howsoever, as if these presents had not been executed, it being understood & agreed that, as regards any such suits or prosecutions, these presents shall not operate or be pleaded in bar, or as a release":—Held: the deed poll was not a release, but a covenant not to sue B., & pltf. was not precluded from suing debt. in respect of breaches accruing before the execution of the deed poll.—*PRICE v. PART X. SECT. 7.

m. What amounts to—Substitution of new bond—Agent's act.—In trover, the execution of a bond for the faithful performance of his duties by a bank clerk was proved, but it was further proved that the cashier had returned it to debt. for the purpose of being obliterated, the cashier thinking there was no impropriety in so doing, a new bond having been executed. No instruction was acted on by the cashier when he so delivered up the bond, but there was some evidence of

764. Effect of—Fraudulent.]—On the marriage of pltf., a widow, who was possessed of £1,000 of her late husband's personal estate, it was agreed that she should have £1,000 for her own use, & the second husband was to leave her £6,000 at his death. The husband gave a bond to secure that sum. Subsequently he took the bond away fraudulently & cancelled it:—Held: after his death, pltf. was entitled to satisfaction of the £6,000 out of his estate, as if the bond had not been cancelled, & she must be paid in priority to debts of a lower nature.—BROWN v. SAVAGE (1674), Cas. temp. Finch. 184; 23 E. R. 101.

765. — Mistake—Relief in equity.]—A. gave three bonds to B. for £500 each, payable at different times. The two first were paid, but upon the parties settling an account relative to other matters, the third bond was delivered up by mistake, instead of a particular voucher belonging to that account:—Held: equity would relieve against the mistake, by directing an issue to try whether there were two bonds or three, & whether the last bond was paid or not.—VANHOVEN v. GIESQUE (1706), 4 Bro. Parl. Cas. 622; 2 E. R. 424.

766. Repayment of interest.]—Where a bond is void & has been ordered to be delivered up to be cancelled, interest which has been paid on the supposition of its being valid, will be ordered to be repaid.—HITCHCOCK v. GIDDINGS (1817), Dan. 1; 4 Price, 135; Wils. Ex. 32; 146 E. R. 418.

767. — Contemplated marriage not taking place.]—In contemplation of a marriage between a woman, who was an orphan & a Protestant, & a man, who was a Roman Catholic, a settlement was executed, to which the woman's uncle was a party, & the subjects of which were stock belonging to the woman, & two sums of money, one secured by the uncle's, & the other by the man's, bond, & both of them payable to the trustees of the settlement twelve months after the date of the bonds. The settlement, after declaring trusts in favour of the woman & man & their children, provided that, until the marriage should be duly had & solemnised according to the forms of the Church of England, or in case it should not be so solemnised within twelve months next after the date of the settlement, the trustees should stand possessed of all the trust money, securities & premises & the securities for same, in trust for the woman, her exors., etc., & should pay, assign, & transfer same accordingly. The marriage never took place. After the uncle's death his bond was found amongst his papers with the words "cancelled, the marriage never having taken place," written by him across the face of it:—Held: though the bond was not invalidated, according to the true construction of the proviso the woman was not entitled as the cestui que trust of the bond.—MITFORD v. REYNOLDS, Ex p. PATTLE, Ex p. INDIA CO. (1848), 16 Sim. 130; 60 E. R. 822.

768. Evidence of—In hands of assignees of bankrupt obligor.]—The production of a bond out of the hands of the assignees of bkpt., who was the principal obligor, in a cancelled state, is prima passive acquiescence on the part of the board:—Held: the jury were not justified in finding that the bond had been cancelled.—BANK OF UPPER CANADA v. WIDMER (1833), 2 O. S. 222.—CAN.

769. By order of court.—Held: the Ct. of Q. B. had jurisdiction over a bond given by a trader under Judgments Act, 1838 (c. 110), s. 8, on an affidavit of debt filed in the Ct. of Bkpcy., & if the bond were satisfied, the Ct. of Q. B. would order it to be produced, so that it might be cancelled.—WILSON v. FIRTH (1841), 10 L. J. Q. B. 292; 5 Jur. 608.

SECT. 8.—BY ALTERATION.

770. What are material alterations—General rule.—When any deed is altered in a point material, by pltf. himself, or by any stranger without the privity of the obligee, be it by interlineation, addition, erasing, or by drawing of a pen through a line, or through the midst of any material word, the deed thereby becomes void; as if a bond is to be made to the sheriff for appearance, etc., & in the bond the sheriff's name is omitted, & after the delivery thereof his name is interlined, either by the obligee or a stranger, without his privity, the deed is void; so if one makes a bond of £10 & after the sealing of it, another £10 is added, which makes it £20, the deed is void; so if a bond is rased, by which the first word cannot be seen, or if it is drawn with a pen & ink through the word, although the first word is legible, yet the deed is void, & shall never make an issue, whether it was in any of these cases altered by the obligee himself, or by a stranger without his privity. So if the obligee himself alters the deed by any of these ways, although it is in words not material, yet the deed is void, but if a stranger, without his privity, 769 i. By order of court—Where proper.—The former treasurer of a municipality & his sureties sued on a bond given by them to secure the due performance of the office to compel a cancellation of the bond after the treasurership had come to an end & the accounts had been settled. The defence was that it was impossible to say that the audit covered all things & something might still be found which the treasurer had not accounted for:—Held: cancellation was usually ordered only in cases where there was actual danger of improper use to the injury of the party seeking cancellation; here, there was a possibility that the instrument had not fulfilled all its purposes, & there was no right of action.—SHEWFELT v. TOWNSHIP OF KINCARDINE (1916), 9 O. W. N. 237; 35 O. L. R. 344.—CAN.

769 ii. Where fresh security taken.—The owner of a steamboat sold ten shares in her, taking the bond of the vendee for a portion of the price. The vendee sold the same subject to this bond, & the shares were afterwards transferred in trust for the benefit of the original owner of the vessel, who still held the bond; notwithstanding which proceedings were taken by him to enforce payment of the bond. The ct. restrained further proceedings thereon, & ordered the bond to be delivered up to be cancelled, with costs.—THOMPSON v. WILKES (1856), 5 Gr. 594.—CAN.

769 iii. Circumstances negating fraud.—Where Comrs. of Customs had expressed a disinclination to enforce a bond given by a party who had been guilty of an infraction of an Act of Parliament in circumstances which

769 iv. Death of obligee—Whether executor's consent necessary.—A debtor, resident in C., executed a mtge. bond upon land in C. in favour of N., who was domiciled in E. N. died, & his exor. in E., after obtaining cession of the bond to himself, ceded it to the wife of debtor, who consented to the cancellation of the bond, the land having been sold. At the time of N.'s death the bond was in E.:—Held: the Registrar of Deeds could not be ordered to cancel the bond without the consent of an exor. appointed or confirmed by letters of administration granted in the Colony.—NEWDIGATE v. REGISTRAR OF DEEDS (1902), 19 S. C. 269; 12 C. T. R. 434.—S. AF.

769 v. Insufficiency of evidence.—The ct. refused to decree cancellation of a bond, for which, at the time of its execution, no money passed; on petitioner's sole evidence against resp't's answering affidavit, stating that the bond was petitioner's free & voluntary act, done for past services, & advances of money.—WYSE v. LAMBERT (1865), 16 I. Ch. R. 378.—IR.

PART X. SECT. 8.

770 i. What are material alterations—General rule.—Any change in a bond which causes it to speak a different language in legal effect, from that which it originally spoke, which the legal identity or character alters the deed by any of these ways in any point not material, it shall not avoid the deed.—PIGOT'S CASE (1614), 11 Co. Rep. 26 b.; 77 E. R. 1177; sub nom. WINCHCOMBE v. PIGOT, 2 Bulst. 246; sub nom. WINSCOMBE v. PIGGOTT, 1 Roll. Rep. 39; sub nom. ANON., Moore, K. B. 835.

771.—If a deed after execution be altered in a material place by the parties or a stranger, as by an insertion of the Christian name or addition of the obligor, or of a condition, though for the advantage of the obligor, he may plead non est factum, & avoid the deed, but the obligee may afterwards have an action on the case against the person who made the alteration, & recover damages for the injury, although in suing upon the deed he was non-suited upon the issue "that the alteration was not made after the sealing & delivery."—MARKHAM v. GONASTON (1598), Cro. Eliz. 626; 78 E. R. 866.

of the instrument either in its terms or the relation of the parties to it, is an alteration, which will invalidate it against all parties not consenting to the alteration. It is of no consequence whether the alteration would be beneficial or detrimental to the party sought to be charged on the contract.—GOUR CHANDRA DAS v. PRASANNA KUMAR CHANDRA (1906), I. L. R. 33 Calc. 812; 10 C. W. N. 788.—IND.

772 i. Erasure of date.—In an action against debts, as sureties on a bail-bond, the defence chiefly relied on was that the bond was vitiated by material alterations made therein after its execution, & by the erasure of the date mentioned for the appearance of debt, & the substitution of another date:—Held: the alleged alteration being noted in the attestation clause, the burden was upon debts, of showing that it was made subsequent to the execution of the bond.—WOODWORTH v. DICKIE (1886), 7 R. & G. 96; 7 C. L. T. 144; 14 S. C. R. 734.—CAN.

o. Affixing seal—Authority presumed.—Debts, signed a bond at the request of T., who was indebted to pltf. They intended the document to be their bond & it purported to be under seal, & it was sealed when handed by T. to pltf., but they swore that there were no seals upon it when they signed it. They did not say that they did not authorise T. to complete the document & make it what it was intended to be affixing seals:—Held: it should be presumed that debts, had authorised T. to affix the seals for them, & their defence of alteration of the bond failed.—PEASE v. RANDOLPH (1911), 21 Man. L. R. 368.—CAN.

Sect. 8.—By alteration. Sects. 9, 10 & 11.]

773. Substitution of currency.]—B. was obliged in £100 to A. for the honesty of his son, an apprentice with A. A. erased "pounds" in the obligation, & put in "marks":—Held: by that the obligation was void.—BLACK v. ALLEN (1600), Noy. 99; 74 E. R. 1065.

Annotations:—Mentd. R. v. Knight & Burton (1698), 1 Ld. Raym. 527; R. v. Ward (1726), 1 Barn. K. B. 10.

774. Substitution of co-surety—Without consent of first surety.]—One surety to an administration bond executed same on being assured that the other person named in it as co-surety would execute it. The latter refused to do so. The name of another surety was inserted in the bond, & that person executed it. The first surety did not assent to the alteration:—Held: the bond was void & must be cancelled.—In the Goods of COWARDIN (1901), 86 L. T. 261; 18 T. L. R. 220; 46 Sol. Jo. 163.

775. Joint & several bond—Addition of another obligor.]—In debt on a bond, deft. pleaded that at the time that he sealed & delivered the bond, there was a space left, wherein afterwards the name of J. was put in, who also sealed & delivered it, supposing that the adding another obligor, bound jointly & severally with him, was an alteration material to avoid the bond:—Held: the bond remained the same as to him, & he could not take advantage of the matter.—ZOUCH v. CLAY (1671), 1 Vent. 185; 2 Keb. 872, 881; 2 Lev. 35; 86 E. R. 126.

776. Before acceptance by obligee.]—The addition of another obligor after a bond has been executed to the sheriff on the arrest of a person upon mesne process, but before the sheriff has accepted it, with the assent of the sheriff & the prior obligors, does not vacate the bond or make a new stamp necessary.—MATSON v. Annotations:—Mentd. Spicer v. Burgess (1834), 1 Cr. M. & R. 129; Hibblewhite v. M'Morine (1840), 6 M. & W. 200.

777. Substitution of co-obligor.]—In debt on a joint & several bond, the condition set out was for payment by deft. & A. & B. The bond was given in evidence, & was found to have been altered, H. having been substituted for B. in the condition:—Held: this was a fatal variance.—ADAMS v. BATESON (1829), 6 Bing. 110; 3 Moo. & P. 339; 7 L. J. O. S. C. P. 251; 130 E. R. 1222.

778. Insertion of Christian name of one.]—A. & B. gave a joint & several bond, & a warrant of attorney for jointly & severally confessing judgment thereon to C. for securing an annuity, payable by B. to C. After execution by A. & B., an omission of one of the Christian names of A. in the bodies of the instruments was discovered, & was supplied by interlineation by the attorney of the grantee, & the instruments so altered were re-executed by A., but not by B. A. was sued on the bond, pleaded the judgment, & defeated the action:—Held: on motion by A., the ct. would not set aside the securities, because (1) he had assented to the alteration, & (2) he had recognised the validity of the judgment by pleading it.—COKE v. BRUMMELL (1818), 8 Taunt. 439; 2 Moore, C. P. 495; 129 E. R. 453.

779. ——— Alteration of liability by one.]—Four persons, as sureties for a principal, executed a joint & several bond of suretyship, by the terms of which the liability of two of them was limited to £50 each, & that of the other two to £25 each. One of those whose liability was limited to £50, after the other three had executed the bond, executed it himself, but added to his signature the words, "£25 only." The obligee accepted the bond so executed without objection, & subsequently the principal became in default:—Held: the effect of the added words was to make a material alteration in the bond, so that the three first signatories were thereby discharged from their obligation, & as the last signatory only executed the bond as a joint & several bond, he also was not bound by it.—ELLESMERE BREWERY Co. v. COOPER, [1896] 1 Q. B. 75; 65 L. J. Q. B. 173; 73 L. T. 567; 44 W. R. 254; 12 T. L. R. 86; 40 Sol. Jo. 147; 1 Com. Cas. 210, D. C.

780. ——— Insertion of omitted correct amount.]—A bond was conditioned to pay £100 by six equal payments of £16 13s. 4d. on Oct. 3 in every year until the full sum of one pounds was paid. A stranger inserted the word "hundred" between "one" & "pounds," & pltf., on oyer craved, set it out as being "until the full sum of £100 was paid":—Held: (1) a fatal variance; (2) the sense being sufficiently manifest before the alteration, that the condition was for payment of £100 by six yearly instalments of £16 13s. 4d., the insertion of the word "hundred" did not alter the sense, & was immaterial, & did not destroy the bond.—WAUGH v. 783. Effect of alteration—Interlineation after execution—Relief in equity.]—A bond, which was void at law by reason of an interlineation of £50 after execution:—Held: good in equity for the money really secured thereby, but only as a simple contract debt.—ANON. (1725), 2 Eq. Cas. Abr. 286; 22 E. R. 241, L. C.

784. Pleading alteration—Addition to condition.]—A plea, to debt on bond, that after its execution a material addition was made to the condition thereof:—Held: bad, for not stating that the addition was made in writing to the condition itself.—HARDEN v. CLIFTON (1841), 1 Q. B. 522; 1 Gal. & Dav. 22; 10 L. J. Q. B. 159; 5 Jur. 962; 113 E. R. 1232.

SECT. 9.—BY OPERATION OF LAW.

785. Merger in judgment—Proof of satisfaction.]—Deft. entered into a bond with pltf. Afterwards he gave pltf. a judgment for his debt:—Held: in point of law the bond did transire in rem judicatam, but failing proof of satisfaction of the judgment must pay £100 on the bond with damages.—TRYON v. MITCHEL (1636), 1 Rep. Ch. 107; 21 E. R. 521.

786. New bond in satisfaction of judgment on bond.]—T. & pltf. were obligors of a bond for £200 conditioned for payment of £100, on which an action was brought & judgment recovered. Afterwards T. entered into a new bond for £200 conditioned for payment of £110 at another day in satisfaction of the judgment:—Held: this was not sufficient to avoid the judgment.—LUTTERFORD v. LE MAYRE (1620), Cro. Jac. 579; 79 E. R. 495.

787. Act of pardon—Bond for submission to church.]—Debt on a bond given in 1693 to a bishop for submission to the church:—Qu.: whether a general Act of Pardon since that date, which took away the offence & excommunication, did not likewise discharge the bond.—*DURHAM (Bp.) v. Discharge by making obligor executor.]—See EXECUTORS & ADMINISTRATORS.

SECT. 10.—BY CO-OBLIGEEES.

788. Release of several debts by one—Whether discharge of joint bond.]—A release by one of two obligees to a bond of all actions & suits that he had against the obligor upon his own account does not necessarily amount to a discharge of the bond.—NOKES v. — (1669), 1 Vent. 35; 86 E. R. 25.

789. Release of joint debt by one—Absence of fraud.]—A release by one of two joint obligees of a bond will not be set aside, except upon a very strong case of fraud.

J. & M., co-exors., lent money belonging to testator's estate to H., who gave them a bond for the amount. J. subsequently commenced an action making M. co-pltf. upon the bond. After the action M. gave a release to H., who pleaded it as a defence. J. moved to set aside the plea & to have the release delivered up to be cancelled:—

*p. Effect of alteration—Filling up blank—Absence of obligor.]—*A blank having been left in a bond, which was afterwards filled up with the consent of the obligor, although not in his presence, was held no variance on non est factum.—LEONARD v. MERRITT (1830), 1 Dra. 199.—CAN.

796. — — — .]—Pltf., the obligee in a bond, given by two joint obligors, executed a release to one, & having brought an action on the bond against deft., the co-obligor, he pleaded such release in bar. Pltf. replied that the release was given with an undertaking on the part of deft., that such release should not operate in his discharge:—Held: pltf. could not by a parol averment vary the instrument under seal, which being the release of an entire demand, would operate as a release to deft.—COCKS v. NASH (1832), 9 Bing. 341; 2 Moo. & S. 434; 2 L. J. C. P. 17; 131 E. R. 643; subsequent proceedings (1833), 9 Bing. 723; (1834), 4 Moo. & S. 162.

Seal of one destroyed—By one co-obligee.]—In 1808, J. & his brother, R., executed a joint & several bond for securing £3,000 to certain other members of the family. R. died in 1817, & the bond was cancelled as to him, by removing his seal & obliterating his name. J. became bkpt. & the sole surviving obligee, who had never given his consent to the cancellation, sought to prove in the bkpcy.:—Held: in the circumstances, the cancellation or mutilation of the bond, as to the execution of the bond by R., did not affect the right of proof against bkpt.'s estate.—Re SMITH, Ex p. SMITH (1843), 3 Mont. D. & De G. 378; 1 L. T. O. S. 456; 7 Jur. 864.

806. — — & discharge therefrom.]—Three parties having given a joint & separate bond were sued jointly, & a joint judgment obtained against them. One was taken in execution, but discharged out of custody by consent of pltf., on giving a promissory note for a portion of the debt:—Held: the other defts. could not be taken in execution under the judgment, the discharge of one operating as a release to the others.—PHILLIPS v. JONES, DAVIS (1846), 6 L. T. O. S. 414.

807. — Deed poll release of one—Breaches before execution of.]—A. & B. entered into a joint & several bond, B. being surety for A. After the accruing of the cause of action the obligees, without the priority or consent of B., by deed poll released A. from his liability, with a proviso that such release should not extend to release any other party to the bond. SECT. 12.—OTHER CASES.

810. Lessee to pay annuity during term—Surrender of lease.]—Where the lessee of a term entered into an obligation to the lessor to pay an annuity during the term to a third person:—Held: the surrender of the term to the lessor did not discharge the annuity, & the lessee's failure to pay it was a forfeiture of the obligation, for if he had jointly & severally bound in a bond for £10,000, to a bank; three of them paid up £1,500; a stranger to the bond paid up the balance, took an assignation to the bond, & refused to accept full payment of that balance from the parties, who had paid £1,500, & grant them an assignation of the bond:—Held: barred from claiming against the first three obligants, in so far as he had thereby cut off their right of relief.—GILMOUR v. FINNIE (1882), 11 Sh. (Ct. of Sess.) 193.—SCOT.

PART X. SECT. 11.

RAM KOOMAR KOONDOO (1874), 22 W. R. 193.—IND.

808 i. Bound jointly & severally—Judgment against all—Release of one.]—A. & B. executed their joint & several bonds, & judgment was marked on each bond separately. Subsequently the judgment creditors released the lands of A.:—Held: the release of A. did not release B.—Re GERVAIS' ESTATE, [1903] 1 I. R. 172.—IR.

*i. — Payment by stranger—Release of some.]—*Six co-obligants were 811. Covenants of lease—Determination of rent.]—A bond to perform the covenants in a lease is defeated by the determination of the rent.—DRUE v. BAILIE (1675), 1 Freem. K. B. 402; 89 E. R. 299.

812. Notice—Fidelity bond.]—The obligor of a bond conditioned for the faithful service of A. whilst in the employ of B. cannot discharge himself by giving notice, that after a certain period he will be no longer answerable; nor can the personal representative of the obligor discharge himself by such notice.—CALVERT v. GORDON (1828), 7 B. & C. 809; Dan. & Ll. 173; 3 Man. & Ry. K. B. 124; 7 L. J. O. S. K. B. 77; 108 E. R. 925.

813. Giving time—Principal & surety—Award.]—To an action on a replevin bond, entered into by the tenant & two sureties, upon a distress for rent, the sureties pleaded that the replevin suit, whilst pending, was referred to an arbitrator, without any notice to or consent of the sureties, that, after enlarging the time, he made his award, & that the sureties were thereby discharged from their obligations:—Held: the plea was bad, as the facts therein stated could not be pleaded as a bar to the action, as they amounted to a part discharge only, & the only plea of discharge from the performance of the condition of the replevin bond would be a plea of a discharge by a writing under seal.—ALDRIDGE v. HARPER (1833), 10 Bing. 118; 3 Moo. & S. 518; 2 L. J. C. P. 274; 131 E. R. 850.

814. Presumption—Bond in obligor's possession at death.]—In 1852 the trustees of a marriage settlement, on the written consent of the wife, lent the trust fund in cash to the husband on the security of his bond in a penal sum, conditioned for repayment to the trustees of the sum advanced with interest at 4 per cent. per annum six months after date. The husband died in 1896. At his death the bond was found in his possession. He never, either during his wife's lifetime or afterwards, paid any interest on the bond or gave any written acknowledgment of his indebtedness under it:—Held: no presumption of discharge of the bond arose from the mere fact of its being in the obligor's possession at his death.—Re DIXON, HEYNES v. DIXON, [1900] 2 Ch. 561; 69 L. J. Ch. 609; 83 L. T. 129; 48 W. R. 665; 44 Sol. Jo. 515, C. A.

PART X. SECT. 12.

a. Performance of work—Substitution of fresh agreement.]—When the obligor in a bond agrees, if required by the obligee, to perform certain work, & subsequently, by agreement between the obligor & the obligee, an absolute obligation to do the work is substituted, the effect of the latter agreement is to discharge the obligation created by the bond.—*OTTAWA CORPN. v. b. Whether legacy satisfaction.]—On a bond made by deceased payments were made from time to time by the administrator, but the bond was never fully paid. The obligee signed a quitclaim deed to the administrator reciting that all debts due by deceased were paid. The administrator died leaving a legacy to the obligee, who filed a claim against the administrator's estate for the balance due on the bond:—Held: the legacy was not given in satisfaction of the bond, & the claim was allowed on bond for amount unpaid & interest from the date when the claim was filed.—Re DALE (1911), 20 O. SECT. 2.—THE WRIT.

858. Special indorsement—Payment of annuity.]

—The indorsement on a writ claimed £500 as the principal sum due on a bond conditioned for payment by the obligor to pltf. of an annuity of £26 during the life of a child & until she should attain the age of sixteen years by specified quarterly payments, & alleged that two of such payments were due & unpaid:—Held: pltf. was not entitled to proceed under R. 860. — Liquidated damages—Single event.]—A bond was executed by deft. for the payment of £100 to the pltf. The condition of the bond was that if deft. should at all times thereafter, in obedience to a perpetual injunction granted by the High Ct., refrain from trespassing on pltf.'s lands therein mentioned, or the walls, gates, or fences thereof, or inclosing same, & from pulling down or removing or otherwise injuring same, or inciting others to commit any such trespasses, the obligation should be void. Deft. committed a breach of the injunction:—Held: the condition of the bond depended on one event only, namely, a breach of the injunction, & the sum secured by the bond was a liquidated sum, to the recovery of which the procedure of R. S. C. Ord. 14, r. 1, was applicable.—STRICKLAND v. WILLIAMS, [1899] 1 Q. B. 382; 68 L. J. Q. B. 241; 80 L. T. 4; 15 T. L. R. 131, C. A.

864. — Action by assignee.]—In an action by the assignee of a bond it is sufficient to aver that the money was not paid to pltf.—KENDAL v. BROMWICH (1735), Fortes. Rep. 371; 92 E. R. 896, Ex. Ch.

865. — To person entitled.]—In debt on bond given to the obligee, conditioned for payment of an annual sum to the wife of the obligor, a breach assigned in non-payment of the annual sum to the obligee is ill, as it should have alleged the money to be due to the wife.—LUNN v. PAYNE (1815), 6 Taunt. 140; 1 Marsh. 495; 128 E. R. 986.

866. — Notice or request to pay.]—By the condition, which recited an agreement by pltf.s., bankers, to advance money not exceeding £200 at any one time, to B. on security, the bond was to be void if A., B., & C., or either of them, should pay to pltf.s. all such sums not exceeding £200 as pltf.s. should advance for or on account of bills from time to time drawn by B. on pltf.s., within three calendar months "after receiving notice to pay such sums":—Held: in assigning a breach of the condition, it was not enough to aver that deft. "had & received notice" that certain sums were due from B., without averring a notice or request to pay.—BATSON v. SPEARMAN (1838), 9 Ad. & El. 298; 3 Per. & Dav. 77; 112 E. R. 1225.

for that purpose by any order of the ct. of quarter sessions, then made, or thereafter to be made, well & truly account for all sums of money received by him by reason or on account of his office, & also should faithfully perform all the trusts reposed in him by virtue of his appointment:—Held: a breach of the condition was sufficiently assigned which stated that deft., while he was treasurer, received sums of money, & that he was required by the justices at sessions to account, but did not do so; it being unnecessary to allege that he had been required by an order of the ct. of quarter sessions, the words in the condition of the bond, "by any order of the ct. of quarter sessions then made, or thereafter to be made," applying only to the appointment of a committee, & not to the requisition by the justices to account.—FARR v. HOLLISS (1829), 9 B. & C. 315; 4 Man. & Ry. K. B. 230; 8 L. J. O. S. M. C. 14; 109 E. R. 117.

869. — Board of guardians.]—A bond was conditioned to be void if A., a poor rate collector, should, when requested by the guardians, pay to such banker or other person as they should appoint, all sums which he should collect when they amounted to £20, or if, in the event of his not paying according to the direction of the guardians, either of his sureties should, within twenty-one days after notice, pay any sums which he should not have paid according to such direction. A declaration upon the bond against one of the sureties averred that A., after the bond, & before being directed to pay, collected by virtue of his office sums amounting to £470, & that although a reasonable time for payment had elapsed before action, & before the twenty-one days' notice to the sureties, yet he made default. It then assigned two breaches, the first of which was non-payment by deft. twenty-one days after notice of the default of A., & the second, that while A. was collector he received sums amounting to £500 in respect of rates, & same remained in his hands, & although a reasonable time had elapsed, he had not paid same, though often requested, to the guardians or their treasurer, or any person appointed by them to recover same:—Held: (1) the declaration was not bad for omitting to aver that legal rates were made & delivered to A., or to set forth the names of the persons from whom they were collected; (2) the second breach was not a good breach of either branch of the condition.—KINGSFORD v. DUTTON (1850), 1 L. M. & P. 479.

870. — Appointment to & acceptance of office.]—Upon bond conditioned that a collector of poor rates shall render an account of money received, it is necessary to aver not only an appointment, but an acceptance by the person appointed, the office being merely a voluntary one, & not one cast on the party by law.—SERRA v. WRIGHT (1815), 6 Taunt. 45; 1 Marsh. 441; 128 E. R. 949.

871. Embezzlement.]—A declaration in debt on a bond, conditioned to make satisfaction within three months after proof made of goods embezzled by an apprentice, & notice thereof given, must allege how much he embezzled, the manner in which the proof was made, & when the notice was given.—LEE v. FYDGE (1618), Cro. Jac. 488; 79 E. R. 416.

872. —.]—In debt on bond conditioned that if the apprentice of the obligee should purloin or embezzle anything to his master's damage, the obligor will pay it, a breach that he embezzled & purloined £200 is well assigned.—THORNICROFT v. BARNES (1713), 10 Mod. Rep. 149; 88 E. R. 669.

873. —.]—If the condition of a bond is, that A. shall not embezzle any money that shall come to his hands on account of his master, it is necessary in an action against the obligor, to state, in the breach, what particular sum of money was embezzled, & how, or from whom it was received.—JONES v. WILLIAMS (1779), 1 Doug. K. B. 214; 99 E. R. 139.

874. Award—Delivery.]—In debt on bond to perform an award, pltf. must aver that it was ready to be delivered, etc. where the submission is in those terms.—JENKINSON v. ALLISSON (1675), Freem. K. B. 415; 3 Keb. 513, 556; 89 E. R. 308.

875. — Date.]—In debt on bond for performance of an award it is not necessary to state the date of the award, for if it be alleged to have been made on a day which is within the time of the submission, it is sufficient.—ARNOTE v. BREAME (1704), 6 Mod. Rep. 244; 87 E. R. 992; sub nom. ARMITT v. BREAME, 2 Ld. Raym. 1076; 1 Salk. 76; sub nom. ARMOTE v. BREAM, Holt, K. B. 212.

Annotation:—Refd. Styles v. Wardle (1825), 4 B. & C. 908.

876. — Words of award.]—Assignment of breaches in debt on bond to perform an award, in the words of the award:—Held: generally sufficient, although pltf. do not show that performance might have been effected, or that deft. had become enabled to carry it into effect by the circumstances having taken place on which it was to have been performed, the award being held to assume that they had; & the fact of such circumstances not having taken place, if they lay properly within deft.'s knowledge, should be pleaded & set out by him.—WILLCOCKS v. NICHOLLS (1814), 1 Price, 109; 145 E. R. 1347.

877. Performance of covenants—Assignment of lease.]—Debt on bond for performance of covenants in an assignment of a lease, in which it was covenanted that it then was a good & indefeasible lease, & that pltf. should quietly enjoy during the whole residue of the term without any let or disturbance of defts. A stranger entered, & breach was assigned that at the time of making the assignment the lease was not good & indefeasible:—Held: the breach was well assigned, for the first sentence was distinct, & contained a general covenant not restrained by the latter

r. Award — Non-compliance.]—In an action on a bond conditioned for performance of an award, the particular breach relied on must be stated in the declaration: it is not sufficient to state generally that deft. refused to comply with the award, & would not perform the acts on his part to be performed according to the directions of the award.—BURGOYNE v. BURGOYNE (1827), Chip. 120.—CAN.

s. Common money bond — Setting out condition—Assignment of breaches.]—Pltfs., who had taken from defts. a bond for the due performance of a collector's duty, with a condition in it prescribed by by-laws, declared upon it as upon a common money bond, without setting out the condition; deft. pleaded non est factum:—Held: it would have been better for pltfs. to have set out the condition in their declaration, & assigned breaches.—

t. Must show obligation by deed—"Bound."]—A declaration that deft. became bound, etc., whereby the bond became forfeited, sufficiently discloses an obligation by specialty; though the mere expression "bound" would not.—PROVINCIAL INSURANCE CO. v. WALTON (1865), 16 C. P. 62.—CAN.

878. — Particularity.—In an action on a bond for the performance of covenants, the breach assigned must be as particular as the covenants.—TIBBS v. CLOW (1719), 11 Mod. Rep. 312; 88 E. R. 1060.

879. Bond dated abroad.—A bond dated abroad may be alleged to have been made at any place in England.—HIGHAM v. FLOWER (1605), Cro. Jac. 76; 79 E. R. 64.

880. Signature or seal.—A declaration that deft. was indebted per scriptum suum obligatorium is sufficient, without saying sigillo sigillatum.—ASHMORE v. RYPLEY (1617), Cro. Jac. 420; 79 E. R. 359.

Bonds under 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 11.—See Subsect. 2, post.

SUB-SECT. 2.—ASSIGNMENT OR SUGGESTION OF BREACHES UNDER 8 & 9 WILL. 3, c. 11, s. 8.

881. In general.—Debt on bond conditioned for payment of an annuity of £175 quarterly, during the life of G. Pleas, payment of the annuity at the days, & payment of the arrears after the days in the condition. Replication, that deft. did not pay the annuity or the arrears in manner & form as deft. alleged, but on the contrary pltf. suggested that during the life of G. £87 10s. for two quarterly payments became due, & was in arrear, & concluded to the country:—Semble: the replication was bad.

Under 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 11, s. 8, there is no power of introducing any suggestion on the record except in the three cases of judgment upon demurrer, by confession, or nil dicit (CHAMBRE, J.).—DE LA RUE v. STEWART (1806), 2 Bos. & P. N. R. 362; 127 E. R. 667.

Annotation:—Consd. Hudson v. Smith (1827), 6 L. J. O. S. K. B. 146.

882. Necessity for—Interest on mortgage debt.—In an action of debt on bond, stating that A. having lent B. £1,000 B. had given him a mtge. deed conditioned that if B. should pay the interest until the principal was paid, then the bond should be void, it is not necessary to assign a breach, for the indenture need not be set forth.—STONE v.

TAVERNER (1716), 10 Mod. Rep. 329; 88 E. R. 720.

883. — Proof of damage.—8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 11, s. 8, was made in favour of defts., & is highly remedial, calculated to give pltf. relief up to the extent of the damage sustained, & to protect defts. against the payment of further sums than what was in conscience due, & also to take away the necessity of proceedings in equity to obtain relief against an unconscientious demand of the whole penalty in cases where small damages only had accrued. It is not in the power of pltf. to refuse to proceed according to that Act, in cases within the sect., but he must assign the breach of such covenants as he proceeds to recover the satisfaction for, & if deft. plead to issue, & the cause goes to a jury for trial, the jury of such cause must assess damages for such of the breaches assigned, as pltf., upon the trial of the issues, shall prove to have been broken.—HARDY v. BERN (1794), 5 Term Rep. 636; 101 E. R. 355.

884. — — ——8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 11, s. 8 is compulsory on pltf., & he cannot enter up judgment for the whole penalty on a judgment by default, as he might have done at common law.—ROLES v. ROSEWELL (1794), 5 Term Rep. 538; 101 E. R. 302.

885. — Annuity.—After judgment for pltf. on demurrer, in debt on a bond conditioned to pay an annuity, pltf. cannot take out execution for the arrears due, but must assign breaches on the record.—WALCOT v. GOULDING (1799), 8 Term Rep. 126; 101 E. R. 1303.

Annotation:—Refd. Murray v. Stair (1823), 2 B. & C. 82.

886. — — — Whole sum due on default.—Where one gives a counter security to another containing a covenant to pay an annuity & indemnify him, & also a warrant of attorney by way of collateral security, & it is agreed that in default of any one payment of the annuity judgment shall be entered up & execution issue for the whole sum specifically being the price of the annuity, it is not necessary to assign breaches, but execution may issue for the whole sum.—HOWELL v. STRATTON (1804), 2 Smith, K. B. 65.

887. — — — Collateral security.—Breaches need not be assigned on non-payment of an annuity secured by a warrant to confess judgment on a mutuatus.—SHAW v. WORCESTER (MARQUIS) (1830), 6 Bing. 385; 4 Moo. & P. 21; 8 L. J. O. S. C. P. 98; 130 E. R. 1328.

PART XII. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 2.

881 i. In general—Application of 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 11.—The provisions of the above Act as to the assignment or suggestion of breaches, & as to judgment for the penalty standing as a security for damages in respect of future breaches, are in force in Ontario.—STAR LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY v. SOUTHGATE (1898), 18 P. R. 151.—CAN.

881 ii. — — ——The above Act is in force though virtually superseded by rules of the Code of Civil Procedure.—MOORE v. ORFORD (1908), 27 N. Z. L. R. 577.—N.Z.

a. Necessity for—Prior to trial.—Where the condition of a bond is set out & it appears that the bond is within the above Act, pltf. ought to suggest his breaches before trial, & cannot take a verdict for the penalty, & suggest breaches afterwards.—CAMPBELL v. LEMON (1832), 2 O. S. 435.—CAN.

b. — Waiver.—The provisions of the above Act are mandatory, & cannot be waived by agreement between the parties.—MONTGOMERY v. BYRNE (1851), 1 I. C. L. R. 230; 4 Ir. Jur. 46.—IR.

c. S. P. DELACOUR v. MURPHY (1848), 13 I. L. R. 195; 1 Ir. Jur. 46.—IR.

885 i. — Annuity.—A. & B. entered into a joint & several bond, with a warrant of attorney to confess judgment thereon. The bond was a simple money bond, but the warrant of attorney referred to the provisions of an annuity deed executed contemporaneous therewith. By this deed A. granted an annuity to pltf., chargeable on lands in the deed named, & it was agreed, that if any gale of this annuity should be in arrear, it should bear interest, & that a receiver should be appointed; & in case he should be interfered with in the receipt of rents, or in case the same should be insufficient, pltf. might proceed under the powers conferred by the deed or the judgment collateral therewith. Three gales of the annuity being in arrear, pltf. issued execution without a previous assignment of breaches:—Held: there should have been a suggestion of breaches.—RYAN v. MASSY (1852), 2 I. C. L. R. 642; 5 Ir. Jur. 15.—IR.

885 ii. — — ——It is not necessary to suggest breaches on a judgment obtained on a bond & warrant, with release of all errors, to secure an annuity.—WOFFINGTON v. ARMSTRONG (1832), Glascock, 209.—IR.

Sect. 3.—Pleadings: Sub-sects. 2 & 3.]

888. Award.]—In debt on bond, conditioned to perform an award, pltf. must assign a breach & cannot have judgment for the penalty & take out execution for the single sum awarded, though the measure of damages be ascertained by the award.—WELCH v. IRELAND (1805), 6 East, 613; 2 Smith, K. B. 666; 102 E. R. 1424.

Annotations:—Refd. Murray v. Stair (1823), 2 B. & C. 82. Refd. Gillingham v. Waskett (1824), M'Cle. 198.

889. — Indemnity bond.]—8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 11, s. 8, extends to a liability created by the breach of an indemnity bond, whereby the obligee is so far damnified as that he may be required to pay money in consequence of a forfeiture, although the matter of the liability should be in some sort collateral to the direct breach, & actual damnification has not ensued.

Where a party indemnified by bond is sued for damages in respect of the matter of the indemnity, pltf. recovers, if deft. in that action recover over against the indemnifier, he must assign as breach not only the damages & costs recovered against him, but also his own costs, sustained in defending the suit, although he have, as yet, in fact, paid nothing in respect or on account of such costs; or, if he do not so assign, he will be estopped from recovering, by sci. fa. on the judgment obtained on the bond, what he may afterwards be compelled to pay on that account.

Demurrer to a plea in sci. fa., that pltf. might have suggested & assigned the damages as further breach of a bond already recovered on under the judgment obtained in the action on the bond, on which the sci. fa. was founded, overruled.—HARRAP v. ARMITAGE (1823), 12 Price, 441; 147 E. R. 772.

890. Post obit bond.]—A post obit bond, upon which a forfeiture has taken place, is not within 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 11, & it is unnecessary to suggest breaches.—MURRAY v. STAIR (EARL) (1823), 2 B. & C. 82; 3 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 278; 107 E. R. 313.

891. — By Crown.]—It is not necessary for the Crown to assign breaches.—R. v. PERO (1826), 1 Y. & J. 169; 148 E. R. 631.

Annotation:—Mentd. Lord Advocate v. Dunglas (1842), 9 Cl. & Fin. 173.

892. — Collateral agreement—& payment.]

892 i. — Collateral agreement—Payment of sum certain.]—Deft. executed a bond, with warrant of attorney to confess judgment in a penal sum, the only condition of the bond being for the payment of a less sum & interest. Contemporaneously with the execution of the bond pltf. wrote a letter to deft., by which he undertook that, upon deft. effecting a policy of assurance on his life in favour of pltf., for the smaller sum, & paying interest thereon upon the days therein specified, that he would not put the bond, or a judgment thereon, in force:—Held: in order to entitle pltf. to issue execution it was not necessary, either under 9 Will. 3, c. 10 (Ir.), or under C. L. P. Act, 1853, s. 145, to assign breaches; the object of the bond, in reserving the payment of the penal sum, not being to secure the performance of some duty or agreement, but to secure the payment of a certain sum, which was a bond fide subsisting debt.—QUIN v. O'KEEFE (1859), 10 I. C. L. R. 393; 4 Ir. Jur. 257, 297.—IR.

892 ii. — — — Payment by instalments.]—Execution cannot be issued on a judgment entered on a warrant of attorney collateral with the money conditioned for payment by instalments, until breaches have been duly suggested on the bond.—HALL v. BLACKWELL (1860), 10 I. C. L. R. App. xxxviii.—IR.

892 iii. — — — .]—Although, to the ordinary condition of a common money bond, upon which judgment has been entered, there is added & incorporated into the sealed instrument a proviso containing an agreement that the sum secured shall be paid by instalments, yet a suggestion of breaches is not necessary, if, upon the construction of the condition & proviso taken together, —A bond, upon the face of it, appeared to be conditioned for payment of a sum certain, but by an indenture of the same date, declaring the purposes for which the bond was executed, it was agreed that it should be lawful for the obligees in the bond to commence an action, & to proceed to judgment whenever they should think fit, & upon judgment being obtained, to issue execution, & that the judgment should be a security for payment to the obligees, on demand, of all sums of money which then were or might thereafter become due to them. A judgment having been entered up by virtue of the deed, the obligees issued execution without assigning breaches or executing a writ of inquiry:—Held: this was a bond substantially conditioned for the performance of an agreement, & the obligees ought to have assigned breaches.—HURST v. JENNINGS (1826), 5 B. & C. 650; 8 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 424; 108 E. R. 242.

893. — — — .]—A bond was executed on Mar. 17, 1827, in the penalty of £10,000, conditioned for payment of £5,000, on Mar. 17, 1829, with interest in the meantime payable half-yearly, pursuant to the provisos & stipulations contained in an indenture of assignment of even date with the bond. Deft., after craving oyer of the bond & condition, pleaded payment according to the condition of the bond & of the provisos in the indenture, which plaintiff denied in his replication. The principal & interest having become due before the action was commenced:—Held: it was not necessary for pltf. to assign breaches.—SMITH v. BOND (1833), 10 Bing. 125; 3 Moo. & S. 528; 2 L. J. C. P. 269; 131 E. R. 853.

894. — — — .]—To a declaration in debt on a bond conditioned for payment of £1,000 on a day certain, & for the performance of the covenants in a certain indenture, defts. pleaded a general plea of performance of all things mentioned in the condition. Pltf., by his replication, denied that defts. paid the £1,000 in manner & form as alleged:—Held: as pltf. was proceeding solely on the breach in non-payment of the money, it was not necessary for him to assign breaches.—ROAKES v. MANSER (1845), 1 C. B. 531; 14 L. J. C. P. 199; 5 L. T. O. S. 93; 135 E. R. 648.

895. — — — Payment of sum certain.]—An action of debt was commenced against exors. on a bond of their testator, conditioned for making it void on payment of a certain sum at a future day, it appears to have been intended that the whole sum remaining secured by the judgment should become payable upon default made as to any one instalment.—BUCHANAN v. JACK (1870), 11 R. 5 C. L. 41.—IR.

e. — — — Payment of contingent sum.]—In the condition of a bond reciting that B., deft. kept an account, & discounted bills of exchange, with a bank was contained an agreement that if W. & A., or either of them, their heirs, etc., should satisfy & pay such sums as they might be indebted to the bank for advances, then the bond was to have no effect:—Held: a suggestion of breaches was required.—MONTGOMERY v. BYRNE (1861), 2 I. C. L. R. 230; 4 Ir. Jur. 46.—IR.

895 i. — — — Payment of sum absolutely & sum conditionally.]—When a judgment is entered on a bond & warrant of attorney, & the bond is for or within one month after his decease, whichever should first happen. Defts. obtained a judge's order for time to plead, which they neglected to do, & final judgment was signed for want of a plea, which was afterwards set aside, on the defts.' undertaking to plead within a week, when they pleaded a judgment recovered against them as exors., which not being signed by a serjeant, pltf. again signed final judgment:—Held: it was unnecessary to suggest breaches.—CARDOZO v. HARDY (1818), 2 Moore, C. P. 220.

Annotations:—Apld. Smith v. Bond (1833), 10 Bing. 125. Refd. Murray v. Stair (1823), 3 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 278.

896. — Payment by instalments—Certificate for execution.—In a debt on a bond, with non est factum (inter alia) pleaded, to secure payment by instalments of the consideration for the purchase of a business, pltf. ought to suggest breaches, & if he has not done so, & a verdict be found for him on the plea of non est factum, he is not entitled to a certificate for speedy execution.—D'ARANDA v. HOUSTON (1834), 6 C. & P. 511, N. P.

897. — Administration bond.—Pltf. suing upon an administration bond entered into with the President of the Probate Divorce & Admlty. Div. of the High Ct. in the usual form to secure the due administration of the estate of a deceased person, must suggest breaches.—COPE v. BENNETT (1911), 55 Sol. Jo. 521; subsequent proceedings, [1911] 2 Ch. 488.

898. Validity of—Immaterial allegations added.—The breach of the condition of a bond, otherwise well assigned, is not vitiated by the superaddition of immaterial allegations.—STOTHERT v. GOODFELLOW (1832), 1 Nev. & M. K. B. 202.

899. Further breaches — Procedure.—Where pltf. suggests further breaches after a verdict in an action on a bond, he should serve deft. with a copy of the suggestion, or he cannot regularly proceed to execute a writ of inquiry of damages, & the irregularity may be taken advantage of at the time of holding the inquisition. Such an irregularity is waived, if deft., being present, suffer the inquiry to proceed to an assessment of damages, & he cannot afterwards set aside the inquisition on the ground of surprise, unless as matter of indulgence, & on terms.—GILLINGHAM v. WASKETT MYERS (1824), 13 Price, 791; M'Cle. 568; 147 E. R. 1156; subsequent proceedings (1825), M'Cle. & Yo. 147.

the payment of one sum of money absolutely, & of another conditionally, an execution issued for the payment of the money absolutely secured, without an assignment of breaches previously had, will be set aside as irregular.—MADDEN v. KELLY (1850), 2 Ir. Jur. 120.—IR.

896 i. — Payment by —A bond was executed by the deft., conditioned for payment of money by instalments, with warrant of attorney, on which judgment was entered. Execution allowed to issue on the judgment for the amount of the instalments due on it, without suggestion of breaches.—PURCEL v. O'REILLY (1834), 3 Ir. L. Rec. N. S. 25.—IR.

896 ii. — — ——A bond was conditioned for the payment of a penal sum of £200, subject to a proviso, that if the obligor, or his heirs, etc., should pay the obligee £100 at the times mentioned in a defeasance in a warrant of attorney thereto annexed, without delay, the obligation should be void, otherwise, to remain in force. The times & manner of payment specified in the defeasance were, that payment should be in instalments, & if default were made, the obligee was to proceed for whatever sum remained due:—

g. — Performance of—Agreement.—Pltf. ought to suggest breaches before issuing execution on a judgment entered pursuant to a warrant of attorney upon a bond conditioned for the performance of an agreement.—ERSKINE v. BEATTY (1837), 2 Jo. Ex. Ir. 471.—IR.

h. — — — Covenants in mortgage—Mortgage unavailing.—Execution will not be allowed to issue on a judgment upon a bond & warrant of attorney, conditioned to perform the covenants in a mtge. deed, without assigning breaches, although the mtge. be unavailing.—NOLDER v. WALSH (1839), Smythe, 74.—IR.

Work—& payment of damages.—Pltf. is bound to suggest breaches before he issues execution on a bond conditioned for the performance of work necessary to the protection of pltf.'s premises from injury, & for payment of all damages which might be suffered by reason of the non-performance of such work.—BURKE v. DUBLIN & KINGSTOWN

900. — Occasioned by delay.—8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 11, does not apply to cases where the damages assessed are calculated by the jury to meet & satisfy the entire condition of a bond, etc.

Where pltf., having recovered a verdict in action on a bond for replacing stock & paying dividends, etc., in the meantime, & the jury having assessed damages for the stock not having been transferred, & for the accruing dividends, etc., long subsequently, obtained judgment & satisfaction for the whole by an action of debt on the judgment:—Held: he could not afterwards sue by sci. fa. as for further breaches so to obtain satisfaction for the loss of the dividends, etc., sustained by the delay of satisfaction during the interval between the two judgments.—SAVILLE v. JACKSON (1824), 13 Price, 715; M'Cle. 377; 147 E. R. 1131.

901. Default of rejoinder—Procedure.—In a case where breaches must be assigned or suggested, if deft. does not rejoin, the ordinary course is for pltf. to sign judgment for want of a plea, strike out all pleadings subsequent to the declaration, & suggest breaches, if the declaration itself does not state them. But this is only a rule of convenience, & if the nature of the case requires that the pleadings, down to the default, should continue on the record, they ought to be retained.

Where to debt on bond conditioned to perform certain duties deft. pleaded, generally, performance of the condition, pltf. replied, alleging breaches, by not performing some of the duties, deft. suffered judgment by default, & pltf. sued out a writ of inquiry, setting forth on the writ all the pleadings down to the end of the replication:—Held: the course pursued was right, a statement of breaches appeared, of which the ct. executing the inquiry might properly take notice.—LAWES v. SHAW (1843), 5 Q. B. 322; 1 Dav. & Mer. 714; 8 Jur. 461; 114 E. R. 1270.

i. — Rendering account.—A suggestion of breaches is necessary before execution issues on a judgment entered on a bond, with warrant of attorney, containing a release of errors, which bond was conditioned to levy & collect all such sums as should be presented by the grand jury.—STRATTON v. Further breaches—Occasioned by delay.—To debt on bond setting out the condition & assigning breaches, deft. cravedoyer & demurred, & pltf. having succeeded on the demurrer, entered judgment for the penalty & issued execution. Deft. then moved to set aside the proceedings, but pltf. had leave to amend, by substituting an interlocutory for the final judgment, & entering an award of venire to assess damages, & inquire of further breaches, although three years had elapsed from the entry of judgment.—DOUGLASS v. 905. — & Statute of Limitation.]—By an agreement for the sale of property it was provided that as to £1,000, part of the purchase-money, the purchaser should execute a bond for securing payment of an annual sum of £40 to the vendor & his wife during their lives, & at the decease of the survivor of them, payment of £750 to his children, & payment of the remaining £250 to M. The purchaser executed a bond conditioned for payment of £1,000 & interest at 4 per cent., to trustees at the times & in the manner to be mentioned in an indenture which was intended to be subsequently executed by the purchaser & trustees, & which would be made with regard to payment of the £1,000 agreeably to the terms of the agreement. The indenture when executed was in fact a declaration that the £1,000 should be held on the trusts mentioned in the agreement. In 1872, the trustees of the bond, & the purchaser being dead, the representative of the last surviving trustee joined with M. in filing a bill against the purchaser's exors. for administration of his estate, claiming to be creditors in respect of the £250:—Held: a plea by defts., that certain sums had been paid by the purchaser on account of the £250, the truth of which plea was wholly denied by plffs., did not prevent defts. from also pleading that the debt was statute-barred.—ASHLIN v. bound to pltf. in £8,000 to be paid to pltf., or to W., on request, & that thereby & by reason of the non-payment thereof, an action had accrued, etc. Defts. set out the bond & condition on oyer, & pleaded general performance by them. The condition was, that L. & defts., or either of them, should duly pay all such sums assessed & collected or which thereafter might be assessed & to be collected, by L., as a collector of property-tax, & that L. should duly demand the sums assessed, & in case of non-payment duly enforce the powers of the Acts against defaulters:—Held: the plea was bad, for averring performance generally, instead of showing what was done in performance of the condition, & also for not showing performance by L. as well as by defts.

The bond and condition having been incorrectly set out by defts. on oyer, pltf. set them out correctly, & prayed that they might be enrolled, & then demurred, on the ground of the defective oyer in the plea: Qu.: whether that was the proper course, or whether pltf. should not have moved to set aside the plea. Semble: the effect of the enrolment was, to make the bond & condition, as enrolled, a part of the declaration.—*KEPP v. plea is bad, specially demurred to, which avers payment of both principal & interest.—BISHTON v. EVANS (1835), 2 Cr. M. & R. 12; 1 Gale, 76; 5 Tyr. 639; 3 Dowl. 735; 4 L. J. Ex. 142; 150 E. R. 6.

925. Matters outside bond.—By agreement between pltf. & S., S. was to perform certain works for pltf. for a certain sum, & to receive from time to time three-fourths of the cost of the part completed, the first payment to be made after one-eighth was performed, the remaining fourth part to be paid one month after the whole was completed, & if S. should fail to perform the work, pltf. might employ others to perform it, & deduct the expense from the sum payable to S. Deft. entered into a bond conditioned for performance of the agreement by S. S., after performing part of the works, abandoned the contract. Pltf., at the request of S., & upon new security given by him, had advanced to S., for assisting him in performing the works, a sum exceeding the whole cost of the works performed at the time of the abandonment, but less than the whole contract price. Pltf. had the works completed at an expense which, added to the cost of the part performed by S., was less than the whole contract price agreed on with S., but which, added to the sum actually advanced to S., exceeded that contract price. Pltf. brought an action of debt on the bond, suggesting, as a breach, S.'s non-performance, & pltf.'s loss thereby. Deft. pleaded non est factum:—Held: (1) Pltf. was entitled to nominal damages only, the loss having arisen, not from the non-performance of S.'s contract, but from pltf. having advanced more than the contract required, especially as the sum advanced exceeded, not only the three-fourths, but the whole of the work completed, & as the advances had been made on a fresh negotiation with, & security taken from, S.; (2) this answer could not be pleaded by deft., but was properly set up, under non est factum, to meet pltf.'s evidence of damages.—WARRE v. CALVERT (1837), 7 Ad. & El. 143; Will. Woll. & Dav. 528; 2 Nev. & P. K. B. 126; 6 L. J. K. B. 219; 1 Jur. 450; 112 E. R. 425.

926. Assignment of breaches—Effect of insufficiency.—In debt on bond, if deft. plead performance, & pltf. assign an insufficient breach, there shall be judgment against pltf., though the plea was defective.—GEWEN v. ROLL (1606), Cro. Jac. 131; 79 E. R. 114.

927. — Effect of mistake.—Debt on an obligation to perform an award. Pltf. in his replication having ill assigned a breach, & prayed leave to discontinue:—Held: the award being for the payment of money, the ct. would not give leave, for he might have his action on debt upon

t. — Sufficiency.—Sci. fa. on a bond to the Queen for performance of duty by a pork inspector. The assignment of breaches showed an agreement to refer pork to the inspector for his inspection, & then alleged that he wrongfully branded pork of inferior quality with the words "prime mess pork":—Held: breaches were sufficiently assigned.—*R. v. 929. — — Formal terms.]—In debt on bond conditioned not to assault, molest, or injure the person of pltf., the replication alleged that deft. assaulted, molested, & injured the person of pltf. by then & there beating, etc., & otherwise ill-treating him. Deft., while sitting in the same room, had jumped up from his seat with his fist clenched as if to strike pltf., but was pulled back to his seat by another before he was within reach of pltf.:—Held: there was a sufficient assignment, by the replication, of a breach of the condition, for which the jury were to assess damages on 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 11, s. 8, although such breach were not alleged in formal terms to be laid according to the Act.—TOMBS v. PAINTER (1810), 13 East, 1; 104 E. R. 265.

930. — — —.]—In action of debt on bond, with penalty for performance of covenants, breaches may be assigned in the replication; & on demurrer, interlocutory judgment may be given to the extent that it appears to the ct. that the replication is sufficient, & that pltf. ought to recover his debt & damages for detention, & final judgment may be stayed till after award & execution of the writ of inquiry.—JOHNES v. 932. — — — Traverse of material averment.]—8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 11, s. 8, does not authorise the assignment of breaches in a replication which traverses a material averment in the plea.

Where, to a declaration in debt on a bond, deft., after setting out the condition of the bond on oyer, pleaded performance of part of the condition only, & matter of excuse for non-performance as to the residue:—Held: a replication, incorporating an assignment of breaches with a traverse of the matters of excuse, was bad, on the ground that the Act authorises no double pleading, except the multiplication of such breaches as could have been properly assigned at common law.—WEBB v. JAMES (1841), 8 M. & W. 645; 1 Dowl. N. S. 35; 11 L. J. Ex. 38; 151 E. R. 1197.

939. — — — Specific breaches—To general & specific pleas.]—In debt on bond conditioned for the performance of covenants, if deft. craves oyer, & pleads performance of each covenant specially, & also general performance, pltf. must assign

933 i. — — — Award.]—In an action on a bond, where the plea is that the bond was conditioned to perform an award, & no award made, pltf. must either deny the condition as alleged, or reply specially setting out an award & assigning a breach.—COWAN v. WHITE (1863), 9 U. C. L. J. O. S. 131.—CAN.

937 i. — — — Admission of non-performance of condition—Suggestion preferable to assignment—Traverse of excuse for non-performance.]—To an action on a surety bond, conditioned for faithful performance of the principal, as secretary to pltf., & the making of satisfaction for any losses, etc., within three months after due proof thereof & notice—the surety averred performance up to a certain period, & as an excuse for subsequent non-performance alleged a dealing by pltf. in gold & silver coins contrary to law, which increased the risk, whereby the surety was discharged; the replication traversed the dealing in gold & silver & assigned breaches on days between periods which embraced not only that time in the plea covered by performance, but also that during which the breach was admitted:—Held: the replication should not have assigned but suggested breaches, & confined them to the period for which the surety had pleaded performance, & should have concluded the traverse of the surety's excuse of non-performance with an issue to the country.—MECHANICS' WHALE FISHING Co. v. WHITNEY (1847), 3 Kerr, 312.—CAN.

939 i. — — — Specific breaches—To general plea.]—The condition of a bond set out on oyer, was for due performance by A. of the office of secretary & treasurer of a society, according to its rules. In answer to a plea of performance pltf. replied assigning for breaches. (1) that it was a rule that the treasurer should have authority to receive all money for the society, " & that he should also deposit daily with the bank all such money as he should receive "; yet that he had received a large sum of money & had not paid

940. — Payment of money—Non-payment.]
—In debt on bond to pay so long as he continued in office, if deft. plead, that it was granted for the life of A. & paid during the life of A., pltf. may reply that he did not enjoy it for, & pay during, the life of A., etc., but he must assign a breach that he did not pay.—*GAYLE v. 941. — — — — —.]—Debt on bond to save harmless from expenses by reason of naming one to a curacy, or from suits by reason thereof. Plea, non damnificatus. Pltf. replied, & assigned for breach that he was obliged to pay such a sum by reason of such nomination, but did not say how he was obliged:—Held: well enough.—SIMMONS v. LANGHORNE (1754), 2 Wils. 11; 95 E. R. 659.

942. — — — — — General denial.]—A plea, to a declaration on bond, conditioned (inter alia) for payment of £3,000, that all the sums of money which become due on the bond were paid, may be replied to generally, by a general denial of the words of the plea, without assigning any specific breach.—TURNER v. M'NAMARA (1781) 2 Chit. 697.

Annotation:—Reid. Roakes v. Manser (1845), 1 C. B. 531.

943. — — — — —.]—To debt on bond, deft., after reciting a mtge. deed, which showed the condition to be for payment of a sum of money on a day specified, according to the tenor of the proviso contained in the indenture, & for the performance of the covenants therein, pleaded that there were no negative or disjunctive covenants in the indenture, & that he paid the money mentioned in the condition on the day therein specified, according to the effect thereof, & performed all the covenants & provisos in the indenture on his part to be performed. Pltf., in his replication, took issue generally on the non-payment of the money:—Held: such replication was good, as the only point in issue was payment of the money, & as pltf. had therein denied the whole substance of deft.'s plea.—DARBISHIRE v. BUTLER (1821), 5 Moore, C. P. 198.

944. — With averment.]—Debt on bond conditioned to render an account of all such sums of money & goods as were due & belonging to W. at the time of his death, which should any ways come to deft.'s hands, & to make an equal dividend of all such sums of money, etc., & pay pltf. a proportion of same. Plea, that no goods came to deft.'s hands. Replication, that a silver bowl came to his hands, & concluding with an averment:—Held: the replication was bad, for not assigning a breach, viz., that deft. did not make a dividend or pay the proportion, but the conclusion with an averment was proper.—HAYMAN v. GERARD (1667), 1 Saund. 102; 2 Keb. 275; 85 E. R. 109; sub nom. HEYMAN v. GERARD, 1 Lev. 226; 1 Sid. 340.

945. — Accounting for rates—Performance.]

—Upon bond conditioned that a collector of poor rates should render an account of money received, after general performance pleaded, in assigning a breach that he did not render an account. Semble: it was necessary to aver that he received money to be accounted for.—SERRA v. WRIGHT (1815), 6 Taunt. 45; 1 Marsh. 441; 128 E. R. 949.

946. — Replacement of stock—Notice.]

Action of debt on bond. The condition recited that pltf. had lent to J. £900 3 per cent. reduced annuities, & then the condition was, that J., upon three months' notice in writing from pltf., should replace the £900 stock, as aforesaid, in pltf.'s name, with all dividends which should accrue upon same from the date of the bond. Deft. pleaded that pltf. did not give three months' notice to replace the stock with the dividends, which would have become due for same, from the date of the bond. The replication alleged a three months' notice to replace the stock, with all dividends which had accrued due on same, from the date of the bond, & assigned as a breach, the not replacing of the stock, saying nothing about the dividends:—Held: (1) the notice was sufficient; (2) the assignment of the breach, as to the dividend, was unnecessary & informal; (3) as the breach was well assigned as to the not replacing of the principal, pltf. was entitled to judgment.—HUDSON v. SMITH (1827), 1 Man. & Ry. K. B. 489; 6 L. J. O. S. K. B. 146.

SECT. 4.—SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE OR INJUNCTION.

947. Specific performance—To convey land.]

A bond conditioned to convey lands in consideration of money received, is considered in equity as articles of agreement, & the condition will be decreed to be specifically performed.—ANON. (1728), Mos. 37; 25 E. R. 256.

948. — To settle property—Consideration of marriage—Not satisfied by penalty.]—T. in consideration of H.'s marrying his daughter, entered into a bond to H. in a penalty of £5,000 to settle one-third of whatever estate should come to him upon the death of his father:—Held: the condition of the bond should be specifically performed, for the design of the agreement of which the bond was evidence, being to make lasting provision for wife & children, could never be satisfied by the forfeiture of the penalty, which being money would go to the husband absolutely.—HOBSON v. TREVOR (1723), it over, but had converted it to his own use. (2) that A. fraudulently represented a person to be a shareholder & so induced the society to grant him a loan whereby the money was lost:—Held: breaches were well assigned.—FARMERS & MECHANICS' BUILDING SOCIETY v. WHITEMORE (1852), 9 U. C. R. 297.—CAN.

PART XII. SECT. 4.

947 i. Specific performance — To convey land—Voluntary bond.]—The locatee of lands from the Crown executed a bond in favour of a son, for the conveyance of land, to procure his marriage with a person, which did not take place, the son was allowed to retain the bond. The father subsequently conveyed, for value, to another son, who had notice of the bond; & he having obtained the Crown patent for the land, a bill was filed to compel specific performance of the bond:—Held: the bond could not be enforced.—*OSBORNE v. 953. ————.]—Deft. on entering the service of pltfs., a banking co., executed a bond in the penal sum of £1,000 the condition of which was that it should be void if he should perform his duties in the manner therein mentioned, & also if he should pay to pltfs. £1,000 as liquidated damages in case he should at any time within two years after his leaving the service of pltfs. accept any employment in any other bank within two miles of pltfs.' bank. Deft. resigned his employment in pltfs.' bank & immediately entered the service of a rival bank in the same town. Pltfs. brought an action claiming an injunction to restrain deft. from holding employment in any rival bank. Deft. was willing & offered to pay the penal sum of £1,000 :—Held : deft. could not satisfy his obligation by paying the penal sum, but there was an agreement between the parties to be implied from the bond, that deft. should not enter into the service of a rival bank, which could be enforced in a ct. of equity, & pltfs. were entitled to an injunction.—NATIONAL PROVINCIAL BANK OF ENGLAND v. a. Absence of proof.]—Where in debt on an indemnity bond deft. pleaded that if pltf. was damnified she was damnified of her own wrong, & pltf. took issue on the plea, & did not assign any breach ; & at the trial, pltf. not offering any evidence to prove that she was damnified, was nonsulted. On a motion for a new trial :—Held : the nonsuit was right.—HAMILTON v. DAVIS (1845), 2 U. C. R. 137.—CAN.

Evidence.]—See EVIDENCE; PRACTICE & PROCEDURE.

958. Onus of proof—Execution of bond admitted—Plea of solvit ad diem.]—In debt on bond, the only plea being solvit ad diem, the execution of the bond is admitted, & debt begins.—SANDFORD v. HUNT (1823), 1 C. & P. 118, N. P.

SECT. 7.—JUDGMENT.

959. Entering up—Without writ of inquiry.]—Final judgment may be entered upon a bail bond, without executing a writ of inquiry.—MOODY v. PHEASANT (1801), 2 Bos. & P. 446; 126 E. R. 1376.

960. Failure to pay interest—Stay.]—On bond to pay interest half yearly, & the principal in three years, judgment shall be entered on failure of paying interest, but with stay of execution on discharging it.—MASFEN v. TOUCHET (1770), 2 Wm. Bl. 706; 96 E. R. 416.

961. Second judgment—Damages & costs.]—Judgment by default having been suffered in an action on a bond, pltf. entered up judgment for the penalty together with £9 10s. for damages & costs. A writ of inquiry having been executed, damages were assessed at £1,115 13s. 4d. & costs 40s. Pltf. entered up another judgment for those damages, together with £31 6s. 8d. for costs, but afterwards entered a remittitur on the roll for the costs:—Held: the second judgment was erroneous.—HANKIN v. BROOMHEAD (1804), 3 Bos. & P. 607; 127 E. R. 327, Ex. Ch.

962. — Appeal against first judgment.]—Leave given to pltf. in debt on bond conditioned to perform an award, after judgment for him, upon a plea of judgment recovered, to execute a writ of inquiry upon 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 11, s. 8, after a writ of error allowed, & to sign a new judgment, on the terms of paying costs, & putting debt. in statu quo, etc.—HANBURY v. GUEST (1811), 14 East, 401; 104 E. R. 656.

963. Effect of judgment—Bar to further action on same bond.]—So long as a judgment recovered in an action of debt upon a bond remains in force, the obligee cannot have a new action on the same bond.

If a man brings an action of debt on a bond, & is barred by judgment, so long as the judgment remains in force he shall not have a new action.—HIGGENS' CASE (1605), 6 Co. Rep. 44 b; 77 E. R. 320.

964. — Bar to scire facias.]—A. advanced to B. £875 stock, for which B. executed a bond conditioned for the replacing the stock on a day certain, & payment to A. of all dividends, bonuses & profits which would have arisen from same in the meantime, B. made default, & A. recovered judgment with damages assessed upon both breaches:

b. In general.]—The execution of a bond may, if necessary, be proved vidē voce at the hearing, but if the execution be admitted positively or by way of belief, or if interest be admitted to be paid upon it, no further proof is necessary of the execution.—CURTIS v. DROUGHT (1828), 1 Moll. 487.—IR.

958 i. Onus of proof—Execution of bond admitted.]—Where a bond is pleaded with a protest, the admission of its execution, under a judge's summons for that purpose, does not dispense with the necessity for its production at the trial, but only with the necessity of proof of execution.—LESSLIE v. LEAHY (1837), 5 O. S. 482.—CAN.

c. — Execution not admitted or proved—Sealing and delivery.]—Under a plea, that debt. "did not become bound by said bond, nor did he make & deliver any such bond," pltf. would be bound to prove the execution of the deed "in point of fact only," viz., the sealing & delivery thereof.—HAZELL v. DYAS (1876), 2 R. & C. 36.—CAN.

d. — — — — —.]—An action of a bond sued on showed that the seals were probably put on after the obligors had signed, & they all stated that there were no seals on it when they signed; they did not say whether they had or had not empowered T., for whose benefit they were signing the bond, or any one else, to affix seals; & as the bond, when delivered to pltf., had seals upon it, the onus was upon debt. to show that these seals were not theirs; & that onus was not discharged by merely saying that there were no seals on it when they signed, as it was quite consistent with that evidence that they authorised T. or some one else to put the seals on it before delivery.—PEASE v. RANDOLPH (1911), 19 W. L. R. 625.—CAN.

e. — Execution of bond proved.]—In an action on a bond against sureties the defence raised was that the bond was not executed by them as it had no seals attached when they signed it:—Held: pltf. had proved a prima facie case of a bond properly executed on its face, & as debt. had not negatived due execution of the bond, it being consistent with his evidence that it was duly executed, the onus of proving want of execution was not thrown off debt.—MARSHALL v. MUNICIPALITY OF SHEL-BURNE (1887), 14 S. C. R. 737.—CAN.

f. — — — — — Want of consideration.]—In a suit on a bond pltf. is entitled to recover upon showing that it was executed by debt. The onus lies on debt. of showing want of consideration.—JUGGUT CHUNDER CHOWDHRY v. BHUGWAN CHUNDER FUTTEHDUR (1862), Marsh. 27; 1 Hay, 57; 1 Ind. Jur. O. S. 67.—IND.

PART XII. SECT. 7.

g. Entering up—Mutilated bond.]—The ct. will allow judgment to be entered up on an old bond, although much mutilated, provided it be shown that payments have been made by the obligor on such bond up to a recent period.—BONACUM v. IRWIN (1837), Craw. & D. Abr. C. 105.—IR.

h. — Omission in warrant to enter up.]—Bond payable to the obligee, his exors., etc., & warrant, incorporated, with the bond to enter up judgment, but not saying at whose suit. It cannot be entered up at the suit of the exor. of the obligee.—BELL v. AUCHINLECK (1835), Hayes & Jo. 350.—IR.

k. — Procedure.]—The obligee in a bond, when applying to enter judgment thereon, must swear positively that the obligors executed the bond & warrant, & are living at the time of the application, or in the preceding time.—ATTWOOD v. WYSE (1840), 1 Leg. Rep. 72.—IR.

l. — — — — — Conditional order—Vague affidavits.]—The ct. refused to make absolute a conditional order to enter judgment upon a bond, when the affidavit in support of the motion was vague, & when the affidavits, as to payments within twenty years, were conflicting, but left the party to declare on the bond.—ANON. v. ADAMS (1841), 1 Leg. Rep. 244.—IR.

m. Refusal to order.]—In an action upon a bond given as security in an interpleader issue where a good defence upon the merits was alleged, the ct. refused to make an order for judgment.—MCPHERSON v. UNITED STATES FIDELITY (1913), 24 O. W. R. 690; 4 O. W. N. 1182.—CAN.

n. Amendment—Mistake—In name.]—Where an error was made in entering up a judgment on a bond & warrant of attorney—the christian name of pltf. being entered as John in mistake for James—the ct., notwithstanding the lapse of several years & the death of a party in the meantime, allowed the error to be amended by substituting "James as administrator of John, deceased," for "John."—LOUGHREY v. SWAN (1889), 23 I. L. T. 8, 54.—IR.

o. — — — — — In date.]—The ct. refused to allow pltf. to amend an error on the judgment-roll as to the date of the bond upon which judgment had been entered, when the judgment was three years old, without notice to the opposite party.—STACK v. BALDWIN, 2 Leg. Rep. 228.—IR.

963 i. Effect of judgment—Bar to further action.]—CARLISLE v. HOSHEL (1861), 7 U. C. L. J. O. S. 99.—CAN.

963 ii. — — — — —.]—Judgment upon a bond puts the security wholly out of the obligor's control.—BATEMAN v. RAMSAY (1837), Sau. & Sc. 459.—IR.

q. — Security—Against further breaches.]—Pltf. had recovered £16 as damages for breach of the condition, the penalty being £500. Judgment had been entered for the debt & damages, & duly registered. An application, showing payment of the damages & costs, to have satisfaction entered, was refused with costs, as pltf. was entitled to the judgment as security for further breaches.—HILL v. HILL (1855), 1 P. R. 268.—CAN.

Held: the plea of judgment recovered was a good bar to a sci. fa., & A. was not entitled to further dividends, etc., after verdict, whatever delay there might be in his suing out execution.—SAVILE v. JACKSON (1824), M'Cle. 377; 13 Price, 715; 148 E. R. 157.

965. — Merger of debt.—Where the obligee of a bond sues the obligor & recovers judgment, the original debt becomes merged in the judgment.

A railway co. in 1864 issued bonds for £1,000 each with interest at 6 per cent. The bondholder brought an action on the bonds & recovered judgment for the principal debt, interest & costs. In 1868 the co. was ordered to be wound up, & the bondholder claimed to prove for the judgment debt & interest at 6 per cent. :—Held: the bond debt was merged in the judgment, & the creditor was only entitled to 4 per cent. interest under Judgments Act, 1838 (c. 110), s. 17.—Re EUROPEAN CENTRAL RY. CO., Ex p. ORIENTAL FINANCIAL CORPN. (1876), 4 Ch. D. 33; 46 L. J. Ch. 57; 35 L. T. 583; 25 W. R. 92, C. A.

SECT. 8.—EXECUTION.

966. Joint & several bond—Execution against one.—If the obligee of a joint & several bond obtain by two actions separate judgments against the obligors, & sue out an elegit against one, he cannot take the other in execution on a ca. sa. after the elegit is returned served, nor have a re-extent, for the delivery of the lands is a satisfaction of the debt.—CRAWLEY v. LIDGEAT (1614), Cro. Jac. 338; 79 E. R. 288; sub nom. COWLEY v. LYDEOT, 2 Bulst. 97.

967. Payment of annuity—Successive writs of fieri facias.—In a judgment on bond for payment of an annuity, if a fi. fa. be sued out, & marked for only part of the penalty, a new fi. fa. for subsequent arrears cannot be taken out without a sci. fa. under 8 & 9 Will. 3.—HOWEL v. HANFORTH (1772), 2 Wm. Bl. 843; 96 E. R. 497.

968. — — ——Judgment being entered on a bond to secure the quarterly payment of an annuity, & a fi. fa. having issued for the arrears of the last half year, a second fi. fa. may be taken out for the next quarter without reviving the judgment.—SCOTT v. 969. After exercise of one remedy—Deed both bond & mortgage—Satisfaction under mortgage.—Where a deed was both a bond & a mtge., & pltf. had obtained an order for possession of the mortgaged premises & subsequently sought to have execution for the amount due on the bond :—Held: the exercise of the first mentioned remedy was not an election on his part so as to destroy the right given by the other part of the deed, & he was entitled to have the execution sought.—GRIERSON v. CHRISTIAN (1831), Bluet, 76.

970. Stay—Judgment on failure to pay interest.—MASFEN v. TOUCHET, No. 960, ante.

971. — Fraud of obligee.—A sum of money, secured by a bond, was made payable by instalments, on condition that if any one instalment was not paid at the time it became due, then the whole sum should be payable. The ct., on the appearance of fraud, in not accepting an instalment when offered, stayed execution, but ordered the judgment to stand as security.—STAFFORD'S CASE (1822), 1 L. J. O. S. K. B. 54.

972. Without writ of inquiry—Replevin bond.—In debt upon a replevin bond, assigning for breach the not making a return of the goods distrained for rent, pltf. may, after signing judgment against deft. for not returning the demurrer-book, tax the costs & issue execution for the costs, & the amount of the goods distrained as indorsed on the replevin bond, without executing a writ of inquiry.—MIDDLETON v. BRYAN (1814), 3 M. & S. 155; 105 E. R. 569.

r. — — — Against judgment on another bond.—The ct. allowed judgment to be entered on an old bond & warrant which had been executed to the obligee, as a security against a judgment entered on another bond in which he was surety for the obligor, in order that it might be assigned as a counter security to the purchaser of certain lands of the obligee.—CHAMBERS v. BATESON (1841), 3 I. L. R. 365.—IR.

965 i. — Merger of debt—Interest.—The assignee of the equity of redemption in a mtge. executed his bond to the mtgee. conditioned to pay the balance due on the mtge. in one year, & "in the meantime, & until fully paid & satisfied, pay interest thereon, or upon such part thereof as shall remain unpaid, such interest to be calculated at 7 per cent." In a suit for foreclosure of the mtge. :—Held: the bond being merged in the judgment, deft. thereafter could only be charged with the statutory rate of interest on judgment debts, & no higher rate from then could be charged against him in the foreclosure suit.—HANFORD v. HOWARD (1896), 1 N. B. Eq. Rep. 241.—CAN.

PART XII. SECT. 8.

t. Restraint of amount of execution.—On a bond for the conveyance of land, the verdict was taken for pltf. for $1,000, & 20 c. for the detention, no evidence of damage having been given. Deft. moved to restrain the execution to 1s. damages, the bond being within 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 11 :—Held: such application before entry of judgment was premature.—GREER v. JOHNSTON (1871), 32 U. C. R. 77.—CAN.

a. Stay—Damages not assessed.—Pltfs. sued upon a bond for $1,000 penalty, conditioned to convey land, alleging non-performance. A verdict was rendered for $1,000, & 20 c. for detention, no damages being assessed on the breach. A writ of execution was afterwards issued, indorsed to levy $1,000 & costs taxed :—Held: pltfs. having paid 20 c. & costs, execution might be stayed, for the penalty could not be levied.—GREER v. JOHNSTON (1876), 40 U. C. R. 116.—CAN.

b. Payment into court—Money levied—Judgment to stand.—On motion to set aside an execution, on the ground that there was no consideration for the bond executed by deft., except that of compounding a felony, the ct. directed the judgment to stand, the money levied under the execution to be brought into ct., pltf. to declare on the bond, deft. to plead issuably.—M'CULLAGH v. GREER (1830), 4 Ir. L. Rec. 1st Ser. 13, 26.—IR.

984. Bond as collateral security—Surrender of copyhold lands.—A bond conditioned for the payment, by a third party, of a sum of money & interest pursuant to a proviso, contained in a conditional surrender bearing even date therewith, whereby such third party surrendered to the obligee certain copyhold lands for securing the same sum & interest:—Held: (1) the bond was properly stamped with a £1 stamp, under the (48 Geo. 3, c. 149) above Act; (2) although such bond was not impressed with a stamp denoting that the ad valorem duty had been paid, it was not necessary to produce the surrender to show that fact.—QUIN v. KING (1836), 1 M. & W. 42; 1 Gale, 407; Tyr. & Gr. 407; 5 L. J. Ex. 140; 150 E. R. 338.

985. — Retransfer of stock.—A bond made in 1812 conditioned for the replacing stock of the value of £792, & for paying the amount of the dividends in the meantime, was stamped with a £3 ad valorem bond stamp:—Held: the stamp was sufficient under the above Act, although there was of even date with the bond an insufficiently stamped agreement, accompanied with a deposit of title deeds, for making a mtge. of the estate comprised in the title deeds as a security for replacement of the stock & payment of the sums in lieu of dividends.—BLAIR v. 987. Payment of money—& collateral matters.—A bond conditioned for payment of money & interest, & also for the performance of collateral acts, requires only the ad valorem stamp, appropriated to the principal sum, where that stamp exceeds the £1 15s. which the collateral matter would require if it stood alone.—DEARDEN v. 992. — — — .]—By a bond, A., B., & C. bound themselves in the penal sum of £600 to a co. The bond, after reciting that A. & B. had agreed to join with C. as his sureties, subject to the conditions thereafter contained, in consideration of the co., then advancing C. £300, contained the conditions, that if any of the bounden parties should pay to the co. the principal sum of £300 by three equal yearly payments of £100 each, on specified days, or so much of the payments as should be owing on the day of the decease of C. which should first happen, & should in the meantime until the principal sum should so become due, & until it should be all paid, pay the co. interest at the rate of 5 per cent. upon the £300 in equal half yearly payments, on specified days, & should also in the meantime & until the £300 should become due, & until same, with interest, should be fully paid, well & truly pay the annual premiums which should, during the continuance of the loan, become payable on a certain policy of assurance, under the hands of three of the directors of the co., whereby the funds of the co. were, on payment by C. or his assigns during his life of the annual premium of £23 14s. 7d., made liable to pay C.'s exors., etc., after his decease, £499 10s., which instrument had then been deposited as a collateral security for payment of the principal sum of £300, & interest thereon, & of the premiums which might be due & unpaid, provided the co. might consider the policy as subsisting, notwithstanding any premium might not be paid, & if C. should not, during the continuance of the loan, do any act by which the policy might be avoided & in case either A. or B. should during such time die or go abroad, & if within a time therein mentioned either of them should obtain & substitute a new surety in the place of such surety so dying, etc., who should enter into a like bond, or in case A. or B. should give such additional security for the principal sum, or so much as should then remain unpaid, & the interest thereof, or should forthwith pay upon demand the principal sum & interest, or so much as should be due, then the bond was to be void, otherwise it was to remain in full force, provided that in case any of the events mentioned in the conditions indorsed on the policy should happen during the deposit of the policy, it should be considered as wholly void, & lastly, that if default should be made in payment of the interest, or of either of the instalments, or of the premiums, according to the stipulations, the whole of the

993. — Not exceeding certain sum.]—T. having a banking account with pltfs., on which he owed them £10,000 in 1822, deft. executed a bond conditioned to secure pltfs. for any sums which for ten years pltfs. should advance on bills, etc., which T. should from time to time draw on them or make payable at their house, & all cheques, etc., not exceeding £5,000 in the whole. It was agreed that this bond should not affect a prior security given to pltfs. by T. in 1817, but no notice was given to deft. by pltfs. that T. owed them £10,000 at the time the deft. executed his bond, but T. saw the accounts every fortnight, & received the vouchers half yearly. At the close of his account, T. owed pltfs. more than £10,000, but subsequently to the executing of deft.'s bond he had paid into pltfs.' bank more than £5,000:—Held: deft.'s bond did not require a £25 stamp, but was properly stamped with a £9 stamp.—WILLIAMS v. 994. —.]—A bond given by country customers to bankers in London, with a condition reciting a request by the obligors to the obligees, to pay from time to time bills of exchange, etc., & binding the obligors to pay or remit cash, etc., to pay & discharge such bills of exchange at or before such bills of exchange should become due, & from time to time, to settle accounts & to pay such sums as upon the settling of such accounts should be found due & owing to the obligees, subject to the proviso that "the whole amount of money to be ultimately recoverable by virtue of the obligation should not exceed the sum of £1,000" is a bond for securing the limited sum of £1,000 only, & requires only a £5 stamp.—LLOYD v. HEATHCOTE (1833), 1 Cr. & M. 336; 2 L. J. Ex. 162; 149 E. R. 429; sub nom. LOYD v. HEATHCOTE, 3 Tyr. 309.

995. —.]—Bond for £2,000, conditioned for payment to the trustees of a banking co. of all & every such sum & sums not exceeding in the whole £1,000, which, from time to time, should be & remain due & owing from the obligor to the co., on the balance of his account current with the co., together with such interest & commission as should be due:—Held: not a bond given as a security for repayment of money lent, advanced, or paid, or which might become due on an account current, etc., where the total amount of the money secured or to be ultimately recoverable thereupon was uncertain, & without limit, within the above Act, sched., pt. I., title "Bond," & an ad valorem stamp of £6 was sufficient.—FRITH v. ROTHERHAM (1846), 15 M. & W. 39; 15 L. J. Ex. 133; 6 L. T. O. S. 324; 10 Jur. 208; 153 E. R. 752.

996. Payment of rent—& performance of covenants in lease.]—A bond conditioned for payment of rent, the rent reserved being £650 per annum, & the due performance of all covenants in an indenture of lease of tolls, stamped with a 35s. stamp, is not sufficiently stamped.—TOOVEY v. SIMONS (1839), 3 Jur. 1173.

Annotation:—Consd. Winchester Corn Exchange v. Gillingham (1843), 4 Q. B. 475.

997. —.]—A bond conditioned for the payment of rent reserved by lease under seal is not liable to an ad valorem stamp on the amount of rent, but is sufficiently stamped with a 35s. stamp, as a bond, "not otherwise charged" under the above Act.—WINCHESTER CORN EXCHANGE (PROPRIETORS) v. GILLINGHAM (1843), 4 Q. B. 475; 3 Gal. & Dav. 567; 12 L. J. Q. B. 159; 7 Jur. 326; 114 E. R. 978.

998. "Bonds not otherwise charged"—Bond by principal & surety—To pay creditors—Indemnity to surety.]—Where by bond A., as principal, & B., as surety, were jointly & severally bound to pay to the creditors of C. 14s. in the pound on the amount of their debts, & by the same bond A. was bound to indemnify B. against all loss by reason of his becoming surety:—Held: a stamp of £1 15s. was sufficient in amount for the instrument, & it did not require a second stamp on account of A.'s obligation to indemnify B., the whole being one transaction.

It cannot be said that this bond was given for any certain sum of money so as to require an ad valorem stamp, nor does it come within any of the descriptions of bonds given in the schedules to the Act, except the general one, "bonds not otherwise charged" (per Cur.).—ANNANDALE v. PATTISON (1829), 9 B. & C. 919; 8 L. J. O. S. K. B. 66; 109 E. R. 312.

999. Collateral security—For payment of annuity.]—The condition of a bond, after reciting that M., the obligee, had contracted with S., the obligor, for the sale to him, S., of a messuage, etc., in consideration (inter alia) of an annuity of £150 to be paid to her, M., during her life, by S. by four quarterly payments in the year, & further reciting that, on the contract of the purchase of the messuage, it was agreed, that, for better securing the payment of the annuity, S. should execute that bond, was, for payment of the annuity at the times, etc. The bond was stamped with a £1 15s. deed stamp:—Held: the bond was properly stamped.

As to the stamp it is the proper one. On the face of the instrument, it is not a subsequent collateral security, but given originally; if so, it is to be stamped either as an original conveyance or as a collateral security on the original conveyance. If it be an original security, there is no pecuniary consideration on the face of it, & the clause imposing an ad valorem duty does not apply. Deft. then not being able to bring it within any special clause, it falls within the general bond clause, & is properly stamped with a common deed stamp (PARKE, B.).—MESTAYER v. BIGGS (1834), 1 Cr. M. & R. 110; 4 Tyr. 466; 2 Dowl. 695; 3 L. J. Ex. 202; 149 E. R. 1015.

Annotation:—Mentd. A.-G. v. Wolverton, [1896] 2 Q. B. 389.

1000. — Bastardy bond.]—A bastardy bond, in the penal sum of £100 was conditioned to indemnify the churchwardens & overseers of M. of & from all incumbrances, costs, charges, damages, & expenses whatsoever, for or by reason of the birth, education, & maintenance of the child, & of & from all actions, suits, troubles, & other charges & demands whatsoever, touching same, until such child obtained a settlement out of the parish of M.:—Held: it was subject to a stamp of £1 15s.

as a bond "not otherwise charged."—BOWNES v. MARSH (1846), 10 Q. B. 787; 16 L. J. Q. B. 36; 8 L. T. O. S. 90; 10 J. P. 742; 10 Jur. 905; 116 E. R. 299.

1002. Bond & collateral security—Different dates—Executed at same time.]—A mtge. & a bond were prepared for securing the same sum of money, & were executed at the same time; but they did not bear the same date. The ad valorem duty appeared, by the mtge., to have been paid, but the bond had not the denoting stamp, indicating that the ad valorem duty had been paid according to the above Act, sched., pt. I., title "Mtge." The bond had a £1 stamp only:—Held: the bond was not exempt from the ad valorem duty according to the title "Bonds," in the schedule.—WOOD v. NORTON (1829), 9 B. & C. 885; 4 Man. & Ry. K. B. 673; 8 L. J. O. S. K. B. 72; 109 E. R. 329.

Annotations:—Expld. Quin v. King (1836), 5 L. J. Ex. 140.

Mentd. R. v. Mabe (1835), 1 Har. & W. 460.

1003. Same date.]—Where a bond is conditioned for payment of money, which is declared to be the same money as that secured to be paid by an indenture of even date, it must, to dispense with an ad valorem stamp on such bond, appear by recital, or production of the indenture, that the latter was such an indenture as required an ad valorem stamp.

If it had appeared from the recital in this bond that the other deed had fallen under the description of deeds subject to the ad valorem duty, the £1 stamp would have been primâ facie sufficient. But the recital does not sufficiently show that the deed was of that description; it is not stated, nor can it be necessarily inferred, that it is a mtge., wadset, or other instrument thereafter charged with the same duty as a mtge. or wadset (PARKE, B.).—WALMESLEY v. BRIERLY (1836), 1 Mood. & R. 529, N. P.

1004. Issued by foreign company.]—Under a binding scheme of arrangement for reconstruction the property & assets of an English co. were transferred to a new American co., & it was agreed that the debenture holders of the old co. should receive bonds of the new co. in exchange for their debentures. The holder of a debenture in England received a circular from the London office of the new co., signed by its London agent, saying "Your debenture will have to be sent to Chicago to be exchanged there for the new bond. I shall be pleased to forward your debenture to Chicago free of all cost to yourself if you will lodge same at this office, taking my receipt for same." The debenture holder sent his debenture to the London agent, who sent it to the officials of the new co. in America; a bond of the new co. was transmitted by them to the London agent, who delivered it to the debenture holder in England:—Held: the bond was not "issued," or "offered for subscription & given or delivered to a subscriber," or "assigned or transferred," in the United Kingdom, within the above Act, s. 82 (1) (b).—CHICAGO RY. TERMINAL ELEVATOR CO. v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. (1896), 75 L. T. 572; 45 W. R. 242; 13 T. L. R. 124, C. A.

1005. —.]—Bonds of a foreign co. payable to bearer were executed by the co. abroad & delivered abroad to a foreign trustee for the bondholders. The bonds were expressed not to be valid for any purpose unless authenticated by the certificate of the trustee. Some of the bonds were sent to England & the trustee having come to England there certified them & delivered them to the persons entitled to them:—Held: since the bonds were not marketable till they were certified, the bonds certified in England were "marketable securities by a foreign co. which were made & issued in the United Kingdom" within the above Act, s. 82 (1) (b) (i), & liable to the stamp duty imposed by that Act upon such securities.—*REVELSTOKE (LORD) v. Part I.—Boundaries.

SUB-SECT. 1.—WHAT INCLUDED IN BOUNDARIES.

1. Wastes without fences.]—In wastes where there are no fences, the boundaries are usually settled in such a manner that the eye may draw the line from a particular spot to some other visible object, that the herds may see when cattle are trespassing (LORD REDESDALE).—DIXON v. GRAHAM (1817), 5 Dow, 266; 3 E. R. 1324, II. L. Annotation:—Mentd. Browne v. McClintock (1873), L. R. 6 H. L. 434.

2. Property described by "Abutments."]—Declaration, in trespass, described the locus in quo by abutments on the north, east, south, & west, severally, & it was said to abut, on the south & west, "towards" certain places named. Deft. pleaded only a justification in respect of his seisin of the locus in quo which he averred to be parcel of the manor of H., & to have been demised to him by copy of ct. roll. Pltf. denied that it was parcel, etc. On the trial, pltf. applied his evidence to a triangular piece of land, not contiguous on all sides to the places mentioned in the abutments, but situated within their limits:—Held: (1) the statement of abutments could not be objected to, on the trial, as insufficient in itself; (2) pltf. might apply it, though not with strict correctness, to the triangular piece of land; (3) deft. could not prove his justification in respect of another piece of land, also situated within the limits of the several places named in the abutments, but not contiguous to them on all sides.—LEMPRIERE v. HUMPHREY (1835), 3 Ad. & El. 181; 1 Har. & W. 170; 4 Nev. & M. K. B. 638; 111 E. R. 381.

Annotation:—Distd. Bracegirdle v. Peacock (1845), 10 Jur. 9.

See, further, DEEDS & OTHER INSTRUMENTS; EVIDENCE; SALE OF LAND.

3. Overhanging building.]—Pltf., the owner of two contiguous houses in the City of London, sold one to defts. by a conveyance which correctly marked out the ground site of the house conveyed. One of the first-floor rooms in the house retained by pltf. projected over the site, & was supported by the other house:—Held: the vertical column of air over so much of the room as overhung defts.' site belonged, not to pltf., but to defts.—CORBETT v. HILL (1870), L. R. 9 Eq. 671; 39 L. J. Ch. 517; 22 L. T. 263.

Annotations:—Appld. Laybourn v. Gridley, [1892] 2 Ch. 53. Consd. Newton v. Huggins (1906), 50 Sol. Jo. 617.

4. —.]—A portion of premises as occupied overhung adjoining premises. The owner in fee of both premises demised them as occupied to separate persons. He subsequently conveyed the overhung premises by reference to a ground-floor plan, subject to the lease of those premises, but not expressly subject to the lease of the overhanging premises:—Held: the overhanging part of the adjoining premises passed by the conveyance.—LAYBOURN v. GRIDLEY, [1892] 2 Ch. 53; 61 L. J. Ch. 352; 40 W. R. 474; 36 Sol. Jo. 363.

5. Projection before adjoining house.]—Pltf., having agreed to purchase two adjoining houses, agreed to sell one to P., & by pltf.'s direction that house was conveyed to P., & by P. to deft., in fee, the description being, "all that dwelling-house now in the occupation of P., together with the walls belonging thereto." The houses were in a street, & were built up to the foot-pavement. On the front of deft.'s house adjoining the front of pltf.'s house, was a slight projection nine feet wide; in the middle of this was the doorway three & a half feet wide, & on each side of the doorway was a pillar supporting a shallow portico; over the doorway was a window of the same width & above that a string-course & a pediment, all symmetrically placed on the nine feet projection. Inside, the party-wall, dividing the two houses, instead of being coincident with the extremity of the nine feet projection, was in a direct line with one side of this doorway, so that if the party-wall had been prolonged in a straight line to the street, two feet eleven inches of the width of the projection, which included part of the portico & of the pediment & the whole of one of the pillars supporting the portico, would have been on pltf.'s side of that line; & on the inside these two feet eleven inches, which, from the outside, appeared to be part of deft.'s house, formed part of one of the rooms of pltf.'s house. Deft. having painted the two pillars, the portico, & the whole of the pediment, which were stucco, but had never been before painted, pltf. brought an action of trespass, claiming as his the one pillar, the part of the portico, & the part of the pediment & string-course over the pillar, all of which were on pltf.'s side of the line marking the middle of the party-wall:—Held: the parts in question were parts of deft.'s house.—FOX v. CLARKE (1874), L. R. 9 Q. B. 565; 43 L. J. Q. B. 178; 30 L. T. 616; 22 W. R. 774, Ex. Ch.

6. Outside wall of room.]—A lease of the rooms on a floor is a lease of a separate dwelling, & includes the outer wall so far as it is solely appropriate to the rooms let.—CARLISLE CAFÉ CO. v. MUSE BROTHERS & Co. (1897), 67 L. J. Ch. 53; 77 L. T. 515; 46 W. R. 107; 42 Sol. Jo. 67.

Annotations:—Folld. Hope v. Cowan, [1913] 2 Ch. 312. Consd. Goldfoot v. Welch, [1914] 1 Ch. 213. Refd. Phelps v. London Corp., [1916] 2 Ch. 255.

7. —.]—The demise of a floor or a room

by walls, but by districts of land (PERRIN, J.).—WATERPARK v. FENNELL (1855), 5 I. C. L. R. 120.—IR.

1. Supplementary survey—Effect.]—Where land was described for patent by metes & bounds & a patent was issued in accordance with that description & a survey was made before issuance of the patent, it was held that a survey made thereafter could not affect the patentee's land.—MCGREGOR v. MCMICHAEL (1877), 41 U. C. R. 128.—CAN.

g. "Centre of concession"—Lot on broken front.]—In an action to settle the dividing line between the north & south halves of a lot on a broken front:—Held: the words

a. Natural boundaries—Effect of, on courses & distances.]—If courses & distances are given to reach an object, & they will not reach that object, the rule is to go to the object as the most certain, & to alter the courses or distances accordingly.—MCPHERSON v. CAMERON (1868), 7 N. S. R. 208.—CAN.

b. —.]—In boundary questions natural boundaries generally control courses & distances.—DIMOCK v. STONEHOUSE (1907), 2 E. L. R. 406.—CAN.

c. Property bounded by road or river.]—Where property is bounded by a road or a river, the boundary, even if given as the road or river, is the middle of the road or river, as the case may be.—SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA v. BIJOY CHAND MAHATAR (1918), L. L. R. 46 Cal. 390.—IND.

d. Width of concession—Error in survey.]—There is no law requiring each concession to be of the same width throughout a township; nor any principle by which an error in the survey of one concession, entirely unconnected with the actual work & survey on the ground in another, is to affect such other concession.—JOHNSON v. HONSBARGER (1857), 6 C. P. 201.—CAN.

or an office bounded in part by an outside wall prima facie includes both sides of that wall, unless there be an exception or a reservation or something in the context to exclude it.—HOPE BROTHERS, LTD. v. COWAN, [1913] 2 Ch. 312; 82 L. J. Ch. 439; 108 L. T. 945; 29 T. L. R. 520; 57 Sol. Jo. 559.

Annotation:—Refd. Phelps v. London Corpn., [1916] 2 Ch. 255.

9. Defined by boundary stones.]—The erection of boundary stones, although strong evidence of ownership, will not suffice to prove it, if there is evidence that the erection was protested against either at a court leet or otherwise.—BLANDY-JENKINS v. DUNRAVEN (EARL) (1898),

"the centre of the concession" meant the centre of the particular lot & not the centre of the concession where the lots were not broken.—SCRIVER v. YOUNG (1909), 14 O. W. R. 530; affd. 15 O. W. R. 27.—CAN.

PART I. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 2.—A.

h. Whether parol agreement binding.]—Where respective owners of adjoining lots agree by parol to a division line, it is binding upon them.—LAWRENCE v. McDOWALL (1838), Bar. 442.—CAN.

k. —.]—When parties agree to establish a division line, & do so, & act upon it by putting up their fences, & by severally occupying the land on each side, they are bound by their agreement, whether the line is right or wrong, & cannot repudiate it.—PERRY v. PATTERSON (1874), 2 Pug. 367.—CAN.

l. —.]—Where parties holding adjoining lands meet upon the land & fix a boundary between their lots by verbal agreement, such agreement will be binding upon them, notwithstanding the boundary agreed upon may vary from the deeds or plans by which the parties hold.—DAVISON v. n. — On successors in title.]—The predecessors in title of plff. & deft., agreed verbally to change the direction of the boundary line between them. The arrangement was completed by the erection of a fence on the substituted line:—Held: plff. & deft. were bound by the arrangement entered into by their predecessors in title.—HOLSWORTH v. SUB-SECT. 2.—BY ACT OF PARTIES.

A. By Agreement or Assurance.

10. Specific performance.]—Plff. & deft. by an agreement reciting that controversies had arisen between them concerning the boundaries of their lands abroad, agreed that a particular line should be the boundary & that comrs. should delimit the boundary within a certain limited time which had expired before suit brought; the

them, from settling up any other boundary.—REID v. SMITH (1868), 7 N. S. R. 262.—CAN.

y. — — —.]—Plff. & deft. owned adjoining lots. Deft. had cut trees towards the rear of the lots where there was no fence to indicate where the dividing line was. At plff.'s instance a surveyor ran a conventional line, both parties contributing equally to the cost of the survey. After the conventional line was drawn, plff. complained of deft. cutting within it:—Held: plff. having agreed to the running of the conventional boundary line was bound by it.—CARRIGAN v. LAWRIE (1909), 7 E. L. R. 108.—CAN.

a. — — —.]—JOLLYMORE v. ACKER (1915), 49 S. R. 148.—CAN.

b. — Boundary run by consent — Estoppel.]—GRASSETT v. CARTER (1884), 10 S. C. R. 105.—CAN.

c. — Running line — Acquiescence.]—Running & marking a line by one owner, not in accordance with the true line between adjoining lands, having only been assented to on condition that the true line should be ascertained & run, cannot establish it as a conventional boundary until it is acted on by both owners.—BREVIER v. GOVANG (1858), 4 All. 144.—CAN.

d. — Subsequent erroneous survey — Assent.]—M. being about to convey land to V., went on the land with V. & fixed the starting point from which the line was to run. A deed was made accordingly. M. died & plff., his widow, with consent of V., got a surveyor to run the line, which was done from the starting point indicated by M. V. was not present when the survey was made, but subsequently assented to the line as run in ignorance of the fact that a mistake had been made. V. conveyed to deft. according to the description in his deed:—Held: the assent given by V. to the line as run by the surveyor was not sufficient to establish a conventional line.—ROACH v. WARE (1886), 7 R. & G. 330; 7 C. L. T. 377.—CAN.

e. Recognition under misapprehension.]—Plff. & deft. were owners, respectively, of adjoining lots. Both claimed directly or indirectly under H. Plff. obtained his deed in 1840 from P., to whom H. had conveyed in 1837. Deft., after being in possession for ten years, under an agreement to purchase, derived title directly from H. in 1864. The descriptions in the documentary title, their agreement will bind them & preclude them from settling up any other boundary.—WOODBERRY v. GATES (1846), 2 Thom. 255.—CAN.

q. Agreement for ascertainment — Subsequent alienation.]—Held: while two persons are in difference about the boundary, & show by their conduct that they are uncertain about the true line, but agree with each other to have it ascertained, & to hold accordingly, either party may make a conveyance to a third person, which will enable the alienee to hold according to the true boundary.—DOE BECKETT v. NIGHTINGALE (1849), 5 U. C. R. 518.—CAN.

r. — Mutual survey — Acquiescence.]—Adjoining land owners mutually agreed upon a surveyor to run a boundary line between them, which he did. One owner, without objection on the part of the adjoining proprietor, built a fence on the line so given by the surveyor:—Held: a sufficient acquiescence to establish it as a conventional line.—STEPPER v. HARDING (1887), 24 N. B. R. 143.—CAN.

s. — — —.]—Where respective owners employ a surveyor to run a division line between two given points, & he runs a line which does not exactly follow the prescribed course, but they, with full knowledge of that fact, & of the position of the line so run, agree to it, & erect their fences upon it, & occupy according to it, they are bound by the agreement, & one of them cannot afterwards repudiate it.—INCH v. FLEWELLING (1890), 30 N. B. R. 19.—CAN.

t. — — — Estoppel.]—Where a boundary line was run, between adjoining proprietors of land by a surveyor, mutually employed by them, & acted upon for a number of years, & improvements & subsequent conveyances made according thereto:—Held: the parties were bound by it, although it proved to have been run incorrectly.—DOE d. CARR v. McCULLOUGH (1842), 1 Kerr, 460.—CAN.

w. — — —.]—Two adjoining owners mutually agreed to have a survey, & each appointed a surveyor to represent him. These surveyors, attended by the parties, met on the spot, & having read the deeds, fixed, by mutual consent of the parties, a boundary line between the two properties:—Held: an estoppel was thereby created, which prevented the parties, or those claiming under agreement provided for conveyances from the one party to the other accordingly. In a suit for specific performance of the agreement:—Held: (1) the boundaries settled by such an agreement if it were fairly made without collusion (which could not be presumed) were to be presumed the true & ancient limits; (2) although nothing valuable was given on the face of the agreement as a consideration, the settlement of boundaries & quieting of disputes was a mutual consideration on each side sufficient to support the suit; (3) the provisions relating to comrs. were not a submission to arbitration.—PENN v. BALTIMORE (LORD) (1750), 1 Ves. Sen. 444; 27 E. R. 1132, L. C.

deeds were vague. Pltf. employed a surveyor to run his lines in 1841, two years before deft. went on, & the latter, for some years, both by words & acts, recognised the line between them, as claimed by pltf., as being the true line, but it appeared this line was not the true one:—Held: deft. having acted under a misapprehension of the facts, & being unacquainted at the time with the real boundary of his lot, there was nothing in the acts or declarations so made to establish a conventional line, independent of right.—McDONALD v. McDONALD (1867), 7 N. S. R. 42.—CAN.

l. Agreed line of fence—Misapprehension.—Where adjoining owners concur in putting up a fence along a certain line, on an erroneous assumption by each that it is the true boundary, & neither has made representation to the other upon the subject, neither is estopped from setting up a different line as the true boundary.—MOORE v. DENTICE (1901), 20 N. Z. L. R. 128.—N.Z.

g. Subsequent line run by plaintiff—Acquiescence of defendant.—A line was originally run for prior holders of property, one of them at the time claiming title through the original patentee, under an agreement for purchase, but was not acquiesced in by pltf. Thereafter, M. at pltf.'s request ran a line supposed to be acquiesced in by deft., but upon the erection of a fence thereon by pltf. deft. objected, & it was removed. Later P. ran a line, two surveyors being present at the time on deft.'s behalf, which was the correct line:—Held: the line originally run was not binding upon the parties.—McNAUGHT v. TURNBULL (1863), 13 C. P. 426.—CAN.

h. Agreement with former proprietor—Ratification.—Deft., as part of his defence to an action of trespass, relied upon a conventional line alleged to have been established with L., a former proprietor. L. had no title at the time, but after obtaining title, adopted the line:—Held: the alleged line was insufficient.—MOONEY v. McINTOSH (1887), 7 R. & G. 419; 7 C. L. T. 399, 436; 14 S. C. R. 740.—CAN.

k. Acts of predecessors—Whether binding on successors.—Held: although there was doubt as to the true dividing line between the parties, their predecessors, possessed for nearly twenty years, had agreed & determined a dividing line between them, & deft. was estopped from denying that the

l. — — ——Pltf. bought land theretofore vacant but with a wire fence & posts running along what was taken for the south line. Subsequently by agreement with deft.'s predecessor, pltf. put up a board fence as the boundary of their lots on practically the line of the former post & wire fence. Deft. purchased the north part of the neighbouring lot to pltf., & the owner to the south of him moved him up about four feet & he then claimed four feet from pltf.; & on the latter's refusal, he tore down the fence:—Held: deft. had wholly failed to prove his right to the land beyond the fence & was a trespasser.—McMENEMY v. GRANT (1913), 24 O. W. R. 100; 4 O. W. N. 802; 9 D. L. R. 319.—CAN.

m. Agreement by tenants of moieties—Tenants becoming owners.—Tenants of moieties of a lot made an agreement as to their boundaries. They were subsequently turned out of possession by the owner & took deeds from him:—Held: the agreement could not affect their rights after they became owners.—FRASER v. KIRK (1858), 2 Thom. 290.—CAN.

n. Wall built with consent of adjoining owner.—In an action for the recovery of land, deft. pleaded that he, "by & with the knowledge, approbation, & consent of pltf.," built a wall for the purpose of making a boundary wall between pltf.'s land & his own, & that the portion claimed was included within the boundary wall on his side:—Held: the plea should be construed as impliedly alleging that pltf. had represented to deft. that the site of the wall was the boundary, & such representation having been made with the intent of being acted upon, & deft. having acted upon it, by building the wall, the plea was a good defence by way of estoppel.—SHERIDAN v. BARRETT (1879), 4 L. R. 1r. 223.—IR.

o. Misrepresentation by vendor—Estoppel.—A vendor of land who wilfully misstates the position of the boundary line & thereby leads the purchaser to believe that he is acquiring a strip not included in the deed, is estopped from afterwards claiming such strip as his own property.—ZWICKER v. FEINDEL (1899), 29 S. C. R. 516.—CAN.

b. Whether confirmed by statute.]—Several persons had, under govt., settled according to lines of an original govt. survey. Subsequently, a surveyor was employed by the govt. to run the concessions omitted in the first survey. He did so, but this survey was remonstrated against by petition, & was never definitely adopted boundaries between two townships, was served on the comr., but not on the lady of the manor, who was a party materially concerned in the question:—Held: the notice was insufficient, although the general Inclosure Act authorised the comr. to ascertain the boundaries between the several parishes, & gave a right of appeal, on giving notice to the comr. only.—R. v. LANCASHIRE JJ. (1818), 1 B. & Ald. 630; 106 E. R. 231.

14. Presumption as to limits of manor.]—By an adjudication of the quarter sessions under an Inclosure Act for the parish of T., the locus in quo, parcel of a large waste, was found to be in the parish of G., in which K. had a manor: over the locus in quo, B., who had a manor in the adjoining parish of T., had immemorially exercised acts of ownership: K. had also exercised acts of ownership over it occasionally, but they were less decisive than those exercised by B.: in the Act for the inclosure of T., there was an enumeration of B.'s claims in respect of property in T., but no mention of G., nor of any claim by B. in respect of property in G. In an action of replevin, in which there was conflicting evidence as to the boundary of B.'s manor, the judge left it to the jury to say whether the soil of the locus in quo was in K. or B., without calling their attention to the question, whether or no the parishes & manors were coterminous: the jury found in favour of K.:—Held: the judge had left the case properly to the jury, & the circumstances of there being in the inclosure act for T. no mention of B. having any claim in respect of property in the adjoining parish of G. was sufficient to warrant the jury in the inference that B.'s manor did not extend beyond T.—LESTER v. KEMP (1824), 2 Bing. 30; 9 Moore, C. P. 85; 130 E. R. 215.

15. — Award not in accordance with requirements of Act.]—By a private Inclosure Act, comrs. were directed to fix & settle the boundaries of a parish, in a certain manner therein specified, & to advertise in a provincial newspaper a description of the boundaries so fixed & settled. The boundaries so fixed & settled were also to be inserted in the award of comrs., & to be final, binding & conclusive. The comrs. having fixed & settled the boundaries in the mode specified, duly advertised a description of them, but the boundaries mentioned in the award varied from those which had been advertised:—Held: (1) the comrs. had not pursued the authority given by the Act; (2) their award was not binding as to the boundaries of the parish.—R. v. WASHBROOK (INHABITANTS) (1825), 4 B. & C. 732; 7 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 221; 3 Dow. & Ry. M. C. 386; 107 E. R. 1233.

16. — Service of notice on churchwarden.]—A parish was divided into four tithings, A., B., C., & D., A. containing the parish church. Each tithing maintained its own poor, & each had a churchwarden, elected at a vestry of the parish in general, but from & by its own inhabitants. The minute of appointment included all the four, & stated them to have been nominated to serve the office of churchwardens for the tithings for the year ensuing. All were sworn in together at the archdeacon's visitation, the oath being administered to them & each of them, "truly to execute the office of churchwarden within your parish." None ever acted out of his own tithing, unless in signing the annual presentments to the archdeacon of the state of the church, etc. Each of the tithings, except A., which was exempt, raised its own church rate, & paid it to the vestry clerk; & he kept a separate account for each churchwarden, who accounted with the inhabitants of his own tithing. A comr. of inclosure under a local Act & Inclosure (Consolidation) Act, 1801 (c. 109), s. 3, made an order settling the boundaries between the parish & another parish adjacent, & adjudging certain trespass, to try the boundary between lots in a concession, it was admitted, that the original survey of the township was intended to be in double-fronted concessions & that there was satisfactory evidence of the original posts at the north or rear end of the concession. It was admitted also that a post had been planted in the rear, in the original survey between the lots in question & the post in front was agreed upon:—Held: under 36 Vict. c. 60, s. 3, the line must be drawn from the

h. — Double-fronted concessions.]—12 Vict. c. 35, s. 37, which prescribes the rule for drawing the side lines in double-fronted concessions, applies to townships theretofore surveyed.—MARRS v. DAVIDSON (1867), 26 U. C. R. 641.—CAN.

k. — ]—In the original survey posts were planted on the front or west side of a concession, to mark the lots, & also at the rear or east side, on the road between the two townships; but the lots in it were granted as broken lots, containing 90 acres, not as half lots, except lot 11, which was erroneously described as containing 100 acres:—Held: (1) not a double-fronted concession, within the Acts; (2) the side lines in it should be ascertained by running from the posts in front, parallel to the base line of the township, through to the road between the two townships, & without reference to the posts on that road.—*WARNOCK v. m. — Lost post.]—The proper method of ascertaining the place of a lost post is by dividing the distance between the nearest known posts on the side line, as it was originally run past the lots, & not by running a straight line between the nearest posts on the concession line & dividing the distances by the number of lots.—DAVIS v. WADDELL (1857), 6 C. P. 442.—CAN.

n. — Change from original plan—Compensation.] 23 Vict. c. 101 declares the mode in which the side lines of the first concession of C. shall be run, & provides a method by which those injured by the change from the original plan of survey may obtain compensation:—Held: 20 Vict. c. 78 was thereby excluded, & deft. was confined to this method.—SMITH v. SPARROW (1861), 21 U. C. R. 323.—CAN.

o. Line not run upon original survey—Ascertainment of original monuments.]—It appeared that the line between two lots was not run upon the original survey, & that when the line was run, no trace could be found of an original post, if any had been planted, designating the boundary line between the lots on the front of the concession. It also appeared that the lands to be in the latter; & he, within a month, served a description of the boundaries on a party then acting as churchwarden of tithing A. Until the order, the lands in question had been rated to tithing B. On appeal against a poor rate made upon those lands as situate in tithing B., notwithstanding the comr.'s order:—Held: the description of boundaries had been sufficiently served according to the proviso of Inclosure (Consolidation) Act, 1801 (c. 109), s. 3, requiring such description to be served upon one of the churchwardens or overseers of the poor of the respective parishes, although the party served had finished his year of office, but continued to do the duties, because his successor had not been sworn in or acted.—R. v. MARSH (1836), 5 Ad. & El. 468; 2 Har. & W. 255; 6 Nev. & M. K. B. 668; 3 Nev. & M. M. C. 728; 111 E. R. 1243.

17. — Dispute settled by trial of a feigned issue.—An award made by an assistant inclosure comr., that a certain common was within the manor of L., was removed into the Ct. of Queen's Bench by certiorari, on the application of the lord of the manor of E., who claimed the common to be parcel of his manor. On his expressing himself dissatisfied with the award, & requiring to have the matter tried by a feigned issue, & stating as the ground of his dissatisfaction that the award was wrong, & setting forth the evidence in support of his claim, the ct. directed the trial of a feigned issue under Inclosure Act, 1845 (c. 118), s. 44, to determine the disputed question of boundary.—R. v. KELCEY (1850), 1 L. M. & P. 499; 19 L. J. Q. B. 523; 15 Jur. 629; subsequent proceedings (1851), 20 L. J. Q. B. 283.

19. Tithe commutation Acts—Extent of powers of commissioners—No general power to settle boundaries.—Tithe Act, 1836 (c. 71), s. 45, gives the comrs. no power to determine anything but what may prevent them from making their award. For that purpose, but for no other, they may determine any question as to the existence of a modus, or any question as to the boundary of lands, or any other point in difference. If the words of s. 45 are not restrained in that manner, it would give to the comrs. power to determine the boundary of any man's lands in the kingdom. That is the rational limit to be placed on the words of the Act. If, for instance, a district modus were required to be settled, then, in order to see what lands were covered by the modus, it would be necessary for the comrs. to have a particular power to ascertain the boundaries; but not a general power to settle boundaries (ALDERSON, B.).—*GIRDLESTONE v. 20. — Boundaries of parishes or counties.—Tithe Act, 1836 (c. 71), s. 45, empowering the tithe comrs. to decide any question touching the boundary of any lands, does not authorise them to settle, by their award, a dispute as to the boundary of parishes. Nor can they do this under the powers granted by Tithe Act, 1837 (c. 69), s. 2, even at the request of two-thirds in value of the landowners, if the boundary of the parishes be also a boundary between counties. For, by Tithe Act, 1839 (c. 62), s. 37, this & the two prior Acts are incorporated; & Tithe Act, 1839, s. 34 forbids the comrs. to adjudicate on a boundary which divides counties as well as parishes.—Re YSTRADGUNLAIS TITHE COMMUTATION (1844), 8 Q. 21. — Boundaries of township & parish—Award quashed in certiorari.—Tithe Act, 1836, s. 95, took away certiorari in the case of orders & adjudication made by the tithe comrs. under that Act. Tithe Act, 1837, s. 2 empowered the comrs. to settle parish boundaries; & sect. 3 gave a certiorari to any person interested in the judgments respecting such boundaries, who should be dissatisfied therewith, & enacted that, on removal of such judgment under the writ, the decision of the ct. thereon should be final & conclusive as to the boundaries:—Held: on the certiorari thus restored, the ct. was authorised to consider, not only the merits of the decision as position of the original monuments at the front angle of the side road allowances was ascertained by the surveyor, & the monuments planted by him were on such site:—Held: plff. was entitled to claim according to the statutable survey.—PALMER v. THORNBROOK (1877), 28 C. P. 117.—CAN.

p. Survey adopted by government.—Held: a survey having been adopted & acted on by the govt., the boundary marked on the ground in accordance with it must govern until changed by competent authority.—WHITE v. DUNLOR (1868), 27 U. C. R. 237.—CAN.

q. Division line between lots—Conclusiveness of survey.—Plff. owned lot 28 & deft. lot 27 in a concession, between which there was no road allowance, & plff., previous to the survey of that concession under 29 Vict. c. 72, had occupied the land in question for more than twenty years. By this survey it belonged to lot 27:—Held: the effect of such survey was to fix conclusively the division line between the lots.—TAYLOR v. CROFT (1871), 30 U. C. R. 573.—CAN.

r. — Mode of ascertainment.—The divisional post originally planted between two lots could not be found nor its exact location established:—Held: the division line should be ascertained in the manner directed by Surveys Act, 1914 (c. 166), ss. 39, 40, by dividing the width between the two established posts equally, & the side lines should run from that point.—MOND NICKEL CO. v. DEMOREST (1919), 16 O. W. N. 299.—CAN.

y. — Ascertainment of side lines.—Boundary Line Comrs., in determining the side lines between lots, are bound by 59 Geo. 3, c. 14, that such side lines shall correspond with the course of the side lines of the township on that side from which the lots are numbered.—DELONG v. STRIKER (1840), 6 O. S. 137.—CAN.

to boundary, but all questions usually discussed on certiorari.

The award of an assistant tithe comr. employed to settle the boundaries of a township on request of the landowners, under Tithe Act, 1837, s. 2, was quashed, on certiorari, as not sufficiently showing jurisdiction, because (1) it did not state the district to be one of which the tithes were "to be commuted"; (2) it stated the request to have been signed, not "at a parochial meeting called for that purpose" "according to the provisions of" Tithe Act, 1836, s. 17 (referred to by Tithe Act, 1837, s. 2), but only "at a meeting called for that purpose."

In Tithe Act, 1839, s. 34 (giving the comrs. power, on requisition, to ascertain old or set out new boundaries), the proviso "that nothing in this provision" shall extend to any boundary line of a cty., or of copyhold without consent of the lord, applies only to the enactments in the same clause. And s. 37 of that Act which incorporates it with Tithe Act, 1837, does not abridge the power given by s. 2 of the prior Act. Therefore, in a case under Tithe Act, 1837, s. 2, the comrs. may ascertain the existing boundary of the parish, though it be also that of a county, or of copyhold in a manor, the lord of which does not consent to the inquiry. An award under that clause can be made only where the tithes are "to be commuted": & there is no jurisdiction under it if the tithes have been commuted already.—Re DENT TITHE COMMUTATION (1845), 8 Q. B. 43; 10 Jur. 178; 115 E. R. 790.

22. — Notices required.]—The award of an assistant tithe comr., appointed under Tithe Act, 1837, to inquire into & set out the boundary of the township of S., for the purpose of commuting the tithes of the township, stated that he had given, & caused to be given, all the notices prescribed by that Act & Tithe Act, 1839, & then defined the limits of the boundary in the present tense throughout. The boundary so set out, it appeared from the affidavit of the comr. & others, was the ancient boundary of the township, & had been inquired into & set out as such under Tithe Act, 1837, & not under Tithe Act, 1839. But it appeared also, from the same affidavits, that within such boundary was included a tract of land occupied by twenty-one different persons, & claimed to belong to another township, called B., & which had to mark the boundary & the position of the point of departure, or their award will be defective & void.—CALDWELL v. WRIGHT (1842), 2 Ont. Dig. 2786.—CAN.

e. ——In trespass quare clausum fregit, deft. justified his entry under an award of Boundary Comrs., awarding the possession of the locus in quo to deft., & averred that he entered into the land under the award as his freehold:—Held: bad on general demurrer, as the Comrs. had no power to award the possession.—*VILLIARD v. m. School section—Alteration of boundaries.]—Under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 48, s. 18 (4), the municipality may alter been rated & assessed to the poor & highway rates of the township of B. for upwards of ninety years; that the comr. had consulted the rate-books of the township of S. only, in order to ascertain whether two-thirds in number & value of the landowners in the township of S. had signed the notice required by Tithe Act, 1837, & that two-thirds of the landowners of S., not including the said tract of land, had signed such notice:—Held: the comr. having set out the ancient boundary, under Tithe Act, 1837, the notice was insufficient, & the award could not be sustained.—R. v. HOBSON (1850), 19 L. J. Q. B. 262; 15 L. T. O. S. 363.

23. — Issue to try validity of award.]—Where an award has been made under Tithe Acts, 1837 & 1839, settling the boundary of a parish, & is removed into the Ct. of Queen's Bench by certiorari under s. 3 of the former Act, the ct. will not, as of course, order a feigned issue under s. 35 of the latter Act, at the instance of a party dissatisfied.

On a motion for a feigned issue, the attorney for appct. stated that he, the attorney, had examined several documents & witnesses concerning the boundary, & believed, from such examination, that the comr. had included in parish A. seventy acres of land belonging to parish B., deposing also that, as he was informed & believed, appct., as one of the inhabitants of B., & a large portion of the landowners, of B. were desirous of trying by such issue the validity & accuracy of the award, & whether the seventy acres were in A. or B.:—Held: grounds were not shown on which the ct., in its discretion, ought to direct an issue.—R. v. MERSON (1842), 3 Q. B. 895; 3 Gal. & Dav. 367; 12 L. J. Q. B. 7; 7 J. P. 38; 6 Jur. 1061; 114 E. R. 752.

24. — Award prospective.]—The award of tithe commissioners ascertaining and setting out the boundary between parishes, etc., under Tithe Acts, 1837 & 1839, is prospective only in its operation, whether the boundary line set out be the old or a new one. Therefore, in a dispute on parochial settlement, if it appear that a certain house is within the boundary of parish A., as defined by the award of an assistant tithe commissioner, evidence may be given that at the time to which the dispute relates, if before the making of such award, the house was not in A., but in the adjoining parish.—*R. v. 25. Local Government Act, 1858—Ecclesiastical district.]—A district formed for ecclesiastical purposes, under New Parishes Act, 1843 (c. 37), consisting of parts of two townships, each of which townships separately maintains its own poor & its own highways, is "a place having a known & defined boundary" within Local Government Act, 1858 (c. 98), s. 12, & is not a less place included within a greater within the meaning of s. 14. Preliminary proceedings under ss. 14 & 16 are therefore unnecessary, & the district may at once adopt the Act, at a meeting of owners & ratepayers, convened by the churchwardens; & an order of the Secretary of State confirming such adoption is valid.—R. v. NORTHOWRAM & CLAYTON RATEPAYERS (1865), L. R. 1 Q. B. 110; 7 B. & S. 110; 35 L. J. Q. B. 90; 30 J. P. 181.

26. — Inclusion of place authorised to adopt Act.]—The parish of L., containing 1,400 acres, comprised within its area the corporate borough of L., which was in extent 100 acres. The parliamentary borough of L. comprised the whole of the parish of L., & part of another parish. The majority of ratepayers of the parish of L. adopted Local Government Act, 1858, & an appeal by some of the ratepayers was made, under s. 17, to the Secretary of State, who dismissed the appeal, & confirmed the adoption of the Act throughout the parish:—Held: the parliamentary borough, including within its limits a less place, namely, the parish, was not a place authorised to adopt the Act; the parish was a place authorised to adopt the Act, including within its limits a less place, namely, the corporate borough, which, if not so included, would of itself be authorised to adopt the Act; & the adoption by the parish & the order of the Secretary of State were valid.—*R. v. of a county council, made under the Local Govt. Act, 1888, s. 57, & confirmed by the Local Govt. Board, part of a parish was added to an adjacent parish. The original parishes were situated in different poor law unions, & no alteration was made by an order of the Local Govt. Board in the boundaries of the unions:—Held: as the added part became part of the parish to which it was added, it became part of the poor law union in which that parish was situate.—*BOOTLE UNION GUARDIANS v. 28. Letters patent creating a province.]—By letters patent, dated Feb. 19, 1836, made in exercise of powers given by South Australia Act, 1834 (c. 95), the King in Council erected & established the Province of South Australia, the applt. State, & declared that its boundary on the east, on which side it adjoined New South Wales, should be the 141st degree of east longitude. Under an agreement between the Govts. of New South Wales & South Australia the supposed position of that longitude was marked upon the ground for 123 miles north from the sea, & proclamations were issued in the two colonies publishing the line so marked as the boundary. This marked line was afterwards extended, under agreement between the two Govts., as far as the river M. The Secretary of State for the Colonies approved what had been done. The line so marked was subsequently found to be about 2½ miles to the west of the true position of the 141st degree. The Colony of Victoria, the resp. State, was created in 1850 out of part of New South Wales, & so that on the west it adjoined South Australia so far north as the river M. The applt. State brought an action in the High Ct. of Australia claiming possession of the land between the boundary so agreed & marked & the 141st degree of east longitude, & for ancillary relief:—Held: upon the true construction of the letters patent, it was contemplated that the 141st degree of east longitude should be ascertained & represented upon the surface of the earth, & there was implied authority given to the Executives of the two colonies to do such acts as were necessary to that end, & upon the facts the Executives of the two

t. Road allowance—Alteration in boundaries of lot.]—R. first surveyed part of a township, & his plan returned showed the lots fronting on a lake with an oblique line in rear, following the general course of the lake, but no allowance for road. Afterwards a plan of the whole township was compiled in the Crown land office, from surveys of three separate portions of it made by different surveyors. This plan showed a road in rear of the front lots, & made their depth greater than in R.'s plan. There was no proof of any work on the ground showing that R. had ever run out or posted the rear line as it appeared on his plan:—Held: (1) it was competent for the govt. to make such allowance for road, not being inconsistent with any work on the ground; (2) in order to give effect to the change made by such allowance, to avoid an irregular rear boundary for such front lots, & to reconcile the plans & the grants for one of the front lots & two gore lots in rear of it, which could not all three be carried out owing to a deficiency in the land, a proportionate reduction should be made in each of such lots.—*HAGARTY v. 46. — — — Land allotted to several offices.]

—The Colony of the Islands of Bermuda was settled by a chartered co. of adventurers, under a grant from James I. Under the govt. of this co., three officers were appointed for the local administration of the Islands, namely, a Sheriff, Secretary, & Provost-Marshal. Each of these officers was paid partly by fees & partly by grants of certain parcels of public lands made to each officer respectively. In 1688, the co. was dissolved & their charter evicted, & the govt. of the islands became absolutely vested in the Crown. From that period, one person only had been appointed to perform the duties of the three offices, & the Crown appropriated these emoluments, & made certain alterations from time to time in their amount: this state of things continued down to the year 1819, when the office of Provost-Marshal was separately appointed, & some division of the lands was made. In 1839, resp. was appointed Provost-Marshal, & in 1846 he filed a Bill in the Ct. of Ch. in the island, against the Secretary of the island, for an account of the rents & profits of the lands, & other monies received by him in respect thereof, as appertaining to the office of Sheriff, which office was included in that of Provost-Marshal:—Held: the Ct. of Ch. had no jurisdiction to entertain such a suit, as such right or title to the office of Sheriff was not of an equitable nature.

Seemle: the only ground for coming into Ch. was the existence of several offices in one individual during a long series of years, & a consequent confusion of boundaries of the lands respectively allotted to the several offices.—KENNEDY v. TROTTER (1849), 6 Moo. P. C. C. 449; 13 E. R. 757, P. C.

47. — — — Copyhold tenant.]—A copyhold tenant of a manor is under an obligation to keep the boundaries of his tenement distinct; if he neglects to do so the ct. will direct an inquiry for ascertaining the boundaries, & if that should be impossible, will order land of equal value to be set out in substitution. If the tenement is enfranchised the obligation to preserve the boundaries ceases, but the tenant is still liable for default which had happened before the enfranchisement.

The lord of a manor obtained the enfranchisement of a copyhold tenement under Copyhold Act, 1852 (c. 51), reserving a rent-charge to himself. The boundaries had become confused before the enfranchisement, but the lord did not avail himself of the power given by s. 24 of the Act to have the boundaries ascertained. The rent-charge having fallen into arrear, the grantee of the rent-charge brought an action to ascertain the boundaries of the land charged with the rent-charge, & if that could not be done, to have land of equal value set out in substitution:—Held: the lord and those claiming under him did not lose their rights by reason of the lord's omission to have the boundaries ascertained under the Act; & pltf. was entitled to the relief prayed, the costs of the inquiry being reserved.—*SEARLE v. 52. Between freehold & customary lands—Decree by consent of parties.]—On a bill to make partition, & settle boundaries between lands which were freehold & other lands held in borough-English, was directed a commission to certain persons, as well to take deft.'s answer, as also to set forth the metes & bounds, & to return terriers & boundaries, which was done accordingly, & by consent of the parties the ct. decreed the boundaries, & that the same should be ratified & confirmed to all intents and purposes, as if the same had been judicially pronounced, upon a full hearing in ct.—SPYER v. SPYER (1631), Nels. 14; 21 E. R. 777.

53. —.]—Pltf. claimed as customary heir of testator who died possessed of freehold & customary premises. Testator's freehold & customary premises having been for a length of time in the possession of the same tenant, it was ordered that in case the master should be of opinion that he could not ascertain the customary estates without a commission, he should be at liberty to state the same to the ct., & the master having certified that a commission was necessary, a commission was ordered authorising comrs. to view, ascertain, set out, & distinguish by metes & bounds such parts of the customary estate of testator to which pltf. was entitled as customary heir.—ROBINSON v. HODGSON (1800), Taml. 235; 48 E. R. 94.

54. Between freehold & copyhold.]—A commission was directed to set out copyhold land from free land which lay obscured, & if the comrs. could not sever it, then to set out so much in lieu thereof.—PECKERING v. KIMPTON (1630), Toth. 39; 21 E. R. 117.

56. —.]—A bill was brought by the lord of a manor against deft., who continued in possession of a copyhold estate of the manor, after the lives for which it had been granted had expired, & had confounded the copyhold lands with part of his own freehold lands. The object of the bill was to distinguish the copyhold lands from deft.'s freehold lands, & set out the boundaries, & if that could not be done, then that an equal quantity of land might be set out & held to be enjoyed as copyhold, & for an account of rents due after the expiration of the lives for which the copyhold had been granted:—Held: a commission to ascertain the boundaries should be decreed.—ABERGAVENNY (LORD) v. THOMAS (1739), West temp. Hard. 649; 3 Anst. 668, n.; 25 E. R. 1130, L. C.

Pltf. insisted that defts. could distinguish them, but, if necessary, prayed a commission. Defts. by their answer stated, that the freeholds & copyholds were intermixed, & the boundaries destroyed & could not be distinguished by them, & that in case pltf. should be adjudged entitled to the freeholds, they, defts., were willing a commission should issue:—Held: pltf. was entitled to the freehold, which should be distinguished & set out from the copyholds belonging to defts.; & a commission should issue to distinguish the freeholds by metes & bounds.—*NORRIS v. 60. Waste of manors.]—The ancestors of pltf., Sir J. B., being seised of the manor of C. P., & the ancestors of deft., Sir J. W., being seised of the manor of G. C., in 1639 entered into an agreement, whereby after reciting that there were wastes lying intermixed, which belong to both manors, & that one fourth part belonged to C. P., & that J. W. & his ancestors had made inclosures thereof, it was agreed that Sir J. B. might inclose fifty acres of the heath, & that J. W. might enjoy the lands formerly inclosed, & that the residue should be divided into four equal parts, one fourth to be enjoyed by Sir J. B., & the remaining three fourths by J. W., & the same division should be made in the event of an inclosure. A bill was brought by pltf. for a specific performance of the agreement, or in case the ct. should not think fit to execute the agreement, that the limits and boundaries of the waste belonging to each manor might be ascertained:—Held: (1) specific performance of the agreement must be refused; (2) pltf. not having shown a title to or possession of the soil, or any impediment why he could not establish his title at law, the ct. would not direct a commission or an issue to ascertain the boundaries of the waste.—BANKS v. WEBB (1739), West temp. Hard. 653; 25 E. R. 1132; sub nom. WEBB v. BANKS, 2 Eq. Cas. Abr. 164, L. C.

61. —.]—Deft., who derived his title from a grant temp. Hen. VIII., claimed to be entitled to the whole of the waste lands in certain parishes, as belonging to certain manors of which he was lord. Pltf. claimed to be entitled to a part of those waste lands, as pertaining to the manor of W., which had anciently been held with deft.'s manors, & deft. himself had been steward under the Crown of this manor; pltf. had become owner by purchase of the Crown, but was unable to ascertain to what part of such waste lands his title as lord extended; deft. denied his right to any:—Held: a commission should issue to inquire whether deft., or any person claiming under him, was in possession of any lands of right belonging, or which did at the time deft. became steward of the manor of right belong to the manor of W.; the comrs. should, as far as they were able, set forth & describe such lands "if any such there be," & in that case set out & distinguish by metes & bounds such parts, if any, of the lands belonging to that manor in the possession of deft., or those claiming under him, lying intermixed with lands belonging to deft.'s manors; & set out so much of the respective lands so intermixed, as should seem to them a fair equivalent for pltf.'s portion thereof.—*CLIFTON v. Field, & which by ploughing & by other means were so destroyed, that those four acres could not be distinguished from the other lands of deft. in the field:—Held: a commission should issue, to set out & distinguish the four acres with metes & bounds, & the yearly value thereof, & how long deft. had held them, for which he should pay pltf., & pltf. should enjoy the four acres, when set out & distinguished, against deft. & all claiming under or in trust for him.—BOTTLER v. SPELMAN (1673), Cas. temp. Finch, 96; 23 E. R. 52.

63. —.]—If a man claims lands in equity, but knows not the bounds, equity will grant a commission to ascertain them when the right is established; but if the right is not settled, the party will be left to his remedy at law.—CHAPMAN v. SPENCER (1731), 2 Eq. Cas. Abr. 163; 22 E. R. 139.

64. —.]—If a bill is preferred for a commission to set forth lands, the particulars of which pltf. does not know, & if deft. does not admit pltf.'s title, but denies that he has any lands in his possession belonging to pltf., a ct. of equity will not grant a commission, because that would be admitting pltf.'s title in general, though the particular lands are not known; if pltf.'s title is admitted by deft., & the dispute is only about the particular lands, a commission will be proper.—*ELY (Bp.) v. 68. —.]—Upon a bill filed against a canal co., alleging that the co. had for several years been gradually encroaching upon the land of pltf., whose property was adjoining to the canal, & praying for a commission to ascertain the boundaries:—Held: the co. were bound to produce maps of the canal, & also leases of the adjoining lands, which pltf. alleged to comprise part of his property; and that, notwithstanding the co. insisted by their answer that they related to their own title and not to the title of pltf.

It is objected that this is a dispute between two contiguous proprietors as to their mutual boundaries; that the remedy is at law, & that there is no ground for that interference. The rule, as I apprehend, is this, that the mere confusion of boundaries between adjacent proprietors will not support a bill for a commission. There must be some equity arising out of the act or acts of the party against whom the commission is prayed, or it must be brought for the purpose of preventing a multiplicity of suits (LORD LYNDEHURST, C.).—*BUTE (MARQUIS) v. pay the yearly rent of £6 the conveyances assuming the whole estate to be subject to the payment of the £6. In course of time the estate became greatly subdivided, & in 1786 the remaining portion, consisting of thirty-one acres, was conveyed to the person under whom deft. derived title. The conveyance of 1786 recited that the annual payment of £6, was due to the parish of P., & contained a covenant by the purchaser to indemnify the owners of the other portions of the R. estate against the payment thereof. A commission to ascertain boundaries is only to be granted when the confusion has been occasioned by the misconduct of deft., or those under whom he claims, & only where it is shown that they cannot be ascertained without the assistance of the ct.—MILLER v. WARMINGTON (1820), 1 Jac. & W. 484; 37 E. R. 452.

72. — By lessee of adjoining manor.]—To a bill by the lord of the manor of W. against the lord of the adjoining manor of I., who was also lessee of the manor of W., & against comrs. under an Act for inclosing lands within the manor of I., alleging confusion of boundaries arising out of the union of possession of the two manors, & that defts. were preparing, in combination together, to set out a boundary of the manor of I. which would include lands belonging to the manor of W., & praying a commission to set out the land lying within, & being part & parcel of, the manor of W., the answer of deft., lord of the manor of I., set out boundaries, referring to perambulations made previous to the union of possession. The lease had expired since the filing of the bill, & it was not established in evidence that there was any confusion of boundaries occasioned by default or neglect of the owners of I. while lessees of W.:—Held: the bill should be dismissed, with costs as against the comrs., but without costs as against the other deft.—SPEER v. CRAWTER (1817), 2 Mer. 410; 35 E. R. 997.

73. — By copyholder.]—Pltfs., who were lords of a manor, alleged by their bill that thirty-eight estates held by deft. within the manor, had been subject, from time immemorial, to the payment of certain sums in lieu of heriots & reliefs; that by reason of the confusion of boundaries, pltfs. could not ascertain in respect of what particular estates the payments were respectively due, & were therefore unable to recover the amount by distress. The bill prayed that the pltfs. might be declared entitled to the several sums claimed, & that the precise boundaries of the estates might be ascertained. The bill alleged the heriots & reliefs to be payable by custom, but there was no allegation of a custom of distress. A demurrer was allowed, without costs, & leave given to amend.

If this had been a bill proving a long usage of payment of rent only, but that by reason of accident or lapse of time the boundaries had become confused, & there was difficulty in the way of obtaining a legal remedy, the ct. would have given relief.—BASINGSTOKE CORPN. v. BOLTON (LORD) (1852), 1 Drew. 270; 22 L. J. Ch. 305; 17 Jur. 57; 1 W. R. 76; 61 E. R. 455; subsequent proceedings (1854), 3 Drew. 50.

74. — By predecessor in title.]—Testatrix, by her will, appointed the manor of W. to uses, under which pltf. became entitled as tenant in tail in possession, & devised her residuary real estate to trustees upon trust to sell. The trustees sold (inter alia) a field, part of which was shown by the abstract to be parcel of the manor, & procured the legal estate in the whole to be conveyed to the purchaser:—Held: notwithstanding the fault of the confusion lay with the party through whom pltf. claimed, pltf. was not precluded from establishing in the Ct. of Ch. a claim to his portion of the land, & to a proportional part of the rents from the time when he came of age; an inquiry was directed in what part of the field pltf.'s portion was situate.—HICKS v. HASTINGS (1857), 3 K. & J. 701; 69 E. R. 1292.

See, further, Nos. 41 et seq., ante.

75. Land subject to rentcharge.]—Pltf. became entitled by purchase to a rentcharge charged upon lands descending to deft., who refused to pay the rents, pretending the lands were not sufficient, & the limitation of law defective; the lands lying intermixed with others, & boundaries confused, pltfs. could not distrain, & so prayed relief in equity, & charged also, that deft.'s father agreed, that if the lands were too small in value, or defective in title, he would make both good. To have that done, & to discover the abutments & boundaries, & to have the rents arrear & growing rents paid, was the scope of the bill. Deft. by answer insisted, that pltf.'s proper remedy was at law, & that he had not a good title, because he had not any attornment, for ought appeared, or any good conveyance:—Held: a commission should go to set out the lands; pltf.'s title to be determined on the return of the commission.—BOREMAN v. YEAT (1661), cited in 1 Cas. in Ch. at p. 145; 22 E. R. 734.

76. Land subject to quit rents.]—A. was grantee of the Crown of quit-rents in the manor of Bray [the boundaries of the lands out of which the quit-rents issued being confused]:—Held: the ct. were bound in the first instance to send a commission; the ancestors held subject to quit-rents, & it was their duty to have distinguished out of what lands they were to issue, & a portion of land should be set out, to be subject to the quit-rents.—AMBLER'S CASE (1770), cited in 4 Ves. at p. 184; 31 E. R. 95.

77. Land purchased according to old survey—Deficiency in acreage.—A. agreed with B. for the purchase of lands, & to pay so much per acre for the lands out of lease, & so much for the lands leased, after the rate of twenty-one years purchase, according to the rentals. In order to ascertain the number of acres, deft. produced an old survey, & according to the number of acres in such survey, the purchase money was paid. The conveyancer, being willing to be fully satisfied in the number of acres that he might insert the consideration money right, sent to deft. for this survey, & desired that he would sign it, which deft. did. In this old survey, in some closes there was a great deficiency of acres, in others a greater number than were contained therein, the last not making amends for the first. On a bill to refund what was paid over & above the number of acres:—Held: a commission should issue to measure the lands out of lease.—SHOVEL (SIR CLOUDSLEY) v. BOGAN (1708), 2 Eq. Cas. Abr. 688; 22 E. R. 578, L. C.

78. Between lands devised to charity & other lands.—A commission was directed to distinguish lands intermixed with those devised to a charity.—A.-G. v. BOWYER (1800), 5 Ves. 300; Tambl. 236; 31 E. R. 598, L. C.

79. Land subject to tithes.—Pltf. was lord of a liberty lying principally, if not wholly, in the parish of M., & owner of the greater part of it. An immemorial payment of £7 had been made by the lord of the liberty to the rector of S., in lieu of tithes of some part of the liberty to which he was entitled; the land titheable being about a third of the liberty: a money payment had been also made for many years to the rector of M. The locality of the lands titheable to each was in process of time forgotten. The rector of S. claimed his £7 a year, & pltf. admitted his claim. The rector of M. claimed, & sued for tithes of the whole liberty. Pltf. filed a bill praying (inter alia) that a commission might issue to ascertain what lands in the liberty were within the parish or rectory of S., & what within the other parish or rectory. Deft. objected (inter alia) that the commission could not be granted:—Held: the objection was good.—WOOLASTON v. WRIGHT (1796), 3 Anst. 801; 145 E. R. 1044.

80. —.—The ct. will not make a decree in favour of a rector claiming tithes in kind of lands not within his parish for which he has for many years received a money payment by way of composition which deft. does not pretend to insist on as a modus; nor will they grant a commission to ascertain the boundaries of such lands, without a previous inquiry whether pltf. is entitled to any & what tithes on such lands by a trial at law on an issue; because such a claim is not within the recognised common law right of a rector.—SANDERS v. LONGDEN (1817), 4 Price, 117; Wils. Ex. 64; 146 E. R. 412.

81. Chantry lands afterwards granted on long lease.—An information was filed by the A.-G. in 1710 to recover certain lands, formerly chantry lands, which had been granted by Edward VI. for the benefit of the M. School, against defts., who represented the T. family, to whom a lease of the lands for 500 years had been granted in 1685. A commission was issued to ascertain the identity of the lands. The comrs. reported that they were unable to ascertain which were the chantry lands. No final decree was made in consequence of a compromise having been entered into between the parties, by which it was agreed that £100 per annum should be paid to the charity, & that an Act of Parliament should be obtained to carry the compromise into effect, but that if the Act should not be obtained within two years, then that the agreement should not be binding. No such Act was ever passed, but the owners of the property continued to pay the £100 per annum up to the present time, being a period of 130 years. Another information was filed in 1833, to have the benefit of the proceedings commenced in 1710, & prayed that the lease for 500 years might be set aside, & that the chantry lands might be ascertained:—Held: an inquiry ought to take place to ascertain what portion of the lands would be of equal value to those granted by Edward VI.—A.-G. v. TREVELLYAN (1817), 16 L. J. Ch. 521; 8 L. T. O. S. 407.

(b) Procedure and Costs.

82. Parties to proceedings—All parties concerned.—A commission to settle the boundaries of a manor or a parish ought not to be granted by a Ct. of Equity where the interests of all parties who may probably be concerned are not before the ct.—ATKINS v. HATTON (1794), 2 Anst. 386; 2 Eag. & Y. 403; 145 E. R. 911.

84. Appointment & number of commissioners—Proceedings by lessor—Numerous lessees.—On a bill by a prebendary against his lessees, for a commission to ascertain the boundaries of the prebendal lands, the prebendary is entitled to name as many commissioners as his lessees.—WILLIS v. PARKINSON (1818), 1 Swan. 9; 36 E. R. 276, L. C.; subsequent proceedings, 3 Swan. 233, L. C.

85. Review—Not allowed unless plaintiff's costs first paid.—On a bill to settle the boundaries of pltf.'s manor, pltf. obtained a final decree with costs. Deft. moved for leave to file a bill of review on the ground of the discovery of new evidence:—Held: this could not be allowed without first paying the costs decreed.—DURIAM

PART I. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 4.— B (b).

g. Parties to proceedings—Minors interested.—A petition was presented under 5 Geo. 2, c. 9, praying for a commission to inquire & ascertain the old mears & bounds of a commonage consisting of bog, moss, & lough, & if none existed then to lay out & ascertain reasonable mears & bounds between petitioner & the neighbouring proprietors. It was objected that minors were interested parties, petitioner being seised for life only with a power of appointment to his children who were minors, & that there was no one before the ct. to represent those minors:—Held: before a commission could be issued, a bill must be

h. Service of petition—Outside jurisdiction.—The ct. has no jurisdiction to issue a commission for ascertaining boundaries & allotting waste bog, under 5 Geo. 2, c. 9, unless the petition be served personally on the party

86. Evidence as to how examination conducted—When receivable.]—A parish was divided into four tithings, A., B., C., & D. Each tithing maintained its own poor, & each had a churchwarden, elected at a vestry of the parish in general, but from & by its own inhabitants. A comr. of inclosure under a local Act & Inclosure (Consolidation) Act, 1801 (c. 109), s. 3, made an order settling the boundaries between the parish & another parish adjacent & adjudging certain lands to be in the latter; & he, within a month, served a description of the boundaries on a party then acting as churchwarden of tithing A. Until the order the lands in question had been rated to tithing B. On appeal against a poor rate made upon those lands as situate in tithing B., notwithstanding the comr.'s order:—Held: the sessions had acted rightly in rejecting evidence to show that the comr., in his inquiry into the boundaries, had not conducted his examination in the manner required by Inclosure (Consolidation) Act, 1801, s. 3.—R. v. MARSH (1836), 5 Ad. & El. 468; 2 Har. & W. 255; 6 Nev. & M. K. B. 668; 3 Nev. & M. M. C. 728; 111 E. R. 1243.

87. Costs—Commission refused.]—Pltf. was seised of copyhold lands of the manor of P. Within the manor there was a certain parcel of freehold land, containing about twelve acres, which the complainant suggested by his bill to be intermixed & undivided, & which deft. had recovered at law, as belonging to him; pltf. alleged that the metes & bounds of the freehold lands were destroyed & not to be discovered; & that he was willing to set out twelve acres of his copyhold lands in lieu thereof, so as he might be indemnified from a forfeiture to the lord of the manor, & prayed that a commission might issue for that purpose, to set out the twelve acres. By deft.'s answer, it appeared that the lands claimed by him were distinct, & an inclosed piece of ground, which he had recovered, known by the name of H., & not intermixed with the lands of the complainant:—Held: pltf. should forthwith deliver to deft. the possession of the lands called H., & should satisfy him for the mesne profits, from the time of the exemplification of the verdict, to be computed by the master, but without costs.—DAVENPORT v. BROMLEY (1673), Cas. temp. Finch, 17; 23 E. R. 10.

88. — To be paid by party in default.]—A bill was brought by the lord of a manor against deft., who continued in possession of a copyhold estate of the manor, after the lives for which it had been granted had expired, & had confounded the copyhold lands with part of his own freehold lands. The object of the bill was to distinguish the copyhold lands from deft.'s freehold lands, &

k. Costs—Reference to master.]—Comrs. of perambulation applied that pltf. should pay their fees & expenses, the fees being at the rate of £3 3s. per day for each comr. The ct. required pltf. to state what was the proper sum, in his opinion, which would be referred to the master to enquire what would be the proper amount, the defeated party to pay the costs of the reference.—BROWNE v. COOTE (1849), 2 Ir. Jur. 99.—IR.

PART I. SECT. 1. SUB-SECT. 4.—C.

92 i. In what actions boundary questions tried—Ejectment.]—In ejectment the question of boundary may set out the boundaries, & if that could not be done, then that an equal quantity of land might be set out & held to be enjoyed as copyhold, & for an account of rents due after the expiration of the lives for which the copyhold had been granted:—Held: deft. should pay pltf. his costs.—ABERGAVENNY (LORD) v. THOMAS (1739), West. temp. Hard. 649; 3 Anst. 668, n.; 25 E. R. 1130, L. C.

99. — Interests unequal—Neither party in default.]—Though the interest of one party is more inconsiderable than the interest of another, yet they shall bear equally the expense of a commission settling boundaries, & separating freehold & copyhold.

There does not seem to have been any default either in pltf. or deft., that these lands are mixed & confounded; & therefore it would be hard to throw the whole upon pltf. (LORD HARDWICKE, C.).—NORRIS v. LE NEVE (1744), 3 Atk. 82; 26 E. R. 850, L. C.

90. One party succeeding partially.]—An information on behalf of a charity against a corpn. claimed certain lands long since confounded by the latter with its own property, & of which it had granted building leases. The claims of the charity only partially succeeded, & no fraud was imputable to the corpn. The information also prayed for a scheme in respect of the charity. The ct., to avoid the expense & difficulty of apportioning & setting off the costs, gave none to the corpn., & ordered those of other defts. & of the relators to be paid out of the charity funds.—SOLICITOR-GENERAL v. BATH CORPN., A.-G. v. BLAIR (1819), 18 L. J. Ch. 275; 13 L. T. O. S. 64; 13 Jur. 866.

For discovery, see Part IV., Sect. 8, post.

C. Other Proceedings.

91. In what actions boundary questions tried—Not in action for penalty under the game laws.]—In an action for a penalty under the game laws for shooting a pheasant, pltf. was non-suited, it appearing that deft. was gamekeeper of a manor & had as such constantly shot over the place where the pheasant was killed & no evidence being given that the place was out of the manor; in the circumstances, deft. would not be put to prove that the place was within the manor (though pressed by pltf.'s counsel so to do); for, in such an action, the boundaries of the manor would not be tried.—HANKINS v. BAILEY (1791), 4 Term Rep. 681, n.; 100 E. R. 1243.

92. — Not in ejectment.]—Where the principal subject in dispute is the locality of the lands of each, which have been confused while occupied by one person, an ejectment does not decide anything; & a Ct. of Equity will not allow the lessor of pltf. to take out his execution, so as to choose his own part of the lands.—*HARDCASTLE v. action of ejectment, where it was admitted that pltf. was entitled to recover a part of that which he claimed, a question of boundary could not be tried. The generality of the description of the premises in an action of ejectment precluded an inquiry as to the precise quantity which the party was entitled to recover. If he took too much on the execution of the writ of possession deft. might bring an action for trespass, in which the premises might be set out by metes & bounds. The action of ejectment decided nothing as to the quantities. —DOE d. DRAPER'S CO. v. WILSON (1819), 2 Stark. 477, N. P.

94. — Information to declare title of Crown —To alluvium gained from sea.]—An information for the purpose of having the title of the Crown to alluvium gained from the sea declared & established is analogous to a bill to ascertain boundaries, & requires lands in the possession of deft.

Where the witnesses in support of the information deposed that the alluvium had been added to the mainland, not gradually & imperceptibly, but rapidly:—Held: a sufficient case had been made for directing issues.—A.-G. v. m. — — — *What plaintiff must show.]—*In ejectment to try disputed boundaries, pltf. has to show, beyond any reasonable doubt, that he is entitled to some land at least, of which deft. is in possession. Where the point is a doubtful one he must show a survey carefully made, & the proper steps taken which the law requires for ascertaining the exact position of any posts along the line which can still be discovered by inspection, or established by evidence, in order that the ct. & jury may see whether the two lots in question are, by the survey which pltf. is seeking to establish, made to occupy their proper position on the concession line.—BABAUN v. p. — — — *Proof of title.]—*In ejectment, where pltf. proves his title to possession of any part of the premises sued for, he must obtain a verdict, & the ct. will not go into the question of boundary, in order to determine the precise quantity of land he is entitled to recover.—DOE d. r. — — — *Issue—Boundaries confused.]—*Where the boundaries have been confused, the question of boundary should be determined either by eject-owner of the adjacent manor of W., had, in order to enlarge his park, cut the head of the pond, & taken part of the ground claimed by pltf. as waste of the manor of A. into his park, claiming right thereto as part of the manor of W. Pltf. by his bill claimed that deft. might admit the boundaries between the manors of pltf. & deft., or that a commission might issue to set out the boundaries. Deft. admitted pltf.'s right to the manor of A., & that he, deft., had enlarged his park, & had inclosed in it part of the waste, but denied that it was part of pltf.'s manor; & he admitted that he claimed all the waste ground, & the pond, which pltf. by his bill stated to be within the manor of A.:—Held: (1) the issues should be tried by a special jury of the county, the jury to be returned to be freeholders in other parts of the county; (2) each party should deliver to the other a note in writing, containing a particular of the boundary insisted on by them, & each boundary should be tried, & if the jury should find any other particular boundary, they were to mark it on the back of the habeas corpora or distringas; (3) the jury should have a view of the places in question before the trial, to be shown to them by two persons, one to be named by pltf., & the other by deft.—LETHULIER v. The case turned on the question whether the land from which the minerals had been gotten was part of pltf.'s estate or part of the waste of the manor. Pltf. applied for a trial by a special jury:—Held: though pltf. could not claim a jury as a matter of right, the importance of a view was so great that a trial by jury ought to be ordered.—JENKINS v. 98. Trial of feigned issue — Costs.]—On a bill to settle the boundaries of a manor, it was decreed that each party should give to the other a note of their boundaries, & that it should be tried in a feigned issue. The issue being found for deft. on the first, second, & third trial, deft. was

r. — — — *Suit for land — Local investigation.]—*In a suit for land, where the question was as to whether the land lay within the boundaries of pltf.'s or deft.'s land, the ct. suggested to the parties that the proper mode of determining the case was in the first instance to hold a local investigation, & such local investigation should be applied for by one or other of the parties. Both parties resolutely refused to make such application, & the ct. thereupon dealt with the case upon the materials before it & passed a decree. Upon appeal, the lower Appellate Ct. remanded the case for the purpose of a local investigation being held at the cost of pltf. in the first instance:—Held: the ct. was wrong in remanding the case.—JATINGA VALLEY TEA CO., LTD. v. CHERA TEA CO., LTD. (1885), 1 L. R. 12 Calo.—IND.

100. Reference to official referee.]—Pltf., a landowner, filed a bill against an adjoining owner of land, praying for a declaration that the boundary between the two properties was marked out and prescribed as appeared in a plan annexed to the bill. Replication having been filed before Nov. 2, 1875, Pltf., on Nov. 17, obtained an order that

a. Suit to compel delimitation—When maintainable.]—A proprietor of land has no right to bring a suit to compel his neighbours to agree to a particular line of boundary being marked out between his lands & theirs, where he does not venture to say that they have by any overt act transgressed that boundary.—AMEERONNISSA BEGUM v. GOPAL SAHOO (1874), 22 W. R. 134.—IND.

99 i Onus of proof.]—Pltf. & deft. were owners of adjoining lots of land, the title to which was derived from the same original grantor. Pltf.'s lot was described as being bounded on the north by the south line of deft.'s lot. In an action for trespass pltf. complained that deft., in erecting a new fence, had placed it on a line different from the line of the fence which existed previously, & which was admitted to have been on the true line between the two lots. The question whether deft. had, as a matter of fact, departed from the old line or not, having been left undetermined:—Held: there must be a new trial.—DIXON v. DAUPHINEE (1901), 34 N. S. R. 239.—CAN.

99 ii. —.]—In trespass quare clausum fregit, to try the boundary line between lots 28 & 29 in the fifth concession of Ops, pltf. described in his declaration by metes & bounds the piece of land trespassed upon, alleging it to be part of 28, to which lot his title was not disputed. The jury were asked: (1) is the point contended for by defts. the place where the original post stood? (2) did pltf., when he moved his fence, do so on the understanding with defts. that they acknowledged his right, or was his possession to be subject to the correct adjustment of the line? They found the post had not been proved, & pltf. was given possession by defts.:—Held: (1) on the first answer the verdict should have been for defts., for the fact that defts. had not proved the post did not relieve pltf. from proving the true line; (2) the second question was not presented by the case.—DARK v. HEPBURN (1877), 27 C. P. 357.—CAN.

99 iii. — Conterminous tenants—Alteration of boundaries.]—In an interdict by one of two conterminous tenants under the same landlord against the other entering upon & cropping a piece of ground claimed by the former as part of his farm:—Held: as each farm had been taken under the name by which it was previously well known & with recognised boundaries the onus of proving any alteration of these boundaries lay on the party alleging it, & as deft. failed to prove his allegation, the interdict should be granted.—SUTHERLAND v. M'BEATH (1866), 1 Sc. L. R. 240.—SCOT.

the evidence at the hearing should be taken viva voce. After serving notice of trial, he took out a summons to show cause why the trial should not be referred to one of the official referees of the ct. Semle: pltf. having obtained an order under the new procedure as to the mode in which the evidence to be used at the trial should be taken, was not at liberty to change his mode of proceeding.

99 iv. Acquiescence in survey—

Change in boundaries.]—Defts. claimed under a lease of 50 acres, described as commencing in the rear of 150 acres of the lot, & running back 43 chains 75 links, executed in 1824 by S., who in 1826 conveyed the remaining 150 acres to one L., describing it as commencing in front on lake Erie at the south-east angle of the lot, & running back 131 chains 25 links. L. had a survey made in 1828, & a post was then planted to mark his north boundary. It appeared that defts. never questioned this limit, but in 1858, when having their own 50 acres surveyed, they directed the surveyor to assume it as their southern line. They afterwards moved their north fence further back, which gave rise to this action:—Held: defts. who appeared to have their full 50 acres according to the old limits, must show their right to change the boundaries so long acquiesced in, & it was unnecessary for pltf. in the first instance to prove his claim by actual survey.—ILLER v. NOLAN (1861), 21 U. C. R. 309.—CAN.

99 v. — Subsequent purchaser without notice.]—H., the owner of lot 13, built a house thereon, but which on a survey made by B., was found to have encroached on lot 12, owned by R., seven & a half inches, whereupon the following agreement was entered into: "It is hereby agreed between R. & H. that the line as surveyed between the lots of the above parties on C. street, by B. is correct, but that H. be permitted to occupy her house during her life, & not be compelled to remove the same, notwithstanding a portion of it is on the land of R. but after the death of H., R. may claim the whole of his lot; & in the meantime R. shall occupy his lot up to the line in the rear of the house." Deft. had purchased from M. to whom H. had sold, M. at the time being aware of the agreement, but of which deft. when he bought had no notice. Deft. moved a fence, which pltf. had erected in rear of the house in accordance with B.'s survey, in a line with the house, & also veneered the house with brick so as to cause it to encroach one & a half inches further on pltf.'s lot. H. died within ten years before action commenced, which was brought to recover that part of lot 12 encroached on by deft.:—Held: the agreement signed by H. recognising the line run by B. as the true boundary between the lots, relieved pltf. from doing more than showing where that line ran, & imposed on deft., who claimed by mesne conveyance from H., the burden of showing that such line was incorrect.—ROAN v. KRONSBELN (1886), 12 O. R. 197.—CAN.

99 vi. — Conflicting grants—Question for jury.]—In trespass, pltf. claimed title under a grant & survey made in 1823; deft. claimed the same land under a prior grant to D., & conveyance from P. to E., & from E. to himself, made in 1834, under which he entered:—Held: pltf. could not recover on his possession alone, but was bound to prove that the line contended for by him was the true boundary between his grant & the grant to D., & that the question of boundary should have been submitted to the jury.—BALDWIN v. BRAYDON (1846), 3 Kerr, 169.—CAN.

99 vii. — Whether discharged sufficiently—Irregular survey.]—Pltf.'s & deft.'s lots were portions of a tract of land lying between W. & N. streets which had been sub-divided into town lots according to a plan then made. Pltf.'s surveyor, as it appeared, measured the distance between W. & N. streets & divided it into proportionate parts in proportion to the number & size of the lots shown upon a plan of that survey, thus arriving theoretically at where the lines should be:—Held: pltf., on whom the onus was to establish the line which he claimed as the true limit of his lot, had not discharged that onus, as pltf.'s surveyor had not adopted the proper way to find the lines & ought to have endeavoured to find where the lines were actually placed. THORPSON v. AKIN (1911), 18 W. L. R. 44.—CAN.

a. Ascertainment by court—Surveys lost.]—In an action of ejectment the question to be decided was whether the locus was situate within pltf.'s lot No. 5 in concession 18, or within deft.'s lot adjoining, No. 24 in concession 17. The grant through which pltf.'s title was originally derived gave the southern boundary of lot 5 as a starting point, the course being thence 84 chains more or less to the river. The original surveys were lost, & this starting point could not be ascertained:—Held: such southern boundary could not be ascertained by measuring back exactly 84 chains from the river.—PLUMB v. STEINHOFF (1887), 14 S. C. R. 739.—CAN.

104. ——— Trimming hedge & cleaning ditch.]—Pltf. & deft. were owners of adjacent properties, separated by a hedge & ditch belonging to pltf., the ditch being on deft.'s side of the hedge. In 1868 pltf. filled up the ditch, & placed along its course a drain-pipe, which received the drainage from his house & the deft.'s. In 1875 deft. exercised various acts of ownership over the site of the ditch, for example, planting trees, laying out beds, erecting a fowl-house, & making a path, & he had ever since treated it as part of his garden. During the same period pltf. had annually trimmed the hedge from both sides, & he twice opened up the drain to cleanse it:—Held: there was an exclusive possession of the site of the ditch by deft., & a discontinuance of possession by pltf., & deft. had acquired a good statutory title thereto.—MARSHALL v. 105. ———.]—Pltf. & deft. were adjoining owners of land, the lands being bounded by a bank with a fence, with a ditch on deft.'s side. For nearly fifty years deft. had trimmed the fence, pollarded the trees, & cleaned the ditch, but there was no evidence of knowledge on the part of pltf.:—Held: these acts of ownership did not rebut the presumption that the bank & fence were the property of pltf.—HENNIKER v. 106. ——— Repair of fence & removal of trees.]—Pltf. was the owner of land, which was let to a tenant, adjoining defts.' land. The lands were bounded by a fence with a ditch on defts.' side. Defts. for many years had repaired the fence & cut trees in it, though those acts were known only to pltf.'s tenant, & not to pltf.:—Held: on the evidence, the presumption that the fence on the edge of a ditch separating the properties belonged to the owner of the land adjoining the fence was

107. Bank & ditch.]—If a person has a field fenced with a bank & ditch, it is not a necessary consequence that his ditch extends to the width of eight feet from the interior line of the foot of the bank, i.e. four for the base of the bank, & four feet for the ditch. Proof of the ancient width of the ditch is evidence that the owner's land did not extend beyond the outer edge thereof, & he has no right to cut away his neighbour's land for the purpose of widening the ditch.—VOWLES v. 108. ——— Alongside highway—Ditch filled—A field adjoining a public road was separated from it only by a hedge & bank. The trustees, who, under an Act of Parliament, constructed the road upwards of fifty years before the commencement of the suit, had made the hedge & bank, & had also made on the field side of the fence a ditch of three feet in breadth. This ditch had become filled up & obliterated, & had never been reopened by the trustees, but a ditch about a foot wide had been subsequently made by the occupier of the field, & that also had become obliterated. The owners of the land had always included the hedge in their leases, & the tenants had held & used the strip within the hedge as part of their field for much more than twenty years, & had at their own expense trimmed the hedge on both sides. During the same time the trustees had not interfered in any way with the site of the ditch:—Held: the circumstances were not sufficient to constitute adverse possession, & give the owners of the land a title under Stat. Limitations to the site of the three-foot ditch.—SEARBY v. TOTTENHAM RY. CO. (1868), L. R. 5 Eq. 409.

On an information under Highway Act, 1864 (c. 101), s. 50, for unlawfully encroaching on the highway, it was proved that the fence was within seven feet of the centre of the highway:—Held: T. could not be convicted, for he put the fence only on his own land, the ditch being no part of the highway.—FIELD v. 112. ———.]—In pursuance of an Inclosure Act passed in 1788 allotments were made to the predecessors in title of pltf., & the allottees were directed to make & for ever maintain a sufficient fence & ditch on the south side thereof. The inclosure award set out a public highway on the south side of the allotments of the breadth of forty feet between & exclusive of the ditches & fences. Pltf. purchased the allotments in 1889, & upon several occasions he cleaned out the ditch. From time to time houses were built on portions of the allotments alongside the highway, & the ditch in front thereof was filled in & inclosed. In 1901 the remaining length of the ditch was piped in & filled up by defts. with the assent of pltf. The road had a seven-foot pavement alongside the site of the ditch, & inclusive of the footpaths, was about forty-seven feet wide. Many persons, however, walked over the site of the ditch, & it was used for purposes of passage without protest for nearly four years, when the pltf. inclosed the site of the ditch with a temporary paling fence. The council objected to this fence, but it remained until 1907 when it was replaced by a wall, which defts. pulled down:—Held: the site of the ditch belonged to pltf.—WALMSLEY v. FEATHERSTONE URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL (1909), 73 J. P. 322; 7 L. G. R. 806.

116. Ditch between two banks adjoining highway.]—Pltf. was owner of a close adjoining a public highway, & between the close & the highway was a strip of land averaging nine feet in width. Upon this strip of land ran a ditch, the bank of which, on pltf.'s side, was three feet in width, & covered with grass, & the bank on the road side was one foot in width, & covered with grass. At the side of the road were posts & rails about two feet high. Pltf. & his predecessors, the owners of the adjoining land, had from time to time, & the surveyors of highways two or three times during the last 40 years, repaired the posts & rails:—Held: this was not a ditch at the side of, or across a public road within a local Act of Parliament empowering a local board of health to cause ditches at the side of & across public roads to be filled up & to substitute pipe & other drains, & the local board had no power to fill it up & substitute a pipe or other drain, the presumption being that the ditch belonged to pltf., the owner of the adjoining land.—TUTILL v. WEST HAM LOCAL BOARD OF HEALTH (1873), L. R. 8 C. P. 447; 28 L. T. 597; 37 J. P. 455.

117. Hedge without ditch—Claim by owner of hedge to ditch-width.]—On a map attached to an award made under a local Act for the regulation of a common the boundaries of the common were delineated by a line drawn along the line of the "growers" in a hedge dividing the common from the land of an adjacent owner & belonging to such owner:—Held: there was no presumption that the owner was entitled to a "ditch-width" on the outside of the line of the growers in the absence of evidence that the hedge was originally planted inside the boundary line, & any fence erected outside the line of the growers was an encroachment on the common.—COLLIS v. AMPHLETT, [1920] A. C. 271; 89 L. J. Ch. 101; 122 L. T. 433; 18 L. G. R. 1, H. L.

Boundary plates of parish—Intervening space.]—In trespass against the overseers of the parish of St. Dunstan, pltfs. contended that Serjeants' Inn was not within the parish; inter alia it was proved that there was a parish boundary plate at each end of the Inn:—Held: the inference was that at one boundary mark the parish of St. Dunstan ended & at the other the parish began again, leaving the Inn out of the parish.—*LENS v. e. Survey accepted by both parties—Erection of fence & house.]—When a survey is made & accepted by both owners & a fence is erected upon the boundary, & in a few years, while the matter is fresh in the minds of all, a house is erected either upon, or approximately upon, the same line, the presumption ought to be that this was the true line or that the parties agreed to accept it as a conventional boundary between the properties.—HAMILTON MOTOR WORKS, LTD. v. BROWNE (1918), 15 O. W. N. 90.—CAN.

f. Erroneous marking by surveyor—Lots in concession.]—A mistake of a surveyor in marking the number of

g. March dyke—Wind & water shear line—Hill farms.]—In a dispute as to boundaries between two tenants of adjoining hill farms under the same landlord, it appeared that there was no specification of boundaries in the respective leases, the properties being described generally. A march dyke marked part of the boundary line; where it ceased, one tenant said the boundary was the wind & water shear line up to a certain hill & thence a straight line to the top of another hill. The other tenant maintained that the wind & water shear line was the boundary throughout the whole extent of the farm from the point where the march dyke ceased:—Held: (1) while the wind & water or weather march was a very common boundary, when it was deviated from, the line usually was carried straight from one hill top to another; but while in some cases there may be a presumption in favour of the one line rather than the other, neither is necessarily the boundary of any farm, that depending entirely on the circumstances of each case.—ANDERSON v. M'CALLUM (1857), 20 Dunl. (Ct. of Sess.) 2.—SCOT.

SECT. 3.—DUTY TO MAINTAIN.

119. Upon whom duty devolves—In general.]—Given an estate consisting of two parishes vested in one person; and a habit of presenting one rector; till at length all traces of the boundaries are lost; which estate comes by descent to different lines of heirs; and different rectors are presented; one of whom under an idea of title received all the tithes, so getting without breach of faith what belonged to the other:—Held: in all such cases, the ct. must find some ratio of apportionment; deft. or other person under whom he claims has a duty imposed upon him to keep the subjects distinct; and, therefore, if he cannot point out the identical thing, he must set out the proportion if he knows the quantity; if there was no such duty, probably no relief could be given.—GRIERSON v. EYRE (1804), 9 Ves. 341; 32 E. R. 631, L. C.

120. — Tenant.]—It is the duty of the tenant to keep the boundaries; & the ct. will aid the reversioner to distinguish them; &, if they cannot be distinguished, will give him as much land.—LEEDS (DUKE) v. STRAFFORD (EARL) (1798), 4 Ves. 180; 31 E. R. 93, L. C.

125. Evidence of—Stone with inscription built into wall.]—The purchaser of a house in L. having taken various objections to the title, the vendor filed a bill for specific performance, & obtained the usual reference as to title. All the objections taken were overruled, but before the certificate had been signed the purchaser discovered in a long blank wall, which formed one side of the house & fronted on a street, a stone with an inscription, dated in 1776, stating that the wall had been built by and belonged to the E. I. Co., who had thrown the adjoining ground into the street. The wall had been rebuilt in 1831 by the tenant of the house, & the stone set up again; but in what circumstances did not appear. No rent had from that time been paid to the co., nor any acknowledgment of their title given; but their successors in title, on being applied to, claimed the wall as theirs, & the vendor obtained a release from them:—Held: the vendor had not a good title when the bill was filed, for that there was no ground for holding a title to have been gained by possession adverse to the E. I. Co.—PHILLIPSON v. GIBBON (1871), 6 Ch. App. 428; 40 L. J. Ch. 406; 24 L. T. 602; 35 J. P. 676; 19 W. R. 661, L. JJ.

*h. Evidence of—Valuation of commissioner.]—*In an action of trespass for pulling down a line fence between pltf.'s & deft.'s adjoining premises, it appeared that the fence had been erected by deft., & was on his own land. Pltf. had got the city comr. to value the fence, treating it as a line fence, but no bye-law was proved, the proceeding was wholly ex p., & the award was uncertain:—Held: this clearly could give no right.—BRAUER v. ROGERS (1875), 25 C. P. 156.—CAN.

*k. — Situation—Ownership of freehold.]—*The original line fence, being wholly on pltf.'s land:—Held: it was the property of pltf., the fence being regarded as part of the freehold, & the ownership of the freehold determining

*l. Fence on boundary line.]—*On the boundary between two blocks, a bank erected a fence. Afterwards the bank surrendered the lands of which they were owners in fee to the Crown, & all improvements thereon:—Held: only a moiety of the fence passed to the Crown.—LANDS MINISTER v. AUSTRALIAN JOINT STOCK BANK (1900), 21 N. S. W. L. R. 209.—AUS.

*m. Rails of old fence—Adjoining owners—Jurisdiction of court.]—*A., intending to make a line fence between his land & that of B., by mistake made the fence on B.'s land. Afterwards, a correct line having been run, it was agreed that A. & B. should each make a portion of the fence on the correct

A. sued B. in the division ct. for the price of the rails so used, & the judge having decided in his favour, B. applied for a prohibition:—Held: the judge had jurisdiction.—*Re BRADSHAW v. 139. —.]—If a highway is dedicated to the public with a dangerous obstruction upon it, such as would have been a nuisance if placed upon an ancient way, as, a flight of steps, or a projecting flap, no action can be maintained against the person dedicating it for an injury caused thereby. Nor will an action lie against the owner of a house having a covered area adjoining a public footway, which area was in existence before & at the time of the dedication of the highway, & was dedicated to the public before the Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), for an injury to an individual from the giving way of the covering of the area in consequence of the wear & tear occasioned by public user.

In 1830, houses were erected on land adjoining a new road constructed at a high level as an approach to a new bridge across the Thames. Between these houses & this road was a space which was covered over as a means of access to the houses, by a flagging in which were gratings to let light & air to the lower part of the buildings, which formed separate tenements, the entrance to which was upon the lower level at the rear. The space so covered had become, by dedication prior to Highway Act, 1835, a part of the public footway, & was used as such by the public. In 1862, in consequence of a large number of persons congregating upon the spot, the flagging & grating in front of one of the houses, having become weakened by user, gave way, & several persons were precipitated into the area below, a depth of about thirty feet, & one of them was killed. In an action by the widow of deceased, under Fatal Accidents Act, 1846 (c. 93):—Held: (1) there being in the circumstances no legal liability on the part of the lessee of the houses to keep the surface of this way in repair, the action was not maintainable, the gulf at the side of the causeway being the result of the road being raised by the makers of it, not by the land at the side being excavated by the proprietors of it.—*ROBBINS v. 141. Excavation made after dedication—Liability of maker—Statutory obligation to fence upon third person.]—If an excavation has been made so near to a highway since its dedication & adoption as to create or increase danger to the public, & an accident happens thereby, the person making the excavation is not absolved from liability by reason that a statutory obligation to fence the highway is imposed upon other parties, who have neglected to do so.—WETTOR v. DUNK (1864), 4 F. & F. 298, N. P.

142. House area — Occupier liable.]—It is universally the duty of the occupier of a house having an area fronting a public street so to fence it as to make it safe to passengers; it is no defence to an action against him for neglecting to do so, where pltf. fell down into the area & was hurt, that when he took possession of the house, & as long back as could be remembered, the area was in the same open state as when the accident happened.—*COUPLAND v. 143. Pleading.]—A., being possessed of land abutting on a public footway, in the course of building a house on the land, excavated an area, which, by the negligence of his workpeople, was left unfenced, so that B., who was lawfully passing along the way, the night being dark, without any negligence or default of her own, fell into the area & was killed:—Held: A. was liable, under Fatal Accidents Act, 1846 (c. 93), to an action by the husband, as administrator, for the benefit of himself & B.'s infant children.

The declaration alleged that deft. was possessed of a messuage, with the appurtenances, near to a common & public footway, & that, in front of & before the messuage, & parcel of the appurtenances thereof, & close to, & by the side of, the footway, & abutting upon, & opening into, the same, there then was a large hole, vault, or area, which hole, vault, or area, deft., by reason of the possession of the messuage, with the appurtenances, before & at the time when, etc., ought to have so sufficiently guarded & fenced as to prevent injury to persons lawfully passing in & along the footway:—Held: the duty of deft. to fence the area was properly alleged.—*BARNES v. 144. ———.]—Defts., owners of a house & premises, demised them on Apr. 1, 1853, to M. for thirty years, at a rent payable quarterly, with a right of re-entry if the rent should at any time be in arrear more than fifteen days. M. occupied the first-floor himself for some time, & let out the rest of the house to separate weekly lodgers, each of whom had a right to draw water from a tank in the area, & to use the area for the purpose of doing so. In March, M. let the first-floor to T., a weekly lodger, & then ceased to reside in the house, never paying the quarter's rent due at Lady-Day, 1858, or at the Midsummer following, & both were still in arrear at the time the action was brought. T. had the same privilege of using the area & tank as the other lodgers. In July, M. became insolvent, & about July 25 he gave up the lease to the official assignee, & was discharged upon the 30th. In the same month, defts. gave notice to the lodgers that the rent must be paid to them, & two of the lodgers did so pay the rent. Upon Aug. 4, pltf. suffered an injury by falling through a grating in an area belonging to the house, & being part of the premises so let with the house. On or about Aug. 7, a few days after the accident to pltf., T., the tenant of the first-floor, received a notice from the inspector of nuisances to repair the grating in front of the house. This notice was immediately handed by him to defts., & they repaired the grating. In Nov., defts. called upon the assignees to elect whether they would take the lease or not, & upon their refusal to take it, defts. took possession of it, & of the house & premises. It was admitted that the injury to pltf. was occasioned by the negligence of some person or persons in not keeping the grating in repair:—Held: there was no evidence to go to the jury that defts. before the time of the accident had avoided the lease & entered into possession of the premises, & had thus become answerable for the negligence by which pltf. was injured.—BISHOP v. BEDFORD CHARITY TRUSTEES (1859), 1 E. & E. 714; 29 L. J. Q. B. 53; 1 L. T. 214; 6 Jur. N. S. 220; 8 W. R. 115; 120 E. R. 1078, Ex. Ch.

145. Broken railing—No notice of breakage.]—Deft. was the owner in possession of a vacant house in a street, with an area which adjoined the highway. One of the rails of the area railings had been broken away by boys playing football in the street, & consequently, a gap had been created in the railings. Pltf., a child, got through this gap from the street, & was clambering along inside the railings, when he fell into the area, & sustained injuries through the fall. In an action brought on his behalf to recover damages from deft. in respect of his injuries, the jury found, in answer to questions left to them that the area was, when the accident happened, a nuisance, but that deft. did not know, at the time of the accident, that the rail had been removed, that such a time had not elapsed after its removal that he would have known of it at the time of the accident, if he had used reasonable care, & that he had used reasonable care to prevent the premises from becoming dangerous to persons using the highway:—Held: (1) upon the findings, deft. was not liable in respect of the nuisance created upon his premises by the action of trespassers; (2) the nuisance could not be regarded as the cause of pltf.'s injuries, inasmuch as he did not fall through the gap in the railings while using the highway, but got through the gap

146. Open cellar.—Deft. occupied a cellar where workmen of his were engaged in scene-painting. The area over the cellar was open, & there was a protecting bar round the opening. A little girl was leaning against the rail looking down into the cellar, watching the men at their work, when it gave way, & she fell down into the area & was severely injured. The Judge held there was no case against deft. as the child was not, when she fell, using the highway, & had no right to lean against the bar:—Held: there was evidence of negligence which ought to have gone to the jury, & there must be a new trial.—JEWSON v. GATTI (1886), 2 T. L. R. 441, C. A.

147. Hoist hole—Close to highway—Occupation.—Pltf. in passing along a highway at night, fell into a hoist-hole, which was within fourteen inches of the public way & unfenced. The hole formed part of an unfinished warehouse, one floor of which defts. were permitted to occupy whilst a lease was in course of preparation, & the aperture was used by defts. in raising goods from the basement to an upper floor:—Held: defts. had a sufficient occupation of the premises to cast upon them the duty of protecting the hoist-hole.—HADLEY v. TAYLOR (1865), L. R. 1 C. P. 53; 13 L. T. 368; 11 Jur. N. S. 979; 14 W. R. 59.

Annotation:—Distd. Tarry v. Ashton (1876), 1 Q. B. D. 314.

148. Disused quarry—Occupier liable—Though made before he came in.—Deft. owned & occupied land, being a worked-out quarry, immediately adjoining a public highway vested in an urban district council & repairable by the inhabitants at large. A prior owner of the land had, in 1865, made the excavation in order to quarry for limestone, & until then the surfaces of the road & the land had been on the same level. The excavation being a source of danger & obstruction to persons using the road, the excavator, to protect them & the road, built alongside the road a wall, the bottom of which rested on a ledge of limestone left ungotten for the purpose & served as a retaining wall for the subsoil of the road & as a fence wall above its surface. In Feb., 1913, part of the wall collapsed & fell into the quarry, & in consequence a considerable part of the subsoil of the road & of its surface fell in also, the road thus becoming impassable, a source of danger to persons attempting to use it, & a nuisance, liable under Quarry (Fencing) Act, 148 i. Disused pit.—Applt. had acquired right to an estate in which there was a pit not then in use, & which had remained so, uncovered & unfenced, for many years previous to his purchase, situated at the side of a public road. A passenger on horseback having on a dark night deviated from the path, & fallen into the pit:—Held: applt., as owner of the land in which the pit was, was liable for not fencing the pit.—CADELL v. BLACK (1812), 5 Pat. App. 567.—SCOT.

148 ii. —.—Pltfs. alleged that at a public roup they hired a pasture field for the current year, in which to graze a number of horses; that about twenty yards from their park was an old ironstone pit situated within less than a yard of a turnpike road without any fence either surrounding the mouth of the pit or betwixt the road & the pit; that one of their horses was found killed by falling into the pit. The defence was that the tenant of the minerals & not the proprietor was the person responsible for the neglect to fence:—Held: the proprietor was primarily liable.—MACK v. ALLEN & SIMPSON (1832), 28 Fac. Coll. 262.—SCOT.

e. Deposit of building materials—Pond rendered dangerous.—In an action for damages on account of the death of a child seven years of age, pltf. averred that deft. was engaged in building operations adjoining a public street; that the street on one side was separated from a mill pond ten feet deep by a stone wall eight feet high;

1887 (c. 19), s. 3, to be dealt with summarily under Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55):—Held: there was a common law obligation on the possessor of the excavation to keep it fenced off whether it was made before or after his possession began, & whether he was or was not liable to his landlord, if any.—A.-G. v. Roe, [1915] 1 Ch. 235 84 L. J. Ch. 322; 112 L. T. 581; 79 J. P. 263 13 L. G. R. 335.

149. Opening left by highway authority—Occupier not liable.—On premises adjoining a highway, which were the property of & occupied by deft., there was a coal shoot formed by an opening at the bottom of the wall of the house, abutting on the pavement, which was part of the highway. In 1901 the local highway authority, acting under the provisions of the Private Street Works Act, 1892 (c. 57), raised the level of the pavement, & to preserve access to the coal shoot, left an opening in the pavement. This condition of the pavement remained until Oct. 1914, when pltf., in passing along the pavement, put her foot into the hole, & suffered personal injuries, for which she brought her action against deft.:—Held: the action failed, inasmuch as, where a nuisance is created by a highway authority on a highway under their control, the owner or occupier of the land adjoining the highway is not liable for an accident caused by the nuisance.—HORRIDGE v. MAKINSON (1915), 84 L. J. K. B. 1294; 113 L. T. 498; 79 J. P. 484; 31 T. L. R. 389; 13 L. G. R. 868, D. C.

150. Evidence of dedication.—In an action on the case for an injury resulting to pltf. from falling down an unprotected area, the declaration stated, that deft. was possessed of the premises, & that they were adjoining "a certain common & public street & highway." Deft. had agreed with the owner of the premises, two carcasses of houses, to finish one of them, for doing which he was to have the other, & workmen employed by him were then actually at work upon them; but it did not appear that any conveyance had been made to him. The street in question, which had been forming for six years, & led from a public street to a new road across fields, over which the way had been publicly used for five or six years, was unfinished, one half only being lighted, the other neither lighted nor paved; but the inhabitants had paid the highway & paving rates:—Held: this was sufficient evidence to go to a jury of a possession in deft., & of a dedication of the street to the public.—JARVIS v. DEAN (1826), 3 Bing. 447; 11 Moore, C. P. 351; 4 L. J. O. S. C. P. 144; 130 E. R. 585.

Annotations:—Consd. Barnes v. Ward (1850), 9 C. B. 392; Fisher v. Prowse, Cooper v. Walker (1862), 2 B. & S. 770.

151. No evidence of dedication.—In an action for an injury to the wife of pltf. through the negligence of deft. in leaving an open vault or that deft. deposited a large heap of building materials close to this wall & reaching to within thirty inches from its top; that the child, while playing with other children on the top of this heap, fell over the wall into the pond & was drowned; that deft. in heaping up the material close to the wall made the pond a practically unprotected source of danger to the public; that he knew that children were in the habit of playing on the top of the heap; & that in depositing the heap & failing to take precautions for the safety of children playing on it, deft. was guilty of gross negligence, in consequence of which the child lost its life:—Held: pltf.'s averments were irrelevant.—HORSBURGH v. SHEACH (1900), 3 F. (Ct. of Sess.) 268.—SCOT.

cellar on his own premises unfenced, whereby she fell in & was injured, it was proved that many persons were in the habit of going across the spot where the vault was, for the purpose of making a short cut from a street to the main road, by avoiding an angle, but that the owner of the premises, as often as he saw them, turned them back:—Held: there was no evidence for the jury of a "public way."—STONE v. JACKSON (1855), 16 C. B. 199; 19 J. P. 313; 139 E. R. 732.

152. Property abutting on highway—Projecting wall.]—Where property abutting on a highway becomes through the wrongful act of strangers a nuisance to the public lawfully using the highway, the owner of such property has a duty cast upon him from the moment he becomes aware of the danger to take steps to prevent his property becoming a source of injury to the public.—SILVERTON v. MARRIOTT (1888), 59 L. T. 61; 52 J. P. 677, D. C.

153. Barbed wire fence.]—Pltf. was walking along a footpath one side of which was bounded by a stone wall, & the other side by a barbed wire fence dividing the road from deft.'s field. As pltf. was turning the corner, the macintosh coat which he was wearing at the time was caught by a gust of wind & thrown against the barbed wire, the result being that it was considerably damaged. Damage had occurred to pltf.'s clothing on another occasion on the same path, & his wife had also torn her glove by the fence on another occasion. It was contended that the fence was at the present day an ordinary one; that it was not dangerous in the sense of any decision of the cts.; that pltf. had ample notice of the nature of the fence; & that pltf. having such notice, had not used ordinary care in passing round the corner:—Held: the fence, so constructed & placed, was dangerous to the public using the path & a nuisance, & pltf. was entitled to recover, unless he had been guilty of contributory negligence in not taking, after notice of the existence & nature of the fence, due care.—STEWART v. WRIGHT (1893), 57 J. P. 137; affd. 9 T. L. R. 480, D. C.

154. Spikes on low wall.]—At the trial of an action in the county ct. to recover damages for personal injury, pltf., a child of between five & six years of age, was not called as a witness, but evidence was given that defts. had erected in a recess in premises belonging to them a wall eighteen inches high, with iron spikes four & a half inches long upon the top, immediately abutting upon a highway, & that pltf. was found near thereto with her arm bleeding from a recent injury which might have been caused by the spikes. On this evidence the jury found that the spikes were a nuisance, that the injury was caused by them, & that there was no contributory negligence on the part of pltf.:—Held: there was evidence to go to the jury that the injury was caused by the spikes to pltf. whilst properly using the highway.—FENNA v. CLARE & Co., [1895] 1 Q. B. 199; 64 L. J. Q. B. 238; 11 T. L. R. 115; 15 R. 220, D. C.

155. Defective fence.]—Deft. was the owner of a fence abutting on a highway. Pltf., a child of four years of age, attracted by some boys at play on the other side of the fence, put his foot on it, & it fell on & injured him. In an action for damages for the injuries so sustained, the jury found that the fence was very defective, but actually fell through pltf. standing wholly or partly on it, though not for the purpose of climbing over:—Held: the defective fence being a nuisance, & the cause of the injuries to pltf., deft. was liable.—HARROLD v. WATNEY, [1898] 2 Q. B. 320; 67 L. J. Q. B. 771; 78 L. T. 788; 46 W. R. 642; 14 T. L. R. 486; 42 Sol. Jo. 609, C. A.

156. Door opening outwards into street.]—In an action of damages against the corpn. of E. & against the owners of a tenement in the city, the pursuer averred that while he was proceeding along a street which adjoined the garden wall of the tenement a door in the wall suddenly opened outwards on to the street & struck him on the face, causing him serious injuries; that the door as constructed formed an obstruction to the street; & that it constituted a grave danger to the public, & a danger which was obvious to the defenders. He averred fault against the owners for having on their premises a door of this dangerous construction:—Held: the pursuer had not stated a relevant case against the owners, because having a door opening outwards upon a street did not per se infer negligence on their part.—EVANS v. EDINBURGH CORPN., [1916] 2 A. C. 45; 85 L. J. P. C. 200; 114 L. T. 911; 32 T. L. R. 396, H. L.

157. Person straying from path.]—The owner or occupier of land, along which there is a right of way, leaving unprotected an excavation or reservoir of water, is not liable for the injury or death of a person falling into it in the dark, in consequence of his straying out of the way by mistake. When an excavation is made at some distance from the sheep, & must be removed.—ELGIN COUNTY ROAD TRUSTEES v. INNES (1886), 14 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 48.—SCOT.

153 i. Barbed wire fence.]—Deft. was alleged to have placed a fence composed in whole or in part of four barbed wires on the dividing line between his property & a public road. The fence was on the level of the road & in no way separated therefrom. Deft. pleaded that between the fence & the road there was an intervening space or verge of about three feet which was his property:—Held: the fence was a source of danger to persons lawfully travelling along the road, including horses, cattle &

157 i. Person straying from path—Dangerous slope.]—A member of the public, in proceeding along a public road on a dark night, strayed on to a

At a point fifty feet from the entrance he fell over the slope, sustaining injuries from which he died. In an action by deceased's representative against the owners of the private road:—Held: the place where the accident happened was not in immediate proximity to the highway & the action was irrelevant.—*MELVILLE v. ous to persons lawfully using it.—BINKS v. SOUTH YORKSHIRE RY. & RIVER DUN CO. (1862), 3 B. & S. 244; 32 L. J. Q. B. 26; 122 E. R. 92; sub nom. BINCKS v. SOUTH YORKSHIRE RY. & RIVER DUN CO., 1 New Rep. 50; 7 L. T. 350; 27 J. P. 180; 11 W. R. 66.

160. Railings of steps leading to house.]—Pltf., a boy of four years, accompanied his sister, who was going on business to deft.'s house. A flight of steps, protected on either side by railings, led up to the front door. One of these railings had been for some time displaced, leaving a gap of eighteen inches between the rails on either side of it. Across this gap rope had been interlaced, but had worn away & had not been renewed. The sister had frequently been to the house, & had shortly before noticed that the rail was missing. On the day in question the sister went up the steps, but pltf. in following fell through the gap & was injured:—Held: pltf. could maintain no action against deft. for the injury he had sustained, as the only duty on the part of deft. towards him was to take care that there was no concealed danger, & of this there was no evidence.—BURCHELL v. HICKISSON (1880), 50 L. J. C. P. 101.

161. Road widened.]—Defts., the owners of land on each side of a highway, which was originally 10 feet wide, having on one side a declivity gradually sloping down to a brook, widened the highway by increasing its width to about 34 feet on the side towards the brook, & it became necessary to bank up that side. The highway had never been fenced. It was in a mountainous district, & was steep. Pltf. was leading his horse with a cart up the highway, & drew the horse across the widened part of the road to rest it. The horse staggered, & fell over the embankment. Pltf. brought an action for damages, complaining that defts. had created a new danger alongside of the highway:—Held: defts. were not liable.—OWEN v. DE WINTON (1894), 58 J. P. 833; 10 T. L. R. 534, C. A.

the proprietor of a disused quarry more than 150 yards from the nearest point of the public road, was under no obligation to fence it, & was not liable to the representatives of a person, who in straying from the public road, had fallen into the quarry & was killed.—PRENTICES v. ASSETS CO., LTD. (1890), 17 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 484.—SCOT.

157 iii. — Quarry near private road.]—A proprietor let the fire clay on his lands to a brick manufacturer, with leave to him to erect works & houses & to make roads. The tenant erected his works & built houses for his workmen near an unfenced quarry on the lands, the road or path used by the workmen in going to the works from the houses passing within twelve feet of the quarry. One of the workmen, who had one dark morning fallen into the quarry & been injured, raised an action of damages against the proprietor:—Held: the proprietor having authorised the erection of the cottages & the making of the road, was in fault in allowing the quarry to remain in a dangerous condition, & was liable in damages.—M'FEAT v. RANKIN'S TRUSTEE (1879), 6 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 1043.—SCOT.

157 iv. — Pond—Private road off highway.]—A private road led from a public road to the vicinity of a pond, which was situated at a distance of 265 yards from the public road. Pltf. when going along the public road on a dark night, turned by mistake into the private road, & fell into the pond. In an action for damages:—Held: there was no duty laid upon defts. to fence the pond.—PATON v. UNITED ALKALI CO., LTD. (1894), 32 Sc. L. R. 19.—SCOT.

157 v. — Unused ground near private road.]—A child was drowned by falling into a disused clay pit situated in the centre of an unused piece of ground near a block of workmen's houses. His father brought an action of damages against the proprietor of the ground. He averred the clay pit was unfenced; that it was the duty of defts. to fence it; that the unused piece of ground was constantly used as a playground by the children of the district with the consent or, at least, without the disapproval of defts. & that the clay pit was 25 yards from the nearest road which was a private road & unfenced. It was admitted that the ground on which the clay pit was situated had for some years been let to tenants:—Held: pltf. had not set forth a relevant case.—DEVLIN v. JEFFREY'S TRUSTEES (1902), 40 Sc. L. R. 92.—SCOT.

feet deep & 5 feet in diameter, situated 82 feet from a public veld road. The road & the shaft were on the same level, & there was no ditch, fence or other obstacle between them. The locality was considerably populated. A person strayed from the road in the dark & falling into the shaft, received severe injuries:—Held: the co. was liable for the damages sustained.—FLEMING v. RIETFOURTEIN DEEP GOLD MINING CO., LTD. (1905), T. S. 111.—S. AF.

g. Mining machinery—Waste ground.]—Pltf. in suing for damages in respect of injuries sustained by his son, averred that defts. used for the purpose of hauling waggons a horizontal grooved wheel, round which a wire rope passed; that the wheel was situated 18½ yards from the public road on waste ground which was not fenced or walled in & which was used as a playground by children of the neighbourhood; & pltf.'s son while playing beside the wheel was caught between the rope & the wheel, on its being set in motion without any warning:—Held: there was no obligation on defts. to fence their property so as to prevent members of the public straying from the road on to the property or to fence the wheel.—CUMMINGS v. DARNAGAIL COAL CO., LTD. (1903), 10 S. L. T. 660.—SCOT.

Sect. 2.—Rights and liabilities of owners and occupiers: Sub-sect. 1, D., E. & F.]

162. Gate left open—Cart track over level crossing.]—In a field belonging to defts., & abutting on a highway, children were in the habit of playing. A cart track crossed the field to a level crossing over a railway, & on the other side of the railway there was a piece of land used for the purpose of tipping rubbish. By arrangement with the railway co., defts. had the use of the tip, & their carts were constantly crossing the field to the tip. Pltf., a child of one year & nine months, who had been playing in the field wandered to the level crossing, & then along the railway line, where she was injured by a passing train. There was no evidence that any child playing in the field had ever before gone over the level crossing. The jury found that defts. were negligent in leaving both the gate from the highway into the field, & also the level-crossing gate open:—Held: pltf. was not entitled to recover, inasmuch as the facts did not establish any duty on the part of defts. towards pltf., & there was no evidence that the accident was in fact caused by any act or omission of defts.' servants.—SCHOFIELD v. BOLTON CORPN. (1910), 26 T. L. R. 230; 54 Sol. Jo. 213, C. A.

163. Waste heaps—Accessible by a path.]—Defts. were owners of a plot of unfenced waste land from which old houses had been cleared. It did not adjoin any public highway, but was accessible by a path leading from the back of the house in which pltf., a child between two & three years old, lived with her parents. The public were allowed by defts. to traverse the land, & children of all ages were in the habit of playing upon heaps of sand, stone, & other materials which from time to time were deposited there by defts. Pltf. went upon the land unaccompanied by any older person & was shortly afterwards found upon a heap of paving stones, one of which had fallen upon her hand & injured it. There was no evidence to show how the accident happened. The jury found that children played upon the land with the knowledge & permission of defts.; that there was no invitation to pltf. to use the land unaccompanied; that defts. ought to have known that there was a likelihood of children being injured

162 i. Gates left open.]—Two children were drowned in a pond in private ground near a public thoroughfare. In an action by their father against the proprietor it was proved there was an entrance to the ground from the thoroughfare by a gate in the boundary wall, but that nearer the pond there was a paling with a gate which had been left open by some one unknown & it appeared the children strayed by these means from the public road to the pond:—Held: the death of the children was not attributable to the fault of deft.—ROSS v. KERR (1888), 26 Sc. L. R. 55.—SCOT.

k. Disused quarry in private ground.]—In deft.'s property was a disused quarry, which it was alleged was insufficiently fenced. Members of the public, including children, had largely frequented the place although private ground. Pltf.'s child first trespassed into private ground not belonging to deft. & then by climbing or getting through a fence got to the quarry & was drowned in it. It was proved that at the time of the accident there was a gap of fourteen feet in deft.'s fence largely made by adult & child trespassers:—Held: the owner not having invited people to come upon his property & there being no public right to enter his ground, the general rule not requiring dangerous places on private property to be fenced, applied.—HOLLAND v. DISTRICT COMMITTEE OF MIDDLE WARD OF LANARKSHIRE, [1909] 2 S. L. T. 7.—SCOT.

l. —.]—Pltf. was owner & occupier of the surface of certain lands on which there was an unfenced quarry, the mining rights in which were leased to the predecessor in title of defts. These rights passed by will to defts., who paid the rent reserved by the lease, but did not work the mine, & left it in the unfenced condition in which they found it. One of pltf.'s bullocks fell into the quarry & was killed:—Held: pltf. was entitled to recover damages from defts. for the loss of his bullock, there being a continuing liability on the part of defts. to keep the quarry so as not to be a danger & a nuisance to their neighbour.—M'MORROW v. LAYDON, [1919] 2 I. R. 529.—IR.

m. Sandpit—Near public park.]—Pltf. averred that defts. were the owners of ground abutting on a public park & separated therefrom by a hedge in which there were gaps; that on the ground there was an unfenced sandpit by the stones, & that defts. did not take reasonable care to prevent children being injured thereby:—Held: there being neither allurement nor trap, nor invitation, nor dangerous object placed upon the land, defts. were not liable.—LATHAM v. JOHNSON (R.) & NEPHEW, LTD., [1913] 1 K. B. 398; 82 L. J. K. B. 258; 108 L. T. 4; 77 J. P. 137; 29 T. L. R. 124; 57 Sol. Jo. 127, C. A.

A. having the exclusive right to dig stone in a certain close, avowed distraining the cattle of B., who had the exclusive right of pasture there, as damage feasant, for having broken the stones. B. pleaded that there was no fence to keep them off, nor did A. otherwise guard or protect the stones. A. replied that he was not bound to fence; on demurrer:—Held: the replication was bad.—CHURCHILL v. EVANS (1809), 1 Taunt. 529; 127 E. R. 939.

166. —.]—Pltf. was in the occupation of the surface of a field, & defts. were in the occupation

80 yards from the park; that children were in the habit of entering the ground & using the pit as a playground; that defts. knew of this practice & allowed it; that pltf.'s child was killed by a fall of sand while playing in the pit, & that defts. knew, before the accident happened, that the face of the sand was at a dangerous angle & liable to fall, but took no steps to have the danger removed or to exclude the children:—Held: pltf.'s averments were relevant.—MACKENZIE v. FAIRFIELD SHIPBUILDING & ENGINEERING CO., LTD., [1913] S. C. 213.—SCOT.

n. Pond in fenced field—Opening in fence—Access to well.]—A farm servant occupied a cottage on his employer's farm which adjoined a field containing a shallow pond, used for watering cattle, 25 yards distant from the cottage. The field was fenced, but there was a small opening in the fence, close to the cottage, which was used as an access to a well. One of the farm servant's children having fallen into the pond was drowned. In an action of damages brought by the father against his employers:—Held: the pond was not a dangerous place, & defts. were under no obligation to fence it.—ROYAN v. M'LENNANS (1889), 17 R. of a quarry in the same field. Both held under the same landlord. The quarry was entirely unfenced. One of pltf.'s bullocks fell into the quarry & was killed:—Held: pltf. was entitled to recover damages from defts. for the loss of his bullock.—HAWKEN v. SHEARER (1887), 56 L. J. Q. B. 284; 3 T. L. R. 557, D. C.

167. Mine shaft.]—Appls. were in occupation of the minerals under a field which was in the occupation of resp., & had sunk a shaft in the field for the purpose of getting the minerals beneath it. When they had ceased to work the shaft, they covered it over in such a manner as not to afford a proper & effectual protection for horses in the field. Resp. turned out a mare to feed in the field, & she fell down the shaft & was killed, without any negligence on the part of resp.:—Held: applts. were liable to an action in respect of the injury caused to resp. by reason of the loss of his mare.—Re WILLIAMS v. GROUCOTT (1863), 4 B. & S. 149; 2 New Rep. 419; 8 L. T. 458; 27 J. P. 693; 9 Jur. N. S. 1237; 11 W. R. 886; 122 E. R. 416; sub nom. GROUCOTT v. WILLIAMS, 32 L. J. Q. B. 237.

168. Canal & docks — Private land.]—The declaration stated that defts. were possessed of land with a canal & cuttings intersecting the land, & of bridges across the canal & cuttings communicating with & leading to certain docks of defts., which land & bridges were used with the consent & permission of defts. by persons proceeding to & coming from the docks; that they wrongfully & improperly kept & maintained the land, canal, cuttings, & bridges, & suffered them to be in so improper a state & condition as to render them unsafe for persons lawfully passing along & over the land & bridges towards the docks; & that G. lawfully passing over & using the bridges,

c. Pumping machinery near waste ground—Open gate.]—In an action of damages at the instance of the parents of a child, who had been killed by the pumping apparatus in a shale mine, against the owners of the mine, it was proved that the parents' house was situated within the works & about 30 yards from the place where the accident occurred, the intervening space being waste ground where the miners' children played. The pump was surrounded by a fence in which there was a lifting gate. An engine-man on going to the pump, took off the lifting gate to enable him to get at the machinery. He then returned to the engine house to put on steam, & on his return found that the child had strayed from the house, passed through the open gate in the fence, & been killed by the machinery:—Held: there was fault on the part of the owners of the mine in not keeping the pump fenced.—HAMILTON v. HERMAND OIL CO., LTD. (1893), 20 R. (Ct. of Sess.).—995.—SCOT.

p. Rubbish heap in field—Field insufficiently fenced.]—A father brought an action of damages against a burgh authority for the death of his daughter, who had received fatal injuries through her clothes becoming ignited at a fire burning upon a rubbish heap or "coup" where the burgh rubbish was deposited. He averred this coup was situated in a grass field in the neighbourhood of his house & was not fenced off from the field, nor was the field sufficiently fenced to exclude the public, who in fact used it as a public park, & that children were in the habit of playing upon the coup, all of which was known to defts. He further averred, it was the practice of defts., or of those for whom they were responsible, to collect & burn inflammable material upon the coup, & this practice had been followed by rag pickers, with the acquiescence of defts. He alleged fault on the part of defts., in respect that they had failed to fence the coup or field or to take other precautions to exclude the public therefrom:—Held: these averments were irrelevant to found an issue against defts., for it appeared therefrom that they were not owners of the field or coup, & had neither the right nor the duty to fence them.—JOHNSTONE v. LOCHGELLY MAGISTRATES, [1913] S. C. 1078.—SCOT.

PART II. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 1.—F.

q. Defective fence—Duty to maintain—Question of fact.]—In trespass quare clausum fregit & for taking pltf.'s horses, it appeared that defts. had distrained several of pltf.'s horses for trespassing on defts.' farm which adjoined that of pltf. It was alleged that the animals escaped through defect of fences which it was pltf.'s duty to keep in repair. The question arose as to the respective portions of a division fence which pltf. & defts. respectively were bound to maintain. The jury found that defts. were liable for the portion of the fence through which the animals escaped:—Held: the matter was properly left to the jury to decide as if the jury were fence viewers.—LAMB v. MULHOLLAND (1836), 5 O. S. 109.—CAN.

F. Dangerous and Defective Fences.

169. Adjoining lands—Decayed wire fence.]—Pltf. & defts. respectively occupied adjoining lands as tenants under the same landlord. By the terms of their lease defts. were bound to fence the land in their occupation for the benefit of the lessor & his tenants. About twenty years ago the predecessors of defts. had fenced their land with wire rope, & defts. allowed this fence to remain, & from time to time partially repaired it. From long exposure the strands of the wires composing the rope decayed, & pieces of it fell to the ground & lay hidden in the grass of the adjoining pasture occupied by pltf. Pltf.'s cow grazing there swallowed one of these pieces, & died in consequence:—Held: defts. were liable to compensate pltf. for the loss of the cow.—FIRTH v. BOWLING IRON CO. (1878), 3 C. P. t. — Apprehension of possible injury.]—The tenant of a labourer's cottage & plot substituted barbed wire for the original fence erected by the district authority. Through fear of possible injury to his stock, the owner of the adjoining property was unwilling to put his horses in the field next the boundary fence, & claimed damages for loss of grazing:—Held: assuming that barbed wire was dangerous & likely to cause substantial mischief to stock, pltf. was not entitled to recover damages in a civil bill where there had been no trespass & no actual damage & where the supposed tort was founded on pltf.'s fears, which might prove to be unfounded & unreasonable.—*MEARA v. was not surrounded by sufficient fences, & a cow, the property of B., died from having drunk of the deleterious matter contained in the mine:—Held: B. was entitled to compensation for the damages sustained by reason of the insufficiency of the fences about the mine, & C. was personally responsible for the damage.—HARRISON v. M'GULVEY (1840), 2 Craw. & D. 1.—IR.

b. —.]—Held: the proprietor of lands in which a coal pit not sufficiently fenced was situated, was liable in damages to the father of an unmarried woman who accidentally fell into the pit & was killed.—HISLOP v. DURHAM (1842), 4 Dunl. (Ct. of Sess.) 1168.—SCOT.

PART II. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 1.—G.

c. Duty to repair—Presumptions of law.]—Where there is no evidence to rebut it, the presumption of law is that the owner of a fence is bound to keep it in repair, & where the fence consists of a bank & a ditch the presumption is that the person on whose land the bank is, is prima facie bound to keep the whole in repair.—GILMER v. MAYBEN (1898), 33 L. L. T. 35.—IR.

d. — Tenant for life.]—If land comes into the possession of a tenant for life with a fence which was when erected a sufficient fence within the Fencing Act then in force, it is the duty of the tenant for life to keep it in repair by renewing the portions as they fall out of repair, & so maintain a good fence. But if the fence was never a sufficient fence within the Act, then the land must be looked upon as being practically unfenced, & the expense of putting up a sufficient fence must come out of capital.—Re PHARAZYN, PHARAZYN v. PHARAZYN (1903), 23 N. Z. L. R. 237.—N.Z.

e. — Adjoining closes.]—Declaration, that pltf. & defts. possessed adjoining closes, & that by reason thereof it became the duty of defts.

to keep in repair the division fence; in another count it was charged, that defts. for the same reason were bound to keep in repair half of the fence:—Held: both counts bad, as showing no facts from which the duty alleged would accrue.—OTTO v. PELAN (1852), 9 U. C. R. 363.—CAN.

f. Right to repair—Pruning party hedge—Ultimate improvement.]—One of two neighbouring tenants under the same landlord having cut down part of a thorn hedge between the farms, but not in a way which was alleged to be prejudicial, or unnecessary for the ultimate improvement of the hedge, offered to put up a temporary fence at the joint expense of himself & his neighbour. The latter refused this offer:—Held: he was not entitled to reparation for damage suffered in consequence of the want of a fence.—THOMPSON v. PURVES (1829), 7 Sh. (Ct. of Sess.) 730.—SCOT.

g. —.]—Applt. pruned his half of an old quince hedge, separating his from resp.'s property, in such a way that, though likely to increase the ultimate effectiveness of the hedge, it temporarily decreased its effectiveness as a barrier & screen, & exposed gaps in it:—Held: applt. had a right to do as he had done.—ELS v. JANSEN (1915), E. D. L. 367.—S. AF.

h. — Without notice to adjoining owner—Expenses.]—Where a fence has been destroyed by neglect of one adjoining owner, the other adjoining owner may repair without giving notice & recover the cost from the owner in default.—STORREY v. LOCKHART (1915), 11 Tas. L. R. 163.—AUS.

k. Neglect to repair—Gates of drawbridge.]—Defts. were incorporated to build a drawbridge over a river, & authorised to take tolls, & their charter empowered them to let & farm the tolls. They leased the tolls accordingly, & the lessee covenanted to open & close the drawbridge, & cause it to

to a neighbouring landowner, he is entitled to an injunction to restrain it.

In an action by the owner of a piece of land adjoining the foreshore, an injunction was granted to restrain deft., the owner of the foreshore, from removing shingle therefrom, so as to expose pltf.'s land to the inroads of the sea; although the shingle was removed for sale in a natural & ordinary user of the land.—A.-G. v. TOMLINE (1880), 14 Ch. D. 58; 49 L. J. Ch. 377; 42 L. T. 880; 44 J. P. 617; 28 W. R. 870, C. A.

172. Defect in sea wall repaired by adjoining frontager.]—Pltf. was the occupier of land & deft. the owner of adjoining land, both fronting to a creek communicating with the sea. It was necessary for the protection of his land that each person having land fronting the creek should maintain a sea wall to keep out the high tides, & such sea wall had been maintained along the creek time out of mind. Pltf.'s wall was continuous with deft.'s, & the level of deft.'s land was higher than that of pltf.'s. It became necessary from time to time to put fresh materials on the top of the walls to keep them up to the proper height; deft. had neglected so to top his wall, & owing to an extraordinary high tide, the water flowed over his wall, & so from deft.'s land on to pltf.'s land, doing considerable damage:—Held: (1) the mere fact that each frontager had always maintained the wall in front of his land, & that no one had thought it necessary to erect a wall to protect his land from the water which might be properly attended to. Pltf.'s horses while going down a hill ran away & threw out the driver, & then ran on the bridge. The draw had just been opened to let a vessel pass, & there being no bar or gate to close the bridge, the horses went over the opening into the water & were drowned. There had been gates there to close the bridge while the draw was open, but they had been broken about two months previously, & the new gates which had been made were not up. The jury found that gates would have prevented the accident, & that there was no negligence on the driver's part:—Held: pltf.'s right of action, if any, was against the lessee, & defts. were not liable. Semble: defts. were not bound to have gates to stop runaway horses.—PRICE v. CATARAQUI BRIDGE CO. (1874), 35 U. C. R. 314.—CAN.

l. Rebuilding fence—Adjoining proprietors—Trespass.]—Pltf. & deft. were adjoining proprietors, their respective lots being divided by an ordinary post & board fence. This fence was blown down, & deft. employed persons to build a new one, which differed from the old in that the posts had "shoes." The excavations necessary for the posts & "shoes" were made by defts. partly on his own & partly on pltf.'s land:—Held: deft. had no right to excavate or build upon pltf.'s land.—HUNTER v. RONNE (1870), 8 N. S. R. 113.—CAN.

PART II. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 1.—H

m. Parapet wall—On road leading by shore.]—In an action of damage against the magistrates of L. for injury sustained in consequence of the alleged neglect to fence & protect parapet wall at N., on the road leading by the shore from L. to G.:—Held as the road in question had not been placed by statute under the charge of the magistrates, but remained under the county turnpike district road trustees, there was no liability attaching to the magistrates either at common come from his neighbour's land, was no sufficient evidence to establish a prescriptive liability on the part of deft. to maintain the wall for the protection of the adjoining landowners; (2) by the common law, apart from prescription, no such liability was cast on deft. as a frontager.—HUDSON v. TABOR (1877), 2 Q. B. D. 290; 46 L. J. Q. B. 463; 36 L. T. 492; 42 J. P. 20; 25 W. R. 740, C. A.

SUB-SECT. 2.—BY PRESCRIPTION OR SPURIOUS EASEMENT.

A. Duty to Repair.

173. Right by prescription—Forest inclosure.]—On a quo warranto that deft. had without warrant within the bounds of the King's Forest of Sherwood kept a park with a pale, hedge, & ditch inclosed, the A.-G. alleged that the park had been so slightly inclosed that the King's deer of the forest had entered & been unjustly killed by deft. in the park. Def. did not answer this allegation but justified the killing of all deer, time out of mind, being in the park :—Held : in law deft. could not prescribe to keep his fence or ditch so low without & so high within that the King's deer could not get out again when they had come in, to the destruction of the King's franchise of forest.—R. v. BYRON (1622), J. Bridg. 23; 123 E. R. 1173.

Annotation :—Mentd. Malvern Hills Conservators v. Whitmore (1909), 8 L. G. R. 179.

174. Liability by prescription.]—Pltf. declared that he was possessed of a close adjoining to deft.'s, & that the tenants & occupiers of that close had time out of mind made & repaired the fence between pltf.'s & deft.'s closes, & that for want of repair deft.'s cattle came into pltf.'s close :—Held : pltf. had made himself a sufficient title in the declaration, by showing deft. bound to this charge by prescription, which was sufficiently alleged.—STAR v. ROOKESBY (1710), 1 Salk. 335; 91 E. R. 295, Ex. Ch.

175. In nature of spurious easement.]—By prescription a landowner may be bound to maintain a fence upon his land for the benefit of the occupier of the adjoining close. This obligation is described as in the nature of a spurious easement affecting the land of the party who is bound to maintain the fence (per Cur.).—LAWRENCE v. JENKINS (1873), L. R. 8 Q. B. 274; 42 L. J. Q. B. 147; 37 J. P. 357; 21 W. R. 577; sub nom. LAURENCE v. JENKINS, 28 L. T. 406.

law, or under General Police Act, 1862.—HARRIS v. LEITH MAGISTRATES (1881), 8 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 613.—SCOT.

n. Extension of boundary.]—Held : if one of the boundaries, in a bounding title is the unappropriated sea-shore, a party might, if there be no interjecting property, extend his boundary towards the sea.—STURRIE v. GORDON (1837), 15 Sh. (Ct. of Sess.) 1037.—SCOT.

o. — Encroachment on foreshore—Public user.]—A proprietor of ground, described by his title as being of a specified extent, & as bounded by the sea-shore, has no right to enclose to repair the fences.—NOWEL v. (1599), Cro. Eliz. 709; 78 E. R. 943.

178. Proof of liability—Occasional repairs.]—Where the owner of two adjoining closes, A. & B., separated by a fence & gate, which had always been repaired by the occupier of B., sold A. to pltf., & two years afterwards sold B. to deft. :—Held : the latter was not bound to repair the gate, unless he or his vendor had made some specific bargain with pltf. to that effect, & the doing of occasional repairs was not evidence of such bargain.—BOYLE v. TAMLYN (1827), 6 B. & C. 329; 9 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 430; 5 L. J. O. S. K. B. 134; 108 E. R. 473.

179. — Repairs during many years.]—The owners & occupiers of an ancient copyhold inclosure, & they alone, had from time to time repaired the fence belonging to the inclosure between it & the common waste land of the manor :—Held : the proper inference for a jury to draw was that at the time the lord granted the exclusive possession of the land, he granted it subject to the obligation on the part of the grantee to keep it fenced as against the cattle of the lord & the other copyholders turned out on the wastes of the manor, & that the owner or occupier was therefore bound to keep up the fence as against adjoining occupiers after the wastes of the manor were inclosed under a modern Inclosure Act.—BARBER v. WHITELEY (1865), 34 L. J. Q. B. 212; 29 J. P. 678; 11 Jur. N. S. 822; 13 W. R. 774.

180. — —.]—Pltf. was the occupier of a field, separated from a field in the occupation of deft. by a hedge or fence. In consequence of this fence being out of repair, pltf.'s cattle strayed into the field of deft., & were seized by him as a distress damage feasant. Upon an action brought by pltf. for this seizure of the cattle, the pleadings raised the issue of whether or not deft. was bound to repair the hedge through which the cattle escaped, the only evidence of liability consisted in the practice for fifty years & upwards, of deft. & his predecessors to repair such hedge :—Held : this was in itself no proof of such liability.—HILTON v. ANKESSON (1872), 27 L. T. 519.

No notice necessary.]—Deft. was the occupier of a close adjoining a close occupied by pltf. Deft.'s close was woodland, & he sold the fallage of the timber to H., continuing himself to occupy the close. H. felled a tree in a negligent manner, so that it fell over the fence between the two closes & made a gap in it. Two cows of pltf. soon afterwards got from pltf.'s close through the gap into deft.'s close, & fed on the leaves of a yew tree which had been felled there by H., & died in consequence. Deft. had had no notice of the fence having been broken down before the escape of pltf.'s cows. There was that part of the shore which is covered by the sea only in ordinary spring tides, over which the public has been from time immemorial in the habit of passing, & over which he cannot prove any past use or possession by himself.—SMITH v. STAIR (EARL) (1849), 6 Bell, Sc. App. 487.—SCOT.

evidence that deft. & his predecessors had for more than forty years repaired the fence, which was on his land, between the two closes whenever repairs were necessary, & that for the last nineteen years the fence had been repaired by deft. & his predecessors upon notice by the occupier for the time being of pltf.'s close. Whenever the fence was so repaired it was for the purpose of preventing cattle on pltf.'s close from escaping into deft.'s close:—Held: the evidence showed a prescriptive obligation on the part of deft. to maintain the fence so as to keep in the cattle in pltf.'s close.—LAWRENCE v. JENKINS (1873), L. R. 8 Q. B. 274; 42 L. J. Q. B. 147; 37 J. P. 357; 21 W. R. 577; sub nom. LAURENCE v. JENKINS, 28 L. T. 400.

182. — — —.]—Where an onerous liability has been asserted & submitted to for a long series of years, although the evidence begins well within modern times, anything not manifestly absurd which will support & give a legal origin to such a custom will be presumed. Therefore, a liability to repair a sea-wall submitted to since 1818 ought to be presumed to have a legal origin.—LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. v. FOBBING LEVELS SEWERS COMRS. (1896), 66 L. J. Q. 185. — — — Occupiers.]—In an action upon the case pltf. declared, that defts., the tenants & occupiers of a parcel of land adjoining to pltf.'s, had time out of mind maintained a fence; & that the fence lay open, & that pltf.'s mare went through the gap, & fell into a ditch, & was drowned:—Held: the declaration was good though the prescription was laid in occupiers, for pltf. was a stranger, & presumed ignorant of the estate; but otherwise if deft. had prescribed.—ANON. (1674), 1 Vent. 264; 86 E. 190. — — — Not revived by subsequent severance.]—In an action in trespass for impounding oxen, deft. pleaded that V. was seised of a close L. in fee, & had let it to him for 99 years, that the cattle came upon the close, & so justified for damage feasant. Pltf. replied, that V. was seised of an adjoining close, B., & alleged a custom in P., in which town both the closes were, that all the occupiers of close L. had maintained a fence against B., & that the cattle came upon the land in default of a fence. The custom having been proved & verdict given for pltf., it was moved in arrest of judgment (1) that this was in the nature of a prescription, & not a custom; (2) that if it had been alleged by way of prescription, it should be laid in him that had the inheritance; & (3) that by the unity of possession the duty of fencing was extinguished, & did not revive though the closes came afterwards into several hands:—Held: the duty of fencing was extinguished.—*POLUS v. 191. Not by construction of new highway—Fence removed before old highway stopped up.]—Upon the diversion of a turnpike road after the new road had been completed, but before the old road was stopped up, the trustees, by the permission of B., broke down his fence to make a passage from the new road to the close of A., but did not put up a gate or fence to protect the latter close:—Held: the trustees were wrong-doers, & B. was responsible for their acts.—*WINTER v. 192. Not by inclosure of wastes under modern Inclosure Act.]—The owners & occupiers of an ancient copyhold inclosure, & they alone, had from time to time repaired the fence belonging to the inclosure between it & the common waste land of the manor:—Held: the proper inference for a jury to draw was that at the time the lord granted the exclusive possession of the land, he granted it subject to the obligation on the part of the grantee to keep it fenced as against the cattle of the lord & the other copyholders turned out on the wastes of the manor, & that the owner or occupier was therefore bound to keep up the fence as against

SUB-SECT. 3.—BY CONTRACT.

193. Defence to action for trespass.—To trespass, it is not sufficient for deft. to plead that pltf. by agreement ought to repair; for he may have a remedy upon the covenant.—NOWEL v. SMITH (1599), Cro. Eliz. 709; 78 E. R. 943.

Annotation :—Mentd. Lawrence v. Jenkins (1873), L. R. 8 Q. B. 274.

194. Whether running with land—Fence between land & proposed road.—A former purchaser of lands had entered into a covenant to make & maintain the boundary fences between the lands & a road afterwards made, which became vested in the local board of health, & a question was raised whether this covenant ran with the land, & was binding upon a future purchaser:—Held: the question was too doubtful to admit of the title being forced upon a purchaser.—POTTER v. PERRY (1859), 23 J. P. 614; 7 W. R. 182.

195. Breach of covenant—What amounts to.—A lease contained a covenant for fencing with good & substantial walls or quick fences; fences had been made upon a part of the premises, not much exposed, without posts or rails, which were usual fences in that part of the country, & existed in the fences upon the other parts of the demised premises. The jury having found that the fences were in as good a condition as could be expected in the circumstances:—Held: the covenant had been substantially performed.—DOE D. MENCE v. HADLEY (1849), 14 L. T. O. S. 102.

196. ———.—A purchaser covenanted to fence the land purchased with a fence consisting of “a dwarf wall with iron palisading & gates either of wood or iron”:—Held: a large permanent hoarding for advertisements was a breach of the covenant.—NUSSEY v. PROVINCIAL BILL POSTING CO. & EDDISON, [1909] 1 Ch. 734; 78 L. J. Ch. 539; 100 L. T. 687; 25 T. L. R. 489; 53 Sol. Jo. 418, C. A.

197. ——— For supply of wood—No request.—To a declaration against a tenant for not using proper fences in husbandlike manner, in repairing fences, etc., on his implied promise so to do, a plea that the fences became out of repair by natural decay, & that there was not proper wood (without specifying it) which deft. had a right to cut for repairing the fences, & pltf. ought to have set out proper wood for the purpose of repairs, which pltf. neglected to do, without averring any request on pltf. so to do or a custom of the country in this respect, is bad.—WHITFIELD v. WEEDON (1772), 2 Chit. 685.

198. ——— Measure of damages.—The grantees of certain land had covenanted with the grantor, since deceased, that the land, except as to the entrance to be made by them towards an intended new road, should be & be kept inclosed on all the sides abutting on the land of the grantor with a brick wall seven feet high. The grantees not having erected a wall in pursuance of the covenant, an action was brought against them by the exors. & devisees of the grantor for damages for the breach of covenant. In the events that had happened, the value of the adjoining land of pltf. was not decreased by the non-erection of the wall to anything like the amount which it would have cost to build the wall:—Held: the true measure of damages being the pecuniary amount of the difference between the position of pltf. upon the breach of contract & what it would have been if the contract had been performed, in the circumstances of the case the amount that it would cost to build the wall was not the correct measure of the damages.—WIGSELL v. 199. Ditch by public highway.—Comrs. of sewers used for the purpose of their sewerage an ancient tidal ditch which ran along the side of a public highway:—Held: the comrs. were under no obligation to fence the sewer, so as to protect persons frequenting the highway.—CORNWELL v. METROPOLITAN COMRS. OF SEWERS (1855), 10 Exch. 771; 24 L. T. O. S. 244; 19 J. P. 313; 3 C. L. R. 417; 156 E. R. 652.

200. Goit by public footpath—Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847 (c. 34)—Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63), s. 68.—Defts., a local board, left unfenced a goit adjoining a public footpath within their district, by reason of which pltf.'s husband, while using the footpath, fell into the goit & was drowned:—Held: defts. were not liable under Towns Improvement Clauses Act, 1847, s. 83, as the goit was not a hole within the meaning of that sect. nor under Public Health Act, 1848, s. 68, since that sect. only gives a discretionary power to the local board to place & keep in repair fences, etc., & does not impose upon them an absolute duty to do so.—WILSON v. HALIFAX CORPN. (1868), L. R. 3 Exch. 114; 37 L. J. Ex. 44; 17 L. T. 660; 32 J. P. 230; 16 W. R. 707.

joining owners may agree verbally to erect any kind of fence along their common boundary without reference to or without complying with Fencing Act, 1895.—COGHLAN v. JOHNSON N. Z. L. R. 1002.—N.Z.

r. Agreement to repair—Implied term.—Pltf. & deft. who were owners of adjoining land agreed to repair the dividing fence, each paying half the cost. The fence was entirely on deft.'s land, but had long been used as a party fence:—Held: there was an implied promise on part of deft. not wilfully to impair the efficiency of the fence.—VICKERY v. JENNER (1896), 17 N. S. W. L. R. 438.—AUS.

Sect. 2.—Rights and liabilities of owners and occupiers: Sub-sects. 4 & 5.]

202. Excavation made near highway—After dedication—Statutory obligation to fence highway—Liability of person making excavation.]—If an excavation has been made so near to a highway since its dedication & adoption as to create or increase danger to the public, & an accident happens thereby, the person making the excavation is not absolved from liability by reason that a statutory obligation to fence the highway is imposed upon other parties, who have neglected to do so.—WETTOR v. DUNK (1864), 4 F. & F. 298, N. P.

203. Fence broken down & removed—Lessee of land allotted under Inclosure Act—Form of order.]—On an award under an Inclosure Act, a plot, of which deft. was the present lessee, was allotted to L. & it was ordered that L., her heirs & assigns, should maintain & repair the fences between her plot & a plot allotted to pltf. In an action to restrain deft. from permitting the fences to remain broken down & removed, the ct. ordered deft., who was in a humble position in life, to restore & replace the fences which he had broken down & removed, instead of making a negative order restraining him from permitting the fences to remain broken down & removed.—BIDWELL v. HOLDEN (1890), 63 L. T. 105.

204. Excavation on land adjoining highway—Public Health Amendment Act, 1907 (c. 53).]—The words, "If in any situation fronting, adjoining, or abutting on any street or public footpath, any . . . excavation . . . or bank is . . . dangerous to the persons lawfully using the street or footpath," in Public Health Acts Amendment Act, 1907, s. 30 cover the case of any excavation, or bank, that is sufficiently near to any street, or footpath, to cause danger to those who are lawfully using it, even though the excavation, or bank, does not itself actually front, adjoin, or abut on the street or footpath. The owner of such excavation or bank, may therefore be required by the local authority under s. 30 to erect a fence to prevent any danger to the persons using the highway.—CARSHALTON URBAN COUNCIL v. BURRAGE, [1911] 2 Ch. 133; 80 L. J. Ch. 500; 104 L. T. 306; 75 J. P. 250; 27 T. L. R. 280; 9 L. G. R. 1037.

205. — Disused quarry.]—Deft. owned & occupied land, being a worked-out quarry, immediately adjoining a public highway vested in an urban district council & repairable by the inhabitants at large. A prior owner of the land had, in 1865, made the excavation in order to quarry for limestone, & until then the surfaces of the road & the land had been on the same level. The excavation being a source of danger & obstruction to persons using the road, the excavator, to protect them & the road, built alongside the road a wall, the bottom of which rested on a ledge of limestone left ungotten for the purpose & served as a retaining wall for the subsoil of the road & as a fence wall above its surface. In Feb., 1913, part of the wall collapsed & fell into the quarry, & in consequence a considerable part of the subsoil of the road & of its surface fell in also, the road thus becoming impassable, a source of danger to persons attempting to use it, & a nuisance, liable under Quarry

a. Excavation near highway—Statutory obligation to fence highway—Crown land.]—A municipality is not compelled by Local Government Act, 1874, to fence a hole near a road, if on unalienated Crown land.—BISP v. COLLINGWOOD CORPN. (1883), 9 V. L. R. —AUS.

202 i. — — — Liability of person making excavation.]—By bye-laws of a municipality persons digging a hole, near a public highway, were to fence it in. P. owned land having a much used footpath running across it. He dug a deep hole on this land near the footpath, & only fenced it on one side. W. walking along the footpath fell in & was injured:—Held: P. liable in damages.—WRIGHT v. PATERSON, BRISTOW v. PATERSON (1864), 5 E. D. C. 390.—S. AF.

t. Lands fronting a river—Whether fencing compulsory.]—Lands bounded by a public navigable river were occupied by manufacturing premises, enclosed on the river side by a wall, leaving a narrow strip of ground between the wall & the river; the public had a right of way over this strip:—Held: under Glasgow Police Act, 1866, the owners of the land could not be ordered to erect a fence between the footpath & river.—*LANG v. c. — — — — — Fencing Act, 1881.]—A covenant by a lessee to fence does not disentitle him to claim contribution under the above Act from his lessor as owner & occupier of lands adjoining those leased, even though

d. — — — — —.]—Where an owner of land gives an adjoining owner notice to fence, & by arrangement, puts up the fence himself, he cannot charge as part of the cost of the fence sums paid to a surveyor for ascertaining the exact line of boundary, nor the cost of ascertaining a proper "give-and-take" line which was ascertained before the agreement to fence was made, nor interest on progress-payments, nor for his own supervision.—*HANDYSIDE v. 206. Liability to "fence"—Satisfied by deep ditch.]—A ditch is a fence within Inclosure Consolidation Act, 1801 (c. 109). A local Inclosure Act required that the allotments "should be inclosed & fenced on all such parts & sides as should not be directed to be fenced by any other proprietor, or as should not adjoin to any inclosed land, or be bounded by any river or other sufficient fence"; part of the locus in quo was bounded by an old deep ditch:—Held: this was a sufficient fence within the meaning of the Act.—ELLIS v. ARNISON (1822), 1 B. & C. 70; 2 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 161; 1 Dow. & Ry. M. C. 193; 1 L. J. O. S. K. B. 24; 107 E. R. 27; subsequent proceedings (1823), 3 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 27.

207. — "Dwarf wall with iron palisading"—Hoarding insufficient.]—A building estate on which residential houses were intended to be built was put up for sale in lots according to a general sale plan & subject to conditions of sale which provided that all the lots should be subject to certain restrictive covenants for the general benefit of the estate. The conveyances to the purchasers contained, amongst others, covenants to fence off the lots from the road, the fence to consist of a dwarf wall with iron palisading & gates either of wood or iron, & to maintain the same & no other kind of fence in repair. A purchaser of two lots leased the same to a co. for seven years for bill-posting purposes, & the co. erected along the boundary of the land where it adjoined a plot belonging to another purchaser a hoarding of a permanent nature 156 feet long & 15 feet high, & covered the hoarding with advertisements. The owner of this plot brought an action for a mandatory injunction for the pulling down of the hoarding:—Held: the hoarding was a "fence," & the erection of the same was a breach of the covenant as to fencing.—NUSSEY v. PROVINCIAL BILL POSTING CO. & EDDISON, [1909] 1 Ch. 734; 78 L. J. Ch.

PART II. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 5.

t. Liability to fence—Mode of construction.]—A boundary fence, under Line Fence Act, 1887, should be so placed that the vertical centre of the wall will coincide with the limit between the lands of the parties, each owner being bound to support it by appliances placed on his own land.—COOK v. TATE (1894), 26 O. R. 403.—CAN.

a. — Low wall—Insufficient.]—A pit lay about 4 feet from a road which was frequently used. There was a wall of stone & lime about 18 inches high round the mouth of the pit:—Held: the wall was insufficient.—BLACK v. CADDELL (1804), 13 Fac. Coll. 320; sub nom. CADDELL v. BLACK (1812), 5 Pat. App. 567.—SCOT.

b. — — — — —.]—The parapet wall of a bridge on a public road did not exceed 14 inches in height, its top being 15 feet above the bed of a stream below. In an action by a person who had fallen over the parapet on a dark night:—Held: the height of the parapet was insufficient.—M'INTYRE v. LOCHABER DISTRICT COMMITTEE (1901), 4 F. (Cl. of Sess.) 188.—SCOT.

c. — Or repair—Fence of different kind.]—The erection of a new fence of a different character to the old is not a repair or renewal under Boundary Fences Act, 1908, which will enable a party to recover the cost of repairs under the Act.—STOREY v. LOCKHART (1915), 11 Tas. L. R. 163.—AUS.

d. — — — — —.]—A notice to repair does not give a right to pull down an old fence & put up a new one in another place.—TANNER v. THOMSON (1888), 7 N. Z. L. R. 71.—N.Z.

e. — — — — —.]—A notice to repair does not entitle the giver of it to erect a new fence of a description differing from that in existence at the time the notice was given.—TIBBITS v.

208. Fence ordinarily sufficient—Fence knocked down by horse & cart.]—Deft., a contractor for the construction of a railway line, made an excavation within five yards of, & fenced it off from a highway. Pltf.'s horse, attached to a cart containing a load of a ton weight, came into contact with the fence, which gave way, & the horse was killed by the fall into the excavation:—Held: the fence was sufficient within the requirements of Highways Act, 1835 (c. 50), s. 70 & there was no legal duty imposed upon deft. to construct a fence of such strength as to withstand such a shock as that described.—BLAKELEY v. BAKER (1878), 39 L. T. 359.

209. — Exceptionally active sheep.]—Sheep of pltf., having strayed from uninclosed land forming part of Dartmoor Forest, over which pltf. had rights of common, including the right of pasturage for sheep & other commonable beasts, into an adjoining close which belonged to deft., were there distrained by him damage feasant, & were impounded by him in a pound within the same hundred, but more than three miles distant from the place where the distress was taken. In an action by pltf. against deft. for a wrongful distress, it was admitted by deft. for the purposes of the case that he was bound to fence his holding against moorland cattle, including sheep. Pltf. alleged that the distress was wrongful because the sheep had strayed into deft.'s close through deft.'s breach of his obligation to fence, in having insufficient fences. The sheep in question were Scotch sheep, which possessed extraordinary powers of jumping. Neither deft.'s fences, nor Dartmoor fences generally, were constructed to keep out Scotch sheep, for which kind of sheep special fences were necessary, but deft.'s fences were sufficient for keeping out the ordinary moorland sheep:—Held: the obligation upon deft. was only to maintain fences such as were usual on Dartmoor, & sufficient to keep out ordinary sheep, & not such fences as would keep out sheep which, like Scotch sheep, possessed extraordinary jumping powers.—COAKER v. WILLCOCKS, [1911] 2 K. B. 124; 80 L. J. K. B. 1026; 104 L. T. 769; 27 T. L. R. 357, C. A.

210. Repairs to sea wall—Extraordinary storm.]—A. was a frontager in a level on the E. shore of the Thames under the jurisdiction of comrs. of sewers. An ancient sea wall protected the level against incursions of the sea. There was evidence proving a prescriptive liability on the frontagers

g. — Encroachment on neighbour's land.]—Deft. so repaired a fence as to encroach on the property of pltf.:—Held: pltf. was entitled to recover.—ARMSTRONG v. ANNETT (1903), 2 O. W. R. 692.—CAN.

in the level to maintain & repair the portions of this wall respectively fronting their lands. Part of the wall in front of A.'s land was destroyed by an extraordinary storm & high tide. This part of the wall was previously in good repair and in a proper condition to resist the flow of ordinary tides & the force of ordinary storms:—Held: in the absence of evidence that the prescriptive liability of the frontagers extended to the repair of damage caused by extraordinary violence of the sea, the liability to repair the damage thus caused to the wall fell not upon A. but upon the whole of the level.—*FOBBING SEWERS COMRS. v. SUB-SECT. 6.—HOW ENFORCED.

211. Injury to fences—Action.]—One cannot have an action of trespass for the breaking of another man's fence; but if he be damnified by the breaking of it, he may have an action on the case against the party who broke it.—COOPER v. ST. JOHN (1648), Sty. 130; 82 E. R. 586.

212. Failure to repair—Not by indictment.]—To an indictment against deft., that he unlawfully suffered his fences to be down, to the great damage, etc., exception was taken that it was a non-feasance & not indictable:—Held: the indictment should be quashed.—R. v. BINGLEY (1714), Sess. Cas. K. B. 25; 93 E. R. 25

213. Repair of sea wall—Presentment of jury—Commissioners of sewers.]—A. was a frontager in a level on the E. shore of the Thames under the jurisdiction of comrs. of sewers. An ancient sea wall protected the level against incursions of the sea. There was evidence proving a prescriptive liability on the frontagers in the level to maintain & repair the portions of this wall respectively fronting their lands. Part of the wall in front of A.'s land was destroyed by an extraordinary storm & high tide. This part of the wall was previously in good repair & in a proper condition to resist the flow of ordinary tides & the force of ordinary storms. The presentment of a jury at a ct. of sewers in 1861 found that the then owner of A.'s land was bound by reason of his tenure to repair a portion of the sea wall fronting the land so as to prevent the influx of the waters. In 1881–2 the comrs. of sewers made orders upon A. as the owner of the land to repair this portion of the wall, it having been destroyed by the extraordinary storm & high tide. These orders were made "upon reading the presentment" of 1861. One of the comrs. who made the orders was personally interested as an owner of lands within the level:—Held: (1) Sewers Act, 1833 (c. 22), s. 13, which enables orders to be made upon a previous presentment does not authorise an order upon a person who has become owner of the land since the presentment, & the presentment being only of the ordinary liability did not justify an order to make good damage caused by an extraordinary storm & the orders were bad & must be quashed; (2) if the comrs. had made the orders under the powers of Land Drainage Act, 1861 (c. 133), s. 33, they must themselves have found as a fact A.'s liability; & if they had exercised such a jurisdiction they would have been acting judicially, in which case the orders would have been invalidated by the fact that one of the comrs. was disqualified by reason of interest.—FOBBING SEWERS COMRS. v. R. (1886) 11 App. Cas. 449; 56 L. J. M. C. 1; 55 L. T. 493; 51 J. P. 227; 34 W. R. 721; 2 T. L. R. 750, H. L.; affg. S. C. sub nom. R. v. ESSEX SEWERS COMRS. (1885), 14 Q. B. D. 561, C. A.

p. — Opening for joists.]—The fact that there were openings in a wall between two old buildings for the insertion of joists & timbers of the adjoining building, does not constitute such wall a party wall where all other evidence points to a different conclusion.—HOME BANK OF CANADA v. MIGHT DIRECTORIES, LTD. (1913), 25 O. W. R. 665; 5 O. W. N. 690.—CAN.

The agreements contained the same stipulations among which was the following: "The buildings to be continuous, with party walls common to both adjoining houses." Pltf. upon his land erected a house, the north wall of which was built as a party wall in pursuance of the conditions contained in the agreement. 215. One half of wall on land of each owner—Wall built at joint expense.—If two persons have a party-wall, one-half of the thickness of which stands on the land of each, they are not therefore tenants in common of the wall, or of the land on which it stands, although the wall was erected at the joint expense of the two proprietors. The property in a wall erected at a joint expense ensues the property of the land whereon it stands.—MATTS v. HAWKINS (1813), 5 Taunt. 20; 128 E. R. 593.

217. Title derived from common predecessor.—Pltf. & deft. occupied contiguous premises bounded by a wall, which premises they had, severally, purchased at the same auction from the then owner of the whole. The lots were afterwards conveyed to pltf. & deft. by separate deeds, in which the premises were described as being in the occupation respectively of H. & R., together with all buildings, ways, etc., known or reputed to be parcel thereof:—Held: deft. might give in evidence conditions of sale distributed at the time of the auction, describing the premises by measurement, there being probable evidence that these conditions were seen by pltf.'s agent at the sale; use the rear portion of the wall, as his house did not extend so far to the rear as the house of pltf.:—Held: the part of the wall not used by deft. was a party wall, having regard to the agreement under which the wall was erected.—*COVERJI LUDDA & KESSERBAI v. PART III. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 2.

215 i. One half of wall on land of each owner—Wall built at joint expense.—Pltf. & defts. agreed to erect a wall to be used as a party wall between buildings which they proposed to erect on their respective adjoining lots; under the agreement either pltf. or defts. might build the wall, & the others were to pay for half of it. Pltf. built the wall:—Held: pltf. & defts. were tenants in common of the party wall.—ALBERTA LOAN & INVESTMENT CO. v. BEVERIDGE & JOHNSTON (1913), 24

216 i. Presumption from common user of wall.—Common user of a party wall is prima facie evidence of a tenancy in common of the land covered by it.—ST. LEGER v. EATON (1904), 4 O. W. R. 205.—CAN.

217 i. Title derived from common predecessor.—M., owner of two warehouses, the dividing wall of which was necessary for the support of both, executed a deed of one by way of marriage settlement on his daughter:—Held: upon the execution of the deed by way of marriage settlement the wall common to the two warehouses became a party wall of which the owners of the warehouses were tenants in common.—LEWIS v. ALLISON (1899), 30 S. C. R. 173.—CAN.

inasmuch as the conditions were used, not to control or construe, but to apply, the language of the deeds.—MURLY v. M'DERMOTT (1838), 8 Ad. & El. 138; 3 Nev. & P. K. B. 356; 1 Will. Woll. & H. 226; 7 L. J. Q. B. 242; 112 E. R. 789; sub nom. MURPHY v. M'DERMOTT, 2 Jur. 806.

218. —.]—The owners in fee of two adjoining houses derived title to them from a common predecessor in title. In the conveyances from that predecessor to the two owners respectively, was contained a declaration that the wall which divided the yards at the back of the two houses should be & remain a party-wall:—Held: the two owners were tenants in common of the wall.—WATSON v. GRAY (1880), 14 Ch. D. 192; 49 L. J. Ch. 243; 42 L. T. 294; 44 J. P. 537; 28 W. R. 438.

219. Wall above adjoining building.—A wall may be a party-wall to such height as it belongs in common to two buildings, & cease to be a party-wall for the rest of its height. An Improvement Act, enacted that no opening should be made in any party-wall except for communication from building to another. Pltf. had a house, one wall of which was to the height of the first storey a party-wall between pltf.'s house & a building belonging to defts., but above that height had ancient windows opening to the external air. Pltf. pulled down his house, & proposed to rebuild it with windows in the same position as before. Before doing this, he gave notice to defts., under the Act that the wall, which he described as a party-wall was out of repair, & a certificate of two surveyors was given directing the party-wall to be rebuilt at the joint expense of pltf. & defts. Defts. afterwards proceeded to erect a building which would obstruct the light coming to the ancient windows of pltf.:—Held: the wall above defts.' building was not a party-wall.—WESTON v. ARNOLD (1873), 8 Ch. App. 1084; 43 L. J. Ch. 123; 22 W. R. 284, L. J.J.

220. Wall above wall held in severalty.—Pltf. was the owner in fee simple of certain premises consisting of four dwelling rooms built over an archway & bounded on the western side by a public house belonging to deft. co. While rebuilding the public house, deft. co. pulled down part of the wall which divided pltf.'s premises from their own. The wall was an 18-inch wall from the ground to the first floor, i.e. under the archway, & 13½ inches from the first floor upwards. The stipulated that the buildings should be continuous, with party walls common to both adjoining houses. Pltf. erected a house upon his plot, the north wall of which was built as a party wall in pursuance of the agreement. After pltf.'s house had been completed, deft. built his house upon the adjoining land, & he used a portion of the party wall. The rear portion of the wall extended beyond deft.'s building & was not used by him, but pltf. claimed that part of the wall as his own property:—Held: pltf. was not entitled to the full right of ownership over it.—COVERJI LUDDA & KESSERBAI v. MORARJI PUNJA (1885), 1 L. R. 9 Bom. 183.—IND.

wall had been built up again by defts.:—Held: the wall involved was the wall of defts. being the external wall on that side of their premises; the upper part of the wall, the 13½ inch wall, was a party-wall.—NEWTON v. HUGGINS & Co., LTD. (1906), 50 Sol. Jo. 617.

221. External original wall raised—Whether ownership or easement.]—Pltf. & deft. were in possession of adjoining houses, both of which were ancient messuages. Pltf.'s house was considerably higher than deft.'s house, & was built up against the western wall of deft.'s house, to the height to which such western wall extended. Up to this height there was no other wall between the two houses, but pltf. alleged that on the top of the western wall, & above the roof of deft.'s house, an external wall was erected at the time of the building of pltf.'s house, forming part thereof, & supporting the roof thereof. The western wall, on the top of which the external wall had been erected, was admitted by pltf. to be the property of deft., subject to all rights & easements over the same in favour of pltf.'s house. The external wall erected on the top of deft.'s western wall was, pltf. alleged, his property. Deft. being desirous of adding to the height of his house, removed some of the stones comprising the external wall, & inserted in the holes thereby made certain beams, for the purpose of supporting a new roof to his house at a greater height than his old roof. Pltf. claimed an injunction to restrain such acts, on the ground that deft. was a trespasser. Deft. alleged that the wall was his, but admitted that pltf. had certain rights in respect to the wall which he, deft., had not in any way interfered with:—Held: pltf. had been in enjoyment of an easement but not in possession; & nothing had occurred to displace deft.'s original title to the wall, & the action failed.—WADDINGTON v. NAYLOR (1889), 60 L. T. 480.

222. Question for jury.]—Pltf. & deft. owned adjoining houses in London; a wall divided the two houses, & on deft.'s side was the back wall of one of his buildings. Pltf. produced the lease of the premises, dated in 1767, wherein the dimensions of the premises were minutely expressed by admeasurement, & which included one-half of the wall. The girder of pltf.'s house was placed into the wall to the extent of at least one-half; there had been a sort of gable roof upon this supposed party-wall, which deft. removed, & built upon what pltf. believed to be his party-wall a workshop & other conveniences overlooking pltf.'s premises, whereupon an action was brought for so building. On a motion for new trial:—Held: the question whether the wall was a party-wall or not was one entirely for the jury; the jury had determined it, & it must be undisturbed.—THORNHILL v. DAVIES (1850), 32 L. T. O. S. 261.

SUB-SECT. 3.—RIGHTS AND REMEDIES OF OWNERS IN COMMON INTER SE.

A. Trespass.

224. General rule.]—An action of trespass cannot be maintained by one part-owner of a party-wall against the other part-owner.

When the builder of two houses grants off one it is more reasonable to presume he grants the whole wall in undivided moieties than that he should leave to either party the power of cutting the wall in half (BAILEY, J.).—WILTSHIRE v. SIDFORD (1827), 8 B. & C. 259, n.; 1 Man. & Ry. K. B. 404; 6 L. J. O. S. K. B. 151; 108 E. R. 1040.

225. Where rights in wall disputed.]—Pltf. brought an action of trespass against deft. for breaking, etc., a wall of pltf., bounded on the north by a workshop of deft. Deft. pleaded that the wall was not the wall of pltf. The wall was a party wall, standing partly on pltf.'s & partly on deft.'s land. The roof of deft.'s workshop rested on the top of the wall on deft.'s side, & the trespass was committed partly on pltf.'s half of the wall:—Held: pltf. must be understood to have brought his action for the whole wall, & even if the party-wall were treated as two walls, deft.'s part could not be considered as part of the workshop, & therefore the description in the declaration, with the abutments, comprehended the whole wall, & consequently, pltf. had not proved his property in the wall described in the declaration, & deft. was entitled to the verdict.

Deft. also pleaded, that the wall was a party-wall, partly on the land of pltf., & partly on the land of deft. A verdict having been found for the deft. on this plea:—Qu.: whether pltf. was entitled to judgment, non obstante veredicto, for so much of the party-wall as belonged to him.—MURLY v. M'DERMOTT (1838), 8 Ad. & El. 138; 3 Nev. & P. K. B. 356; 1 Will. Woll. & H. 226; 7 L. J. Q. B. 242; 112 E. R. 789; sub nom. MURPHY v. M'DERMOTT, 2 Jur. 806.

226. Where ouster from possession—Wall raised.]—Pltf. & deft. occupied adjacent plots of ground, divided by a wall, of which they were tenants in common. There was a shed in deft.'s ground contiguous to the wall, the roof of which rested on the top of the wall across its whole width. Deft. took the coping stones off the top of the wall, heightened the wall, replaced the coping stones on the top, & built a wash-house contiguous to the wall, where the shed had stood, the roof of the wash-house occupying the whole width of the top of the wall, & let a stone into the wall, with an inscription on it stating that the wall & the land on which it stood belonged to him:—Held: on these facts a jury might find an actual ouster by deft. of pltf. from the possession of the wall which would constitute a trespass upon which pltf. might maintain an action against deft.—STEDMAN v. SMITH (1857), 8 E. & B. 1; 26 L. J. Q. B. 314; 3 Jur. N. S. 1248; 120 E. R. 1.

227. Wall raised & pulled down.]—If one proprietor of a party-wall adds to the height of it & the other pulls down the addition, the first may down a wall without an intention to rebuild, being trespass, the injury done by so doing is an element for the consideration of a jury in determining maintain trespass for pulling down so much of it as stood on the half of the wall which was erected on pltf.'s soil.—MATTS v. HAWKINS (1813), 5 Taunt. 20; 128 E. R. 593.

231. —.]—A wall divided the houses of pltfs. & defts., & it was disputed whether it belonged to pltfs. with an easement for support in defts., or to defts. with an easement of support in pltfs., or was a party-wall. Previously to 1867 pltfs.' ground-floor was laid out with a passage & a shop, the passage being next to the wall, & the floor above the passage was supported by a beam inserted in the wall. In 1867 pltfs. took away the partition, so as to extend the shop to the full breadth of the house, & fixed a new beam in substitution for the former one, extending across the whole shop, so that the entire weight of the floor above rested on the end of the beam inserted in the wall. The wall was prolonged at the rear of the house, & there pltfs. had added some courses of bricks to its height to allow of a slanting roof being placed on a shed on their side. Defs.' evidence went to show that the insertion of the new beam caused a settlement in his house, & he threatened to cut off the end of the beam & demolish the brickwork on the end of the wall. In an action to restrain the defts. from interference with the wall :—Held : (1) apart from the question of the ownership of the wall, an easement for support entitled the owner of the dominant tenement to put any amount of weight on the wall which did not endanger its stability; (2) the wall was either pltfs.' or was a party-wall, & in either case they had made a proper use of it.—SHEFFIELD IMPROVED INDUSTRIAL & PROVIDENT SOCIETY v. despatch a party-wall knocked down by him:—Held: it was no answer to say that deft. had delegated that duty to his builder or architect. A man could not delegate a duty, & the class of cases in which an employer who had engaged a competent contractor was held not liable for the negligence of the contractor had no application. Deft. might employ a contractor if he chose, but that did not enable him to get rid of the responsibility for the breach of the duty which he owed to pltf.—JOLLIFFE v. WOODHOUSE (1894), 10 T. L. 237. Action by owner in common of party-wall—Wall taken down by both owners.]—In an action against deft. for the negligence of his agent in pulling down the party-wall between the houses of pltf. & deft., it is a good defence to show that pltf. appointed an agent to superintend the work jointly with the deft.'s agent, & that both agents were to blame.—HILL v. WARREN (1818), 2 Stark. 377, N. P.

238. — Underpinning.]—The houses of pltf. & defts. were separated by a party-wall. Defts. pulled down their house:—Held: defts. were liable for negligence in underpinning their half of the wall, though it did not appear that they had encroached upon, or meddled in any way with pltf.'s half.—BRADBEE v. CHRIST'S HOSPITAL (1842), 4 Man. & G. 714; 2 Dowl. N. S. 164; 5 Scott, N. R. 79; 11 L. J. C. P. 209; 134 E. R. 294.

240. — Negligence of contractor.]—Applt. & resp. were owners of adjoining houses between which was a party-wall, the property of both. Applt.'s house also adjoined B.'s house & between them was a party-wall. Applt. employed a builder to pull down his house & rebuild it on a plan which involved the tying together of the new house & the party-wall between it & resp.'s house, so that if one fell the other would be damaged. In the course of the rebuilding the builder's workmen in fixing a staircase, negligently & without the knowledge of applt., cut into the party-wall between applt.'s house & B.'s house, in consequence of which applt.'s house fell, & the fall dragged over the party-wall between it & resp.'s house & injured resp.'s house. The cutting into the party-wall was not authorised by the contract between applt. & his builder:—Held: (1) the law cast a duty upon applt. to see that reasonable care & skill were exercised in those operations which involved a use of the party-wall belonging to himself & resp., exposing it to the risk above mentioned; (2) applt. could not get rid of responsibility by delegating the performance to a third person, & was liable to resp. for the injury to his house.—*HUGHES v. (c) Expense of Building Wall.

241. Verbal agreement to pay what is right & fair.]—A. a builder proposed to B., the occupier of the adjoining house, to build a party-wall & stated the expense. B. answered, "Very well, I expect to pay what is right & fair," & the wall was built:—Held: A. was entitled to recover from B. his share of the expense without reference to Building Act, 1774 (c. 78).—STUART v. SMITH (1816), 7 Taunt. 158; 2 Marsh. 435; 129 E. R. 63. Annotations:—Mentd. Lambe v. Hemans (1819), 2 B. & Ald. 467; Collins v. Wilson (1828), 4 Bing. 551.

242. Houses erected on building estate—Evidence of custom.]—Under a declaration for the share of the expense of building a party-wall (not within the operation of Building Act, 1774 (c. 78)), with a count for use & occupation of a wall, pltf. cannot give evidence of a custom at a particular place for parties making use of an adjoining wall to contribute to the expense; even supposing the declaration to be applicable, such evidence of custom cannot be admitted to create a contract.

On the part of pltf. a conveyance to him of a plot of building land of certain specified dimensions, part of a larger plot or piece of land divided into building lots, was put in evidence. On this plot of land pltf. had erected a house. An adjoining piece of land was subsequently purchased in trust for the erection of a certain chapel called S. Chapel. Defts. were two of the trustees of this chapel & in its erection a piece of the wall forming pltf.'s house was cut out, & the timbers of the chapel inserted. A part of the wall of pltf.'s house was also cut out from the top to the bottom, to tie in a chimney stack of the chapel. The roof of the chapel was also supported by pltf.'s wall. The total width of the wall was fourteen inches, & the cuttings were from four-and-a-half to nine inches. A surveyor was asked what the custom at C. was with reference to the use of a wall in these circumstances:—Held: (1) there could be

2. Action by owner in common of party wall—Against builder—Custom of the city of Dublin.]—In an action against a builder, for having taken away the lateral support of a house, & having shored up & braced a party wall in a negligent & unskilful manner, whereby pltf.'s house was destroyed, there was an averment of a custom of the city of Dublin, & in the building trade thereof, that whenever a builder takes down a house for the purpose of erecting another house on the site thereof, it is his duty to use care & skill, & to take proper precautions as to protecting the party walls between the house taken down, & the next adjoining house, so as to prevent the party wall from being injured. The jury found that such custom existed in the city of Dublin in the building trade:—Held: the custom was unreasonable.—KEMPSTON v. BUTLER (1861), 12 I. C. L. R. 516; 6 Ir. Jur. 410.—IR.

no question of custom, but only a question of contract; (2) as the whole of the wall of pltf.'s house appeared to be included within the abutments, his remedy was by an action of trespass.—DEE v. CORNELL (1850), 15 L. T. O. S. 523.

243. — Wall used by adjoining owner.]—A statement of claim in substance alleged that pltf. purchased a building site of H., & covenanted to erect thereon houses according to a certain specification. The specification, in providing for the erection of a party-wall, declared that the purchaser first building a party-wall was to be repaid by the purchaser of the adjoining site one-half of the cost of such party-wall, the value to be determined by the vendor's architect. The statement of claim further alleged that pltf. erected a party-wall, & that deft. afterwards became possessed of an adjoining site on the terms that he should build in accordance with a similar specification, & should observe, perform, & abide by all the terms of the specification relating to the party-wall; that deft. built a house on the adjoining site, & made use of a moiety of the party-wall erected by pltf., & promised to pay pltf. one-half of the value (which had been ascertained by the vendor's architect), & one-half of the architect's fee, but had not paid:—Held: the statement of claim was good, deft. having made use of the party-wall, knowing that money was to be paid to some one for the use thereof, & having afterwards promised to pay pltf.—CHRISTIE v. MITCHISON (1877), 36 L. T. 621.

244. — — —.]—Where an estate has been laid out in plots for building upon the condition (inter alia) that the purchaser of a plot first building a party-wall is to be repaid by the purchaser of the adjoining plot one-half of the value of the party-wall, & the original purchasers of plots sell their plots, either built upon or vacant, to other purchasers, an implied contract arises between these sub-purchasers of adjoining plots that, as between them, the sub-purchaser of a vacant plot, adjoining a plot on which a house has already been built by an original purchaser, when he builds his house up to the house already built & makes use of its gable-walls, he shall repay the then owner of the house, & not the original builder, the half cost of the party gable-wall.—IRVING v. TURNBULL, [1900] 2 Q. B. 129; 69 L. J. Q. B. 593, D. C.

245. Wall erected half on land of adjoining owner.]—Deft. was a builder & the owner of three contiguous building sites. He sold the middle one to pltf. & one of the end ones to another purchaser, retaining the third for himself. The agreement for sale to pltf. contained a description of the property & a plan by which it appeared that the length of the pltf.'s frontage was 20 feet, on his plot a house was to be erected by deft. to whom he was to pay £770. About a year after the erection of this house & of a similar one on the other site which he had sold deft. built a house on his own site making use of the gable end wall of pltf.'s house. On account of this use pltf. obtained judgment for £21 7s. It was shown that pltf.'s frontage extended to the middle of the wall only, which being a 9-inch wall stood 4½ inches on his ground & 4½ inches on deft.'s ground:—Held: a good & reasonable custom had been proved that deft. should contribute to the expense of the wall which he used notwithstanding it was built half on his own land, there being nothing in the agreement to exclude the erection.—ROBINSON v. THOMPSON (1890), 89 L. T. Jo. 137, D. C.

246. — — —.]—The proprietor of two adjoining building plots erected a house upon one of them, building the whole gable half upon one plot & half upon the other plot. He afterwards conveyed the plot with the house upon it to A. The mutual gable, resting partly on the two plots, was described in the conveyance as a mutual gable. He subsequently sold the other plot, & the purchaser proceeded to erect a house upon it, making use of the mutual gable. In the letters of sale to A. the vendor said: "The unused half of the gable & boundary walls is not included in the offer." In an action by A.'s successor against the purchaser of the second plot for half the cost of the mutual gable wall, deft. relied upon the words of the letters as showing that A. had not acquired the claim for recompense for the unused half of the gable:—Held: A.'s successor was entitled to claim from the purchaser of the second plot one-half of the value of the mutual gable, & there was no inconsistency between the letters of sale & the words of the conveyance.—BAIRD v. BELL, [1898] A. C. 420, H. L.

243 i. Houses erected on building estate—Wall used by adjoining owner.]—Pltf., a tenant of P., the owner also of adjoining land, was instructed by P. to erect a party wall half on either land which he did; subsequently the adjoining land was leased by P. to deft. who built a house on it, making use of the party wall:—Held: pltf. could recover from deft. half the cost of erecting the wall.—DEARIN v. COYELL (1861), 4 Nfld. L. R. 556.—NFLD.

g. — Action of assumpsit.]—Pltf. built on his land in St. John's in the year 1892; deft., owner of the adjoining piece of land, built on his land in the year 1895. In an action to recover a moiety of the costs of building the party walls upon an implied promise to pay:—Held: in the circumstances an action of assumpsit would not lie.—HEARN v. CLAPP (1900), 8 Nfld. L. R. 358.—NFLD.

h. — When right of action for contribution arises.]—Pltf. sued to recover from deft. half the cost of a party wall. Pltf. & deft. were lessees of adjoining pieces of land under agreements made with the same lessor. By these agreements pltf. & deft. respectively agreed to build houses upon the pieces of land; both agreements contained the following clauses: (1) "The buildings to be continuous with party walls common to both adjoining houses." (2) "All disputes regarding the cost of party walls to be decided by the Govt. surveyor, whose decision shall be binding on both parties." Pltf. caused the northern wall of his building to be built as a party wall, & it was used by deft. as the southern wall of the building erected by him. He did not use the rear portion of the wall. Pltf. demanded payment of half the cost of that portion which deft. refused to pay. Pltf. subsequently sued therefor:—Held: until the award of the Govt. surveyor was made, no cause of action for the moiety of the cost arose.—COOVERJI LUDHA v. BHIMJI GIRDIHAR (1882), 1 L. C. conveyed his lot to pltfs. with the usual statutory covenants, & pltfs. entered into possession. On deft. making use of the rear part of the party wall he paid what was due to C. In an action by pltfs. against deft. to recover the sum due in respect of the wall:—Held: the right to the sum stipulated to be paid for the wall under the covenant with C. had not passed under the conveyance by C. to pltfs.—*KENNY v. The house No. 36 was in the occupation of a tenant under a lease:—Held: the trespass being of a permanent nature, the owners of the reversion in fee in No. 36 could, although the tenant made no complaint, maintain an action in respect of the trespass.—MAYFAIR PROPERTY Co. v. JOHNSTON, [1894] 1 Ch. 508; 63 L. J. Ch. 399; 70 L. T. 485; 38 Sol. Jo. 253; 8 R. 781.

249. Prevention of nuisance.]—A declaration stated, that a certain messuage was in the occupation of S. as tenant to pltf., the reversion thereof belonging to pltf.; & that deft. was owner & proprietor of another messuage, & by reason thereof as such owner & proprietor of such messuage ought to have repaired & kept repaired in a substantial manner the said messuage secondly mentioned. Breach, non-repair by deft. Plea, that the said messuages were contiguous & abutting on each other, & were divided by a party-wall, whereof pltf. was seised of an undivided moiety; that the wall was in a ruinous state, & being parcel of the messuage in the declaration secondly mentioned, had fallen on the first-mentioned messuage. Replication, traversing that the wall was a party-wall, & that pltf. was seised thereof:—Held: the declaration was bad, there being no obligation towards a neighbour on the owner of a house, merely as owner, to repair or keep it in repair in a substantial manner, the whole of his obligation being to prevent it from becoming a nuisance.—CHAUNTLER v. ROBINSON (1849), 4 Exch. 163; 19 L. J. Ex. 170; 14 L. T. O. S. 107; 154 E. R. 1166.

F. Support and Other Easements.

250. Adjoining premises extending over party wall.]—Defts. were owners of two houses in a street, numbered 38 & 40, & of a gateway under No. 40 & adjoining No. 38. In 1857 they demised No. 38 for a term of twenty-one years, the lease containing a covenant by the lessee to repair all walls & party-walls belonging to the premises. In 1865 they granted a lease to pltf. of No. 40 for a term of eleven years subject to a similar covenant to repair walls & party-walls. The wall on the side of the gateway separating it from No. 38 was a party-wall between the gateway & the house No. 38 to the height of the first floor. Pltf.'s house, No. 40, was built so as to extend in part over the top of the gateway & to rest upon this party-wall between the gateway & No. 38, & to be supported by it. Pltf.'s covenant to repair did not extend to this wall, & there was no covenant by defts. to keep it in repair. In 1874, it was discovered that the walls of that part of No. 40 which was above the gateway were giving way. The damage was owing to the failure of support from the party walls, which had bulged in consequence of the pressure upon it from pltf.'s premises:—Held: there was no implied covenant on the part of defts. to support pltf.'s premises, although it might be an answer to an action upon pltf.'s covenant to repair, that the repair had been rendered impossible by the neglect of some precedent obligation on the part of defts.—COLEBECK v. GIRDLEERS Co. (1876), 1 Q. B. D. 234; 45 L. J. Q. B. 225; 34 L. T. 350; 40 J. P. 596; 24 W. R. 577.

251. Grant of moiety of wall—Defective flue.]

—Prior to 1886 pltf.'s predecessor in title built C. House on his own land with a wall to the west, in which were flues & fireplaces used only for C. House, & on the west side flues & fireplaces not so used, but which might be used for any adjoining house built on an adjoining & then vacant piece of land belonging to deft. In 1886 deft., being about to build a house on his land, agreed in writing with pltf.'s predecessor for the sale to deft. of the western half of the western wall of C. House, that wall being treated as divided from top to bottom, throughout its whole length, by a vertical plane in the centre thereof, which plane, if it had been a physical division, would have divided half of each of the flues, including those used for C. House, from the other half. Deft. then built on his land a house called G., adjoining C. House, & so connected with it that the fireplaces on the west side & the flues connected with them were used for the purposes of G., as had been intended. Pltf. purchased C. House in 1900, & subsequently the flue connected with deft.'s dining-room became defective, in the sense that by reason of cracks which developed in the surrounding masonry smoke found its way therefrom through pltf.'s half of the party-wall into his rooms & occasioned damage. The cracks were caused by a subsidence in deft.'s house, but the cause of the subsidence was undetermined, & there was no evidence of negligence by deft. in building his house or otherwise, or want of reasonable precaution:—Held: deft. was not liable for the damage.

Where a man grants a divided moiety of an outside wall of his house with intent to make it a party-wall between that house & a house to be built on his neighbour's adjoining land, the law implies the grant & reservation, in favour of the grantor & grantee respectively, of such easements as may be necessary to carry out the common intention as to the user of the wall, the nature of the easements varying with the particular circumstances of each case. Subject to such easements, the owner of each half may deal with it in such manner as he pleases, & if he uses it only for the contemplated purposes & without negligence or want of reasonable care & precaution he is not liable for any nuisance or inconvenience occasioned by such user.—JONES v. PRITCHARD, parties, for the purpose of separating their premises, & that each party might at any time raise the wall at his own expense. In an action brought by pltf. against deft., for engrossing to himself the use of this wall by building upon it, pltf. stated in his declaration that he was possessed of one undivided moiety of the wall, deft. of the other. The jury were directed that if they believed that the ground upon which this wall was built was the exclusive property of deft., they should find a verdict for deft.:—Held: this direction was proper.—HUTCHINSON v. MAINS (1832), Alc. & N. 155.—IR.

Pulling down adjoining wall—Duty to give notice.]—The mere circumstance of juxtaposition does not render it necessary for a person who pulls down his wall to give notice of his intention to the owner of an adjoining wall ; nor, if he be ignorant of the existence of the adjoining wall, as where it is underground, is he bound to use extraordinary caution in pulling down his own.—CHADWICK v. 259. Damage to vault.]—Damage having been done by the wrongful acts of a contractor or his workmen, employed under a contract & specification, to a neighbour's vault :—Held : in the circumstances, both the employer & contractor were liable for it, & pltf. was entitled to judgment, with costs against both defts.—LEMAITRE v. m. Substantial user of adjoining wall—Damages.]—Deft. built a house to the extreme extent of his boundary right up to pltf.'s house, of whose gable deft. availed himself :—Held : deft. had made substantial use of pltf.'s wall, & pltf. was entitled to damages.—EAGAN v. n. Erection on neighbour's land.]—Deft. built a wall between his land & that of pltf., of which a portion was on pltf.'s property. At the time the wall was erected pltf. said to deft.'s builder : " You're building on my land." He said further that he had no objection, but, " I caution you that in the case of my selling, the purchaser may put you to trouble " :—

Held : this was a qualified license justifying the erection of the wall, but going no further.—PETERS v. FRECKER (1872), 9 N. S. R. 67.—CAN.

therein. The predecessor in title of pltf.'s property granted by deed to deft. the privilege of piercing the wall, & erecting a wall above it to form the wall of deft.'s building ; this deed was void against pltf. for non-registration :—Held : the continuance of illegal burdens on pltf.'s property since the fee had been acquired by him were fresh & distinct trespasses against him for which he could recover damages.—ROSS v. the other was all but finished, the roof being in the course of being put on, sold the unfinished house to pltf. At that time a door led through the party wall, & a clause in the conveyance provided that this door should be blocked up. Deft. bought the other house, & then, owing to unpleasantness as to some windows, bored two holes about two inches square into pltf.'s dining-room. In an action for trespass brought by pltf.:—Held: such a right to bore holes could not exist, & the clause in the conveyance did not, on the principle expressio unius exclusio alterius, give deft. a right to open any other hole than the door in the wall.—*WELBANK v. SUB-SECT. 1.—DEFINITION OF PARTY-WALL.

261. Buildings against both sides of wall.]—Pltf. was the owner of a boundary wall built on his own land, against which he had built some closets, & deft., his adjoining neighbour, had recently built a substantial structure:—Held: so far as these buildings extended against both sides of the wall, it was a "party-wall" within 1855 Act, & deft. was entitled, on giving the proper notices under the Act, to take down such part as might be necessary for the purpose of necessary rebuilding.—KNIGHT v. PURSELL (1879), 11 Ch. D. 412; 48 L. J. Ch. 395; 40 L. T. 391; 43 J. P. 622; 27 W. R. 817.

262. Wall rebuilt to greater height than adjoining house.]—In 1884 pltf. served on deft. a notice under 1855 Act that he intended to pull down & rebuild the party-wall there existing between the houses of pltf. & deft. Pltf. then rebuilt the wall partly on his own & partly on deft.'s land to a greater height than deft.'s house. In 1885 deft. served on pltf. a party-wall notice & in pursuance of that notice pulled down his own house & erected a new house, carrying it to a greater height, & for that purpose he cut into & used the external wall which had been previously raised by pltf. The wall was built for half its thickness upon deft.'s land who contended that it was a party-wall. Pltf. contended it was an external wall & that deft. was not entitled to use it without paying for the portion of the wall so cut into & used by him:—Held: there were no grounds for the liability for which pltf. contended.—WILLIAMS v. BULL (1890), Times, Feb. 15th.

263. Projecting wall.]—Pltf. was the owner of the middle house of three terrace houses built symmetrically with reference to the middle house. Defts. held a building lease of one of the wing houses, which they had pulled down for the purpose of rebuilding. Pltf.'s front wall projected beyond the front of the wing houses. The edge of the projection towards defts.' house was in a line with the face of the party-wall inside defts.' house. On a motion on the part of pltf., among other things, to restrain defts. interfering with the face of the projecting part of the front wall, which defts. contended was part of the party-wall:—Held: no part of the projecting front wall was a party-wall within 1855 Act.—JOHNSTON v. MAYFAIR PROPERTY CO., [1893] W. N. 73; subsequent proceedings, sub nom. MAYFAIR PROPERTY CO. v. JOHNSTON, [1894] 1 Ch. 508.

264. Not necessarily for whole height—1894 Act, s. 75.]—A building, to which the above sect. would apply, was proposed to be erected, some portions of it being of a much greater height than others, & the walls which divided the higher from the lower portions were to be carried up above the roof of the lower so as to form the outside walls of the higher:—Held: the sect. only made a wall a party-wall in respect of its dividing one portion of the building from another; so that the walls in question would cease to be party-walls when carried up above the roof of the lower portions of the proposed building.—DRURY v. ARMY & NAVY AUXILIARY CO-OPERATIVE SUPPLY, [1896] 2 Q. B. 271; 65 L. J. M. C. 169; 74 L. T. 621; 60 J. P. 421; 44 W. R. 560; 12 T. L. R. 404; 40 Sol. Jo. 545, D. C.

265. — 1894 Act, ss. 5 (16), 58.]—Held: a wall may be a party-wall for such part of its height as is so used, & cease to be a party wall for the rest of its height.—LONDON, GLOUCESTERSHIRE & NORTH HANTS DAIRY CO. v. MORLEY & LANCELEY, [1911] 2 K. B. 257; 80 L. J. K. B. 908; 104 L. T. 773; 75 J. P. 437; 9 L. G. R. 738, D. C.; subsequent proceedings, [1911] 2 K. B. 1143, C. A.

266. Whether user makes wall a party-wall—Wall built entirely on demised land.]—Pltfs. were lessees from defts. of a plot of land which at the date of the lease was partially covered with buildings & was occupied by defts. together with the adjoining property as business premises, & the lease contained a covenant by pltfs. to build on the demised land a warehouse according to approved plans which showed that the back wall of the warehouse was to contain certain windows on the first floor overlooking defts.' premises. Defts., in pursuance of a collateral agreement to clear the demised land of buildings, demolished one end of a cart shed which stood partly on the demised land & partly on the land reserved by defts., but they left remaining certain stanchions & roof beams, which slightly projected over pltfs.' boundary & were eventually built into the back wall of the warehouse under a verbal agreement between pltfs.' architect & defts. The architect was employed to superintend the building of the warehouse in accordance with the approved plans, & the agreement was made without the express authority or knowledge of pltfs. The wall was built entirely on the demised land. Subsequently pltfs. were called upon by the local authority to block up the windows in the back wall on the ground that the building in of the stanchions & roof beams had converted it into a party-wall within 1894 Act. In an action for an injunction to restrain the defts. from using this wall as a party-wall:—Held: (1) the agreement was beyond the scope of the architect's piercing the window was an unauthorised user of the party wall, & pltf. was entitled to an injunction to restrain further continuance of such window.—SPROULE v. STRATFORD (1882), 1 O. R. 335.—CAN.

267. —Originally built for other purposes.]—Held: a wall which has become a party structure within 1894 Act, although originally built for other purposes & still sufficient for those purposes, may from dampness or other causes be as a party structure defective within s. 88.—MINTURN v. BARRY, [1911] 2 K. B. 265; 80 L. J. K. B. 802; 104 L. T. 635; 75 J. P. 330; 27 T. L. R. 352; 55 Sol. Jo. 385; 9 L. G. R. 611, D. C.; subsequent proceedings, [1912] 3 K. B. 510, C. SUB-SECT. 2.—HOW THICKNESS FOR NEW WALL DETERMINED.

268. According to height & width—"Topmost story."—Held: a "topmost story" within 1855 Act, Sched. I., rr. 5, 6 need not necessarily be contained within four vertical walls; floors or rooms inclosed on three sides by vertical walls & in front by the sloping roof of the house were stories within the schedule & rules.—FOOT v. A. Who is an Adjoining Owner.

269. Tenant in possession—Under agreement for lease.]—A tenant in possession, having an equitable interest only under an agreement for a lease for a term, is, in equity, an adjoining owner under 1855 Act, & three months' notice must be given to him before any alterations affecting his premises can be commenced by his neighbour, under that Act.—COWEN v. PHILLIPS (1863), 33 Beav. 18; 8 L. T. 622; 9 Jur. N. S. 657; 11 W. R. 706; 55 E. R. 272.

271. —.]—"Owner" in 1894 Act, ss. 5 (20), (32), 90 as therein defined, includes a person who has entered upon land & erected buildings under an agreement for a lease, although no lease has been executed & although the agreement is expressed not to operate as a demise but to give only a right to enter upon the premises for the purpose of performing the agreement. A person in that position is entitled as an adjoining owner to receive from an adjacent building owner the notice & particulars of proposed works required by s. 90, & it is not sufficient to give notice to the intending lessor.—LIST v. THARP, [1897] 1 Ch. 260; 66 L. J. Ch. 175; 76 L. T. 45; 61 J. P. 248; 45 W. R. 243; 13 T. L. R. 149; 41 Sol. Jo. 188.

272. Leaseholder—Portions of premises sublet.]—A person who has a long lease of a house at a small ground rent, & sublets it in portions to different tenants at a rack-rent, either on lease or as tenants from year to year, is the owner of the house within the sects. of 1855 Act, which apply to the repair of dangerous party structures.—HUNT v. HARRIS (1865), 19 C. B. N. S. 13; 6 New Rep. 63; 34 L. J. C. P. 249; 12 L. T. 421; 11 Jur. N. S. 485; 13 W. R. 742; 144 E. R. 689.

273. —.]—The owners of a house in London made an addition to it which involved the raising of the party-wall between it & the adjoining house. They afterwards let the house to applt. for twenty-one years. Some time after, resp., the owner of the adjoining house, pulled it down & rebuilt it, thereby using the party-wall to a greater extent than before the alteration. Resp. having given notice to applt. of his intention to do the work under 1894 Act, s. 90, applt. not having consented thereto, a difference thereupon arose between resp., as building owner, & applt., as adjoining owner, within s. 90. Arbitrators having been appointed to settle that difference under s. 91, they by their award (inter alia) directed payment by resp. to applt. of a sum of money in respect of the extended use by resp. of the party-wall:—Held: applt. was not, as tenant of the first-mentioned house, entitled to any such payment.—Re STONE & HASTIE, [1903] 2 K. 274. — Whole of premises sublet.]—Pltf. owned one of two adjoining houses, & deft. was lessee of the other for 35 years, but had sublet for 14 years to sub-tenants, who were in occupation. A party-wall having been pulled down & rebuilt by pltf., under a dangerous structure notice served on him by the London County Council, he brought an action against deft. to recover the moiety of the cost of rebuilding the party-wall:—Held: deft. was not rightly sued as owner under 1855 Act.—WIGG v. LEFEVRE (1892), 8 T. L. R. 493.

275. Tenant at will—Under agreement for lease.]—A person who has entered into an agreement for a lease under which he is to be a tenant at will until the granting of the lease, though with certain rights superadded, is not an owner within 1894 Act, s. 5 (29).—ORF v. PAYTON (1904), 69 J. P. 103; 21 T. L. R. 90; 3 L. G. R. 126. *Annotation:—Reid. Spiers v. Troup (1915), 84 L. J. K. B. 1986.

276. Persons having an interest—Other than tenants.]—"Adjoining owner" in 1894 Act, s. 90, as defined by s. 5 (20), (32), means every person holding an interest in the adjoining premises other than tenants from year to year or at will. A building owner must serve his statutory notice under s. 90 upon every such person; except that, where a class of persons, such as joint tenants or tenants in common, are entitled to a particular interest in the adjoining premises, notice on one of the class is sufficient.—CROSBY v. ALHAMBRA Co., LTD., [1907] 1 Ch. 295; 76 L. J. Ch. 176.

B. Liability for Expenses.

277. To building owner—Whether rebuilt half on each side of boundary—Question for jury.]—

Sect. 2.—Within Metropolitan or London Building
l. 3, B.; Sub-sect. 4, A. & B.]

To a sufficient account of the expenses on rebuilding a party-wall, delivered in pursuance of 1774 Act, s. 41, & a sufficient demand of payment referring to that account, the defence relied on was that the party-wall was not built half on each side of the boundary, as required by s. 14 of the Act:—Held: the question for the jury was, whether it were fairly built so, without regarding any minute inaccuracy of measurement, or by unfairly & intentionally encroaching on deft.'s premises.—READING v. BARNARD (1827), Mood. & M. 71, N. P.

278. — Executor or administrator of party liable.]—Under 1774 Act, s. 41, where a party-wall has been rebuilt, the person who is owner of & entitled to the improved rent of the adjoining premises, is liable to contribution out of such rent, though he be no otherwise owner than as an exor. or administrator; & this, although there be a judgment outstanding, of a date prior to the pulling down of the wall, & no sufficient assets to meet it; for the portion of the rent claimable in respect of such contribution is not assets.—THACKER v. WILSON (1835), 3 Ad. & El. 142; 4 Nev. & M. K. B. 658; 1 Har. & W. 131; 4 L. J. K. B. 149; 111 E. R. 367.

279. — First paid by tenant.]—A tenant who has been compelled by the building owner to pay the proportion of the expenses of a party-wall or structure which was payable under 1855 Act, by his landlord, the adjoining owner, may maintain an action against the latter to recover the sum so paid, & is not bound, though entitled, to deduct it from rent due or accruing due.—EARLE v. MAUGHAM (1863), 14 C. B. N. S. 626; 2 New Rep. 327; 8 L. T. 637; 10 Jur. N. S. 208; 11 W. R. 911; 143 E. R. 590.

280. — Expenses incurred on requisition of adjoining owner.]—Under 1855 Act the whole measure of liability was that where any building owner had incurred any expenses on the requisition of the adjoining owner, the adjoining owner making the requisition should be liable for all such expenses.—WILLIAMS v. BULL (1890), Times, Feb. 15th.

281. — Where wall subsequently made use of.]—Held: where the building owner has after rebuilding the party-wall sold his house, the purchaser or sub-purchaser who is in possession of the house at the time when the adjoining owner makes use of the party-wall is the person who is entitled to receive the contribution.—MASON v. FULHAM CORPN., [1910] 1 K. B. 631; 79 L. J. K. B. 385; 102 L. T. 188; 74 J. P. 170; 8 L. G. R. 415, D. C.

282. Other adjoining owners also liable—Work done after magistrate's order—Contribution.]—A structure within the metropolis having been surveyed by the Board of Works under 1855 Act ss. 69, 73, an order was made by a magistrate for the owner to take down or otherwise secure the party-walls. Upon his default the board themselves executed the works & took out a summons against the owner for the expenses incurred:—Held: (1) upon the hearing of such summons the owner could not object to his being made liable for expenses actually incurred, by merely showing that they included items which were in excess of the market price of labour and materials at the date of the execution of the works; (2) he could not require that the other owners of the party-walls should be summoned in order that the expenses might be distributed among them.—DEBENHAM v. METROPOLITAN BOARD OF WORKS (1880), 6 Q. B. D. 112; 50 L. J. M. C. 29; 43 L. T. 596; 45 J. P. 190; 29 W. R. 353, D. C.

283. — — — — —.]—In the course of rebuilding a house of which plffs. were the building owners within 1894 Act, they were served with a magistrate's order to pull down the party-wall as being a dangerous structure, which they did, & presumably under the powers of s. 88 (2), (6), or (7) contained in Part VIII. of the Act, rebuilt it, but higher & thicker than the old one, & without complying with the provisions of s. 91 contained in Part VIII. as to the settlement of any difference which might arise in the rebuilding thereof between plffs. & deft., the adjoining owner. In an action in which plffs. claimed contribution for a share of the expenses incurred in pulling down & rebuilding the party-wall:—Held: (1) as the building owner & adjoining owner were each liable under Part IX. of the Act for the expenses of pulling down the party-wall, plffs.' claim for contribution for such expenses succeeded; (2) inasmuch as plffs. had not complied with the above provisions of Part VIII., their claim for contribution for expenses in rebuilding the party-wall failed.—SPIERS & SON, LTD. v. TROUP (1915), 84 L. J. K. B. 1986; 112 L. T. 1135; 79 J. P. 341; 13 L. G. R. 633.

SUB-SECT. 4.—RIGHTS, DUTIES, AND LIABILITIES OF BUILDING OWNERS.

A. Who is a Building Owner.

284. Adjoining owner—Under previous award.]—Plffs. & defts. were the freeholders of adjoining houses in London. In 1902 the tenant of plffs.' house, being about to rebuild it in pursuance of a building agreement in a manner which involved the rebuilding of the party-wall between the houses, gave notice to defts. of his intention to do the work under 1894 Act, s. 90; & defts. as adjoining owners, served upon him a notice under s. 89 setting out the requisitions with which they required him to comply. A difference having arisen between the parties in respect of the execution of the works within the Act, it was referred under s. 91 to the arbn. of certain surveyors, who by their award, after deciding as to the dimensions & mode of erection of the party-wall, further awarded (inter alia) that the adjoining owners, defts., should have the right at any time to raise the wall as they might desire. The building operations were then carried out by plffs.' tenant. In 1904, defts. proceeded to raise the height of the party-wall & to build upon it without giving a building owner's notice to plffs. (who had in the meantime acquired the interest of their tenant), contending that they were entitled to do so under the terms of the award:—Held: defts., when they became desirous of building upon the party-wall, became building owners within the Act, & were under an obligation to serve a building owner's notice under s. 90 upon plffs. before commencing the work.—*LEADBETTER v. 285. Tenant at will—Under agreement for lease.]—A person who has entered into an agreement for a lease under which he is to be a tenant at will until the granting of the lease, though with certain rights superadded, is not an "owner" within 1894 Act, s. 5 (29), & has not the rights of a building owner under s. 87.—*ORF v. 286. Where no interference with party-wall—Adjoining property pulled down.]—By Charing Cross, Euston, & Hampstead Ry. Act, 1893 (c. cxxiv.), which incorporated Lands Clauses Acts, Cos. Clauses Acts, & Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 20), the co. was authorised, by s. 5, to make & maintain, in certain lines & according to certain levels, the railway & other works described in the Act, with all necessary & proper stations, works, & conveniences therewith. By s. 31 the co. were empowered to take by agreement for the extraordinary purposes mentioned in Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (which included station purposes), any quantity of land not exceeding five acres; & it was provided that "any buildings erected on any land acquired under this sect. (except such buildings or parts of buildings as may be used for the purposes of a station) shall be subject to the Acts relating to buildings in the metropolis." Under s. 31 of the Act the co. acquired by agreement for the purposes of one of their stations a building which was situate outside their limits of deviation & not within their compulsory powers, & proceeded to pull it down without serving on the adjoining owner the party-structure notice required by 1894 Act:—Held: upon the facts, the co. were not building owners within 1894 Act, s. 5 (31), inasmuch as they had done nothing which in substance amounted to an interference with the party-structure.—LEWIS & SOLOME v. CHARING CROSS, EUSTON & HAMPSTEAD RY., [1906] 1 Ch. 508; 75 L. J. Ch. 282; 94 L. T. 732; 70 J. P. 221; 54 W. R. 435; 22 T. L. R. 282; 50 Sol. Jo. 258; 4 L. G. R. 432.

288. — Notice given previous to transfer.]—Pltfs. & defts. were the owners of two adjoining houses in London. The houses were very old & had been built together so as to be mutually dependent upon one another for support. They were separated by a party-wall. Defts., having resolved to rebuild their house, served upon pltfs. a party-wall notice under 1894 Act, & the parties, in accordance with the provisions of s. 91, appointed their respective surveyors. The house was pulled down & rebuilt 13 feet further back from the street, & defts. conveyed the vacant 13 feet strip to the County Council, who dedicated it to the public. The effect of setting the house back was that the party-wall was left exposed to a depth of 13 feet & rendered unsafe by the withdrawal of the support of the defts.' house. Subsequently to the dedication the surveyors made an award ordering defts. to erect on the edge of the strip so dedicated a pier for the support of the exposed portion of the party-wall. In an action brought to enforce the award, & also to recover damages at common law for the withdrawal of the support afforded by the building pulled down:—Held: defts., having once served a party-wall notice under the Act, could not by transferring the site to the County Council get rid of their obligations as building owners, but were bound, notwithstanding the transfer, to carry out the award which was subsequently made.—SELBY v. WHITBREAD & CO., [1917] 1 K. B. 736; 86 L. J. K. B. 974; 116 L. T. 690; 81 J. P. 165; 33 T. L. R. 214; 15 L. G. R. 279.

289. Prospective leaseholder—Agreement for lease.]—Pltfs., in anticipation of being owners on the date of the expiry of the notice, served a party-wall notice on deft., the lessee of the adjoining premises, to the effect that after two months from the service thereof they intended "to pull down & rebuild a party-wall if on survey it be found so far defective or out of repair as to make such operation necessary or desirable & to perform all other necessary works incidental thereto." The party-wall was subsequently condemned by the district surveyor, who served the requisite notices on the parties concerned. Pltfs. thereupon pulled down the party-wall & served an account of the expense both of pulling down & rebuilding on the yearly tenant of deft. within one month of the completion of rebuilding, in accordance with 1894 Act, s. 96, but did not render such account to deft. until after the expiry of the month aforesaid:—Held: no owner is bound to accept or act on a notice from a person not an owner when the notice was given in anticipation that he may become an owner before the notice expires.—SPIERS & SON, LTD. v. TROUP (1915), 84 L. J. K. B. 1986; 112 L. T. 1135; 79 J. P. 341; 13 L. G. R. 633.

B. Right to Repair, Raise, Take Down, and Rebuild Wall.

290. To repair wall—Without notice—Where also adjoining owner.]—Where an owner of two houses within 1855 Act (c. 122), occupies one & lets the other to a tenant from year to year, he is justified in entering the house let to the tenant against the will of the latter, for the purpose of doing necessary repairs to the party-wall between the houses. It is not a condition precedent to the exercise of this right that notice should be given under s. 38, to the district surveyor.—WHEELER v. GRAY (1859), 6 C. B. N. S. 606; 28 L. J. C. P. 200; 23 J. P. 453; 5 Jur. N. S. 916; 7 W. R. 325; 141 E. R. 593, Ex. Ch.

291. — Where defective through dampness, etc.]—Held: a wall which has become a party-structure within 1894 Act, although originally built for other purposes & still sufficient for those purposes, may from dampness or other causes be as a party-structure defective within s. 88.—MINTURN v. BARRY, [1911] 2 K. B. 265; 80 L. J. K. B. 802; 104 L. T. 635; 75 J. P. 330; 27 T. L. R. 352; 55 Sol. Jo. 385; 9 L. G. R. 611, D. C.; subsequent proceedings, [1912] 3 K. B. 510, C. 293. Wall pulled down & rebuilt—To be rebuilt with reasonable despatch.]—Pltf. was occupier of a house, as yearly tenant. Deft., the owner of the adjoining house, served a notice upon pltf. under 1855 Act, of his intention to pull down the party-wall between the two houses, & began to pull down the party-wall. Pltf. complained of the delay by deft. in rebuilding the party-wall. Deft. pleaded that he had employed a competent builder as contractor to rebuild the party-wall, & as the injury to pltf. had been caused by the delay of the contractor it was the contractor & not deft. who was liable to pltf.:—Held: the building owner had a right to pull down a party-wall for the purpose of rebuilding his own house, but it was a right coupled with a duty imposed on him both by common law & statute to rebuild the party-wall with all reasonable despatch.—JOLLIFFE v. WOODHOUSE (1894), 10 T. L. R. 553; sub nom. JOLIFFE v. WOODHOUSE, 38 Sol. Jo. 578, C. A.

C. Duty to give Notice.

294. Form of notice—Must be clear & definite.]—A party-wall notice, given by a building owner to an adjoining owner under 1894 Act, s. 90, ought to be so clear & intelligible as to enable the adjoining owner to see what counter-notice he should give under the Act.—HOBBS, HART & Co. v. GROVER, [1899] 1 Ch. 11; 68 L. J. Ch. 84; 79 L. T. 454; 15 T. L. R. 40; 43 Sol. Jo. 42, C. A.

295. Necessity for notice—To adjoining owner—Adjoining owner also building owner.]—Where an owner of two houses within 1855 Act, occupies one & lets the other to a tenant from year to year, he is justified in entering the house let to the tenant against the will of the latter, for the purpose of doing necessary repairs to the party-wall between the houses. It is not a condition precedent to the exercise of this right that notice should be given under s. 38, to the district surveyor. Nor is it necessary that the landlord should give any notice, under s. 85, where he fills the two characters of building owner & adjoining owner.—WHEELER v. GRAY (1859), 6 C. B. N. S. 606; 28 L. J. C. P. 200; 23 J. P. 453; 5 Jur. N. S. 916; 7 W. R. 325; 141 E. R. 593, Ex. Ch.

296. ——— Tenant under agreement for lease.]—A tenant in possession, having an equitable interest only under an agreement for a lease for a term, is, in equity, an "adjoining owner" under 1855 Act, & three months' notice must be given to him before any alterations affecting his premises can be commenced by his neighbour, under that Act.—COWEN v. PHILLIPS (1863), 33 Beav. 18; 8 L. T. 622; 9 Jur. N. S. 657; 11 W. R. 706; 55 E. R. 272.

Annotations:—Consd. Hunt v. Harris (1865), 19 C. B. N. S. 13. Follid. Fillingham v. Wood, [1891] 1 Ch. 51.

297. ———.]—A tenant in possession of part of a house under an agreement for a greater interest than as tenant from year to year, is an "adjoining owner," under 1855 Act, & entitled to be served with three months' notice under s. 85 (1), before any alterations affecting his premises can be commenced by the "building owner"; in such a case service of a three months' notice on the person in receipt of the whole of the rents of the tenement is not sufficient.—FILLINGHAM v. WOOD, [1891] 1 Ch. 51; 60 L. J. Ch. 232; 64 L. T. 46; 39 W. R. 282; 7 T. L. R. 66.

298. ——— Other than tenants.]—The expression "adjoining owner" in 1894 Act, s. 90, as defined by s. 5 (29) (32) of the Act, means every person holding an interest in the adjoining premises other than tenants from year to year or at will. A building owner must serve his statutory notice under s. 90 upon every such person; except that, where a class of persons, such as joint tenants or tenants in common, are entitled to a particular interest in the adjoining premises, notice on one of the class will be sufficient.—CROSBY v. ALHAMBRA Co., LTD., [1907] 1 Ch. 295; 76 L. J. Ch. 176.

299. ——— Party-wall not interfered with—Adjoining building removed.]—1855 Act, ss. 83, 85, do not apply to the case of the mere removal of a building from an adjoining building without disturbing the party-structure, & no previous notice under the Act need in such case be given. Semble: if the building sought to be removed be so constructed that its supports form part of the party-structure which separates the two buildings, such notice previous to removal would be necessary, although it were not the intention of the person removing the building to make use of the party-structure in the erection of new buildings.—MAJOR v. PARK LANE Co. (1866), L. R. 2 Eq. 453; 14 L. T. 543; 30 J. P. 743.

300. ———.]—By Charing Cross, Euston, & Hampstead Ry. Act, 1893 (c. ccxiv.), which incorporated Lands Clauses Act, Cos. Clauses Acts, & Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 20), the co. was authorised, by s. 5, to make & maintain, in certain lines & according to certain levels, the railway & other works described in the Act, with all necessary & proper stations, works, & conveniences therewith. By s. 31 the co. were empowered to take by agreement for the extraordinary purposes mentioned in Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, which included station purposes, any quantity of land not exceeding five acres; & it was provided that "any buildings erected on any land acquired under this sect. (except such buildings or parts of buildings as may be used for the purposes of a station) shall be subject to the Acts relating to buildings in the metropolis." Under s. 31 of their Act the co. acquired by agreement for the purposes of one of their stations a building which was situate outside their limits of deviation & not within their compulsory powers, & proceeded to pull it down without serving on the adjoining owner the party-structure notice required by the 1894 Act:—Held: assuming the party-structure was affected by what the co. had done, the co. were not exempted by s. 31 of their Act from 1894 Act, Part VIII., & were bound to give to the owners of the adjoining premises the usual party-structure notice, & in default of their so doing the remedy of the adjoining owners was by injunction & not compensation under Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 18).—LEWIS & SOLOME v. CHARING CROSS, EUSTON, & HAMPSTEAD Ry., [1906] 1 Ch. 508; 75 L. J. Ch. 282; 94 L. T. 732; 70 J. P. 221; 54 W. R. 435; 22 T. L. R. 282; 50 Sol. Jo. 258; 4 L. G. R. 432.

301. ——— Award embodying future work.]—Pltfs. & defts. were freeholders of adjoining houses in London. In 1902 the tenant of pltfs.

house, being about to rebuild it in pursuance of a building agreement in a manner which involved the rebuilding of the party-wall between the houses, gave notice to defts. of his intention to do the work under 1894 Act, s. 90, & defts., as adjoining owners, served upon him a notice under s. 89 setting out the requisitions with which they required him to comply. A difference having arisen between the parties in respect of the execution of the works within the Act, it was referred under s. 91 to the arbn. of certain surveyors, who by their award, after deciding as to the dimensions & mode of erection of the party-wall, further awarded (inter alia) that the adjoining owners, defts., should have the right at any time to raise the wall as they might desire. The building operations were then carried out by pltf.'s tenant. In 1904 defts. proceeded to raise the height of the wall & to build upon it without giving a building owner's notice to pltf's., who had in the meantime acquired the interest of their tenant, contending that they were entitled to do so under the terms of the award:—Held: defts. were under an obligation to serve a building owner's notice under s. 90 upon pltf's. before commencing the work.—LEADBETTER v. MARYLEBONE CORPN., [1904] 2 K. B. 893; 73 L. J. K. B. 1013; 91 L. T. 639; 68 J. P. 566; 53 W. R. 118; 20 T. L. R. 778, C. A.; subsequent proceedings, [1905] 1 K. B. 661, C. A.

302. Availability of notice—Award not made within six months of notice.—1894 Act, s. 90 (4), does not apply to a case in which, a difference having arisen between the building owner & the adjoining owner with regard to the work to be done under the notice, there is a reference to surveyors under s. 91, & their award is not made within six months after the service of the party-wall notice.—LEADBETTER v. MARYLEBONE CORPN., [1905] 1 K. B. 661; 74 L. J. K. B. 507; 92 L. T. 819; 69 J. P. 201; 53 W. R. 470; 21 T. L. R. 377, C. A.

D. Liability for Costs and Compensation.

303. For costs—Where notice invalid.—Defts. served a party-wall notice on pltf's., & stated by an indorsement on it that the time for consent & naming a surveyor were embodied in the notice, as thereby the requisite proceedings would be cleared & shortened. It was proved that the wall was not a party-wall, but defts. refused to withdraw the notice, saying it would expire in three months, & intimating that they did not intend to proceed, & that nothing would be done without further notice:—Held: pltf. was justified in filing a bill for injunction, & defts. were liable for costs.—SIMS v. ESTATES CO. (1866), 14 L. T. 55; 14 W. R. 419.

304. Compensation to adjoining owner for loss of trade—During raising of wall—Jurisdiction of surveyors.—Where a difference has arisen between a building owner & an adjoining owner under 1894 Act, s. 90, with respect to the raising of a party-wall under s. 88 (6), the surveyors appointed under s. 91 to settle that difference have no jurisdiction to entertain a claim for compensation by the adjoining owner against the building owner for damage caused to the trade of the former through the exercise by the latter of the rights given to him by the sub-sect.—ADAMS v. MARYLEBONE BOROUGH COUNCIL, [1907] 2 K. B. 822;

E. Liability for Negligence.

305. In papering & decoration—Remedy.—A party-wall had been pulled down & rebuilt under 1774 Act, but the paper & decorations had not been replaced by deft.:—Held: a mandamus, at the instance of the tenant of the adjoining house, would not lie to replace the paper & decorations, but the remedy must be by action.—R. v. PONSFORD (1843), 12 L. J. Q. B. 313; 1 L. T. O. S. 234; 7 J. P. 597; 7 Jur. 767.

306. Cumulative penalty.—The penalty imposed by 1855 Act, s. 94 on a building owner who fails to make good "any damage he may occasion to the property of an adjoining owner by any works authorised to be executed by him, or to do any other thing upon condition of doing which his right to execute such works is by s. 83 limited to arise," is cumulative.—WILLIAMS v. GOLDING (1865), L. R. 1 C. P. 69; Har. & Ruth. 18; 35 L. J. C. P. 1; 13 L. T. 291; 11 Jur. N. S. 952; 14 W. R. 60.

307. Protection of exposed rooms.—A building owner who pulls down a party-wall under 1855 Act, is not bound to protect by a hoarding or otherwise the rooms of the adjoining owner which are left exposed to the weather during the time that the wall is being pulled down & rebuilt.—THOMPSON v. HILL (1870), L. R. 5 C. P. 584; 39 L. J. C. P. 264; 22 L. T. 820; 18 W. R. 1070.

308. Damage to adjoining house.—A building owner who pulls down & rebuilds a party-structure under 1855 Act, is not bound to make good the damage to the adjoining owner's house, although such damage was the necessary consequence of the execution of the works he was authorised to complete.—BRYER v. WILLIS (1870), 23 L. T. 463; 35 J. P. 471; 19 W. R. 102.

309. Where contractor employed.—Pltf. & deft. were respective owners of two adjoining houses, pltf. being entitled to the support, for his house, of deft.'s soil. Deft. employed a contractor to pull down his house, excavate the foundations, & rebuild the house; the contractor undertook the risk of supporting pltf.'s house, as far as might be necessary, during the work, & to make good any damage & satisfy any claims arising therefrom. Pltf.'s house was injured, in the progress of the work, owing to the means taken by the contractor to support it being insufficient:—Held: deft. was liable, even if the undertaking as to risk, etc., had amounted to an express stipulation that the contractor should do, as part of the works contracted for, all that was necessary to support pltf.'s house.—BOWER v. PEATE (1876), 1 Q. B. D. 321; 45 L. J. Q. B. 446; 35 L. T. 321; 40 J. P. 789.

310.—Applt. & resp. were owners of adjoining houses between which was a party-wall, the property of both. Applt.'s house also adjoined B.'s house & between them was a party-wall. In the course of the rebuilding, the builder's workmen in fixing a staircase, negligently & without the knowledge of applt., cut into the party-wall between applt.'s house & B.'s house, in consequence of which applt.'s house fell, & the fall dragged over the party-wall between it & resp.'s house & injured resp.'s house. The cutting into the party-wall was not authorised by the contract between applt. & his builder:—Held: (1) the law cast a duty upon applt. to see that reasonable care & skill were exercised in those operations which involved a use of the party-wall belonging to himself & resp., exposing it to the risk above mentioned; (2) applt. could not get rid of responsibility by delegating the performance to a third person, & was liable to resp. for the injury to his house.—*HUGHES v. 311. —Pltf. an owner in fee simple of a house in London, brought an action against builders claiming damages on the ground that they, in the course of rebuilding an hotel, had caused injury to pltf.'s house by cracking & displacing the wall, & also asking for an injunction. On the motion for injunction an inquiry as to damage was directed to be taken before a special referee, & the referee assessed the structural damage at £40, without prejudice to any question of liability. Defts. alleged that the works were executed under 1855 Act, & the damage, if any, to pltf.'s premises was "a necessary consequence of carrying out the said works," & pltf.'s remedy, if any, was only against the building owner by whom defts. were employed:—Held: the Act did not exonerate a builder from liability for damage which had arisen from his negligence & want of care & skill.—WHITE v. PETO BROTHERS (1888), 58 L. T. 710; 4 T. L. R. 446.

312. —Delay in rebuilding.]—Pltf. was occupier of a house as yearly tenant. Deft., owner of the adjoining house, served a notice upon pltf. under 1855 Act of his intention to pull down the party-wall between the two houses. Pltf. complained of the delay by deft. in rebuilding the party-wall. Deft. pleaded that he had employed a competent builder as contractor to rebuild the party-wall & as the injury to pltf. had been caused by the delay of the contractor it was the contractor & not deft. who was liable to pltf.:—Held: deft. was liable for the negligence of the persons he employed & it was no answer for deft. to say that he had delegated that duty to his architect & builder.—JOLLIFFE v. WOODHOUSE (1894), 10 T. L. R. 553; sub nom. JOLIFFE v. WOODHOUSE, 38 Sol. Jo. 578, C. A.

SUB-SECT. 5.—APPOINTMENT OF ARBITRATOR OR UMPIRE.

313. Umpire appointed by court—On surveyors' refusal to appoint.]—Where surveyors had been nominated under the 1855 Act, to settle differences in dispute between a building owner & an adjoining owner as to the erection of a party-wall, & such surveyors had refused to appoint an umpire, the ct. appointed an umpire, under C. L. P. Act, 1854, notwithstanding that an action was pending to settle the right of one of the parties to an ancient light in the party-wall.—Re METROPOLITAN BUILDING ACT, Ex p. McBRYDE (1876), 4 Ch. D. 200; 46 L. J. Ch. 153; 35 L. T. 543.

314. Necessity for—Where differences between building owner & adjoining owner.]—Although a co-owner of a party-wall could not at common law maintain an action against the other co-owner for temporarily undermining the foundation of the wall & replacing it with a new foundation when the work was unattended with danger to the security of the wall, yet, when within the area of 1855 Act, such a work, being a right in relation to a "party-structure" within s. 83, (7) (11), cannot be carried out when a difference arises between the building owner & the adjoining owner (unless they concur in the appointment of one surveyor) except by the award of two surveyors & a third selected by them, or of any two of such surveyors, as provided by s. 85 (7), of the Act.—STANDARD BANK OF BRITISH SOUTH AMERICA (AFRICA) v. STOKES (1878), 9 Ch. D. 68; 47 L. J. Ch. 554; 38 L. T. 672; 43 J. P. 91; 26 W. R. 492.

315. Jurisdiction of arbitrators.]—Pltfs. & defts. were freeholders of adjoining houses in London. In 1902 the tenant of pltfs.' house, being about to rebuild it in pursuance of a building agreement in a manner which involved the rebuilding of the party wall between the houses, gave notice to defts. of his intention to do the work under 1894 Act, s. 90, & defts., as adjoining owners, served upon him a notice under s. 89 setting out the requisitions with which they required him to comply. A difference having arisen between the parties in respect of the execution of the works within the Act, it was referred under s. 91 to the arbn. of certain surveyors, who by their award, after deciding as to the dimensions & mode of erection of the party wall, further awarded (inter alia) that the adjoining owners, defts., should have the right at any time to raise the wall as they might desire. The building operations were then carried out by pltfs.' tenant. In 1904 defts. proceeded to raise the height of the wall & to build upon it without giving a building owner's notice to pltfs., who had in the meantime acquired the interest of their tenant, contending they were entitled to do so under the terms of the award:—Held: the jurisdiction of the arbitrators was limited by s. 91 to differences arising with reference to the work to which the original notice given to defts. under s. 90 related, & as the arbitrators had acted beyond their jurisdiction in awarding that defts. might in the future raise the wall as they desired, their award was pro tanto invalid.—*LEADBETTER v. Part IV.—Evidence of Boundaries.

316. As to contiguity of manors.]—In a cause where the question was, whether the locus in quo was parcel of the manors of Wakefield or Rochdale, it was shown that Wakefield & Rishworth were adjoining manors, & that the manor of Rochdale adjoined both Wakefield & Rishworth continuously:—Held: evidence of the continued boundary between Rochdale & Rishworth, was admissible to prove the boundary between Rochdale & Wakefield.—BRISCO v. LOMAX (1838), 8 Ad. & El. 198; 3 Nev. & P. K. B. 308; 1 Will. Woll. & H. 235; 7 L. J. Q. B. 148; 2 Jur. 682; 112 E. R. 812.

317. Declaration by landlord—Boundary of lands separated by lane held in common.]—Where in trespass quare clausum fregit it appeared that pltf. & deft. respectively occupied lands belonging to the same landlord & abutting on different sides of a lane & that deft. held under a lease not produced:—Held: the declaration of the landlord "that he had let the lane jointly to pltf. & deft. as much to one as to the other" was properly received in evidence, & being received, it proved pltf. & deft. to be tenants in common of the lane & neither of them could maintain trespass against the other in respect of the lane.—NOYE v. REED (1827), 1 Man. & Ry. K. B. 63; 6 L. J. O. S. K. B. 5.

318. Declaration of former owner—Boundary of estate.]—Where the question was whether pltf. was owner of certain land adjoining to his estate or whether it belonged to deft. as lord of the manor:—Held: the declarations of a former owner of an estate were evidence against the present owner, on the principle of identity of interest, although the party who made the declarations was alive & might have been called as a witness.—WOOLWAY v. ROWE (1831), 1 Ad. & El. 114; 3 Nev. & M. K. B. 819; 3 L. J. K. B. 121; 110 E. R. 1151.

319. Declaration of tenant for life—Boundary of estate.]—The declarations of a tenant for life in possession as to the boundary of his estate are not evidence against the remainderman.—HOWE v. MAIKIN (1878), 40 L. T. 196; 27 W. R. 340, D. C.

320. Patent ambiguity in land certificate—Variance in area—Area described by boundaries.]—Where, in a land certificate issued by the Crown in 1899 there is a variance between the stated acreage & the area as described by physical boundaries, viz., one mile along a river to a width of a quarter of a mile therefrom, evidence can be given of user inconsistent with the area intended being that included in the boundaries, so as to establish that that description is a falsa demonstratio.—WATCHAM v. EAST AFRICA PROTECTORATE, [1919] A. C. 533; 87 L. J. P. C. 150; 120 L. T. 258; 34 T. L. R. 481, P. C.

321. Parol evidence—To determine situation of lands demised by testator.]—Where testator devises his lands situate in a particular parish or place, parol evidence is admissible to show what lands were then reputed to lie in such parish or place for the purpose of determining the sense of the description used by testator.

Where testator devised all his messuages & lands in the parish of D.:—Held: parol evidence was admissible to show that, although in point

318 i. Declarations of former owner—Boundary of estate.]—T. sold part of his land to deft., & the remainder to pltf. A dispute arose between pltf. & deft. as to the boundary between them, & action was brought. On the trial deft. stated that T. pointed out what deft. claimed as the true boundary line. This was subsequent to pltf. taking possession:—Held: the evidence of T.'s declarations was improperly admitted.—PHILPS v. TRUEMAN (1876), 3 Pug. 391.—CAN.

a. Declarations by person in possession.]—Declarations respecting boundaries of land by a person in possession are evidence in an action in which the boundaries of the same land are in dispute.—NILES v. BURKE (1873), 1 Pug. 237.—CAN.

b. —.]—The declaration of a person as to the boundary of land is not evidence, unless made while in possession of the land, & is against interest, or, unless there is privity between him & the person against whom his declaration is offered.—SARTELL v. SCOTT (1864), 6 All. 166.—CAN.

c. Admissions by predecessor in title—Boundary of estate.]—Admissions by a predecessor in title of an adjoining owner as to an alleged conventional line constitute an element for consideration unless the true line has been satisfactorily proved.—LEWIS MILLER & Co., Ltd. v. CLOW (1918), 52 N. S. R. 1.—CAN.

d. Surveyor's affidavit—As to other property.]—The question in dispute at the trial being the boundary line between certain lots, affidavits were offered in evidence as to the line between other lots in the same concession, taken by the surveyor employed by defts. to run this line:—Held: such affidavits were properly rejected.—MANARY v. DASH (1864), 23 U. C. R. 580.—CAN.

e. Parol evidence—To determine situation of land granted by Crown.]—Parol evidence is admissible to show the actual position & surveys of lands included in grants of wilderness & woodlands.—DAVISON v. BENJAMIN (1874), 9 N. S. R. 474.—CAN.

f. — As to Boundary Line Commissioners.]—The point in dispute being the boundaries of a lot pltf. offered to prove that a requisition had been made to the Boundary Line Commrs., to settle the line, & that they did so & planted monuments; but as no award had been filed, & no record of the proceedings could be found, he relied upon oral testimony only:—Held: inadmissible.—BARR v. CANADA LIFE INSURANCE CO. (1867), 26 U. C. R. 614.—CAN.

g. — Expert testimony.]—A person not a licensed surveyor is a competent witness on a question of boundary.—POTTER v. CAMPBELL (1858), 16 U. C. R. 109.—CAN.

h. — Instructions to surveyors.]—In an action for a declaration as to the width of a street, the expert testimony of surveyors to show that there was no boundary to the street on the river side except the river itself, & testimony to show the instructions given to the surveyors who laid out the street, were inadmissible.—

k. Hearsay evidence—Of surveyors—Notes by clerks.]—In an action to determine a boundary line, two surveyors were called as witnesses, but neither of them had personally made a survey; they spoke from notes & from the survey made by their clerks, who ran the lines:—Held: the evidence was not admissible.—ANTICKNAP v. SCOTT (1914), 26 W. L. R. 952; 16 D. L. R. 20; 19 B. C. R. 81.—CAN.

l. Res gesta.]—The declarations of a party accompanying the act of showing the point of beginning on the boundary of a grant, are admissible in evidence as part of the res gesta.—DOE d. LONCHESTER v. MURRAY (1847), 3 Kerr. 335.—CAN.

m. Copy of field notes.]—An admitted copy of the field notes from the Crown lands office may be received in evidence.—DOE d. STRONG v. JONES (1850), 7 U. C. R. 385.—CAN.

n. Surveyor's notes.]—To determine a disputed boundary line the field notes of a land surveyor were offered in evidence, but objected to on the ground that they were not made by him in the execution of his duty as such surveyor:—Held: the objection was good.—MCGREGOR v. KEILLER (1883), 9 O. R. 677.—CAN.

o. —.]—Notes of a survey made by a deceased surveyor in a book in which he kept a diary of matters, private & professional, were tendered in evidence to prove the boundary between lots 3 & 4. The entry of the

322. City of London.]—A judge is not bound to take judicial notice of the boundaries of the city of London, & affidavits are inadmissible, to show that the Tower of London is, in point of fact, within the city.—BRUNE v. THOMPSON (1842), 2 Q. B. 780; 2 Gal. & Dav. 110; 11 L. J. Q. B. 131; 6 Jur. 581; 114 E. R. 306.

323. Foreign State—Procedure.]—In dealing with questions involving the sovereignty & extent of territory of a foreign State, the ct. should act in unison with H. M. Govt.

Where a dispute has arisen concerning the status & boundaries of a foreign State, the ct. will, by inquiring of the Foreign Office, obtain judicial knowledge not only of such status, but also of the fact whether the dispute is within the territory of that State. Information relating to the boundaries of a foreign State should be acquired by such a method, rather than by evidence adduced by the litigants, which might lead to a result inconsistent with the practice of H. M. Govt.—FOSTER v. GLOBE VENTURE SYNDICATE LTD., [1900] 1 Ch. 811; 69 L. J. Ch. 375; 82 L. T. 253; 44 Sol. Jo. 314.

SUB-SECT. 1.—NATURE OF.

324. Must be within knowledge of party.]—Upon the trial of an issue in prohibition, whether the usurpation of office in a quo warranto information mentioned was committed out of the jurisdiction of the County Palatine, & within that of the City, of Chester; a document from the remembrancer's office of the Exch. Ct. was produced, purporting to be a decree made, after hearing of a complaint against the citizens of Chester, & their answer, by the Lord High Treasurer of England, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the Under Treasurer, & the Chief Baron, with the advice & assent of a Queen's Serjeant, & the Queen's Attorney & Solicitor-General, & others of the same ct.:—Held: this document was not survey was as follows: "June 6, 1827. —Got A. to show the stake between Nos. 3 & 4." It was not proved that the entry was made contemporaneously with the transaction:—Held: the entry was not admissible as one made in the course of business, or in the performance of a quasi public duty.—O'CONNOR v. DUNN (1877), 2 A. R. 247.—CAN.

p. Copy of fence viewer's award.]—Fence viewers made an award respecting division lines, & at a trial, the township clerk produced a copy which he swore was a true copy of such award, the original being in his custody:—Held: such copy was admissible, these awards being made by a statutory public officer acting in a judicial capacity.—WARREN v. DESLIPIES (1872), 33 U. C. R. 59.—CAN.

q. Maps or plans prepared by deceased persons.]—Maps or plans prepared by deceased persons cannot be looked at for the purpose of defining the boundaries between privately owned estates. They are, however, evidence of the physical features shown on them &, to the extent to which such physical features assist in admissible as evidence of reputation, because the parties making the decree had no knowledge of the subject, except that which they derived in the course of the proceeding.—ROGERS v. WOOD (1831), 2 B. & Ad. 245; 109 E. R. 1134.

Another was then granted on paying a fine, part of which was paid for the surrender of the former lease. In 1798 the lessor executed a lease of the surface:—Held: a recital in that lease was admissible in evidence against the lessee of the mines & toll in 1810, for he could not claim by any title prior to that date.—CREASE v. BARRETT (1835), 1 Cr. M. & R. 919; 5 Tyr. 458; 4 L. J. Ex. 297; 149 E. R. 1353; subsequent proceedings, 2 Cr. M. & R. 738.

326. Declaration of deceased person.]—The question in a cause being, whether a particular road, admitted to exist, was public or private, evidence was offered that a person, since deceased, had planted a willow on a spot adjoining the road, on ground of which he was a tenant, saying, at the same time, that he planted it to show where the boundary of the road was when he was a boy:—Held: such a declaration was not evidence, as showing reputation.—R. v. Upon this commission, there was an inquisition, & a verdict which set out the boundaries, & was returned to the ct., but no decree thereon was produced:—Held: it was admissible as a verdict upon the matter decided by it, viz., the boundaries of R. & W., but not as reputation simply.—BRISCO v. 328. Duchy survey.]—On a question as to the boundary of a manor, formerly, but no longer, part of the Duchy of Lancaster, a document of the time of Elizabeth, when the manor belonged to the duchy, was offered in evidence. It was produced from the Duchy Office, & purported to be a survey of the manor, taken by J. W. deputy of the Surveyor-General of the Duchy, by authority of letters of deputation to J. W. by the oaths & presentment of such of the tenants of the manor whose names were subscribed. The names of twenty persons followed, described as “jurors at the ct. of survey” & it was added, that they, being examined, did present, etc. Then came a statement of the boundaries, a list of tenants & rents, & a presentment of the demesnes, of customs, of injuries suggested, & other particulars. No authority for taking the survey was proved, except as above-mentioned:—Held: the document was not admissible, as evidence of reputation.—EVANS v. TAYLOR (1838), 7 Ad. & El. 617; 3 Nev. & P. Q. 329. Entry in manor book.]—In an action of ejectment to recover twenty-two acres of land claimed as parcel of a certain manor, the lessor of pltf., who sought to prove that the land in question was parcel of the manor, offered in evidence an old book found in the muniment room of the family to whom the manor belonged. This book, amongst other entries & receipts in the handwriting of the then steward, contained an entry of the lease, & a minute to the effect that “H.’s widow has assigned to Sir E., who claims ten years to come.” An ineffectual search for the originals had been made, & notice had been given to deft. to produce them:—Held: the book, if admissible as evidence of reputation, merely went to show the extent of the manor.—*DOE d. 331. Arbitrator’s award.]—Pltf. sued deft. for a consequential injury to her reversionary interest in a several fishery in an arm of the sea, alleging her right to the soil between high & low water mark, into which she charged deft. with cutting, & stating that such soil & fishery were in the possession of F. as her tenant. Deft. was tenant of a neighbouring property under G. In support of pltf.’s title, evidence was offered of the proceedings in a former action, brought by F. while tenant to pltf., against G., complaining of a similar injury to the same fishery. The declaration in the former action alleged that the present pltf. was owner of the soil between high & low water mark, & charged G. with cutting the soil, & thereby injuring F.’s fishery. Not guilty being pleaded, the cause was referred to arbn., & an award made in favour of F.:—Held: these proceedings were not admissible as evidence of reputation of pltf.’s ownership of the fishery.—WENMAN (LADY) v. MACKENZIE (1855), 5 E. & B. 447; 25 L. J. Q. B. 44; 25 L. T. O. S. 267; 1 Jur. N. S. 1015, 1049, n.; 3 W. R. 626; 3 C. L. R. 1307; 119 E. R. 547.

332. Deposition for perpetuation of testimony.]—On an issue as to whether a certain piece of land was common land or subject to any commonable rights either of the commoners of the parish of C., or of the commoners of the parish of L.: a deposition made in the year 1815, in a suit to perpetuate testimony by a witness examined on commission on behalf of a predecessor in title of defts., was admitted in evidence as being a statement made by a person vouched by the party on whose behalf the deponent was examined, & an admission by conduct of a predecessor in title of defts. This deposition had been sealed up by the examiners, but was now found unsealed:—Held: the mere fact that the deposition was now found to be unsealed was not evidence of user or adoption by the party on whose behalf the deponent was examined, & in the absence of evidence of such user or adoption, the deposition was inadmissible on the ground on which it was admitted.—*EVANS v. Sect. 3.—Reputation: Sub-sects. 2, 3 & 4. Sect. 4.]

—Upon a question of boundary between two parishes & manors, a certain common was within the parish & manor of H., or within the parish of B. & manor of M.:—Held: evidence of what old persons, now dead, had said concerning the boundaries of the parishes & manors was admissible, even though these old persons were parishioners, & claimed rights of common on the wastes, which would be enlarged by their several declarations, there not appearing to be any dispute at the time respecting the right of the old persons making the declarations, at least no litigations pending; for the boundary had been long in dispute between the respective parishes & manors, & intersecting perambulations had been made both before & after such declarations by the respective parties; so that those persons could not be considered as having it in view to make evidence for themselves at the time.—NICHOLLS v. PARKER (1805), 14 East, 331, n.; 104 E. R. 629.

336. — Whether old or new land of manor.]

—Upon a question whether the lord of a manor was entitled to the coals under a freehold tenement within the manor, it is competent to him to show by parol evidence that there was a known distinction within the manor between old & new land, & that in fact plff.'s lands lay within the boundary of the new land.—BARNES v. MAWSON (1813), 1 M. & S. 77; 105 E. R. 30.

337. — Whether place within town or hundred.]—The mention in Domesday Book of the town of A. previously to the enumeration of the hundreds in the country, inquisitions taken by jurors of the town of A. upon deaths in the Castle of A., & a charter erecting the town of A. into a county of itself, with a special exception of the Castle of A., do not necessarily lead to the conclusion that the Castle of A. is not within one of the hundreds in the county: & a judge is authorised to direct a jury to give great weight to evidence of reputation tending to negative such a conclusion.—NEWCASTLE (DUKE) v. BROXTOWE (HUNDRED) (1832), 4 B. & Ad. 273; 1 Nev. & M. K. B. 598; 1 Nev. & M. M. C. 507; 2 L. J. M. C. 47; 110 E. R. 458.

338. — Parish boundary.]—A map of a parish provided from the parish chest, which was made under a private inclosure Act not printed is not receivable in evidence to show the boundaries of the parish without proof of the inclosure Act; but it being proved by the surveyor who made the map 34 years before the trial that he laid down the boundaries of the parish from the information of an old man then about 60, who went round & showed them to him:—Held: on this proof the map would have been receivable as evidence of reputation if it had been also proved that the old man was dead at the time of trial but that it was not receivable at all without proof of his death.—R. v. MILTON (INHABITANTS) (1843), 1 Car. & Kir. 58, N. P.

339. — Parish rights of common.]—In an action in the Ch. Div. by a statutory committee of commoners for specific performance of an agreement to purchase commonable rights, an order was made directing the trial before a jury in the Q. B. Div. of an issue of fact, whether a certain piece of land was common land or subject to any commonable rights either of the commoners of the parish of C., or of the commoners of the parish of L.:—Held: evidence of reputation was admissible on the trial of such an issue.—EVANS v. MERTHYR TYDFIL URBAN COUNCIL, [1899] 1 Ch. 241; 68 L. J. Ch. 175; 79 L. T. 578; 43 Sol. Jo. 151, C. A.

—In a question as to private rights, whether or not a place is parcel of a sheep walk, evidence of reputation is admissible.—DAVIES v. LEWIS (1787), 2 Chit. 535.

341. — Waste of farm.]—In an action in replevin, on a question whether S. Hill, a waste, was parcel of I. Farm, & the soil & freehold of R., or not, evidence was offered of declarations of old persons deceased, as to the ancient boundary of the waste belonging to I. Farm, that it extended to the inclosures on the north side of the hill:—Held: the question being not as to the boundary of a parish or manor, but between one person's private property & another, the evidence was not admissible.—CLOTHIER v. CHAPMAN (1805), 14 East, 331, n.; 104 E. R. 629.

342. — Division between estates.]—On a question of boundary between two estates, if evidence has been given that the boundary of the estates is the same as that between two hamlets, evidence of reputation as to the boundary of the hamlets may be adduced for the purpose of proving that of the estates; & the jury may be desired to take into consideration the latter evidence if they are satisfied with the first.—THOMAS v. JENKINS (1837), 6 Ad. & El. 525; 1 Nev. & P. K. B. 587; Will. Woll. & Dav. 265; 6 L. J. K. B. 163; 1 J. P. 211; 1 Jur. 261; 112 E. R. 201.

343. — Waste of manor or freehold.]—On a question between the lord of the manor of O. & the owner of a freehold estate within the manor, whether a certain close was part of the lord's waste or part of the adjoining estate of deft., after proof having been given that there were very many lands & tenements held of the manor, the tenants whereof in respect of those lands had always exercised rights of common for all their commonable cattle on the waste of the manor, evidence was offered, on the part of the lord, of declarations ante litem motam of deceased persons who had been such tenants & had exercised such rights, that the close was parcel of the waste. Similar declarations made by deceased residents within the manor not being tenants were also tendered. No evidence was given of any exercise of any rights of common on the close:—Held: (1) the want of evidence of acts of enjoyment would not affect the admissibility of evidence of reputation; (2) declarations by residents within a manor were as receivable as declarations by tenants of the manor; (3) these declarations were not admissible in evidence, since there is no common law right for all tenants of a manor to have common on the waste of the manor, but each tenant who has the right of common appendant, has it as an incident by law attached to his particular grant, & the numerous private rights of common of the several tenants do not compose one public right so as to render evidence of reputation as to the boundary of the waste admissible.—*DUNRAVEN (LORD) v. SUB-SECT. 3.—PARTICULAR FACTS.

344. Whether admissible.]—On a question whether a turnpike stood within the limits of a town:—Held: evidence that old people, since dead, had said that there formerly were houses where none any longer stood was inadmissible, being evidence of a particular fact, & not of reputation.—IRELAND v. POWELL (1802), cited in 7 Ad. & El. at p. 555; 112 E. R. 579, N. P.

Boundary of parish—Recital in agreement.]—On Apr. 1, 1858, P., the owner of a large estate in the parish of T., found, among the title deeds of that estate in his possession, an agreement dated Jan. 12, 1698, purporting to be made between the then owner of the parish of N. of the one part, & six persons named & described as of T., of the other. This agreement recited that N. was in the parish of T., & provided that, notwithstanding, N. should thenceforth be in no way liable to maintain or keep, or be at any charges or expenses in maintaining & keeping any poor in the other part of that parish, but only such poor as should come from N.; & that the other part of the parish should be at the cost of maintaining its own poor, but not the poor from N. The agreement further contained covenants between the parties for carrying out this arrangement. It purported to be executed by the owner of N., & to be agreed to under hand by two inhabitants of T., other than the parties to it of the second part:—Held: this agreement was evidence of reputation as to the extent of the parish, being a declaration by the deceased owner of N. & the other inhabitants of T. to that effect.—R. v. longer, part of the Duchy of Lancaster, a document of the time of Elizabeth, when the manor belonged to the duchy, was offered in evidence. It was produced from the Duchy Office, & purported to be a survey of the manor, taken by J. W., deputy of the Surveyor-General of the Duchy, by authority of letters of deputation to J. W. by the oaths & presentment of such of the tenants of the manor whose names were subscribed. The names of twenty persons followed, described as "jurors at the ct. of survey"; & it was added, that they, being examined, did present, etc. Then came a statement of the boundaries, a list of tenants & rents, & a presentment of the demesnes, of customs, of injuries suggested, & of some other particulars. No authority for taking the survey was proved, except as above-mentioned:—Held: the document was not admissible, as a survey appearing to be taken by the proper officer, agreeably to 4 Edw. 1, Stat. Extenta Manerii.—EVANS v. TAYLOR (1838), 7 Ad. & El. 617; 3 Nev. & P. Q. B. 174; 7 L. J. Q. B. 73; 112 E. R. 602.

358. Parliamentary survey—Tything.—In an action against the surveyor of highways of the parish of S. for distraining on the goods of pltf. for arrears of a highway rate, it appeared that pltf. was occupier of one of two farms in the tything of W., in that parish. The occupiers in W. had never paid highway rate for the parish of S. until 1857, though they had been rated to the poor rates of the parish, & they had always done the necessary repairs to the roads in W. Among other documents to prove that W. was a distinct tything, a parliamentary survey made in the time of the Commonwealth was admitted in evidence. In 1857 a highway rate, in which pltf. was assessed, was made for the parish, & affirmed by the ct., on a case stated by the quarter sessions. In July, 1861, the rate in question was made, & pltf. was summoned before justices, who issued their warrant of distress in obedience to a rule of ct.:—Held: (1) the parliamentary survey was admissible; (2) there was sufficient evidence of a legal exemption of the tything of W. from liability to contribute to the repair of the highways in the parish of S.—*FREEMAN v. 362. ——— Waste of manor.—Where a question of general right to the waste of the manor had arisen in which a class of the community, viz. the inhabitants of a township & tenants of the manor, had a common interest:—Held: a tithe map made in 1843 was admissible in evidence.—SMITH v. LISTER (1895), 64 L. J. Q. B. 154; 72 L. T. 20; 15 R. 226.

363. Ordnance map—Adjoining premises.—Held: an Ordnance map was not admissible to show boundary of premises.—COLEMAN v. KIRKALDY, [1882] W. N. 103.

364. ——— Maps from British Museum—Land in parish.—In an action in which pltf. sought to prove that certain land was in the parish & vill of M., maps were tendered in evidence on either side, which included the Ordnance map & several other maps, some of which came from the British Museum:—Held: the maps were not admissible as evidence in such an action as this.—BIDDER v. BRIDGES (1885), 54 L. T. 529; 34 W. R. 514.

365. ——— Private lands.—Although an Ordnance survey map is not evidence of title, it may be given in evidence when the question of boundary is in dispute, to show the boundary line as represented on the map when the survey was made.—CATON v. HAMILTON (1889), 53 J. P. 504.

366. ——— Position of hedge.—Ordnance maps are admissible in evidence to show the position of a hedge at a certain date.—A.-G. & CROYDON RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL v. MOORSOM-ROBERTS (1908), 72 J. P. 123; 6 L. G. R. 470.

367. Map with inclosure award—Parish boundary.—R. v. MILTON (INHABITANTS), No. 338, ante.

368. ——— Highway.—A map of an inclosure award is inadmissible to prove the boundaries of a highway against deft., on an indictment for obstructing a highway, whose property is adjacent to the highway, & who was not subject to the jurisdiction of the Inclosure Comrs., in making their award.—R. v. BERGER, [1894] 1 Q. B. 823;

369. — Inclosed land.—Semble: in a case of disputed boundaries, an inclosure map may be evidence against the owner of the land comprised in the award.—Frost v. Richardson (1910), 103 L. T. 22; affd. 103 L. T. 416, C. A.

370. ——The conservators of a common regulated under Commons Act, 1876 (c. 56), in whom the general management of the common was vested, brought an action to restrain the owner of enclosures abutting on the common from encroaching by means of fences erected on the common side of the hedges forming the boundary of the common as delineated upon a map annexed to the award. Deft. was a party to the application for regulation of the common, which was limited to "improvement," & did not extend to the "adjustment of rights." He contended that the award map was not conclusive & did not in fact show the real boundaries of the common. His enclosures were physically separated from the common by old quickset hedges, & the map showed as the boundary the centre line of these hedges. YOUNGER, J., & on appeal, SCRUTTON, L.J., dissenting from the rest of the ct., having decided that the award map was conclusive as to boundaries & deft. was estopped from disputing its accuracy:—Semble (LORDS CAVE & SUMNER): the award map formed as against deft. very cogent, if not conclusive, evidence of the boundary between his land & the common.—Collis v. Amphlett (1910), 89 L. J. Ch. 101; 122 L. T. 433; 18 L. G. R. 1, H. L.; revsq., [1918] 1 Ch. 232, C. A.

371. Map made under royal commission—Rating area.—A map, made under the authority of the King's commission in 1832, setting out the metes & bounds of the level of New Romney, authenticated by the presentment of a jury, who made it part of their return to an inquisition held under the same commission, & practically acquiesced in for nearly sixty years:—Held: to be evidence of the local limits within which the Comrs. of Sewers of the level were entitled to exercise their jurisdiction of levying scots or rates.—NEW ROMNEY CORPN. v. NEW ROMNEY SEWERS COMRS., [1892] 1 Q. B. 840; 61 L. J. Q. B. 558; 56 J. P. 756, C. A.

372. Manor map—Waste of manor.—A manor map, produced from the custody of the lord of the manor, made in 1817 by a surveyor, since deceased, who was proved by a living witness to have been competent & conversant with the district, & used by the parish authorities for rating purposes:—Held: to be admissible in evidence where a question of general right to the waste of the manor had arisen in which a class of the community, viz., the inhabitants of a township & tenants of the manor, had a common interest.—Smith v. Lister (1895), 64 L. J. Q. B. 154; 72 L. T. 20; 15 R. 226.

373. Order of court—On information between tenants—Not binding on landlords.—An information between tenants for the determination of boundaries & the decision on it:—Held: not to bind the inheritances of their respective landlords & not admissible in evidence, except against persons claiming under the actual parties.—IVY'S (LADY) TRIAL, MOSSAM v. IVY (1684), 10 State Tr. 555.

Annotation:—Mentd. Darby v. Ouseley (1856), 2 Jur. N. S. 497.

374. By judges & officers of the Court of Exchequer—Jurisdiction of county or city.—Upon the trial of an issue in prohibition, whether the usurpation of office in a quo warranto information mentioned was committed out of the jurisdiction of the County Palatine, & within that of the City of Chester, a document from the remembrancer's office of the Exch. Ct. was produced, purporting to be a decree made, after hearing of a complaint against the citizens of Chester, & their answer, by the Lord High Treasurer of England, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the Under Treasurer, & the Chief Baron, with the advice & assent of a Queen's Serjeant, & the Queen's Attorney & Solicitor-General, & others of the same ct.:—Held: the document was not admissible in evidence as a decree, because it was not a decree of the Exch. Ct. nor of any ct. known to the law at the time when it purported to have been made, nor as an award, because there appeared no voluntary submission of parties.—ROGERS v. WOOD (1831), 2 B. & Ad. 245; 109 E. R. 1134.

381. — Parish papers—In custody of incumbent.]—Under an issue to try the boundaries of a parish, papers handed over to the present incumbent by the representative of his predecessor, as papers belonging to the parish, found in the late incumbent's possession are:—Held: to be admissible evidence.—EARL v. LEWIS (1801), 4 Esp. 1, N. P.

382. — Survey.]—Held: an ecclesiastical survey, stating the vicar to be entitled to tithe-hay in the parish generally, did not supply the absence of proof of perception from the particular lands.—ARMSTRONG v. HEWITT (1817), 4 Price, 216; Wils. Ex. 119; 146 E. R. 444, Ex. Ch.

383. — Entries in churchwarden's book—Parish.]—On the question whether a place is parcel of a certain parish, old entries made by a churchwarden in a book, by which he did not charge himself, but in which he merely made statements relative to repairs, etc., done to a chapel in the parish church, alleged to belong to the place in question:—Held: not to be evidence.—COOKE v. BANKS (1826), 2 C. & P. 478, N. P.

384. — Assessment to church rate.]—Old assessments to church rate:—Held: to be evidence upon a question of boundary, though the parish officers did not charge themselves with the receipt of the rate, otherwise than by crosses set against the names of the parties rated.—PLAXTON v. DARE (1829), 10 B. & C. 17; 5 Man. & Ry. K. B. 1; 8 L. J. O. S. K. B. 98; 109 E. R. 357.

386. Award of inclosure commissioners—Whether conclusive as to antecedent parish boundaries.]—The determination of comrs. under an inclosure Act, as to the boundaries of a parish to be inclosed:—Held: not conclusive of the fact as to what were the boundaries antecedently to such determination.—R. v. ST. MARY, BURY ST.

*1. Award.]—*The question of a disputed boundary between occupants of Crown lands was referred in 1841 to the Comr. of Crown lands; he fixed the boundary. In 1863, the same boundary was disputed by the same parties:—Held: evidence of reference

387. — Waste of manor.]—In 1818 R. inclosed a piece of land of 11 perches, lying by the side of a lane which was a highway, in the manor of W. At that time G. was the owner in fee of the adjoining freehold land. In 1820 G. died, having devised his estate to H. for life, with remainders over. In 1836 a private Act was passed, by which comrs. were empowered to inclose & allot the wastes of the manor, including encroachments made within twenty years of the passing of the Act, & pieces of waste land lying by the sides of any public roads or lanes. In 1837 R. died, & F., his heir, took possession of the 11 perches. In 1838 the comrs. made & published their award, by which they awarded to H. two allotments, one of 24 perches, which included the 11 perches, & another of 29 perches similarly situate. H. took possession of the second allotment; but F. remained in possession of the piece of 11 perches, till he sold it, in 1859, to deft. In 1874 H. died, & pltf. succeeded to the estate under the will of G. He then brought ejectment against deft. to recover the 11 perches:—Held: the admission of H. against his interest, by accepting the allotment under the award, was strong evidence that the land was waste of the manor, & rebutted the presumption arising from the situation of the slips of land, that they belonged to him as owner of the adjoining land.—GERY v. REDMAN (1875), 1 Q. B. D. 161; 45 L. J. Q. B. 267; sub nom. REDMAN v. GERY, 24 W. R. 270.

388. Arbitrator's award—Private lands.]—Where a question of boundary was referred by a submission between A. & his tenant B. on the one side & C., a neighbouring landowner, on the other:—Held: the award was admissible evidence for C. in a subsequent action by him against B. although B. had in the meantime become tenant of the same land to another landlord under whom he now justified & who was not shown to be in privity with A.—BRETON v. KNIGHT (1837), cited in Roscoe's Evidence at N. P., 18th ed., Vol. I., at p. 220.

389. — Parish & county.]—On an issue respecting the boundary of a parish & county, an award in a suit (inter alios) in which the arbitrator set out the boundary as proved before him, & a verdict entered according to his direction:—Held: not admissible as evidence of such boundary.

Although verdicts are, upon authority, admitted as proof of reputation, the rule does not extend to awards.—EVANS v. REES (1839), 10 Ad. & El. 151; 2 Per. & Dav. 626; 113 E. R. 58.

*Annotations:—*Refd. Wenman v. Mackenzie (1855), 5 E. & B. 447. Mentd. Andrew v. Motley (1862) 12 C. B. N. S. 514.

390. Presentation by homage of manor—Mutilated document.]—An ancient presentment by the homage of a manor, in the form of a book, set out the boundaries of the manor, & then gave in alphabetical order the names of the several parishes within it, & of the tenants resident in each parish, but this part of the presentment contained nothing as to boundaries. Two or three sheets at the concluding part of it, where the parish of Y. should have followed in order, had been cut off, but it did not appear under what circumstances. In an action involving a question as to the boundary of the manor, where it was admitted that the manor & Y. were conterminous in the direction of the locus in quo:—Held: the presentment was admissible as evidence of the reputed boundary, for the document, although mutilated, was perfect in that part of it which related to the subject of the boundary.—EVANS v. REES (1839), 10 Ad. & El. 151; 2 Per. & Dav. 626; 113 E. R. 58.

SECT. 5.—PRIVATE DOCUMENTS.

391. Survey—Public sale of lands.]—In 1649, church lands were exposed for sale, & a survey taken. The lands were found to be the inheritance of the church of St. Paul's & as such sold for £9,500 & enjoyed by the purchasers till the restoration. On the survey being offered in evidence in proceedings in 1684, the reading of it was opposed because it had not any authority to warrant it:—Held: it was admissible in evidence.—IVY'S (LADY) TRIAL, MOSSAM v. IVY (1684), 10 State Tr. 555.

Annotation:—Mentd. Darby v. Ouseley (1856), 2 Jur. N. S.

392. Private lands.]—The question in ejectment being parcel or not parcel, a survey was offered in evidence on pltf.'s side, which was taken by one under whom the lessor claimed, wherein the lands in question were included:—Held: being an act to which the defts. were not privy, & consequently not bound, & being dangerous, & tending to encourage people to take more than their own into a survey, it should be rejected.—ANON. (1718), 1 Stra. 95; 93 E. R. 407, N. P.

393. — Manor.]—An old survey of two manors is good evidence of the boundaries of each inter se, if both manors belonged, at the time when the survey was taken, to the person who took it, otherwise it is not.—BRIDGMAN v. JENNINGS (1699), 1 Ld. Raym. 734; 91 E. R. 1390.

394. — —.]—An ancient survey of a manor made before comrs. appointed by the lord of the manor, & a jury of the tenants of the manor:—Held: admissible as evidence to show the boundaries of the manor.—TALBOT v. LEWIS (1831), 6 C. & P. 603, N. P.; subsequent proceedings, 1 Cr. M. & R. 495.

Annotation:—Refd. Cresce v. Barrett (1835), 5 Tyr. 458.

395. — —.]—A survey of a manor is admissible though not conclusive evidence as to the rights of persons having an interest therein.—BLANDY-JENKINS v. DUNRAVEN (EARL) (1898), 62 J. P. 661; subsequent proceedings, [1899] 2 Ch. 121, C. A.

Annotation:—Refd. Evans v. Merthyr Tydvil U. D. C. (1898), 79 L. T. 578.

396. — Lordship.]—Defts. for the purpose of proving that the Plas Bach was parcel of the lordship of D., tendered in evidence a survey, which ran thus: "Lordship of D. Survey taken in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, 11th. The presentment of the jury of survey for town lands within the Comot of K." Then followed a statement that David ap John ap David occupied certain parcels of land in K., & amongst them "Place Baghe," & in the margin were the words "Examined with demise. Acres 112. £1 3s. 4d." Defts. also put in evidence certain ministers' accounts taken in 39 Eliz. relating to a messuage in the tenure of David ap John ap David, situate in K. In the margin were the words, "Note, this is 6s. 6d. rent in the old survey in my Lord L.'s time":—Held: the survey being a private one was not admissible for the purpose of proving that the lands in question were parcel of the lordship of D.—DANIEL v. WILKIN (1852), 7 Exch. 429; 21 L. J. Ex. 236; 155 E. R. 1016; subsequent proceedings, 8 Exch. 156.

397. — Notes of surveyor.]—Field-book entries made by a deceased surveyor for the purpose of a survey on which he was professionally employed:—Held: admissible in evidence as being made in the discharge of professional duty.—MEILOR v. WALMESLEY, [1905] 2 Ch. 164; 74 L. J. Ch. 475; 93 L. T. 574; 53 W. R. 581; 21 T. L. R. 591; 49 Sol. Jo. 565, C. A.

398. Private map—Agreeing with ancient purchase.]—An old map of lands along with the writings & agreeing with the boundaries adjusted in an ancient purchase:—Held: admissible in evidence.—YATES v. HARRIS (1702), cited in 1 Stra. at p. 95, n.; 93 E. R. 407.

399. — Parish boundaries.]—Appl. admitted to have in his custody, a map or plan of the consolidated parishes, which appeared, from the date thereof, to have been made in 1648, & was entitled, "An exact description of the parishes of B. W. & B. N., in the county of N., setting forth their joint & several lines of perambulation, with all the parcels of land as they are now divided within the parish of B. W., & part of the parcels of land lying within the parish of B. N., & also some parcels of land lying in the adjoining parishes, measured, surveyed, & delineated, at the appointment of T. S., Esq., lord of the lordships & manor of R. alias L., alias B. L. & P. Hall, lying within the said parishes, per J. K., philomathemat.":—Held: the map was admissible in evidence.—*WILKINSON v. 398 l. Private map.]—A map produced from the custody of the son of the original owner of property & sworn to be the map upon which the land was originally sold was held admissible.—VAN EVERY v. DRAKE (1860), 9 C. P. 478.—CAN.

m. Private plan.]—In a dispute as to marches between two landowners, whose lands had at one time formed parts of the same barony, pursuer tendered as evidence an old plan.

It had been found in the possession of a third person, owner of another part of the original barony. It was not known on whose instructions or for what purpose the plan had been made. It had at one time passed with the titles of defenders' predecessors:—Held: competent evidence.—REID v. HALDANE'S TRUSTEE (1891), 18 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 744; 28 Sc. L. R. 511.—SCOT.

n. — Preserved for long time in charter chest.]—In a question of disputed boundaries, pursuer tendered in evidence an old plan of his estate which had been preserved in his charter chest for many years, but the origin of which was unknown:—Held: without deciding whether the plan should have been excluded or not, it did not, in the circumstances, furnish evidence of any kind; such anonymous plan or plans produced ex p. are prima facie not evidence.—*PLACE v. 402. Map of county—Republished.]—In order to show that a house was situated in the county of N. plff. tendered in evidence a map printed on paper from an engraved copper plate, having on the face of it these words: "A new map of the county of S., taken from the original map published by J. K. in 1736, who took an accurate survey of the whole county, now republished, with corrections & additions by J. & W. K., sons of the author, 1766, & engraved by J. R." The map was produced by a witness, who was a magistrate of the two counties, N. & S. He had bought it twelve years before the trial:—Held: the map was not admissible in evidence.—HAMMOND v. BRADSTREET (1854), 10 Exch. 390; 23 L. J. Ex. 332; 23 L. T. O. S. 271; 2 W. R. 625; 2 C. L. R. 1195, Ex. Ch.

403. County history—Boundary of manor.]—The manors of R. & S, the parishes of C. & Y., & the counties of B. & G., were coterminous:—Held: in an action in which the boundaries of the two manors came in question, a county history of the county of B., which stated the boundaries of the counties at this spot, was not receivable in evidence.—*EVANS v. 405. Bill & answer in Chancery.]—A grant of a several fishery had been made by the Crown to a corpn. There was a dispute as to the limits of the fishery. In an action against alleged trespassers, plff., the lessee of the corpn., tendered in evidence the bill & answer in Ch. in a suit instituted a great many years before, by another grantee of the Crown against the corpn., & in which the limits of the alleged fishery were described:—Held: as part of the history of the fishery & of the claims made to it, the bill & answer were admissible in evidence.—*MALCOLMSON v. o. Recital in mortgage—Description of boundary.]—Plff. sued in 1893 to recover possession of land. Defts. denied plff.'s title. Plff. tendered in evidence a mtge. of adjacent land executed in 1877, which set forth the boundaries of the land comprised in the mtge., & as one of such boundaries referred to the land in question as then

406. Corporation "Assembly book."]—Plff. tendered in evidence an "Assembly Book," belonging to a corpn., dated 1676, & containing entries of the rents due to the corpn. from its various tenants, among which were entries of rents paid in respect of a fishery:—Held: the book was admissible as an ancient document showing the exercise of acts of ownership.—*MALCOLMSON v. 408. Agreement for lease—Private lands.]—By a memorandum between A. & B., it was agreed that a question of boundary should be referred to some indifferent surveyor residing at a distance. By a further memorandum written on the same paper, at a subsequent day, it was agreed that the question should be settled by C. The lessees of A. & B. were not parties to the agreement:—Held: the agreement was evidence for the lessee of A. against the lessee of B., after proof that the lessee of B. had applied to A. for a lease of the spot in dispute, in case the decision should be against B., & that he was present when the boundary was staked out by the referee.—*TAYLOR v. 409. Recital in agreement—Parish boundary.]—By a rate for the relief of the poor of the parish of T. applt. was rated as the occupier of the N. estate. From the year 1698, up to the time the rate was made, N. had maintained its own poor, & had never been charged with the support of the poor of any other place. On Apr. 1, 1858, an agreement relating to the N. estate was found by P. among the title-deeds of a large estate in the parish of T. of which he was owner. The agreement purported to have been made in 1698, between a former owner of the N. estate & certain parishioners & owners of land in T. parish, & it was thereby agreed that, notwithstanding the N. estate was lying & being in T. parish, it should be in no way liable to maintain & keep, or be at any charges for maintaining any poor that should at any time be in any other part of T. parish, but only such as should come from the N. estate. It was sealed by the owner of the estate:—Held: this was an instrument which might reasonably be expected to be found among the title deeds of a large estate in the parish, & was admissible in evidence to show that the N. estate was part of T. parish.—R. v. MYTTON (1860), 2 E. & E. 557; 121 E. 410. Inscription on boundary wall.]—Where there is on the face of a boundary wall of a house an inscription, stating that it is the property of another person, the vendor of the house cannot, in the absence for more than twenty years of any acts of ownership by the person so stated to be the owner of the wall, rely upon adverse possession as giving him a title to the wall.—PHILLIPSON v. GIBBON (1871), 6 Ch. App. 428; 40 L. J. Ch. 406; 24 L. T. 602; 35 J. P. 676; 19 W. R. 661, L. J. J. Annotation:—Mentd. Union Lighterage Co. v. London Graving Dock Co., [1902] 2 Ch. 557.

411. Particulars of sale at auction.]—A conveyance of a right of several fishery by the owner to a purchaser did not in express terms include the bed of the river. The particulars of sale at the auction at which the purchaser bought, stated, that the sale did not include the ownership of the bed of the river:—Held: these particulars were admissible evidence to rebut the presumption that the bed of the river was intended to pass with the grant of the fishery.—ECROYD v. COULTHARD, [1897] 2 Ch. 554; 66 L. J. Ch. 751; 77 L. T. 357; 61 J. P. 791; 46 W. R. 119; affd., [1898] 2 Ch. 358, C. A.

412. Agreement to stay proceedings for trespass on land in dispute—Whether private land or common.]—In an action brought to determine the title to certain land, plff. tendered in evidence an ancient document coming from the proper custody which purported to be signed by M., a tenant of a predecessor in title of deft., & which stated that J., a predecessor in title of plff., had been persuaded to stop all proceedings at law that he then had against M. for wilfully & without leave bringing his sheep & cattle on to J.'s freehold land therein specified, which was assumed to be part of the land in dispute, for which wilful trespass M. bound himself to pay costs, & that he would for the future keep his own & other people's sheep & cattle from trespassing on the land to the utmost of his power:—Held: the document was admissible in evidence, not as an admission by the tenant as to title, in which case it would not be evidence against the landlord, but as evidence of an act of ownership by a predecessor in title of plff.—BLANDY-JENKINS v. DUNRAVEN (EARL), [1899] 2 Ch. 121; 68 L. J. Ch. 589; 81 L. T. 209; 43 Sol. Jo. 656, C. A.

413. Right of perambulation—Removal of obstructions.]—Parishioners cannot allege a right by prescription to abate nuisances & obstructions to their perambulation in Rogation-Week.—GOODDAY v. MICHELL (1595), Cro. Eliz. 441; Owen, 71; 78 E. R. 681.

Annotations:—Expld. Taylor v. Devey (1837), 7 Ad. & El. 409. In Goodday v. Michell the justification failed, but the defect was in the mode of pleading, for deft.'s right was thought to be placed on prescription, & not on custom, &, besides, the bar did not embrace all the trespasses laid in the declaration (LORD DENMAN, C.J.).

414. — Evidence of.]—Evidence of a custom to perambulate the boundaries of a parish is not sufficient to support the allegation in the pleas of a right to perambulate the boundaries of the liberty.—GRANT v. KEARNEY (1823), 12 Price, 773; 147 E. R. 798.

415. When admissible—Notice to other party—Boundaries of parishes.]—There was a common on which the inhabitants of the parishes of A. & B. had, from time immemorial, intercommoned; those of B. had always repaired part of a road across it. Under an Act of Parliament to inclose the lands in A., F., a part of the common, was set off for the inhabitants of B. which under an Act to inclose the lands in B. was allotted amongst them. The church-rates, poor-rates, & land tax for F. after the inclosure were paid by the inhabitants of B. A question arose, whether F. was not within the parish of A., because by reputation the whole of the common had been considered as being in A., & its inhabitants had in their perambulations, taken it in as belonging to them. The jury having found that F. was in the parish of B.:—Held: a new trial must be refused, perambulations being no evidence, unless the adjoining parish had notice of them.—WARREN v. SHUTTLEWORTH (1823), 1 L. J. O. S. K. B. 214.

416. — — — Boundaries of waste of manor.]—On the question whether certain land be part of plff.'s estate, or waste of the manor, a perambulation of such manor, by the lord, including the land in question, is evidence, as showing an assertion of ownership by the lord, though it be not proved that any person on behalf of plff. was present at the perambulation, or knew of it.—WOOLWAY v. ROWE (1834), 1 Ad. & El. 114; 3 Nev. & M. K. B. 849; 3 L. J. K. B. 121; 110 E. R. 1151.

417. — — — Boundaries of hundred or manor.]—A perambulation of a hundred is not usual; but there is no reason why a hundred, as well as a parish or a manor, should not thus have its bounds ascertained (COZENS-HARDY, M.R.).—CHESTERFIELD (LORD) v. HARRIS, [1908] 2 Ch. 397; 77 L. J. Ch. 688; 99 L. T. 558; 24 T. L. R. 763; 52 Sol. Jo. 639, C. A.; affd. sub nom. HARRIS v. CHESTERFIELD (EARL), [1911] A. C. 623, H. L.

418. Proof of course of perambulation—Entries in parish books.]—Plea, to trespass for breaking & entering plff.'s dwelling-house, that the house was in the parish of B. in which there was an immemorial custom for all the parishioners to go through the house, upon their perambulations of the parish boundaries, on the Thursday in Rogation-Week, every third year; & justification under the custom. Issue being joined on a traverse of the custom, & a verdict found for defts.:—Held: (1) it could not be assumed, on this plea, that the house stood on the boundary, & the custom was bad, as pleaded; (2) entries in the parish books, recording the fact that the perambulations had taken a particular line, would not be evidence upon such an issue.—*TAYLOR v. SECT. 7.—OTHER ACTS OF OWNERSHIP.

419. Admissibility of evidence—Land within same manor—Strip of land by highway.]—Where the question was, whether a slip of land between some old enclosures & the highway, vested in the lord of the manor or the owner of the adjoining freehold:—Held: evidence might be received of acts of ownership by the lord of the manor on similar slips of land not adjoining his own freehold, in various parts of the manor.—DOE d. BARRETT v. KEMP (1831), 7 Bing. 332; 5 Moo. & P. 173; 9 L. J. O. S. C. P. 102; 131 E. R. 128; subsequent proceedings (1835), 2 Bing. N. C. 102, Ex. Ch.

420. —.].—A conveyance by the lord of part of the desmesne of the manor described the land as "All that piece or parcel of meadow ground commonly called or known by the name or description of Chamberlain's Field, containing by estimation 3 a. 3 r. 35 p., be the same more or less, & abutting towards the west on H. Lane." The deed also contained the general words,—"Together with all ways, etc., & appurtenances to the said messuage, etc., lands, etc., belonging, or therewith used, possessed, occupied or enjoyed, or accepted, reputed, taken, or known as part, parcel, or member thereof, or as appurtenant or belonging thereto."—Upon a special case, in which it was provided that the ct. should be at liberty to draw inferences as a jury, it appeared that the grantee of Chamberlain's Field & those claiming under him had for sixty years used a small strip of land lying between the field & H. Lane as a place of deposit for manure. that about the year 1841, the present owner cut & converted to his own use a tree which grew thereon, & that in 1843 he inclosed the strip. There was evidence that the lord of the manor had both before & since the date of the conveyance exercised various acts of ownership over other similar strips of land by the roadside, in other parts of the manor, the nearest of which was about three quarters of a mile distant from the spot in question:—Held: assuming the language of the deed to be doubtful or ambiguous, the evidence of user by the grantee and those claiming under him was sufficient to outweigh the presumption in favour of the lord arising from the acts of ownership by him on other parts of the waste of the manor similarly situated.—SIMPSON v. DENDY (1860), 8 C. B. N. S. 433; 6 Jur. N. S. 1197; 141 E. R. 1233; affd. (1861), 9 W. R. 743, Ex. Ch.

421. —. —. —.].—The lords of the manor of C. claimed as waste of their manor two strips alongside a public highway as against defts., adjoining owners. The land in dispute with other adjoining strips on the south was bounded on the side away from the road by a ditch & hedge. Pltfs. proved customary grants & admissions by the lords over a strip of land on the same side of the road & to the north of that in dispute as part of their manor, & enfranchisement of land separated by one field from the other side of the road to the east of the land in dispute; also that a strip of land contiguous to that land on the south & bordering the road had been waste of the manor. They further tendered evidence of persons who stated that they had been told that the strips in dispute were waste within the manor, & also a map publicly used which they alleged tended to prove the manor boundaries:—Held: (1) although pltfs. had proved physical similarity in character between the land in dispute & the strips to the north & south of it, acts of ownership over such strips were not admissible as evidence of ownership of the land in dispute as referring to one close or parcel of land; (2) in order to make such evidence applicable it was also necessary for pltfs. to prove that the land in dispute was within the manor of C; (3) the evidence tendered for that purpose was not evidence of reputation at all, but only the expression of opinion, & the action must be dismissed.—LEEKE v. PORTSMOUTH CORPN. (1912), 107 L. T. 260; 56 Sol. Jo. 705; 76 J. P. Jo. 340.

422. —. —. —. Strip of land by river.]—W. was lord of a manor abutting on a river, & bounded by the medium filum. V. was owner of a freehold orchard within the manor, having a fence parallel to the river, & between the fence & the river was a strip of land. W. brought an action of trespass against V. for acts done on the strip, & gave in evidence acts of ownership. V. also gave in evidence acts of ownership, & tendered evidence that a similar strip, being a continuation of V.'s strip, belonged to the owner of the freehold next to V.'s, & further down the river, both being also within the same manor:—Held: the evidence was admissible, though of little weight.—*VAUGHAN v. Unenclosed adjacent commons.]—Where pltf. being possessed of house & land in E. had for 60 years exercised rights of common in W., but it appeared that this was done near the boundary of the two commons of W. & E., which lay open & uninclosed adjacent to each other; & it also appeared that the parties did not, at the time, know the exact boundary, & pltf. had on a previous inclosure of the E. common obtained an allotment there in respect of his estate:—Held: it was for the jury to say, whether the evidence was referable to an exercise of the right in E. & a mistake of the boundary, or to an exercise of the right in W.—*HETHERINGTON v. SECT. 8.—DISCOVERY, INSPECTION, AND INTERROGATORIES.

427. General rule—By defendant—Lease—Contiguous lands.]—Pltf.'s grandfather being seised of a moiety of certain lands, made a lease thereof to deft.'s father for 3 lives, under a certain rent. The lands being contiguous, & adjoining to other lands of deft., could not be known, for the fences had been thrown down, & the boundaries destroyed. Pltf. exhibited a bill to have a discovery thereof. Deft. demurred, because pltf. had not sworn that the counterpart of the lease was lost:—Held: deft. must answer as to the boundaries.—GLYNN v. SCAWEN (1675), Cas. temp. Finch, 239; 23 E. R. 131.

428. ——— Mining rights.]—This was an action to restrain defts. from getting any coals or other materials in the mines under a farm comprised in a lease granted by the Marquis of Bute to four persons, named, now represented by pltf.s., the co., & two trustees. The above farm was bounded by another farm, the property of Mrs. G. Both were mountain farms, consisting partly of uninclosed lands. The boundary between the latter portions of the farms was indicated by boundary stones. The complaint of pltf.s. was that in the course of their workings they discovered that deft. co. had extended their workings beyond their boundary into the coal under pltf.s.' farm. Pltf.s. had endeavoured to obtain production of deft. co.'s lease, so that they might discover what the parcels were & see the plans therein, but the applications were resisted on the ground that the action was one in respect of trespass, which defts. denied, but which, if established, there would be accounts & inquiries as to the coal alleged to have been got by defts. under pltf.s.' land:—Held: pltf.s. were entitled to production & inspection of the lease so far as the parcels, whether in the recitals or the operative part, & the plans were concerned, but the other parts of the lease would be sealed up.—WAYNE'S MERTHYR CO. v. POWELL'S DYFFRYN STEAM COAL CO., [1880] W. N. 141.

429. ——— Deeds—Contiguous lands.]—A. having lands contiguous to B. brought his bill, that B. may discover the boundaries of his estate, as they appeared by his deeds:—Held: B. was not obliged to make this discovery.—HUNGERFORD v. GOREING (1687), 2 Vern. 38; 23 E. R. 635.

430. ——— Lands of which Crown co-owner.]—Title-deeds referred to & partially set out in an answer, without deft. by such answer objecting to the production of them, & which relate to a manor, in which the Crown is jointly interested with the party granting will be ordered to be produced. The same rule applies to title-deeds relating to the boundaries of estates belonging to the Crown & deft.—A.-G. v. LAMBE (1838), 3 Y. & C. Ex. 162; 8 L. J. Ex. Eq. 23; 2 Jur. 698; 160 E. R. 656.

Annotation:—Mentd. Smith v. Beaufort (1842), 1 Hare, 507.

431. ——— Manor lands.]—Where the issue was whether certain lands formed part of a manor, pltf. alleging the negative & deft. the affirmative, deft. admitted the possession of deeds relating to the matters in the bill, but denied they showed pltf.'s title:—Held: as the parcels & boundaries might establish pltf.'s case, he was entitled to production, sealing up the other parts.—JENKINS v. BUSHBY (1866), 35 L. J. Ch. 400.

Annotation:—Refd. Bewicke v. Graham (1881), 7 Q. B. D. 400.

432. ——— Parish rate & minute books—Parish boundary.]—Upon a bill of discovery in aid of an action to try whether pltf.'s house was within the limits of a certain parish, & liable to the parochial rates, the ct. ordered defts., the parish officers, to produce for his inspection the rate-books, account-books, minute-books, orders, & other documents which related to the matter in question, & were admitted by their answer to be in their possession.—BURRELL v. NICHOLSON (1833), 1 My. & K. 680; 39 E. R. 838.

433. ——— Documents—Nature of document misconceived.]—Although deft. to an action swears that certain documents, which are in his possession & are material to the matter in issue, form & support his own title, & do not contain anything which could form or support pltf.'s case or impeach the defence, the ct. will not act on such oath, at least in proceedings excepted by Ord. 62 from the rules under Jud. Act, 1875 (c. 77), but will order such documents to be produced, if, from the whole of deft.'s answer or from the description of the documents given by deft., the ct. is reasonably certain that deft. has erroneously represented or misconceived the nature of such documents.—*A.-G. v. 434. ——— By plaintiff—Deeds—Compulsory purchase.]—Where lands had been taken by a co. under the compulsory clauses, & the owners by their bill sought the completion of the purchase by the co., for which they had given the notice, or the redelivery of the land, & defts. denied pltf.'s title to the land:—Held: defts. were entitled to see the parcels with a view to an ascertainment of the boundaries, but not the operative parts of the deeds.—LIND v. ISLE OF WIGHT FERRY CO. (1860), 2 L. T. 503; 8 W. R. 540.

437. ———— By mortgagee—Unsettled part of estate.]—Where a mtge. has been made by the owner of an estate partly settled, partly unsettled, & during the possession of that owner the boundaries have been confounded; & if a person entitled under the settlement has filed a bill to compel the mtgee. to set out, not the title by which he claims, but the metes & bounds of the estate, subject to his mtge., such mtgee. cannot plead in bar to the discovery. —*STRODE v. 439. ———— Forfeiture involved.]—A bill, by a lord of a manor, praying a discovery of the boundaries of copyholds, against a copyholder, & charging him with having confounded the boundaries, ought to waive the forfeiture. Even though the forfeiture be not waived, the copyholder cannot, by demurrer, protect himself from answering those parts of the bill, which do not allege acts or circumstances tending to produce a forfeiture. —DURHAM (BP.) v. RIPPON (1825), 2 Coop. temp. Cott. 215; 4 L. J. O. S. Ch. 32; 47 E. R. 1133.

440. ———— Gradual encroachment.]—A bill filed against a canal co. alleged that the co. had for several years been gradually encroaching upon the land of pltf. whose property adjoined the canal, & prayed for a commission to ascertain the boundaries :—Held : the co. were bound to produce maps of the canal, & also leases of the adjoining lands, which pltf. alleged to comprise part of his property, notwithstanding that the co. insisted by their answer that they related to their own title & not to the title of pltf. —BUTE (MARQUIS) v. GLAMORGANSHIRE CANAL CO. (1845), 1 Ph. 681; 15 L. J. Ch. 60; 6 L. T. O. S. 253; 9 Jur. 1063; 41 E. R. 791, L. C.

Annotation :—Mentd. Lloyd v. Purves (1858), 6 W. R. 421.

441. ———— Tenant.]—If a tenant hold lands of his own together with demised lands, it is his duty to keep the boundaries distinct, & if he allow them to become confused, he is bound, if necessary, to produce his own title deeds to elucidate the matter. —SOUTHWELL (CHAPTER) v. THOMPSON (1837), 6 L. J. Ch. 196.

442. ———— Lessee.]—Deft. had a freehold interest in certain premises & was also assignee of the lease of other adjoining premises, the reversion of which was in the lessor of pltf. Deft. for some time previous to, & until the end of the term, occupied the freehold & leasehold premises together, & as the lessor of pltf. stated, had obliterated the boundaries between them. On the expiration of the lease, the lessor of pltf. brought ejectment to recover a portion of the land which he claimed as parcel of the leasehold, & alleged that deft. claimed as his freehold; & he prayed to be permitted to inspect the lease, the assignment of the lease to deft., & the conveyance of the freehold to the latter, alleging that he believed that the parcels in the lease & in the conveyance of the freehold would help to make out his case :—Held : he was entitled to inspect the lease, if he had no counter-part, & also the assignment but not the conveyance of the freehold, as that deed did not prove any part of pltf.'s title to the land he sought to recover. —DORR d. AVERY v. LANGFORD (1852), Bail Ct. Cas. 37; 21 L. J. Q. B. 217.

Annotation :—Mentd. Price v. Harrison (1860), 6 Jur. N. S. 1345.

443. ————.]—At the expiration of a lease the reversioner found difficulty in identifying certain part of the property which had been generally described in the original lease as "seven & a half acres of pasture or meadow land lying dispersedly in the common fields at Walworth, commonly called Lock's Fields." The property had during the lease been underlet & dealt with by instruments, some of which contained particular descriptions, which, as the reversioner contended would help him to identify the houses & lands now in deft.'s occupation as his property, & he filed this bill for discovery of such under-leases & instruments :—Held : pltf. was entitled to the discovery. —BROWN v. WALES (1872), L. R. 15 Eq. 142; 42 L. J. Ch. 45; 27 L. T. 410; 21 W. R. 157. Annotation :—Consd. Lyell v. Kennedy (1883), 8 App. Cas. 217.

444. Inspection—Removal of obstruction—Common Law Procedure Act, 1854 (c. 125), s. 58.]—In an action by pltf. against defts., owners of an adjoining mine, pltf. having been allowed inspection of deft.'s workings for the purpose of seeing whether defts. had worked across their boundary & removed his coal, found, at the boundary between pltf.'s & defts.' minerals, a newly erected wall, which prevented him from seeing whether there was any encroachment behind it. An application for leave to take down part of this wall having been refused, pltf. obtained an order of a judge that he should be at liberty, so far as was necessary for the purpose of inspecting defts.' mine at & behind the wall, to make a drift-way through the wall, upon certain terms therein stated. Upon application to set aside the order :—Held : the cts. of common law had, as ancillary to the power of inspection given by C. L. P. Act, 1854, s. 58, the same power to remove obstructions, with a view to inspection, which was exercised by the cts. of equity, & the judge had jurisdiction to make the order. —BENNETT v. GRIFFITHS (1861), 3 E. & E. 467; 30 L. J. Q. B. 98; 3 L. T. 745; 7 Jur. N. S. 284; 9 W. R. 332; 121 E. R. 517.

Annotation :—Refd. Perkins v. L. & N. W. Ry. Co. (1874), 1 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 327.

445. Interrogatories—Commonable rights.]—B. & N., two landowners in the parish of M., brought an action for a declaration that a piece of land formed part of M. Common, & to establish commonable rights thereover. N. sued as owner in fee of a beerhouse & three cottages, & pltf. pleaded the exercise of the rights claimed from time immemorial. Deft. was the lord of an adjacent manor, & his defence was that the piece of land never formed part of M. Common, but was common land forming part of his own manor that if pltfs. ever had any rights of common thereon such rights had been extinguished; that some of the rights claimed could only be used in respect of ancient tenements, & that the beerhouse & three cottages in respect of which N. sued had no land held therewith. After the defence had been delivered deft. administered interrogatories to pltfs., asking in effect:—(1) how long pltfs. had been owners or occupiers of their properties, & for what estates, what was the tenure thereof, & whether those lands were within the limits of any & what actual & reputed manors, & whether any such premises were ancient messuages, & whether the beerhouse & three cottages had any & what lands appurtenant thereto or held therewith; (2) whether pltfs. or their predecessors in title, as proprietors or occupiers of any lands in M., or under any other alleged title, had exercised the rights claimed upon any & what parts of M. Common, or upon any & what part of the piece of land in question; (3) asking pltfs. to set forth particulars of their exercise of such rights, & whether they did so by any license or in consideration of any & what payment. Pltfs. objected to answer these interrogatories on the ground that they related exclusively to their own title & to the evidence they should adduce at the hearing:—Held: (1) pltf. N. must answer so much of the first interrogatory as asked whether the beerhouse & cottages had any lands appurtenant thereto or held therewith, because he had not pleaded that they had, & deft. had pleaded that they had not, but the rest of the interrogatories need not be answered, because they were in effect directed to the discovery of the evidence by which pltfs. intended to prove their case at the hearing; (2) on appeal, the question being left to the Ct. of Appeal as arbitrators to settle what parts of the interrogatories should be answered, pltfs. must answer further parts of them.—BIDDER v. BRIDGES (1885), 29 Ch. D. 29; 54 L. J. Ch. 798; 52 L. T. 455; 33 W. R. 792, C. A.; subsequent proceedings 54 L. T. 529.

446. — Contiguous strips of land by highway.]
—In an action to recover possession of two strips of land forming part of one continuous strip lying on one side of a road & alleged to be waste within pltfs.' manor, pltfs. intimated that at the trial they intended to show acts of ownership by them over parts of the strip contiguous to & at greater distance from the parts of the strip in dispute in the action. They proposed to interrogate defts. as to facts concerning defts.' acquisition of other parts of the strip not in dispute lying between inclosures of defts. & the road:—Held: the interrogatories ought to be allowed, the answers to be admissible when pltfs. had established that they were the owners of the manor, & that the whole strip lay within the manor, & was of one continuous character.—LEEKE v. PORTSMOUTH CORPN. (1912), 106 L. T. 627; 76 J. P. Jo. 159; subsequent proceedings 107 L. T. 260.

Part I.—Application of Terms.

1. Who is a "builder"—Person building for profit.]—A builder is a person who builds either on his own or another's land for profit.—Re NEIRINCKS, Ex p. NEIRINCKS (1835), 1 Deac. 78; 2 Mont. & A. 384; 4 L. J. Bcy. 73, Ct. of R.

2. — Bankruptcy law—Isolated transaction.]—A party, by profession a barrister, took a lease of three pieces of building ground, & at his own expense erected thereon upwards of two hundred houses, which he let as opportunity offered. Upon a trial at law, the jury found that he did not buy & sell building materials for profit, was not a builder, in the sense of being ready to build a house for any one who would give him an order, & meant to confine himself to the above-mentioned speculations, & did not intend generally to embark in other building speculations:—Held: he was not a builder within the bkpcy. law.—*Re STEWART, Ex p. PART I.

a. Architect—Who may be registered as—New Zealand Institute of Architects Act, 1913, s. 8 (1) (b).]—An appet. who has the qualifications prescribed by the above Act has a legal right to be registered as a member of the institute, & the council has no power to require as a condition of registration that he shall sign a declaration that he will not be interested or concerned in the profits of any building operations, or in the acceptance of any trade discounts from any builder, merchant, or tradesman dealing with materials for building. A regulation made by the institute which seeks to impose the signing of such a declaration as a condition of membership, or which empowers the council to expel or suspend any member becoming so interested or concerned, is ultra vires, since such a regulation is inconsistent with the rights & privileges which the Act confers.—HAMILTON v. CUMMING,

d. — — — — — Necessity for registration—Quebec.]—QUEBEC ASSOCN. OF ARCHITECTS v. PARADIS (1915), Q. R. 48 S. C. 220.—CAN.

e. Engineer—Who may qualify as—Compliance with the statute.]—The statute incorporating the Canadian Society of Civil Engineers gives the right to become a member to every one who practised as a civil engineer in Quebec at the time of the passing of the Act. Pltf., claiming to have satisfied this requirement, presented a request for admission containing allegations of fact to satisfy the law, verified by his own deposition under oath. On the refusal of the society to comply with his request, he prayed a peremptory writ of mandamus be issued to effect his purpose:—Held: it was not for the ct. to decide whether pltf. was qualified as a civil engineer, or whether he had pursued the studies & possessed the knowledge requisite for a civil engineer, but only whether he had practised as a civil engineer at the time of the passing of the Act.—TACHE v. SOCIETY OF CANADIAN CIVIL ENGINEERS (1904), Q. R. 26 S. C. 215.—CAN.

6. Tender—Oral acceptance—Terms embodied.]

—A., a railway contractor, met B., & several others, in order to receive tenders with reference to certain work. A. then read a specification with reference to the work in question, after which B. & the others handed in their tenders. B.'s tender was signed with his name, but there was no evidence that it was in his handwriting:—

—ALLEN v. YOXALL (1844), 1 Car. & Kir. 315, N. P.

7. — Acceptance of lowest—Custom.]—Where pltf. sent in to N., the agent of defts., a tender for the execution of certain buildings:—Held: the judge was right, on the evidence before him, in concluding that according to the custom in the trade, pltf.'s tender being the lowest, had been accepted, although N. had no absolute authority to accept the lowest.—PAULING v. PONTIFEX (1852), 2 Saund. & M. 59; 20 L. T. O. S. 126; 16 J. P. 792; 1 W. R. 64.

8. — Whether acceptance conditional—Additional words.]—A tender having been made by deft. to do work for a certain price, pltf. accepted, but added the words: "We will have to complete same in twelve months. We will begin work on Monday":—Held: those words amounted only to a direction, & not to a condition.—TYSON v. CROWTHER (1863), 2 New Rep. 168.

9. — Quantity indefinite.]—In May, 1895, the Admty. were engaged in erecting a breakwater, & required large quantities of rough stone. They entered into communication with resps., stone merchants, who filled up the following form of tender, of which the outlines were printed:—"We, the undersigned, do hereby agree to de-

6 i. Tender—Oral acceptance.]—Where the conditions under which a tender to erect a building is made, provide for a written acceptance, a verbal acceptance is not sufficient.—FRIPP v. UPTON (1884), 3 N. Z. L. R. 237.—N.Z.

g. — Time for acceptance.]—In an action for implement of an offer to execute the mason work required for the erection of a house in A. made by deft. to pltf.'s architect on June 10, & accepted by pltf. on June 21, deft. maintained there was no concluded contract, for his offer had not been accepted within seven days as provided by one of a number of conditions of tendering agreed to by the architects & builders of A., & in any view there had been undue delay in accepting his offer:—Held: (1) the conditions were not to be regarded as implied conditions in building contracts in A., but rather as rules for the guidance of architects; (2) even if regarded as conditions, the condition in question contemplated cases where the whole tenders fell to be received by a definite date, & fixed seven days for the architect considering them, & did not apply to deft.'s offer; (3) the offer had been accepted without undue delay, & was binding.—MURRAY v. RENNIE (1897), 24 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 965.—SCOT.

h. — Conditional acceptance—Conditions not performed.]—H. tendered for the construction of a line of railway pursuant to an advertisement for tenders, & his offer was conditionally accepted. At the same time H. executed a bond reciting the fact of the tender & conditioned, within four days, to provide two acceptable sureties & deposit 5 per cent. of the amount of his tender in the Bank of M., & also to execute all necessary arrangements for the commencement & completion of the work by specified dates, & the prosecution thereof until completed. These conditions were not performed & the contract was eventually given to other persons:—Held: (1) the agreement made by the bond was unilateral; (2) the railway co. was under no obligation to accept the sureties offered or to give H. the contract; (3) the bond & agreement for the construction of the work were to be contemporaneous acts, & as no such agreement was entered into H. was not liable on the bond.—BRANTFORD, WATERLOO, & LAKE ERIE RY. CO. v. HUFFMAN (1891), 19 S. C. R. 336.—CAN.

k. — Effect of acceptance—Written unsigned tender.]—A written tender by a builder offering to erect a building at a stated price, though not signed by the builder or by his authority, becomes a binding & enforceable contract on its acceptance, such a contract not being within Sale of Goods Act or Stat. Frauds.—WEBB & SONS v. WILLIAMS (1907), 27 N. Z. L. R. 456.—N.Z.

l. — Deposit as guarantee of good faith.]—Pltfs. sent to defts. a tender in writing for the erection of a school-house for $45,000, & with it a cheque for $2,000 "as a guarantee of good faith." The tender was accepted by defts., but, after negotiations, pltfs. declined to do the work liver (see plan annexed) cap & roach stone (rough) approximate amount 2,000,000 tons, in accordance with specification for 4d. per ton. It is believed that a considerably larger amount is obtainable, but as the amount required is not stated we have not verified this. Dated Sept. 7, 1895." On Oct. 2, the Admty. sent to resps. the following letter:—"Your tender dated Sept. 7, 1895, is accepted for the supply for the new breakwater of about 2,000,000 tons, or such quantity as may be required, of cap & roach stone (rough), in accordance with specification at the rate of 4d. per ton, on the understanding that the stone be taken in such quantities & from such position as may be considered by the Admty. superintending officer the most desirable for the Admty. works. Your claim should be made out on the attached form, & forwarded with the goods to the officer in charge of works for his certificate." In accordance with the above tender & acceptance of tender, resps. supplied cap & roach stone to the Admty. for the purposes of the breakwater, & the Admty. accepted the stone so supplied & paid for same, until Jan. 15, 1898, when the Admty. ceased to draw stone from resps.' stone heaps, & refused to receive any further supply of cap & roach stone from them. Resps. having presented a petition of right for damage for breach of contract:—Held: in the tender & acceptance of tender there was no contractual obligation to take 2,000,000 tons but only to take stone in such quantities & at such times as the Admty. might require, i.e., the contractors were to supply the stone in the quantities specified from time to time when the Admty. demanded it, & there was at no time an undertaking to take a definite quantity, & resps.' petition of right failed.—A.-G. v. STEWARDS & CO., LTD. (1901), 18 T. L. R. 131, H. L.

Annotations:—Reid. Berk v. International Explosives Co. (1901), 7 Com. Cas. 20; Kensington & Knightsbridge Electric Lighting Co. v. Notting Hill Electric Lighting Co. (1918), 87 L. J. K. B. 565.

10. — Misrepresentation as to conditions—

unless paid a larger price than $45,000. The tender was not under pltfs.' corporate seal, but was signed by the managing director with the name of the co. & his own designation. It was admitted by pltfs. that the managing director had authority to send in the tender:—Held: (1) defts. were justified in assuming the $2,000 was deposited with them in response to their call for tenders; (2) "guarantee of good faith" meant the tender was made in good faith, & pltfs., if the tender should be accepted, would enter into the necessary contract.—BRANDON CONSTRUCTION CO. v. SASKATOON SCHOOL BOARD (1912), 21 W. L. R. 949; 2 W. W. R. 870; reversd. 6 Sask. L. R. 273.—CAN.

m. — Mistake in offer.]—A., a contractor, by letter offered to execute for B. carpentry work according to specifications for a lump sum, & the offer was accepted. A. having refused to implement the contract, B. raised an action of damages against him. Deft. stated & proved that his son, who made the offer for him, had in his private calculation gone over the schedule of measurements & quantities, & marked down the prices of each item, but in making the summation of the whole items, he had accidentally omitted a number of items, with the result that the offer was less than it should have been, in consequence of which error, deft. pleaded he was entitled to resile:—Held: deft. was not entitled to resile, & was liable in damages for breach of contract.—SEATON BRICK & TILE CO., LTD. v. MITCHELL (1900), 2 F. (Ct. of Sess.) 550.—SCOT.

Right to rescind.]—Defts. advertised for tenders for the construction of reservoirs. Pltfs., a firm of contractors, sent in a tender, which was accepted. Upon their attending to examine the drawings, specifications & general conditions, the assistant engineer of defts., in answer to a question, said the conditions were the ordinary conditions. Pltfs., upon subsequently reading the conditions, found that they were unusual, refused to go on with the contract, & sought to recover £101 1s., which they had paid as a deposit:—Held: pltfs. were entitled to recover.—MOSS & CO., LTD. v. SWANSEA CORPN. (1910), 74 J. P. 351.

11. — Letter after acceptance—Whether binding.]—A firm of contractors tendered for the execution of certain work for the Comrs. of Works. The tender having been accepted, a contract in writing, to be signed & sealed on behalf of both parties, was prepared. Before the execution of this document by the Comrs. of Works the contractors wrote to say that they were sending the contract executed by them “on the assumption that in the event of the Bill dealing with the workmen’s insurance now before Parliament becoming law, the payments thereunder which will fall upon this co. as employers will be recouped to the co. under clause 15 of the contract.” No reply was received to this letter, & the contract was executed by the Comrs. of Works:—Held: the Comrs. were not bound by the terms of the letter, nor estopped from relying upon the true construction of the sealed contract.—LESLIE & CO. v. COMRS. OF WORKS (1914), 78 J. P. 462.

12. Strike clause in small print—Whether binding.]—Pltfs. contracted to fit up a shop within a specified time. The contract was expressed to be subject to the terms & conditions set out in a type-written specification which contained a strike clause printed as part of the heading but in very small type. In an action by pltfs. for work & labour done, defts. counter-claimed under a time clause in the contract. It

q. Estimate — Whether condition or warranty as to cost.—There was a dispute as to the amount payable by deft. to pltfs. The agreement contained this clause: “We” (pltfs.) “estimate the cost of building the house, as shown on the plans submitted to us, to be about $3,500.” Certain alterations were specified by deft. after this estimate was given:—Held: the estimate was not a condition limiting pltfs. as to amount, nor a warranty, being merely an expression of pltfs.’ judgment.—MACKISSOCK & THOMAS, LTD. v. BLACK (1912), 21 W. L. R. 424; 2 W. W. R. 465.—CAN.

r. Ascertainment of terms — From plans & specifications.—Plans & specifications drawn for the erection of buildings, the specifications being divided under the headings, “notes,” “conditions,” & “specifications,” referred to in the contract, & initialed by the parties thereto, all bound up together & forming one document, must be read together as constituting one entire contract.—RYAN v. CARLETON PLACE VILLAGE (1900), 31 O. R. 639.—CAN.

s. — Contract modifying terms of specification.—Pltfs. entered into a contract with defts. to provide all the materials & perform all the work in the erection & completion of a building, according to certain plans & specifications. After the walls were up & the roof & concrete floors in, an accident occurred to the basement walls, resulting in considerable damage, & defts. terminated the employment of pltfs., under the provisions of the contract, & completed the building themselves, asserting that the damage was due to the default of pltfs., & that pltfs. refused to repair it except as extra work for which they should be paid. Pltfs. sued for the balance alleged to be due under the contract for work done & materials supplied, including a large amount for extras, up to the time their employment was terminated. They alleged the accident to the walls was due to the negligence or lack of judgment of the architects, & that they (pltfs.) were not responsible therefor, & that the termination of their employment by defts. was wrongful:—Held: the specifications, being incorporated with & constituting part of the contract, must be read with it, & in so far as the contract proper modified the terms of the specifications, the contract must prevail.—GRACE v. OSLER (1911), 19 W. L. R. 109, 326.—CAN.

was proved that defts. did not see the strike clause & that their attention was never drawn to it until the dispute arose:—Held: a person reading the specification ought to have noticed the clause, & pltfs. were entitled to judgment, the delay having been caused by a strike.—SAGE (FREDERICK) & CO., LTD. v. SPIERS & PONDS, LTD. (1915), 31 T. L. R. 204.

13. Agreement not to tender—Validity—Injunction to prevent breach.]—Tenders for the supply of stone having been invited by a corpn., it was agreed between A., B., C., & D., quarry owners, that B. should not tender, that C. & D. should tender above A.’s price, that A. should purchase certain quantities of stone from B., C., & D. at a fixed price, & that B., C., & D. should not supply the corpn. with stone during 1875. The stone was purchased, as agreed, by A., but B., in breach of the agreement, sent in a tender, which was accepted:—Held: the agreement was not void, & a bill would lie by A. to restrain B. from supplying the corpn. directly or indirectly during 1875 with stone, without making the corpn. parties.—JONES v. NORTH (1875), L. R. 19 Eq. 426; 44 L. J. Ch. 388; 32 L. T. 149; 39 J. P. 392; 23 W. R. 468.

14. Estimate—Equivalent to offer—Alleged custom.]—P. wrote to C. a letter in the following terms:—“Estimate. Our estimate to carry out the sundry alterations to the above premises, according to the drawings & specifications, amounts to £1,230”:—Held: (1) this was an offer to do the work for £1,230; (2) there was no custom that a letter in such form was not to be treated as an offer, & if there were such a custom, it was contrary to law; (3) C. having accepted there was a binding contract, from which P. could not withdraw.—CROSHAW v. PRITCHARD & RENWICK (1899), 16 T. L. R. 45; sub nom. CROSHAW v. PRITCHARD, 2 Hudson’s B. C., 4th ed., 274.

15. Necessity for writing—Sale of building materials—“Interest in land.”—A contract for the sale of “the building materials” of a house,

t. — Regulation of terms by deed.—A. & B. entered into a contract for the performance of certain works by A., according to a specification then put forward, & it was agreed that there should be executed by them a deed containing, amongst other things, the terms of the specification. A deed was, accordingly, prepared & executed by A., but not by B., containing these terms, & providing that the approbation of B.’s engineer should be a condition precedent to payment for the execution of the works, & it contained a proviso that it should be null & void unless it received the sanction of the Ct. of Ch. The original plan being defective, several alterations were, at the suggestion of B., made in the works, which were completed under his inspection, & A. having got a verdict, under the common counts, for the performance of the works, & the sanction of the Ct. to the deed not having been proved:—Held: A. was not bound by the provisions of the deed, & it did not regulate the terms of the contract.—NICHOL v. GREVILLE (1851), 3 Ir. Jur. 317.—IR.

a. Terms embodied in letters — Formal agreement not executed.—Negotiations were carried on by letter between the parties, whereby all the terms & conditions of a building contract between them were settled & assented to, & one of the letters contained the following words: “An agreement & bond in the terms of your offer will be prepared & submitted to you for execution as soon as the contract for the erection of the

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

16. Evidence on construction—Usage of builders at particular place.—Pltfs. contracted in writing to build for deft. the front & back walls of a house "for 3s. per superficial yard of work 9 inches thick, & finding all materials, deducting all lights." The lower part of the walls to the height of 11 feet were of stone 2 feet thick, the remainder of brick 14 inches thick:—Held: evidence of the usage of builders at the place to reduce brickwork for the purpose of measurement to 9 inches, but not to reduce stonework unless buildings has been awarded." The contract was awarded, & the bond executed, but no formal agreement was ever executed:—Held: there was a binding agreement between the parties.—KOKSILAH QUARRY CO., LTD. v. R. (1897), 5 B. C. R. 525.—CAN.

b. Agreement under seal—by person not party to it.]—Where an agreement under seal, for the completion of certain work, had been entered into by one of two pltfs., & the other, who was not mentioned in it, signed & sealed it also, & afterwards assisted in the work, & was recognised & paid by deft., for whose benefit the work was done, as a joint contractor with pltf. mentioned in the instrument:—Held: assumpsit was maintainable by both for the value of the work, an implied parol agreement having been substituted for the instrument under seal.—ROSS v. TAIT (1837), 1 Ont. Dig. 1281.—CAN.

c. Unnamed covenant—No date.—COGHLAN v. TILBURY EAST SCHOOL TRUSTEES (1874), 35 U. C. R. 575.—CAN.

18 i. Evidence on construction—Parol evidence.—Parol evidence is admissible to show, that the putting in of tiles is not bricklayer work or the laying of cement mason work, if it does not contradict the written contract & enables the ct. to ascertain the subject-matter with reference to which the parties were contracting.—PAGE v. GREEN (1903), 20 O. W. R. 137; 30 O. W. R. 424.—CAN.

18 ii. ——Pltfs. tendered to build a house according to specifications containing the following clause: "Contractors to make themselves acquainted with the site & take the necessary levels, the line or fall of ground as shown on plan to be relied on." Their tender was accepted & a contract signed. An error in the levels as shown on the plan necessitated extra work on the foundations. To an action brought by the contractors to recover the cost of this extra work deft. pleaded that by a clerical error which should have been apparent to the contractors the word "not" had been omitted after the word "plan" in the above clause in the specifications:—Held: oral evidence to vary the contract was not admissible.—FORREST & LIGHT v. DE KLERK (1908), E. D. C. 213.—S. AF.

18 iii. ——Pltf., by a written contract agreed to do the work of putting down artesian wells on defts.' station, defts. agreeing to supply the machinery, plant, & tools, & pltf. to engage & pay the labour & supervise the work. The contract specified all the articles with which defts. were to supply pltf., but made no mention of who was to supply the wood & water, for the engine, without which the work could not be done. Defts., after supplying pltf. with wood & water for some months, refused to continue to do so, & pltf. accordingly sued them for not permitting him to complete the contract. Pltf. tendered evidence to show that at the negotiations prior to the making of the contract an agreement was made that defts. were to supply the wood & water & that he signed the contract only on that understanding:—Held: the evidence was admissible.—KEITH v. McEDWARD (1895), 16 N. S. W. L. R. 182.—AUS.

f. — Reference to tender—Contract unambiguous.—Resps. had adopted a scheme for the erection of artisans' dwellings, & had, for the purpose of obtaining tenders, prepared a specification with a form of tender attached. Applt. sent in a tender on the form attached to the specification, exceeding 2 feet in thickness, was admissible, & the proper construction of the contract was, that it provided only for the price of the brickwork, leaving the stonework to be paid for on a quantum meruit.—SYMONDS v. LLOYD (1859), 6 C. B. N. S. 691; 141 E. R. 622.

See, further, CONTRACT; CUSTOM & USAGES.

Initialed deleted words—Letters before contract signed.—A firm of shipbuilders agreed to lengthen & repair an iron steamship, the object being that she might be classed 100 A.1. at Lloyd's. The specification forming part of the contract contained the following stipulation:—"Iron work: The plating of the hull to be carefully overhauled, & repaired, [but if any new plating is required same to be paid for extra]" (fourteen words deleted signed A. & I., G.). "Deck beams, ties, diagonal ties, main & spar deck, stringers, & all iron work, to be in accordance with Lloyd's rules for classification":—Held: the shipbuilders were bound to supply without extra charge any new plates required to enable the vessel to be classed 100 A.1. at Lloyd's, & neither the letters of the parties before the contract was signed, nor the initialed deleted words in the contract, could be considered for the purpose of interpreting the intention of the parties.—INGLIS v. BUTTERY (1878), 3 App. Cas. 552, H. L.

Parol evidence to explain meaning of terms.—In a written contract verbally accepted resp. was to be allowed a commission on "the estimate of £35,000," & a further commission if "the total cost of the works was reduced below

& his tender was accepted. Subsequently, a contract under seal was entered into between applt. & resps. This contract, after reciting the tender, the specification, & certain drawings, & expressly incorporating the specification & drawings, provided that the works should be constructed agreeably to the specification & drawings:—Held: the contract being unambiguous in itself, the tender could not be referred to for the purpose of showing that a certain wall at the rear of the dwellings was included in the work to be done.—KINLEN v. ENNIS URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL, [1916] 2 I. R. 299.—IR.

g. — Modifications to formal contract.—A formal contract between B. & T. to erect part of a building had been signed by B. subject to modifications contained in a letter from him to T., agreed to by T. orally before the contract was signed & afterwards confirmed by T., by letter:—Held: B. might prove that the formal contract was not the entire contract, but an item of another & wider one.—BROCKLEBANK v. BARTER (1914), 30 W. L. R. 159; 7 W. W. R. 775.—CAN.

h. — Oral agreement.—A contract for the construction of certain steamships contained this clause: "The following specification is subject to the plans which are to be submitted & approved by the owners before the work is commenced & which shall in all cases of divergence be held to overrule." The plans showed the vessels with straight keels but as actually built the keels were cambered. The shipowners having brought an action against the shipbuilders for damages for breach of contract in respect of the cambering of the vessels' defts. contended that pltfs. were barred from founding on the cambering for they had orally agreed to it while £30,000":—Held: extrinsic evidence was admissible to show that the estimate referred to was for the execution of the work, exclusively of the cost of the land purchased, & the amount of commission.—BANK OF NEW ZEALAND v. SIMPSON, [1900] A. C. 182; 69 L. J. P. C. 22; 82 L. T. 102; 48 W. R. 591; 16 T. L. R. 211, P.C.

19. Accuracy of representation—Clause disclaiming responsibility—No protection against fraud.—A clause in a contract, by which the employer disclaims responsibility for the accuracy of the statements & information with which he supplies the contractor, & as to which the contractor is to satisfy himself, does not confer exemption on the employer for statements fraudulently or recklessly made by the employer or his agent. Whatever be the form of the contract, the party who makes an allegation of fraud is entitled to have the question submitted to a jury.—PEARSON & SON, LTD. v. DUBLIN CORPN., [1907] A. C. 351; 77 L. 20. Contract made "void" on happening of event—Whether "voidable" at option.—By a contract made in 1913 a French co., called the builders, agreed to construct a steamer for a shipping co., called the purchasers, to be completed by Jan. 30, 1915, subject to an extension of time if the construction was delayed by an unpreventable cause beyond the control of the builders, & in case the builders should be unable to deliver the steamer within, in the event of France becoming engaged in a European war, eighteen months from the date agreed by the contract for completion, "thereupon this contract shall become void & all money paid by the purchasers shall be repaid to them" with interest at 5 per cent. On Aug. 2, 1914, while the steamer was in course of construction, France became engaged in a European war, & continued to be so engaged, & the builders were prevented by unpreventable causes beyond their control from completing the steamer by Jan. 30, 1915, & were afterwards prevented by the same causes. On the expiration of the eighteen months on July 30, 1916, the question arose whether the builders were entitled to treat the contract as null & void, notwithstanding the purchasers required the builders to complete & deliver the vessel:—Held: the contract became void & not merely voidable at the option of the purchasers, & as the avoidance of the contract had not been brought about by any wrongful act or default on the part of the builders, the latter were not precluded from alleging that the contract was void.—NEW ZEALAND SHIPPING CO. v. SOCIÉTÉ DES ATELIERS ET CHANTIERS DE FRANCE, [1919] A. C. 1; 87 L. J. K. B. 746; 118 L. T. 731; 34 T. L. R. 400; 62 Sol. Jo. 519; 14 Asp. M. L. C. 291, H. L.; affg. S. C. sub nom. Re NEW

the vessels were in course of construction:—Held: defts. had failed to prove the alleged oral agreement.—BURRELL & SON v. RUSSELL (1900), 2 F. (Ct. of Sess.) 80.—SCOT.

k. — Unsigned document embodying terms of agreement.—In an action to recover payment for excavating work done by plffs. for defts., the matter in dispute was as to what work plffs. agreed to do. There was no written contract signed by the parties, but a document was submitted by defts. to plffs., which defts. afterwards repudiated, but which plffs. said contained the true agreement except as to one point. This document was not signed:—Held: nevertheless, it was evidence as far as it went, of what the agreement was, & was clearly evidence of the work which plffs. had figured on & agreed to do, & defts. were bound by it.—DOLMER v. SHARPE (1910), 15 W. L. R. 597.—CAN.

m. — Expert witness—Who is.—Held: the evidence of a person who was a member of the Mining Engineers' Institute of America, & had been a contractor for various works, but had never practised as a civil engineer, & was not a professional man, was not admissible as that of an expert upon a question what an engineer would understand by an agreement in reference to the preparation of plans & specifications for harbour-works, or upon questions as to professional rules or professional practice in regard to plans & specifications.—REYNOLDS v. NELSON HARBOUR BOARD, [1904] 23 N. Z. L. R. 620.—N.Z.

n. Clerical error.—The contract price was intended to be $25 a ft. for sinking two shafts. By an error the contract was drawn up for $30 a ft., but no one on deft.'s behalf sanctioned or signed the contract for that sum:—Held: plff. was only entitled to be paid at $25 a ft.—HUNTON v. COLEMAN Co. (1907), 10 O. W. R. 610.—CAN.

o. ——Where under a building contract work was to be completed by "Nov. 31" under penalty of damages:—Held: this must be construed to mean Nov. 30.—MCBEAN v. KINNEAR (1892), 23 O. R. 313.—CAN.

p. Time for completion—Difference between contract & specifications.—Where the time fixed by the contract for the completion of a building is different from the time fixed by the specifications, the latter, if clearly erroneous may be rejected.—Re WEST-HOLME LUMBER CO. v. ST. JAMES (1915), 30 W. L. R. 781; 8 W. W. R. 122; 21 D. L. R. 549.—CAN.

q. — Authority to suspend work.—Under the circumstances:—Held: the stipulation that the work should be done within such time as the engineers might appoint gave only a reasonable control as to time, & did not authorise the employers to suspend the work indefinitely.—LAKE v. CAMERON (1859), 18 U. C. R. 622.—CAN.

Time for completion, generally, see Sect. 3, post.

r. Whether contract joint or several—Executed by one party.—Defts. architects having by the defts.' instructions advertised for tenders for the construction of two wholesale stores, plff. tendered for the excavation & brick & stone work, etc., of the two stores at an entire sum of $5,768, which was accepted by the architects; & an agreement was then drawn up, purporting to be between plff. of the one part, & defts. of the other part, under which plff. was to erect & build the two stores for $5,768, which defts. covenanted to pay in the proportion of 85 per cent. as the work progressed, on the architects' certificate, & the remainder in one month after completion. This agreement was executed by plff., but not by defts. Plff. then entered upon the work, & from time to time during its progress received from the architects certificates addressed to defts. jointly, of the sums payable on the whole work, & not on each building separately, which plff. took to defts., & each paid half. On the completion of the contract, plff. obtained from the architects separate statements of the amounts due from each deft., & after allowing a set-off which each deft. had against him, took their several notes for the balance due from each. Plff. swore he thought it was a joint contract, & had no intimation that defts. were not jointly interested in the stores, while the architects stated they had no instructions to draw a joint contract, & did not consider that this was one. In an action against both defts. on the common counts:—Held: the contract was a joint & not a several contract, & the fact of plff.'s dealings with defts. under it, as stated, could not alter its legal effect.—HERBERT v. PARK (1875), 25 C. P. 57.—CAN.

19 i. Accuracy of representations—Warranty of accuracy—Plans wholly incorrect.—To the specification upon which tenders were called for by a county council for the removal of the existing superstructure of a bridge, & the erection of a new superstructure, were attached drawings of the existing superstructure, the materials of which, by the terms of the specification, were when removed to become the property of the contractor. The specification contained the following clause: "The general construction of the piers respectively & also the character of the present superstructure is indicated approximately on the drawings; but tenderers must satisfy themselves as to the correctness of such drawings, as no responsibility shall attach to the council in respect thereof after the acceptance of a tender." The drawings were wholly incorrect, being drawings of an entirely different bridge. T., the successful tenderer, was aware of this, but formed his estimate & put in his tender on the assumption that the drawings were correct:—Held: there was a warranty by the council that the drawings were generally or approximately correct, & there was a breach of this warranty, for which T. was entitled to recover damages, notwithstanding his knowledge of the facts.—AMURI COUNTY COUNCIL v. THOMAS (1891), 9 N. Z. L. R. 664; 10 N. Z. L. R. 430.—N.Z.

21. Immediate possession—Effect of delay.]—Pltfs., on Apr. 19, 1836, entered into a written contract to build, for £1,700, a brewery for defts., so far as regarded the carpenters' work, within four months & a half next ensuing the date of the agreement, & in default of completing same within the time thereinbefore limited, to forfeit to defts. £40 per week for each week that the completion of the work should be delayed beyond Aug. 31, the amount to be deducted from the £1,700, as liquidated damages. Pltfs. did not begin the work for four weeks after the date of the agreement, in consequence of defts. not being able to give them possession; they were afterwards delayed one week by the default of their own workmen & four weeks by the default of the masons, etc. employed by defts., and the work was not completed till five weeks after the time limited:—Held: defts. were not entitled to deduct from the £1,700 any sum in respect of the delay, either for the one or the four weeks.—HOLME v. GUPPY (1838), 3 M. & W. 387; 150 E. R. 1195.

22. ———.]—Pltf., a contractor, undertook by two contracts to construct a graving dock for defts., a dock co. The first contract consisted of a specification issued by defts. with general conditions annexed, a tender by pltf. & an acceptance by defts. of that tender, with other subsidiary papers. Pltf.'s tender, dated Feb. 1, 1899, was for a lump sum of £38,791 17s. 9d., & he undertook to complete the works within seventy-five weeks from notification of the acceptance of his tender. The tender was accepted on Feb. 6. When the contract was entered into it was overlooked that there already existed a contract between defts. & A. & Co., by which that firm had undertaken to clear away the upper surface of the site of the intended dock down to a certain level. As the existence of that contract might interfere with the carrying out of pltf.'s contract, a second contract was made in Mar. 1899, which recited & annexed the documents constituting the first contract, & that it had been agreed to alter, vary, & extend that contract. By clause 1 (b) of the second contract it was provided:—"The co. will from time to time, as soon as is practicable as the firm of A. & Co. from time to time complete their contract with the co., give possession to the contractor of such portions of the site as have been completed by the firm, so as to enable him to carry out his contract within the time specified without extra cost or expense to the contractor," & in pursuance of the clause possession of the dock site, from the eastern extremity up to the 220 foot line mentioned in that clause, was secured to pltf. The remainder of the site was obtained by him at various subsequent periods from defts. or from A. & Co. Pltf. proceeded to carry out the work, & certain sums were paid to him from time to time by defts. but on June 21, 1900, a large balance being then due to pltf., as he alleged, defts.' manager gave pltf. notice that he was dissatisfied with the mode of proceeding & rate of progress of the works, & cancelled the contract. At the trial of an action brought by pltf., pltf.'s counsel formulated two questions to be put to his witnesses:—(1) Did defts. give pltf. possession of the site so as to enable him to complete the contract within the time specified for its completion & without extra cost or expense to him. (2) Was the delay on the part of pltf. in carrying out his contract caused by defts.' failure to give pltf. possession of the site on which the dock was to be constructed, so as to enable pltf. to proceed with & carry out the contract at such a rate of progress as would be required to insure completion within the time. The judge excluded the proposed questions, & nonsuited pltf., but an appellate ct. set aside the nonsuit, & ordered a new trial. At the new trial a verdict was returned for pltf. for £11,139, but on appeal the verdict was set aside & a verdict directed for defts., on the ground that there was no sufficient evidence to go to the jury that pltf.'s delay, which led to the cancellation of the contract, was caused by defts.' failure to give him possession of the site:—Held: (1) defts. were absolutely bound to give him possession of the dock site outside the 220 foot line, so as to enable him to carry out his contract within the time specified without extra cost, & their obligation was not merely to give up the ground as A. & Co. finished their contract; (2) there was no evidence to go to the jury on which they could properly find that the condition of things with which defts.' manager was dissatisfied was caused by delay in giving possession of the site or any part of it.—MORT'S DOCK & ENGINEERING CO., LTD. v. WADEY, WADEY v. MORT'S DOCK & ENGINEERING CO., LTD. (1905), 22 T. L. R. 61, P. C.

23. ———.]—During a contract for carrying out alterations & additions to a dwelling-house, the contractor was delayed, & he claimed damages; the employer denied liability & counter-claimed for damages for non-completion to time. The time for completion had been extended by the architect, & was further extended by the arbitrator to the date of actual completion:—Held: this extension of time did not affect the damages claimed by the contractor against the employer for breaches of contract, e.g., by not affording possession of the site, & by interference with execution of the work.—Re TROLLOPE & SONS & COLLS & SONS, LTD. & SINGER (1913), 1 Hudson's B. C., 4th ed., 849.

24. ——— Waiver — Reasonable time.]—A builder contracted to pull down fifteen old houses, & erect twelve new buildings on the site, the work to be completed within six months of the date of the contract. He consented to a delay of two weeks from the date of the contract in obtaining possession of the site. The building owner did *before completion—On expenditure of certain sum.]—*A contract provided for the building of the walls of a dam to a height of 20 ft. above the level of the river. The walls could not be built unless the space between them was filled in as the walls were being built. The material used in building the walls was to be supplied partly by the contractor & partly by the employer. The contract further provided that the co. might stop before

not give possession at the expiration of that period, but subsequently gave it in parts, the last portion not being handed over until five months from the date of the contract :—Held : (1) a term must be implied in the contract that possession of the whole site should be given forthwith, but this being waived by the consent of the builder to a fortnight's delay it was altered to a reasonable time; (2) possession was not given within a reasonable time, & the builder was entitled to recover damages for loss sustained in consequence of the breach.—FREEMAN & SON v. HENSLER (1900), 64 J. P. 260; 2 Hudson's B. C., 4th ed., 292, C. A.

25. Uninterrupted possession—No implied warranty—Wrongful interference by third party.]—A contractor to execute sewerage for a sanitary authority acting under Public Health Acts is not entitled to throw up his contract because of difficulties created by the landowners under whose land the sewer is to be tunnelled.—DICKINSON v. RICHMOND MAIN SEWERAGE BOARD (1893), 2 Hudson's B. C., 3rd ed., 254.

26. ———.]—By a contract in writing it was agreed that pltf. should build a school for defts., upon a site belonging to them, within ten months after the date of the contract, & that he should commence work & be at liberty to enter upon the site forthwith. The only access to the site was from a road adjoining other land of defts. & over that land, & it was provided that pltf. should make a temporary sleeper roadway over that land from the street to the site. Possession of the site was given forthwith, & defts. made a gateway through the fence separating their land from the street, & pltf. made & used the sleeper roadway through the gateway to the street. The owner of the soil of the street, alleging that it was not a public highway, prohibited its use by pltf. & threatened to sue him for an injunction. Pltf. in consequence ceased work for more than two months until after defts. had sued the owner of the soil of the street & obtained a decision that it was a public highway. Pltf. claimed damages for loss caused by the delay of the work, alleging a breach of defts.' implied contract to give free & uninterrupted possession of & access to the site :—Held : there was no warranty to be implied from the contract to the effect that pltf. should be at liberty to work upon the land without interruption, & defts. were not liable to indemnify pltf. against the loss caused by the wrongful interference of a third party with the means of access to the site.—*PORTER v. 27. Condition—Works on seashore—Action of wind & sea.]—Where a contract is entered into to construct a sea wall the contractor & not the employer takes the risks of interference with the work while in progress by the action of the winds & seas which, in the ordinary contemplation of all, are risks incidental to the complete performance of the contract, & there is no implied contract by the employer that the seashore on which the proposed works are to be executed shall remain in the same condition as at the date of the contract. The fact that the employer is by a special Act of Parliament bound to protect the adjacent shore from the action of the winds & seas does not create any obligation on his part in favour of the contractor or exonerate him from the special terms of his own contract.—JACKSON v. EASTBOURNE LOCAL BOARD (1886), 2 Hudson's B. C., 4th ed., 81, H. L.

28. ——— Defects in soil.]—In the absence of any specific guarantee or definite representations as to the nature of the soil in which the works are to be executed, a contractor is not entitled to abandon the contract on discovery of the nature of the soil.—BOTTOMS v. YORK CORPN. (1892), 2 Hudson's B. C., 4th ed., 208, C. A.

30. Obstruction—Removal within reasonable time.]—Pltf. contracted with defts. to remove a certain quantity of the bed of the river Mersey within a certain time, but in case a temporary staging erected in the river was not removed by defts. in sufficient time to enable pltf. to complete his contract within the time agreed upon, he was to be entitled to such extension of that time as the engineer should deem reasonable. Pltf. was to be paid 80 per cent. of the value of the work certified by the engineer as having been completed each month, & the balance when the work was finished. The work was not completed till some time after the date stipulated for by the contract, but this pltf. alleged to be due to the non-removal of the staging. The engineer admitted that pltf. was entitled to compensation for the time, thirty-eight days, during which he incurred expenses by the delay caused by the non-removal of the

25 i. Uninterrupted possession—Implied condition.]—In a contract to execute a work on land there is an implied condition that the contractor shall have quiet possession of the land during performance of the contract as against any person rightfully claiming the site under a superior title.—SLOWEY v. LODDER (1901), 20 N. Z. L. R. 321.—N.Z.

a. Condition — Latent defect.]—M. entered into a contract with a borough council to construct a tunnel. After partly performing the work he abandoned it. The sureties for the due performance of the contract contracted with S. that he should complete the work under the superintendence of the engineer of the borough. During the work S. was ordered by the engineer to increase the thickness of the brick-work, & to do this he had to remove the wooden lining already erected, excavate further soil, & re-erect the lining, which were dangerous operations, to the knowledge of S., the ground being treacherous. While this was being done the portion of the tunnel which had been constructed collapsed, causing large additional expense & loss of material. It appeared that before the contract with S. there had been a slip in the earth above the tunnel, leaving a cavity, which had been packed with brush-wood & logs; & it was alleged that this was a latent defect of which S. had no knowledge, & that there was an implied warranty against such latent defects. S. claimed from the sureties the loss & expense incurred by the collapse :—Held : there was no implied warranty.—SLOWEY v. LODDER (1901), 20 N. Z. L. R. 321.—N.Z.

b. Obstruction — Liability for removal.]—A corpn. erecting a church, made a contract with M. for the excavating & brick & stone work. M. failed in the execution of the contract & the corpn. entered into an agreement by which applts. undertook to supply material & perform labour in connection with the building of the foundations, setting steps, construction of basement floor, grading, & to do all the work required to be done for the purpose of fulfilling the contract of M. Applts. contended that, upon making the contract, the corpn. became bound to remove all materials, so that the work could be readily & conveniently executed :—Held : applts. were wrong in their contention as they knew that they had to enter upon the premises as they were, & work in conjunction with other trades.—*Re THAMES QUARRY CO., LTD., & ROMAN CATHOLIC EPISCOPAL CORPN. staging, but the full amount for extra work & expenses could not be agreed on between him & pltf.:—Held: the engineer had no authority to make an express contract on behalf of defts. that no unreasonable delay should occur in removing the staging, but there was an implied contract to that effect, & if pltf. was in fact prevented from completing the contract in time by reason of any such unreasonable delay, he was entitled to damages, the proper measure of such damages being the loss which pltf. had unavoidably sustained in consequence of such unreasonable delay.—LAWSON v. WALLASEY LOCAL BOARD (1882), 11 Q. B. D. 229; 52 L. J. Q. B. 302; 47 L. T. 625, D. C.; affd. (1883), 48 L. T. 507, C. A.

B. Plans and Specifications.

31. Duty to provide within reasonable time—Entire contract.—Deft. agreed to supply pltf. with 150 tons weight of iron girders, at a certain price per ton, & according to plans to be furnished by pltf. Plans were furnished within a reasonable time from the date of the agreement, & at the same time 14 tons weight of girders were ordered. Four months after the date of the agreement the 14 tons were demanded, & other plans were furnished, & orders given for 60 tons more girders. Deft. then repudiated the contract:—Held: the contract was entire, & as pltf. had not furnished plans for the whole 150 tons within a reasonable time from the date of the agreement, he could not recover for the non-delivery of the 14 tons for which plans had been furnished within a reasonable time from such date.—KINGDOM v. COX (1848), 5 C. B. 522; 17 L. J. C. P. 155; 10 L. T. O. S. 328; 12 Jur. 336; 136 E. R. 982.

32. — Delay caused by non-supply.—During a contract for carrying out alterations & additions to a dwelling-house, the contractor was delayed (inter alia) by the non-supply of drawings & details & information. For this delay he claimed damages, & the employer denied liability & counter-claimed for damages for non-completion to time. The time for completion had been extended by the architect & was further extended by the arbitrator to the date of actual completion:—Held: this extension of time did not affect the damages claimed by the contractor against the employer.—Re TROLLOPE & SONS & COLLS & SONS, LTD., & SINGER (1913), 1 Hudson's B. 33. Whether warranty that work can be executed—Duty of contractor to make independent

33 i. Whether warranty that work can be executed—Duty of contractor to make independent inquiries.—An engineer prepared certain plans & specifications for a reservoir that deft. proposed building. The plans showed certain strata. The first and second strata were described as sand and quicksand, & their respective depths were shown; the next stratum was marked blue clay, but there was no indication of its depth. The conditions of contract contained a clause specially requiring the contractor to satisfy himself as to the correctness of the information contained in the plans, & providing that in the event of their proving incorrect he would have no claim:—Held: (1) it was extremely doubtful whether the plans, taken by themselves, amounted to a warranty; (2) the condition that the contractor was to satisfy himself as to the correctness of the information, was an intimation that there might be errors, & expressly negatived a warranty.—GEE v. SUMNER BOROUGH COUNCIL (1893), 12 N. Z. L. R. 63.—N.Z.

c. Obligation to furnish work.—When one contracts to do work for another, the preparation for which involves outlay & expense, a corresponding agreement, in the absence of any express provision, will be implied on the part of the person with whom he contracts to furnish the work; but no such implication will be made inquiries.—Where plans & a specification, for the execution of a certain work, are prepared for the use of those who are asked to tender for its execution, the person asking for the tenders does not enter into any implied warranty that the work can be successfully executed according to such plans & specification, & the contractor for the work cannot sustain an action for damages, as upon a warranty, should it turn out that he could not execute it according to such plans & specification.

T. contracted with defts. to take down an old bridge & build a new one. Plans & a specification prepared by defts.' engineer were furnished to him, & he was required to obey the directions of the engineer. The descriptions given were stated to be "believed to be correct," but were not guaranteed, & in one particular matter at least, he was warned to make examination for himself. Part of the plan consisted in the use of caissons. These turned out to be of no value, & the work done in attempting to use them was wholly lost, & the bridge had to be built in a different manner. In this way much labour & time was wasted. The contract contained provisions as to the payment for extra work, & that work had, with the contract work, been duly paid for. The contractor sought for compensation for his loss of time & labour occasioned by the failure of the caissons, & in his declaration alleged that defts. had warranted that the bridge could be inexpensively built according to the plans & specification. There was no express warranty to that effect in the contract:—Held: none could be implied. Semble: if he had any remedy in the circumstances it was not in an action for damages as for breach of warranty, but for compensation as upon a quantum meruit.—THORN v. LONDON CORPN. (1876), 1 App. Cas. 120; 45 L. J. Q. B. 487; 34 L. T. 545; 40 J. P. 468; 24 W. R. 932, H. L.

C. Other Cases.

34. Contract to construct well—Obligation to erect steam engine.—By deed, reciting that defts., a waterworks co., had determined to construct a well, etc., & that the engineers of the co. had prepared the necessary drawings for same, & made a general specification referring to where, from circumstances known to, & in the contemplation of, both parties at the date of the agreement to do the work it was, & continued to be, beyond the power of the party to carry out such implied agreement.—McKENNA v. McNAMEE (1887), 15 S. C. R. 311.—CAN.

d. Prevention of wrongful or unreasonable delay.—Upon the construction of the contract:—Held: there was an implied contract by deft. with each contractor that he should not be wrongfully or unreasonably delayed in carrying out his contract, but the brick work being necessarily delayed by frost, & pltf.'s work being thereby impeded, deft. was not responsible.—LEX v. BOWWELL (1874), 24 C. P. 109.—CAN.

e. As to condition of subject-matter—Contract to place engine in & the drawings of all the works to be done, & of the materials to be found & provided for that purpose, that pl'tfs. had agreed to make the well, etc., & to execute all the works particularised in the specification, & which might be implied therefrom or incidental thereto, for £3,880, & that to the drawings & specification the corporate seal of the co. had been affixed, & that pl'tfs. had signed same, pl'tfs. covenanted to complete the well, etc., & works mentioned & specified in the specification or shown in the drawings, or which might be reasonably implied therefrom or be considered incidental thereto, & that they would find all materials required in the making & completing the works of such sort, etc., as in the specification described, & all scaffolding, engines, pumps, etc., mentioned in the specification, as required to be provided by the person contracting to perform the work, as might be found necessary to complete the works, & labour, etc., necessary for the construction & completion of the well in a workmanlike manner, & in all respects conformable to the specification, & fully to complete the works in a workmanlike manner on or before Sept. 22 then next, with power to the engineer of the co. to delay the work & grant an extension of time if he should think proper. If not completed in manner aforesaid on Sept. 22, pl'tfs. were to be liable to a penalty of 20s. weekly. Defts. covenanted to pay the £3,880, & such further sums as should be payable in respect of deviations from the works. The specification, which was under the seal of the co. contained the following passage:—"The contractor will be required to sink the well, etc., to the depth of 120 feet, etc., after which the co. will undertake the erection of the permanent steam-engine & permit the pumping to be performed by it, sufficient interval of time being allowed for the erection of the steam-engine, & such time added to the period assigned to the contractor for the performance of the works":—Held: there was an implied covenant on the part of the co. to erect the permanent steam-engine as provided in the specification.—KNIGHT v. GRAVES-END & MILTON WATERWORKS CO. (1857), 2 H. & N. 6; 27 L. J. Ex. 73; 29 L. T. O. S. 83; 157 E. R. 3.

35. Works let by municipal corporation—Assent of Commissioners of Woods & Forests—No implied covenant to obtain.—A corp'n. agreed with pl'tf. to let pl'tf. the making of certain works to be made under the authority of an improvement Act, paying him a stipulated price, & pl'tf. agreed to take the works, & as to a certain portion of them which might require the assent of the above Comrs., that he "would well, truly & faithfully construct, make & execute the works as set forth & described in the specification & laid down on the plan, at & for £4,987, subject to the following provisions" Then followed certain provisions, that the assent of the above Comrs. should be obtained, that the corp'n. should not be prevented from proceeding with the works by a certain railway co., or any person acting under the powers given to that co. to make part of the works in question, & that the approbation of the Treasury should be given to the corp'n. to borrow the money required on mtge. On demurrer to a declaration, assigning as a breach that the corp'n. omitted to procure or obtain the assent of the Comrs. or the approbation of the Treasury within a reasonable time:—Held: although it might have been expected on both sides that such assent & approbation should be obtained, there was no implied covenant on the part of the corp'n. to obtain it, & the breach was bad.—SMITH v. HARWICH CORPN. (1857), 2 C. B. N. S. 651; 26 L. J. C. P. 257; 22 J. P. 55; 140 E. R. 572.

Annotation:—Reid. Treloar v. Biggo (1874), 43 L. J. Ex. 95.

36. Contract to complete house—Flooring & flooring boards included.—Pl'tf. agreed to build a house for deft., who prepared a specification which contained particulars of the different portions of the work. Under the head "carpenter & joiner" there was specified the scantling of the joists for the different floors, the rafters, ridge & wall pieces, but no mention was made of the flooring. The specification stated that "the whole of the materials mentioned or otherwise in the foregoing particulars, necessary for the completion of the work, must be provided by the contractor." At the foot of the specification pl'tf. signed a memorandum, whereby he agreed with deft. "to do all the works of every kind mentioned & contained in the foregoing particulars, according in every respect to the drawings furnished or to be furnished, for £1,100. The house to be completed & fit for deft.'s occupation by Aug. 1, 1858." Pl'tf. prepared the flooring boards, brought them to the premises, & planed & fitted them to the several rooms, but refused to lay them down without extra payment, because the flooring was not mentioned in the specification, whereupon deft. put an end to the contract, took possession of the works, & proceeding to complete the building used the flooring boards so prepared & fitted by deft.:—Held: (1) pl'tf. was not entitled to recover for the flooring as an extra, because it was included in the contract though not mentioned repair steamship.—Suppliants entered into a contract with the Crown to "place a secondhand compound screw surface condensing engine" in a certain steamship belonging to the Dominion Govt.; & to convert the vessel from a paddle steamer into a screw propeller. By the specifications annexed to & forming part of the contract it was stipulated, inter alia, that the old engine & paddle wheels were to be broken & taken out of the steamer at the contractors' expense, & that they should stop up all the holes both in the bottom & side of the vessel; that the contractors were to make new any part of the engine or machinery although not named in the specifications, which might be required by the minister, etc., the whole to be completed & ready for sea, on a full steam pressure of 95 lbs. per square in., ready to commence running on a certain date, the whole work to be of first class style to the entire satisfaction of the engineer appointed to superintend the work. It was further agreed that the steamer was to be put in perfect running order; that the alterations of any parts of the steamer, for the purpose of fitting up the new works, & any openings or cuttings or rebuilding, were to be executed & furnished at the cost of the contractors. It was also provided that the steamer was to have a satisfactory trial trip of at least four hours' duration, steaming full speed, before being handed over to the department. The vessel was built of iron & very old. Suppliants had taken the old engine out of the hull, & had grounded her, preparatory to placing her in a dry dock in order to complete their work under the contract. Owing to the fact that the bottom of the vessel under the old engine seat had been eaten away by rust, it gave way & was broken in when she grounded. It was established that the accident did not occur through the negligence of suppliants; but the Crown insisted that suppliants were liable to repair this damage under the terms of the contract & specifications:—Held: (1) there was nothing to show by the terms of the contract & specifications that either party at the time of entering into the contract contemplated that the portion of the steamship lying below & hidden by the engine seat would require renewing; & the stipulation in the specifications that "the steamer was to be put in perfect running order" was intended to apply only to work suppliants had expressly agreed to do, & should not be extended to other works or things which they did not agree to do or to replace or renew; (2) in such a contract as this, neither by the law of England nor by that of the province of Quebec is there any warranty to be implied on the part of the owner of the thing upon which the work is to be performed that the same shall continue in a state fit to receive the work contracted for.—LAINÉ v. R. (1896), 5 Exch. C. R. 103.—CAN.

37. Rates paid by contractor—No obligation to repay.—A corpn. were the owners of a railway which had been laid by them some time before for the construction of other portions of their waterworks undertaking, but which had become derelict. By a clause in the specification the contractor had to "take over" the railway & put it in repair & the contractor had to pay all wayleaves payable by the corpn. to landowners over whose land the railway was constructed. There was no provision as to the payment of rates on the railway. The rating authorities rated the contractor as the occupier of the railway, & while disputing his liability he paid the rates & claimed to recover them from the corpn. The dispute was referred to arbn., & the arbitrator found that the contractor was not the occupier of the railway & that the corpn. were bound to repay to him the rates which he had been compelled to pay in order to prevent a distress being levied:—Held: there was no implied undertaking by the corpn. to repay to the contractor the rates so paid by him as the rated occupier of the railway.—Re NOTT & CARDIFF CORPN., [1918] 2 K. 38. "Approved plan."—An underlessee of premises for an unexpired term of fifty years, under a covenant to repair & keep up the demised work.—Pltf. agreed by instrument under seal, to do certain decorative work at defts.' hotel, the work to be done to the satisfaction of defts.' architect & to be completed by Aug., 1902, leave being given to defts. to cancel the agreement should these conditions not be fulfilled. Pltf. was unable to commence work until Oct., 1902, owing to the walls of the hotel not being ready to receive pltf.'s work. The work had ultimately to be suspended through no fault of pltf.'s. On being requested to resume work, pltf. considered the walls were not in a fit condition & defts. cancelled the contract. In an action for damages:—Held: it was an implied term of the contract, that defts. were to hand over the premises to pltf. in a fit condition, for the performance by him of the work which he had contracted to do.—SLOANE v. TORONTO HOTEL CO. (1905), 5 O. W. R. 460.—CAN.

Contract to instal bowling alleys—Provision for ventilation.—Under a contract to instal bowling alleys which provides that the foundation therefor is to be prepared by the owner according to the instructions of the contractor, the latter is bound to make reasonable provision for ventilation of the floor.—SMITH v. E. Contract to construct heating & ventilating apparatus—Temporary heating.—Pltf. had a contract in writing for the construction of a warehouse according to certain plans & specifications. Defts. contracted with pltf. to instal heating & ventilating apparatus. Disputes having arisen, pltf. by notice terminated the contract & proceeded to complete the work himself. This action was brought to restrain defts. from entering upon the premises & to recover damages for the cost of temporary heating:—Held: the contract did not provide for temporary heating & no provision therefor was reasonably to be implied.—BRADEN v. premises, was required by a local board to treat with them for the purchase of a strip of land on which the buildings stood. The underlessee proposed to pull down the demised premises & re-erect them upon plans sanctioned by the local board, but, in fact, in contravention in some respects of their bye-laws:—Held: even though the plans had been passed by the local authority, the underlessee would not be entitled to erect buildings in contravention of any of their bye-laws. Semble: a local authority empowered to make bye-laws had no power to sanction plans in contravention of bye-laws properly made.—Re MCINTOSH & PONTYPRIDD IMPROVEMENTS CO. (1891), 61 L. 40 i. "Completion of the works"—Extras included.—Where a contract provides for the doing of certain specified works, & such additional or extra works as may be properly ordered, & fixes a date "for the completion of the works" the contract is not performed until the completion not only of the works originally specified, but of all additions or extras properly added thereto.—WARE v. 44. "Probationary drawings."—A declaration in assumpsit against defts., sued as clerk to a committee of visitors appointed pursuant to 8 & 9 Vict. c. 126, for the regulation, etc., of a county lunatic asylum, stated that it was agreed by & between pltf. & the committee of visitors, that, in consideration that pltf. would render his services as an architect in examining the site for a proposed lunatic asylum, & preparing the requisite probationary drawings for the approval of the committee of visitors, & all other drawings & documents required to be submitted to the comrs. in lunacy, & afterwards to the Secretary of State, pursuant to the statutes, & subsequently would prepare the whole of the working-drawings, estimates, & specifications for an asylum to contain two hundred patients, the committee agreed that £437 10s. should be paid to pltf. The declaration then alleged that pltf. did render his services in examining the site, & did prepare the requisite probationary drawings for the approval of the committee, & had always been ready & willing to prepare all other drawings & documents required to be submitted to the comrs. in lunacy, & Secretary of State, & subsequently to prepare the whole of the working-drawings, estimates, & specifications, of which the committee had notice, but that they refused to permit him to complete the agreement, & wrongfully discharged him from the further performance thereof. Plea, that pltf. did not prepare the requisite probationary drawings in the count mentioned:—Held: the term "probationary drawings," meant drawings to be approved of by the committee, & if approved of, then to be submitted to the comrs. in lunacy & Secretary of State, & the plea was proved, it appearing, that, although certain drawings had been submitted to the committee, none had been approved by them.—MOFFATT v. DICKSON (1853), 13 C. B. 543; 22 L. J. C. P. 265; 17 Jur. 1009; 1 C. L. R. 294; 138 E. R. 1311.

45. "Retention money."—A contractor agreed to construct sewerage works for a rural district council. Payment was to be made as the work proceeded, the work being measured monthly & 80 per cent. of the value of the work being paid to the contractor upon the certificate of the engineer. It was further provided that when the whole of the works had been certified as duly completed, a further sum of 15 per cent. should be paid, & the balance within six months after the works should have been delivered up to the council & should have been certified by the engineer to be completed. The contractor gave defts. a charge on the "retention money," & subsequently mortgaged all the money payable to him under the contract to pltf. On an issue to determine the meaning of the phrase "retention money":—Held: the contract intended & was understood by defts. as intending to include not only 5 per cent., but also the 15 per cent. as "retention money."—WEST YORKSHIRE BANK, LTD. v. ISHERWOOD BROTHERS, LTD. (1912), 76 J. P. 456; 28 T. L. R. 593.

46. "Several works."—With regard to the time of completion:—Held: "the several works" meant the whole works, & not each section thereof.—CUNLIFFE v. HAMPTON WICK LOCAL BOARD (1893), 9 T. L. R. 378; 2 Hudson's B. C., 4th ed., 250, C. A.

47. "Weekly account."—Pltf., a builder, by deed contracted with defts. to build for them a house & premises for a certain sum. The deed provided that "no alterations or additions shall be admitted unless directed by the architect of" defts. "in writing under his hand, & a weekly account of the work done thereunder shall be delivered to the architect or the clerk of the works on every Monday next ensuing the performance of such work, & the delivery of such account shall be a condition precedent to the right of" pltf. "to recover payment for any such addition or alteration." In an action by pltf. to recover the balance due under the contract, the claim including charges for additions & alterations:—Held: parol evidence was admissible for pltf. to explain that the expression "weekly account" was a term of art well known in the building trade, & meant, by the usage of the trade, an account of the day work expended in each week on the additions & alterations, & the materials used in such day work.—MYERS v. SARL (1860), 3 E. & E. 306; 30 L. J. Q. B. 9; 7 Jur. N. S. 97; 9 W. R. 96; 121 E. R. 457.

p. "In earth"—Clay.—Where a contract stipulated that the work to be done in the construction of a canal was to be "in earth," & a good deal of the material excavated by the contractor & deposited by him in the banks of the canal consisted of hard clays:—Held: clay fell within the term "earth," & the contractor was not entitled to regard excavation in clay as an extra & to claim a higher rate of payment for such excavation.—BOTHWELL v. UNION GOVERNMENT (MINISTER OF LANDS) (1917), App. D. 262.—S. AF.

q. "To" & "from" streets.—The words "from" & "to" streets mentioned in specifications for the construction of works undertaken by an agreement in writing, as shown on a plan annexed to & declared to form part of the contract, are not necessarily exclusive.

Where the agreement provided that the works should be constructed "along N. street from B. street to L. street, as shown on the said plan":—Held: the words meant, "as far as the plan shows along N. street, but not exceeding the most distant side of L. street."—*CITY OF MONTREAL v. SUB-SECT. 2.—DELAY BY ORDERING EXTRAS.

A. No Provision in Contract as to Extension of Time.

49. Second agreement to perform additional work—Waiver of time of original contract.]—To an action for work & labour, deft. pleaded that the work was done under an agreement in writing whereby pltf. agreed to build for him six houses, & completely finish & give up the premises to him on or before Mar. 20, 1859, under a penalty of £1 for each house for each & every week the works should remain incomplete & possession withheld from deft. after that date, the amount of the penalty to be paid out of the money which might become due to pltf. under the agreement, that the houses remained incomplete & possession was withheld from deft. for twelve weeks after & beyond the day stipulated, wherefore deft. claimed to deduct £72. To this plea pltf. replied that, after the making of the agreement in the plea mentioned, & before any of the alleged penalties had been incurred, it was mutually agreed that pltf. should perform certain other work in & upon the houses in addition to the work in the first agreement mentioned, such additional work to be done within a reasonable time, that the work under the second agreement was so mixed up with the work in the first agreement mentioned, being part & parcel thereof, that it became impossible to complete the work in the first agreement mentioned until the work under the second agreement was also completed, as deft. at the time of making the last-mentioned agreement well knew, & that pltf. had performed all the work under both agreements within a reasonable time:—Held: a good legal answer to the claim for penalties, on the ground of waiver. Semble: (BYLES, J.) the replication afforded a good equitable answer, on the ground that the performance of the original agreement had become impossible by the act of deft.—THORNHILL v. NEATS (1860), 8 C. B. N. S. 831; 2 L. T. 539; 141 E. R. 1392.

B. Express Contract to complete whole Work within specified Time.

50. Whether time essential part of contract—Extras ordered by architect.]—By agreement under seal, between pltf. of the one part, & defts., guardians of the poor, of the other part, after reciting (inter alia) that pltf. had proposed to contract to erect the workhouse at B., & perform all

r. Contract reserving penalty.]—Time is not of the essence of the contract where the contract reserves a penalty.—BECK v. YORK (1913), 25 O. W. R. 730; 5 O. W. N. 836.—CAN.

s. Oral agreement—No proper plans or specifications.]—Pltf. agreed to build the walls & foundation of a house for deft. The agreement was not in writing, & no proper plans or specifications were prepared. Pltf. claimed the price agreed upon & certain sums for extras. Deft. counter-claimed damages for defective work & for non-completion of the whole work by the time agreed upon:—Held: it was not a term of the contract that pltf. was to complete the work at any special time.—IREDALE v. DREWERY (1912), 19 W. L. R. 931; 4 D. L. R. 868.—CAN.

t. Contract to build & deliver ship—Payment by instalments.]—By contract in writing pltf., in consideration of £95,905, agreed to build & deliver to defts. a steam vessel on or before Aug. 1, 1897. The £95,905 was to be paid in six instalments at specified times, the fifth instalment to be paid when the vessel was handed over, & as to the sixth instalment of £5,000, it was provided that if the "contract shall be in all respects duly performed by the contractors (ptfs.) & the vessel shall have been completed, & shall have made her trial trip, & shall be ready to be handed over on or before Aug. 1, 1897," etc., then defts. should pay the sum of £5,000, being the balance of the contract price of £95,905. The vessel was not delivered until Sept. 18, 1897, but otherwise the contract was duly carried out, & defts. suffered no damage by reason of the delay. Pltf. having sued defts. for £5,000, the last instalment:—Held: the delivery of the vessel on Aug. 1, 1897, was not of the essence of the contract so as to constitute it a condition precedent to pltf.' right to recover the £5,000.—LAIRD BROTHERS v. CITY OF DUBLIN STEAM PACKET CO. (1899), 34 I. L. T. 9.—IR.

a. Contract to supply & erect steel work—Completion within reasonable time.]—A clause in a contract for the supplying & erecting of steel work for buildings & machinery, provided that the contractors expected to make shipments of the material about Apr. 1 & to complete erection of the steel work in about two months after its arrival at the site:—Held: this did not amount to a contract to ship & complete the works at the dates mentioned but only bound the contractors to ship the material & complete the work within, in each case, a reasonable time.—CANADA FOUNDRY CO., LTD. v. EDMONTON PORTLAND CEMENT CO., [1918] 3 W. W. R. 866; 43 D. L. R. 583.—CAN.

b. Installation of plant—To be put in operation before payment.]—The R. Co. having sued the city of T. for the contract price of the installation of a complete electric plant, which, under the terms of the contract, was to be put in operation for at least six weeks before payment of the price could be claimed, the ct. referred the case to experts on the question whether the contract had been substantially fulfilled, & they found that owing to certain defects the contract had not been satisfactorily completed:—Held: it being found that applts. had not fulfilled their contract within the time specified, they could not recover.—ROYAL ELECTRIC CO. v. CITY OF THREE RIVERS (1894), 23 S. C. R. 289.—CAN.

c. No date fixed—Completion within reasonable time.]—ALLEN v. PIERCE (1895), 3 Terr. L. R. 319.—CAN.

PART II. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 2.—A.

e. Further agreement to perform within reasonable time.]—Pltf. contracted in writing with defts. for the erection of a bridge, to be completed by a day named, subject, in case of their failure to complete the work by that day, to a penalty of £3 for every day afterwards until completion. Subsequently to the written contract, & before any penalties had been incurred, a parol agreement was entered into between the parties for certain additional work, consisting of alterations in the structure of the bridge, & of such a nature that, until they were finished, the bridge itself could not be completed. Pltf. did not complete the bridge for a considerable period after the time appointed; & in an action brought by them for the amount due for its construction, defts. made a counterclaim for £942 as penalties:—Held: (1) pltf. had used due & reasonable despatch in executing the works after the further agreement had been entered into; (2) the further agreement was one to be performed within a reasonable time; (3) the original contract having become, by the further agreement & the nature of the work to which it related, a contract to complete within a reasonable time, it was impossible by the exercise of all due & reasonable despatch to complete the bridge within the time originally stipulated, & pltf. were entitled to judgment for the entire amount of their demand.—COURTNEY v. WATERFORD & CENTRAL IRELAND RY. CO. (1878), 4 L. R. Ir. 11.—IR.

PART II. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 2.—B.

f. General rule.]—A clause in a building contract providing for completion by a certain date & for payment of damages in default, is not the works particularised in a specification prepared by S. & M., the architects, for £5,500, pltf., in consideration of the payments to be made to him, agreed with defts. that he would, in a workmanlike manner, do all the works mentioned in the specification, at the times therein mentioned, & would completely finish the whole by June 24, 1840, & it was agreed that if the architects should think proper to make any alterations or additions in the progress of the works, they should give to pltf. written instructions for same, signed by them; & in consideration of the premises, defts. agreed with pltf. that they would pay him £5,500, at the rate of £75 per cent. on the amount of work done, & the remaining £25 per cent. within thirty days from the full completion of the contract, provided that pltf. should not be entitled to receive any payment until the works on which such payments were made to depend should have been completed, to the satisfaction of the architects, & pltf. thereby bound himself that, if he should fail in the completion of all the works by June 24, 1840, unless hindered by fire, or other cause satisfactory to the architects, he would pay to defts. £10 per week, by way of liquidated damages, so long as the works should remain incomplete. Pltf. proceeded to execute the works, & while they were in progress the architects required him to execute additional works; the whole of the works original & additional, were completed in a workmanlike manner, & to the satisfaction of the architects, but, by reasons of the additions, the final completion of the work was necessarily delayed till Dec. 1840, at which time defts. took possession of the whole:—Held: the time of the completion of the works was not an essential part of the contract.—LAMPRELL v. BILLERICAY UNION (1849), 3 Exch. 283; 18 L. J. Ex. 282; 12 L. T. O. S. 533; 13 J. P. 235; 154 E. R. 850.

51. ———.]—Where in a contract for the execution of specified works it is provided that the works shall be completed by a certain day, & in default of such completion, the contractor shall be liable to pay liquidated damages, & there is also a provision that other work may be ordered by way of addition to the contract, & additional work is ordered which necessarily delays the completion of the works, the contractor is exonerated from liability to pay the liquidated damages, unless by the terms of the contract he has agreed that, whatever additional work may be ordered he will nevertheless complete the works within the time originally limited.—DODD v. CHURTON, [1897] 1 Q. B. 562; 66 L. J. Q. B. 477; 76 L. T. 438; 45 W. R. 490; 13 T. L. R. 305; 41 Sol. Jo. 383, C. A. Annotation:—Mentd. Wells v. Army & Navy Co-op. Soc. (1902), 86 L. T. 764.

C. Provision for Extension of Time by Architect or Engineer.

52. Time not extended—Whether original date binding.]—A contract for building a steamer contained a provision that the engineer for the time being should have power to direct additions, deductions, alterations, & deviations, to & from the contract work, & should have power to extend the time for completion of the contract, & that unless he did so, the time should be deemed not extended by reason of such extra works. It also contained a provision that £5 should become due as liquidated damages for every day beyond the time specified in the contract, on which the work remained uncompleted. In an action brought in respect of certain extra works:—Held: a replication that deft. had, by directing extra works, rendered the performance of the contract work impossible within the appointed time, was a good binding where extras have been ordered.—HAMILTON v. VINEBERG (1912), 21 O. W. R. 75; 3 O. W. N. 605; 2 D. L. R. 921; 22 O. W. R. 238; 4 D. L. R. 827.—CAN.

g. Extras ordered by employers.]—A building contract, entered into by G. for the erection of artisans' cottages for an urban district council, stipulated that, in consideration of the payment of the contract price by instalments, payable on the certificate of the council's engineer, the contractor should within one week from the signing of the contract begin, & within nine months from that date complete, the contract works, unless delayed by strikes or lock-outs. The contract works were not completed within the contract time; but certain extra works had been ordered by the council, & were executed by the contractor:—Held: as pltf. had been prevented from completing within the contract time by the extra works ordered, the penalty clause of the contract was extinguished, & pltf. was entitled to judgment on his claim.—GALLIVAN v. KILLARNEY URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL, [1912] 2 I. R. 356.—IR.

52 i. Time not extended—Whether original date binding.]—Under a building contract, in writing, the contractor agreed that, subject to any extensions of time by the architect, the building should be finished by a named day, & that in default he would pay $50 a week as liquidated damages. It was also provided that all extras, etc., should form a part of the contract, if authorised by the architect, who was first to fix the price, & grant such extension of time therefor as he thought necessary, & power was also given him to extend the time for completion in case of a strike. The building was not completed for over four months after the time fixed, & this action for the balance of the contract price was commenced within the time the final payment was made payable under the contract. Although some extras were done, & there was evidence as to delay by strikes, the architect was not asked for, & did not grant, any extension of time:—Held: the contract must govern, & defts. were entitled to recover, by way of counterclaim, the sum provided by the contract as liquidated damages.—MCMANARA v. SKAIN (1892), 23 O. R. 103.—CAN.

52 ii. ———.]—A condition in a building contract provided that the work was to be completely finished on or before a day named under a penalty of £10 for each day's delay, provided that should the architect order any additional work that should necessarily delay the completion of the whole or otherwise cause the work to be delayed either in commencement or progress the contractor was to be allowed such additional time as the architect should at the time of giving the order fix; & in such case the penalty for non-completion was not to become payable until after the expiration of such additional time; the architect to be the absolute judge of the extent of the additional time to be allowed. The work was not completed within the time fixed by the contract. After the actual completion of the contract the architect signed & delivered to pltf. a document purporting to be his final certificate under the contract certifying that work had been done under the contract entitling pltf. to a sum named in terms of the contract agreement. A statement at the foot showed that this sum had been arrived at without making any deduction for penalties. The architect afterwards wrote to deft. that he did not consider himself justified in imposing any penalties. In an action by pltf. to recover the balance of the contract price & for extras, deft. counter-claimed for damages for breach of contract:—Held: (1) the failure of the architect to fix the additional time answer to a claim to deduct penalties for its non-performance, although the engineer had not extended the time for its completion.—WESTWOOD v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL (1863), 1 New Rep. 262; 7 L. T. 736; 11 W. R. 261.

53. ———.]—Pltf. entered into a written agreement with defts. that he would execute certain works within a certain period, & that, in case of non-completion within such period, for every day after such period until the completion of the work, pltf. would pay to defts. £3 as & for liquidated damages, defts. to be entitled to deduct such sums from the amount due from them to pltf. In an action for the money due to pltf. on completion of the works, defts. claimed to be entitled to deduct £873 as & for such liquidated damages. Pltf. replied that certain alterations ordered by defts. had been so mixed up with the works as to render completion within the stipulated time impossible. Defts. rejoined that such alterations had been made by order of the clerk of the works, etc., in accordance with powers contained in the contract, & that the period within which the works & alterations were so ordered was not by the terms of the contract to be extended except by order of the clerk of the works, etc., & that such extension had not been ordered:—Held: pltf., having bound himself in his contract to complete did not leave the whole, with the extras, to be done within the contract time but left the time unfixed within which the whole was to be done, with the result that the penalties were not recoverable; (2) ordering of extras not in writing was an interference & departure from the contract on the part of deft. which prevented the operation of the penalty clause.—MURDOCH v. LOCKIE (1896), 15 N. Z. L. R. 296.—N.Z.

1. ——— Contract left at large.]—Pltf. contracted to build a house for deft. within 20 weeks, weather permitting, from the date of execution, & to pay to the deft. £3 per week after such time until the work should be completed, such sum to be deducted from the contract money, any direction by the architect to perform extra work was not to vitiate or annul the contract. The work was not completed until 24 weeks after the period agreed upon. One week of the overtime was caused by the inclemency of the weather, & 2 weeks' overtime by extra work directed by deft. to be done. The architect gave no direction in writing during progress of the work as to when the contract should be completed, & made no allowance for the 3 weeks' overtime, but he marked on the final certificate "21 weeks overtime":—Held: by reason of the delay of 3 weeks, caused by no fault on the part of pltf., the contract, as to its time of completion, was left at large, & the deft. could not deduct the penalty of £3 per week for the 21 weeks' overtime from the money due by him on the contract.—PARLE v. LEISTIKOW (1883), 4 N. S. W. L. R. 84.—AUS.

m. ——— Failure to apply to architect.]—Pltf.'s contract bound him to complete a building for the deft. within a specified time, & to pay a penalty of $20 a week in case of delay the alterations & works within a certain time, unless an extension of time should be granted by the clerk of the works, must abide by the consequences of the decision of the clerk of the works, even though it involved his performing an impossibility.—JONES v. ST. JOHN'S COLLEGE, OXFORD (1870), L. R. 6 Q. B. 115; 40 L. J. Q. B. 80; 23 L. T. 803; 19 W. R. 276.

W. Ry. Co. (1876), 1 C. P. D. 518; Tew v. Newbold-on-Avon United District School Board (1884), Cab. & El. 260.

54. ———.]—A contractor undertook to execute works, with addition, enlargement, etc., within a specified time, the architect having power to extend the time for completion in proportion to the extra works so ordered. Additions were ordered & executed, & caused delay in completion of the works beyond the time specified, but the architect did not extend the time:—Held: the contractor was bound to complete the works within the time specified, & was liable to pay for the stipulated damages for non-completion within such time.—TEW v. NEWBOLD-ON-AVON UNITED DISTRICT SCHOOL BOARD (1884), 1 Cab. & El. 260.

55. Time extended—Completion after extension —Jurisdiction of architect.]—S. contracted to build a house for P. by a certain day. The contract provided that "if in the opinion of the architect the works be delayed by reason of authorised extras or additions, or in consequence of the contractor not having received in due time necessary instructions from the architect, for which he shall have specifically applied in writing, the architect shall make a fair & reasonable extension of time." The contract also provided for £12 per beyond the time, subject to clauses providing for an extra time allowance in case pltf. should be obstructed or delayed in the prosecution or completion of the work by the act, neglect, delay, or default of the owner or the architect or of any other contractor on the house, but no such allowance was to be made unless a claim therefor was presented in writing to the architect within 36 hours of the occurrence of such delay:—Held: pltf. was bound by this last proviso, & was liable for the stipulated penalty, although the delay in completion was entirely owing to causes beyond his control, & a large part of it took place before he commenced his work at all, as he had failed to give notice in writing to the architect of any claim for extra time allowance.—GREY v. STEPHENS (1906), 4 W. L. R. 201; 16 Man. L. R. 189.—CAN.

n. ——— Provision for automatic extension—Whether damages for delay recoverable.]—A building contract provided that the contractor should pay liquidated damages for each week's delay in the completion of the works shown in the plans & specifications, but that for any authorised extra causing delay the contractor should be allowed such additional time for completion as might be agreed upon by him & the architect, & that in default of any such agreement the extension of time should be determined by an arithmetical formula of which the money value of the extra was an essential factor:—Held: the omission to fix an extension of time when the extras were ordered did not prevent the application of the provision for liquidated damages, but left the period of extension to be determined by the automatic provision contained in the contract after the extras had been completed & the price ascertained.—Re ELLISON & BASTEN (1917), N. Z. L. R. 209.—N.Z.

o. ——— Onus of proof.]—In an action by a builder against the proprietor, deft. pleaded that under the penalty clause he was entitled to take credit for the amount of 10s. per day from the time fixed for completion up to date of actual completion. It appeared that pltf. had not applied for any certificate from the architect entitling him to an extension of time in respect of alterations, but deft. did not object to pltf. leading evidence of justification for the delay. To what extent the alterations were ordered before or after the time fixed, or what effect they had in delaying the work, did not appear:—Held: the onus of proof was on pltf. to show that the non-completion of the work within the time was due to the act or omission of deft. having failed to do so deft. was entitled to enforce the penalty clause.—STEEL v. BELL (1900), 3 S. C. (5th Series) 319.—SCOT.

p. ——— Independent contract—Not an extra contemplated in original contract.]—Where completion of the work originally contracted for was delayed by reason of an independent contract entered into for the construction of an additional work, which was not such an extra as was contemplated by a provision for extension of time:—Held: this set at large the penalties which the contract provided for in case of delay in completion.—MEYER v. GILMER (1899), 18 N. Z. L. R. 129.—N.Z.

55 i. Time extended — Completion after extension.]—Where a building contract contains a stipulation making the contractor liable to pay liquidated damages for every day exceeding the date fixed by the contract for completion, with a provision that the said date be extended upon the ordering of additional work, the contractor is liable for the number of days' delay less the time allowed for the perform-week as liquidated damages for delay. The work was delayed beyond the time fixed, & S. wrote to the architect asking him to grant or certify for an extension of time. The architect did not reply at once. S. then issued a writ claiming £681, which the architect certified as due to S., subject to the question of penalties. The architect then wrote extending the time, but not to such a late date as that of completion, & certifying that £231 was due to P. as liquidated damages for delay. S. wished to call evidence before the Official Referee to prove that the delay was caused by P. or his architect in ordering extras, in supplying material after the specified date, in delay in the selection of stone to be used & in the alteration of the plans & in other matters. The Official Referee refused to admit this evidence:—Held: his decision was right, on the grounds that the builder had applied to the architect for his decision as to an extension of time, & was bound by that decision, & that the architect had jurisdiction under the contract to decide particular questions of delay.—SATTIN v. POOLE (1901), 2 Hudson's B. C., 4th ed., 306, D. C.

SUB-SECT. 3.—DELAY BY OTHER ACTS OF EMPLOYER OR ARCHITECT.

56. In giving possession of site—Default of workmen of both parties.]—Pltfs. entered into a written contract to build, for £1,700, a brewery for defts., so far as regarded the carpenters' work, within four months & a half next ensuing the date of the agreement, & in default of completing same within the time thereinbefore limited, to forfeit to defts. £40 per week for each week that the completion of the work should be delayed beyond a certain date, the amount to be deducted from the £1,700 as liquidated damages. Pltfs. did not begin the work for four weeks after the date of the agreement, in consequence of defts. not being able to give them possession; they were afterwards delayed one week by the default of their own workmen, & four weeks by the default of the masons, etc., employed by defts.; & the work was not completed till five weeks after the time limited:—Held: defts. were not entitled to deduct from the £1,700 any sum in respect of the delay, either for the one or the four weeks.—HOLME v. GUPPY (1838), 3 M. & W. 387; 150 E. R. 1195.

58. In supplying materials—Independent covenants.]—In an action of debt, the declaration stated that, by an indenture of Dec. 1837, in consideration of £250,000, pltf. covenanted with defts. to make & complete a certain railway, & to provide railway bars or rails & chairs on or before May 1, 1840; that afterwards, by another indenture of Mar. 1839, in consideration of the further sum of £15,000, pltf. covenanted with defts., that he, being provided by them with bars or rails & chairs for temporary & permanent use, would complete the railway, & certain other works, on or before June 1, 1840, provided that, if pltf. should not complete the railway by that day, he should pay defts. £300, & the like sum for every succeeding day until the work should be completed, so that the whole amount forfeitable should not exceed £15,000. Breach, that defts. detained from & did not pay pltf. £20,000, parcel, etc. Plea, as to £7,500, parcel of the £20,000, that the £7,500 was parcel of the £15,000 agreed to be retained by defts., that pltf. did not complete the railway on June 1, 1840, nor until twenty-four days after, whereby pltf. then became liable to pay defts. £300 per day for the twenty-five days during which the railway remained incomplete, by reason of which defts. deducted & retained the £7,500 out of the money payable by them to pltf. Replication, that pltf. did not become, nor was liable to pay defts., modo et forma. At the trial, it was proved

55 ii. Pleading.]—A contract provided that in the event of any alterations or additions being required, the engineer should allow such an extension of time as he should think adequate; & at the expiration of the time so allowed deductions for delay should come into operation. Alterations & additions were required by the engineer, & were executed by the contractor, but it was impossible to complete the works until the alterations & additions were also completed:—Held: (1) in the event of any alterations or additions being required the works were not to be completed by the fixed date, but that the engineer was bound to allow such an extension of time as he should think adequate; (2) if the engineer failed to allow the necessary time the contractor would not be subject to the same responsibility as to completion to time as if no alterations or additions had been required; (3) the provisions as to deductions for delay had not come into operation.

It was not alleged in the petition that the engineer did not extend the time for completion:—Held: it was consistent with the allegations that he did extend it, & that the contractor failed to complete the contract within

PART II. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 3.

56 i. In giving possession of site—Furnishing lines & levels—Extras.]—Held: delay in putting pltf. in possession of the premises, & in furnishing lines & levels, & delay caused by extra work which he was called upon to perform, relieved pltf. from his obligation to complete the work by the date agreed, & deft. was debarred from enforcing payment of the penalty.—MUNRO v. WESTVILLE TOWN (1903), 36 N. S. R. 313.—CAN.

56 ii. —.]—Where it is the duty of the employer of a contractor to provide & prepare a site for the work to be done & he fails to provide & prepare the site, & the completion of the work is delayed in consequence, the right to recover penalties for non-completion by a given time is gone, even if the contractor would not have completed the work in time if no such delay had been caused.—BASKETT v. BENDIGO GOLD DREDGING CO., LTD. (1902), 21 N. Z. L. R. 166.—N.Z.

q. Contractor prevented from entering upon work—At time agreed upon.]—Where a contract prescribes a fixed period for the completion of certain works, & the employer prevents the contractor from entering upon the work at the time agreed upon, the employer cannot insist upon the completion of the work within a similar period from the time when the contractor was allowed actually to begin, the condition as to time ceasing to apply.—FINDLAY v. CAMERON (1878), 4 V. L. R. 191.—AUS.

r. — Non-removal of goods.]—A penalty clause in a building contract held to have been set at large by the proprietor having caused delays by not removing certain goods so as to enable the contractor to proceed, & by not doing certain work which he was to do himself promptly.—DILLON v. JACK (1903), 23 N. Z. L. R. 547.—N.Z.

58 i. In supplying materials.]—A contractor under a building contract was 17 days late in completing it, a delay occasioned by deft.'s non-delivery of certain materials which he was bound to supply:—Held: pltf. was not liable to any penalty for the delay in completion, which was due to deft.'s default.—DEGAGNE v. CHAVE (1896), 2 Terr. L. R. 210.—CAN.

58 ii. —.]—Where the materials to be supplied by the owners formed a very substantial part of the contract & their failure to supply them rendered impossible the completion in the stipulated time by the contractor:—Held: the owner could not recover.—PAGE v. GREEN (1904), 3 O. W. R. 404.—CAN.

that pltf. did not complete the railway until twenty-four days after June 1, but that defts. had not provided him with sufficient bars or rails & chairs to enable him to complete it by that day, whereupon the judge directed the jury that such supply was a condition precedent to defts.' right to deduct the penalty:—Held: this was a misdirection, the covenants being independent, & the supply of the bars, etc. not a condition precedent to the right of defts. to make the deduction.—MACINTOSH v. MIDLAND COUNTIES RY. CO. (1845), 14 M. & W. 548; 3 Ry. & Can. Cas. 780; 14 L. J. Ex. 338; 5 L. T. O. S. 537; 153 E. R. 592.

59. In delivering plans.]—Pltf. entered into a contract with defts. to erect certain buildings, & do other works by a fixed day. The contract provided that in case the contractor, pltf., was, in the opinion of the architect, unduly delayed in the completion of his contract, the architect was empowered to grant an extension of time, & if the contractor failed in the performance of any part of his undertaking, or did not, in the opinion & according to the determination of the architect, exercise such due diligence & make such due progress, so as to enable the works to be completed by the day fixed, the burial board, defts., were empowered to determine the contract. The architect neglecting to supply the contractor with the necessary plans, the contractor was unable to complete his contract by the fixed day, whereupon the burial board determined the contract:—Held: the rule of law relied upon by pltf. was applicable, that defts. could not take advantage of their own wrong, & they had no power to determine the contract.—ROBERTS v. BURY IMPROVEMENT COMRS. (1870), L. R. 5 C. P. 310; 39 L. J. C. P. 129; 22 L. T. 132; 34 J. P. 821; 18 W. R. 702, Ex. Ch.

60. Refusal to allow contractor to employ merchants.]—A contract for the construction of an electric light generating station, whereby pltf. undertook that the works should be completed on or before Oct. 20, 1900, contained the following clause: "If in the opinion of the engineer, the works be delayed by reason of any exceptionally inclement weather, or by reason of instructions from the engineer in consequence of proceedings taken or threatened by, or disputes with, adjoining or neighbouring owners or by the works or delay of other contractors or tradesmen engaged or nominated by the corpn. or the engineer and not referred to in the specification, or by reason of authorised extras or additions, or in consequence of any notice reasonably given by the contractor in pursuance of clause 10, or by reason of any local combination of workmen or strikes or general lock-out affecting any of the building trades, or in consequence of the contractor not having received in due time necessary instructions from the engineer for which he shall have specifically applied in writing, the engineer shall make a fair & reasonable extension of time for completion in respect thereof. In case of such strike or lock-out the contractor shall, as soon as may be, give to the engineer written notice thereof. But the contractor shall nevertheless use his best endeavours to prevent delay & shall do all that may reasonably be required to the satisfaction of the engineer to proceed with the work." The works were not completed until Feb. 21, 1901. In an action by pltf. claiming the balance payable in respect of the contract defts. counterclaimed for £200 as damages by reason of delay on the part of the pltf. Pltf., in his defence to the counterclaim, pleaded that the delay in completing the contract was caused by defts., their engineer, agents, or servants, more especially by their failure to deliver plans & details in due time, by the refusal of the engineer to allow pltf. to employ certain merchants for the supply of roof trusses, & by the orders given by defts. for extra works. Defts. contended that if the delay was caused as alleged by pltf. the above clause offered a special remedy to pltf. by which he might have obtained an extension of time, that if the engineer had refused an extension of time, pltf. could have proceeded under the arbn. clause, & that as pltf. had not taken the remedy provided by the contract, he was debarred from alleging that the delay was caused by defts.:—Held: the ordinary remedy or defence at law was not taken away by any special remedy inserted in the contract.—MINTER v. REIGATE URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL (1903), 67 J. P. Jo. 101.

Non-delivery by the employer till after the time for completion of the contract of parts of machinery to be erected by the contractor relieves the contractor from penalties for non-completion at the time fixed by contract.—BASKETT v. GIBBS' BEACH GOLD DREDGING CO., LTD. (1901), 21 N. Z. L. R. 201.—N.Z.

59 i. In delivering plans—Dismissal of contractor.]—Under a building contract, certain work was to be done agreeably to the plans & to the satisfaction of the employer's engineer. The contractor was warned that he was not progressing satisfactorily, & he admitted that his foreman was not good in dealing with men, though otherwise satisfactory. There was delay in delivering complete plans & specifications to the contractor. Subsequently the engineer refused to issue certificates for progress payments, owing to dissatisfaction with the contractor's delay & defective work. The contractor was dismissed & prevented from doing any further work:—Held: the contractor was not liable for damages for non-completion within the time specified in the contract.—WINGER v. STREETS-VILLE (1909), 13 O. W. R. 635; affd. 14 O. W. R. 216.—CAN.

a. Variation of plans & specifications.]—Where the parties to a building contract, by agreement before the time specified for the completion of the work, made an important variation of the plans & specifications which was essential to the successful carrying out of the contract:—Held: the contractor was exonerated from performance on the specified date, & the employer could not claim liquidated damages for failure to complete on the specified date.—SCOTT BROTHERS, LTD. v. CHRISTCHURCH (MAYOR) (1914), 34 N. Z. L. R. 229.—N.Z.

b. —.]—To a declaration upon a sealed agreement to build a vessel for pltf., of a certain size & according to a certain model, by a certain day, deft. pleaded that he procured materials, & before breach of the agreement he was ordered by pltf. to build a vessel of larger size; & that in pursuance of pltf.'s directions, & by his order & request, he did erect & build such larger vessel, & was consequently compelled to take a longer time, which was the breach complained of:—Held: no answer to the declaration.—GASKIN v. COUNTER (1856), 6 C. P. 99.—CAN.

c. —.]—Declaration on a contract by testator to build a marine boiler & steam engine for pltf., alleging partial completion by testator before his death, & a promise by defts. as exors. to complete it for the balance due, but that they did not complete it in time, & delivered it unfinished and not according to the specifications. Defts. pleaded that after testator's contract & promise, it was agreed between him & pltf. in his lifetime that he should not perform them, but that instead testator should deliver to pltf., who was to accept, a different boiler & engine, larger & more valuable, requiring a longer time for construction; & afterwards, before action, testator in his lifetime, & defts. as exors., did make & deliver to pltf., who accepted the same upon such terms, & paid the price thereof:—Held: bad.—LEONARD v. NORTHY (1871), 22 C. P. 11.—CAN.

d. —.]—Changes in the plans & specifications causing delay in completion are not a waiver of the penal clause beyond the actual delay so caused, & if the architect's certificate is silent on the point it is not necessarily final or conclusive.—McLEOD v. WILSON (1897), 2 Terr. L. R. 312.—CAN.

61. Interference—By employer or agents.]—

A contract for building a vessel provided that if the ship should not be delivered complete on a certain day, a penalty of £5 a day should be paid by pltf. to deft. as liquidated damages, but that if the ship should not be so delivered for any cause not under the control of pltf., same to be proved to the satisfaction of deft.'s agent, & to be certified by him in writing, then the penalty should not be enforced for such number of days or for such time as deft.'s agent should in such certificate name. The ship was not delivered till long after the time appointed, but a large portion of that delay was occasioned by the interference of deft. or his agents in the course of the performance of the contract:—Held: in these circumstances, no penalties were recoverable by deft., & none could be set off against pltf.'s claim.—RUSSELL v. SA DA BANDEIRA (Viscount) (1862), 13 C. B. N. S. 149; 32 L. J. C. P. 68; 7 L. T. 804; 9 Jur. N. S. 718; 143 E. R. 59.

61 i. Interference—By employer or agents.]—In an action by a contractor against the Govt. of V. the Govt. claimed large sums for penalties for non-completion within the contract time. The contractor tendered evidence that the completion was delayed by the action of the Govt. or its servants:—Held: the evidence was admissible.—BRUCE v. R. (1865), 2 W. W. & A. B. 193.—AUS.

e. Delay by employer.]—Where delays are occasioned by the owner of a building under repairs, the contractor, under a penal clause, cannot be held answerable for such delays.—BOIVIN v. PAQUET (1915), Q. R. 25 K. B. 69.—CAN.

f. —.]—In an action for the contract price of building an engine & boiler for defts. the defence was that the work was not done within the time provided for in the contract, & that defts. were entitled to deduct $20 a day for each day's default in completion:—Held: the delay was caused by defts. themselves, & pltf. were entitled to recover the full contract price.—FRENCH RIVER TUG CO. v. KERR ENGINE CO. (1894), 24 S. C. R. 703.—CAN.

g. — & his architect.]—Held: a penalty clause in a contract for the erection of a building could not be enforced where, owing to the dilatoriness of the employers & their architect, the contractor was precluded from completing his contract within the time stipulated.—EDWARDS v. PUBLIC SCHOOL BOARD S.S. OXFORD (1913), 25 O. W. R. 437; 5 O. W. N. 537.—CAN.

h. —.]—Pltf. were delayed in their work by the architects being dilatory in supplying details & by material changes in the plans & designs. The pltf. made no claim to the architects for an extension for this reason, & the architects made no allowance:—Held: by the delay for which defts. were responsible, the time when the liquidated damages would commence to run had been rendered inoperative & there was no provision under which a new date could be substituted. All right, therefore, to recover the sums stipulated as liquidated damages had gone.—GRACE v. OSLER (1911), 19 W. L. R. 109, 326.—CAN.

k. contractor.]—When the proprietor & the contractor are both at fault, the penalty clause providing for the forfeiture of a certain sum of money daily for non-delivery of the building is without effect.—GUERTIN v. PAPINEAU (1911), Q. R. 40 S. C. 97.—CAN.

m. Suspension of work—Power of architect to allow extension.]—A condition in a building contract gave the architect power to suspend the work at any time, provided that he might make an allowance for any extra cost occasioned thereby, to the contractor. By a subsequent condition the work was to be completely finished on or before a day named under a penalty, but should the architect cause the work to be delayed either in commencement or progress, the contractor was to be allowed such additional time, as the architect at the time of giving the order should fix:—Held: the power to allow pecuniary compensation for a suspension of the work did not affect the power to allow an extension of time in respect of such suspension.—MURDOCH v. LOCKIE (1896), 15 N. Z. L. R. 226.—N.Z.

n. Non-performance of condition precedent.]—Deft. agreed to build a house for pltf. & finish it by Apr. 1, 1876, & pltf. agreed to pay deft. $400 on Aug. 15 next, & to make other payments as the work progressed. No payment after the $400 to exceed the amount of work done. In an action against deft. for breach of the agreement in not finishing the house by Apr. 1, 1876:—Held: payment of the $400 was a condition precedent to pltf.'s right to recover, & the declaration was bad as there was no averment in it of the payment of that sum.—DRISCOLL v. BARKER (1878), 2 P. & B. 407.—CAN.

o. — Locating site—Alteration in plans.]—A person who undertakes by contract to build a bridge to be completed and delivered at a stated date, under a penalty is not liable for delay caused by failure of the employers to locate, as agreed, the site of the abutments, or by their altering the SUB-SECT. 4.—OTHER EXCUSES FOR DELAY.

62. Performance endangering life.]—If a man covenant to build a house before a certain day & the plague break out & continue till after the fixed day, the breach is excusable as to time, because the law will not compel the builder to risk his life, but he must complete as soon as may be after.—LAWRENCE v. TWENTIMAN (1611), 1 Roll. Abr. tit. "Condition," p. 450, pl. 10.

Annotation:—Consd. Hall v. Wright (1859), 29 L. J. Q. B. 43.

63. Bad weather.]—Where it was part of a condition precedent to a claim of £80, in addition to the purchase-money for a new house, that the pavement in front of the adjoining houses should be laid down by Apr. 21:—Held: a delay of four days, though occasioned by bad weather, which prevented the workmen from proceeding, was sufficient to prevent the recovery of such claim.—MARYON v. CARTER (1830), 4 C. & P. 295, N. P.

64. Reasonable time not elapsing—Since request to build.]—In an action on a covenant for building a house within a reasonable time, it is no defence that a reasonable time had not elapsed work, during performance, & substituting iron railings for the wooden ones mentioned in the contract.—DUPUIS v. LAPRAIRIE (1904), Q. R. 28 S. C. 196.—CAN.

p. Delay by the contractors—Implied term.]—A firm of building contractors entered into a contract with a co. to execute the joiner work on tenements to be erected by the co., in terms of which they undertook "to finish our dept. of the work by Apr. 15 next." The co. employed other contractors to do the mason & plaster work on the tenements, & the co. at the time they entered into the contract with the building contractors informed them that both the mason & plasterer were also bound to finish their work within a limit of time, but in point of fact the plasterer's contract was never signed. Owing to delay on the part of the mason & plasterer the building contractors were prevented from finishing the joiner work by Apr. 15. In an action by the building contractors against the co. for payment of the price of the joiner work, defts. pleaded that pltf. had broken the contract by failing to finish the joiner work within the stipulated time:—Held: pltf. were absolved from the obligation to finish the joiner work by Apr. 15, & were only bound to finish the joiner work within a reasonable time, because there was an implied condition in the contract to the effect that the other work on the tenements should be completed at such date or dates as to make it possible for pltf. to finish the joiner work by Apr. 15.—DUNCANSON v. SCOTTISH COUNTY INVESTMENT CO., LTD. (1915), 52 Sc. L. R. 790.—SCOT.

q. —.]—Pltf. contracted with defts. to complete certain work for them by a certain day; that became impossible through the delay of another contractor, without fault of defts. The contract provided that the proprietors were not to be responsible to any contractor for the non-completion of a prior contractor's work at the time named:—Held: the clause barred recovery of damages for delay.—WEBB v. 65. Causes beyond builders' control.]—A contract for building a ship provided that due allowance should be made for delays through certain causes, "or other circumstances beyond the builders' control." It was within the contemplation of the parties that the ship should be commenced as soon as a suitable berth became vacant, & the first berth which became vacant was one in which another ship was being built, & delay was caused in the completion of this ship by the same kind of causes which were provided for in the contract relating to the ship in question:—Held: allowances were properly made for delay in building the ship in the contract, owing to the delay in completing the former vessel.—Re LOCKIE & CRAGGS & SON (1901), 86 L. T. 388; 9 Asp. M. L. C. 296; 7 Com. Cas. 7.

66. — Pleading.]—Declaration on a deed whereby deft. covenanted with pltf. to use his best endeavours & all due diligence to forward the works comprised in a certain contract, so that same should be completed in as short a time as practicable. Breach, that deft. did not nor would use his best endeavours or due or any diligence to forward the works comprised in the contract, so that same might be completed in as short a time as practicable, but wholly neglected so to do, & the works by the default of the deft. remained & were incomplete & unperformed. Plea, that deft. did use his best endeavours & all due diligence to forward the works comprised in the contract, so that same might be completed in as short a time as practicable, but that by causes wholly beyond his control, & without any default on his part, he was & had been hindered & prevented from forwarding the works:—Held: the plea, though informal, was good as a traverse of the breach.—VICKERS v. OVEREND (1861), 7 H. & N. 92; 30 L. J. Ex. 388; 158 E. R. 405.

SUB-SECT. 5.—EVIDENCE OF EXTENSION OF TIME.

67. Parol agreement.]—Pltf. covenanted to build two houses for £500 by a certain day, & liquidated damages fixed by contract for not finishing by the day named a house to be erected by defts. for pltf. Plea, that defts. were delayed by the masons employed by pltf., & were thereby, without any default on their part, hindered & prevented from completing the work within the time:—Held: good.—PAPP v. MELVILLE (1857), 16 U. C. R. 124.—CAN.

65 i. Causes beyond builder's control —Delay caused by strikes.]—An agreement provided for a penalty if the work was not completed by a certain date; the work was not completed by that date, & the work done & material used were defective; the owner claimed for damages for delay & defective work & material. Pltfs. replied that the delay, if any, was occasioned by the owner:—Held: the owner was not entitled to damages for delay, as the delay was caused by strikes.—ALBIP v. ROBINSON (1911), 18 W. L. R. 39.—CAN.

65 ii. — Question for court—Though certificate given by architects.]—A contract provided that the contractor should not be liable for delays arising from fire, general strikes or combinations of workmen, or other causes over which the contractor could not in any possibility have control. The architect gave a certificate to the building owner, in terms of the contract, that the work could reasonably have been completed by a certain date long prior to the date of actual completion:—Held: despite the architect's certificate to the building owner, it was open to the ct. to decide whether the delays were due to causes over which the contractor had no control or to the fault of the building owner himself.—HENDRICKS & SOEKER v. ATKINS (1903), 20 S. C. 310.—S. AF.

averred, in an action of covenant for the money, that the houses were built in the time:—Held: evidence that the time had been enlarged by parol agreement, & the houses finished within the enlarged time, did not support the declaration.—LITTLER v. HOLLAND (1790), 3 Term Rep. 590; 100 E. R. 749.

68. Final certificate not allowing for penalties.]—By a building contract, the engineer had power to extend the time for completion of the work. He sent in certificates from time to time after the date for completion, & in his final certificate no account was taken of the penalties:—Held: this afforded evidence that the engineer had extended the time.—LAIDLAW v. HASTINGS PIER CO. (1874), 2 Hudson's B. C. 4th ed. 13, Ex. Ch.

Annotation:—Consd. Laphorne v. St. Aubyn (1885), Cab. & El. 486.

69. —.]—Pltfs., building owners, sought to recover penalties from defts., builders, for non-completion of certain building work on the date agreed under the contract, which provided that the architect might, in certain circumstances, extend the time for the completion of the work, but did not expressly give him power to deal with penalties. The final certificate made by the architect after the completion of the work was as follows: "We hereby certify £536 15s. 5d. is due to defts. in settlement of contract." Defts. pleaded as follows: "Defts. say that the architect's certificate as to amounts due by pltfs. to defts., or to be deducted by pltfs. from the amount payable to defts. are final & binding on all parties, & the final certificate of the architect as to the balance due by pltfs. to defts. under the contracts mentioned in the statement of claim estops pltfs. from maintaining their claim in the action," & by a further paragraph: "Alternatively, if (which is denied) there was any delay on the part of defts. in carrying out the works, the architect has allowed an extension of time covering the whole of the delays. The allowance is contained in the final certificate of the architect":—Held: the architect's certificate, having regard to the fact that the contract did not expressly give him power to deal with the question of penalties, was at the most a very strong presumption, which must be acted on

£3 as liquidated damages. It was also provided that in the event of any extra work being required, the engineer should allow such an extension of time as he should think adequate in consequence thereof; & any sum to become payable by way of damages for non-completion should be computed from the expiration of such extended time. Extra works were ordered, but no reference was at the time made to any extension of time. Some months after the time fixed by the contract for completion of the works the engineer, in giving his certificate for a monthly progress payment, deducted, for the first time, penalties at £3 per day as for the previous month, & in subsequent certificates continued to deduct penalties as from the same period. Still later, further extra works were ordered & carried out, but no reference was made to any further extension of time:—Held: even if the deduction in the certificate, of penalties from a fixed date, amounted to an extension of time to that date, such extension was ineffective, & should have been allowed when the extra works were ordered.—ANDERSON v. TUAPEKA COUNTY COUNCIL (1900), 19 N. Z. L. R. 1.—N.Z.

if not rebutted, but it was not conclusive on the face of it that the circumstances had arisen which gave him jurisdiction in the matter of extending the time for completion, & the above defence was not in law a complete answer to pltfs.' claim.—BRITISH THOMSON HOUSTON CO., LTD. v. WEST BROTHERS (1903), 19 T. L. R. 493.

SECT. 4.—RESCISSION AND RECTIFICATION.

70. Rescission—Secret commission—Fraudulent agreement with engineer.—A telegraph works co. agreed with a telegraph cable co. to lay a cable, the cable to be paid for by a sum payable when the cable was begun, & by twelve instalments payable on certificates by the cable co.'s engineer, who was named in the contract. Shortly afterwards the engineer, who was engaged to lay other cables for the works co., agreed with them to lay this cable also for a sum of money to be paid him by instalments payable by the works co. when they received the instalments from the cable co.:—Held: in the circumstances, the agreement between the engineer & the works co. was a fraud, which entitled the cable co. to have their contract rescinded, & to receive back the money which they had paid under that contract, on the ground (MELLISH, L.J.) that the works co. had by their fraudulent conduct prevented the cable co. from having the full benefit of the contract.—PANAMA & SOUTH PACIFIC TELEGRAPH CO. v. INDIA RUBBER, GUTTA PERCHA & TELEGRAPH WORKS CO. (1875), 10 Ch. App. 515; 45 L. J. Ch. 121; 32 L. T. 517; 23 W. R. 583, L. JJ.

PART II. SECT. 4.

b. Rescission—What amounts to.—Deft. had agreed with pltfs. for the erection by them of a house on his land; & while engaged in such work pltfs. alleged unnecessary delays in their operations caused, as they said, by the neglect of deft. in supplying material for the building. In the course of a discussion deft. told pltfs.: "If you won't go on with your work, go away":—Held: this did not amount to a rescinding of the agreement, & pltfs. were not warranted in treating the agreement as abandoned by deft., who was entitled to counter-claim against pltfs. for the increased cost to him of finishing the building.—CLAYTON v. McCONNEL (1888), 15 A. R. 560.—CAN.

resp. contractors having agreed to do all work necessary to put down a well & erect a pump, & having been directed to stop boring by the engineer, put in a pump & brought an action upon the contract, in which they failed for want of the engineer's certificate. They subsequently offered to do what was necessary under the contract to complete the contract as being at an end. The resp. brought a second action for work & materials:—Held: the first action had not put an end to the contract.—ATHLONE (No. 2) RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL v. CAMPBELL & SON (1912), 47 I. L. T. 142.—IR.

d. — Change of site—Breach of contract.—Defts. by a contract with pltfs. for the erection of dredging machinery on pontoons were bound to find a convenient site, & did provide a convenient site near defts.' claim, but before pltfs. commenced the erection of the machinery it became impossible, owing to causes not under defts.' control, to erect the machinery on that spot. Defts. forthwith placed the pontoons at another convenient site on the claim. The increase in the cost of erection of the machinery at the new site would have been trifling as compared with the contract price:—Held: even if the change of site amounted to a breach of the contract pltfs. were not entitled to determine the contract, but must seek their remedy in damages.—BURT (A. & T.) CO., LTD. v. GENTLE ANNIE GOLD-DREDGING CO., LTD. (1901), 21 N. Z. L. R. 237.—N.Z.

e. — Excessive error in estimates.—The work required to be done under a contract turned out to be

71. — Innocent misrepresentation — Completion after full knowledge.—A claim by contractors for the rescission of a contract for the construction of a railway, on the plea that the contract had been entered into under essential error induced by the innocent misrepresentation of the railway co. as to the nature of the strata through which the railway passed, was rejected on the ground that restitutio in integrum had become impossible by reason of the completion of the railway by the contractors after full knowledge of the facts.—GLASGOW & SOUTH WESTERN RY. v. BOYD & FORREST, [1915] A. C. 526; 84 L. J. P. C. 157, H. L.

See, further, CONTRACT.

72. Rectification — To carry out intention of parties—Mutual mistake.—In an action by contractors to recover from a corpn. the balance alleged to be due for work & labour done under a contract for laying down tram lines & road making, the point at issue was whether pltfs., on a true construction of the contract, were entitled to charge £14,600 for preparing the bed of the wood pavement, or whether that work was covered by the contract price for the paving of 12s. 7d. per yard. The jury found that both parties intended that the bed should be an extra charge:—Held: (1) in order to carry out the intentions of the parties, the contract required rectification, which the ct. had power to direct; (2) judgment should be given for pltfs. for an amount to be ascertained when certain items had been settled on a reference in accordance with the findings of the jury.—MACARTNEY, M'ELROY & CO. v. BRIGHTON CORPN. (1904), Times, May 21.

See, further, MISTAKE.

16 per cent. in excess of the estimate upon which the contractor's tender was based:—Held: this was an excessive percentage entitling the contractor to refuse to go on with the contract.—McKILLOP TOWNSHIP v. PIDGEON & FOLEY (1908), 11 O. W. R. 401.—CAN.

72 i. Rectification—To carry out intention of parties—Mutual mistake.—Pltfs., building contractors, tendered to defts. for the building of an asylum. Defts., deeming the cost too high, directed their quantity surveyors to prepare bills of reductions, showing reduced works & reduced prices. Owing to a reference letter being misplaced, there was an error in the total cost as appearing from the bills of reductions, the total sum being put at £830 less than the correct figure. Pltfs., in the mistaken belief that the aggregate cost of the reduced works was as stated in the reduced bills of quantities, tendered for one bulk sum, which tender was accepted by defts., & the works completed. In an action for rectification, & recovery of the sum due on the rectified contract:—Held: the mistake could be rectified so as to carry out the real intention of the parties.—COLLEN v. DUBLIN CO COUNCIL, [1908] 1 I. R. 503.—IR.

Part III.—Certificates.

SECT. 1.—AS CONDITIONS PRECEDENT TO PAYMENT.

73. When condition precedent.]—In a building contract it was provided that the contract should not be vacated by any additions or alterations, but that the price to be paid for such alterations should be settled by a surveyor, who was to be sole arbitrator in settling such price & all disputes arising in or about the premises, & deft., the employer, agreed to pay certain proportions of the contract price upon receiving a certificate in writing, signed by the surveyor, testifying that certain portions of the building had been done, & his approval thereof, & the balance that should be found due after deducting the previous payments, within two months after receiving the surveyor's certificate that the whole of the works had been completed to his satisfaction:—Held: the surveyor's certificate was a condition precedent to pltf.'s right to sue upon the contract in respect of alterations.—MORGAN v. BIRNIE (1833), 9 Bing. 672; 3 Moo. & S. 76; 131 E. R. 766.

74. —.]—Declaration on a building contract, by which the works were to be executed to the satisfaction of the architect; additions or alterations not to be executed without his order, & the value to be ascertained by him; the money to be paid on completion of the work. Averment, that the architect required additions to the work, which were executed by pltf., & that all things had happened to entitle him to have the values & amounts ascertained, but that the architect did not ascertain same, & that the balance of the whole account was unpaid. Plea, that all things necessary to entitle pltf. to have the values & documents ascertained had not happened, because the certificate of the architect that the works had been completed to his satisfaction had not been obtained:—Held: (1) the satisfaction of the architect was a condition precedent to entitle pltf. to have the amounts & values of the extra work ascertained; (2) the declaration was bad, for not alleging that the certificate of satisfaction had been obtained, unless the general averment was sufficient for that purpose; (3) if it were, the plea was a good answer to the action.—GLENN v. LEITH (1853), 21 L. T. O. S. 141; 1 C. L. R. 569.

75. —.]—Defts. advertised for tenders for a gas-holder tank. One of the terms of the specification was, that payments were to be made in cash on the certificate of defts.' engineer, 75 per cent. during the progress of the work, 25 per cent. three months after its completion to his satisfaction. The tank was put up, but it leaked, & the engineer refused his certificate. Pltf. having been non-suited appealed on the ground that he ought to have been permitted to show that the work was done in a way that ought to have satisfied the engineer, & that the certificate was required only for the 75 per cent.:—Held: if builders agreed to

PART III. SECT. 1.

73 i. When condition precedent.]—Where a contract with a builder provides that payment is not to be made until a certificate approving of the work & materials is issued, the issue of such certificate is a condition precedent to the bringing of an action by the contractor for payment.—WAUGH v. GRAYSON (1905), 2 W. L. R. 330.—CAN.

73 ii. —.]—An architect's certificate is a condition precedent to a claim for recovery of money under the contract only when the contract makes clear provision to that effect. When the terms of the contract are ambiguous such a term will not be implied.—MARTIN v. WILLSON (1911), T. P. D. 737.—S. AF.

73 iii. —.]—A clause in a building contract provided that payments were to be made on the certificate of the architect on the measured value of the work executed, less 20 per cent., one-half of which was to be paid on the completion of the work & the balance six months afterwards, on receipt of the architect's certificate:—Held: the production of the architect's certificate was a condition precedent to the builder's right to recover any portion of the balance.—SCOTT v. SYTNER (1891), 9 S. C. 50.—S. AF.

73 iv. —.]—Where work was to be done, under a special agreement, to the satisfaction of a surveyor, & the jury, notwithstanding that a certificate of the surveyor was not produced, gave a verdict for pltfs.:—Held: the verdict must be set aside.—COATS-WORTH v. TORONTO CITY (1855), 7 C. P. 490; 8 C. P. 364.—CAN.

73 v. —.]—Pltf. contracted with defts. to construct a gravel road, according to plans & specifications annexed, payments to be made monthly on the estimate of the engineer in charge, who was to determine the amount of work to be paid for, & all disputes:—Held: pltf. could not recover for work done under such contract, without a certificate of the engineer.—EKINS v. BRUCE COUNTY (1870), 30 U. C. R. 48.—CAN.

73 vi. —.]—Held: as the contract required that any work done on the road must be certified to by the chief engineer, until he so certified & such certificate was approved of by the comrs., the contractors were not entitled to be paid anything.—JONES v. R. (1877), 7 S. C. R. 570.—CAN.

73 viii. —.]—O. & Co. contracted with the govt. to complete certain telegraph works, & M. afterwards contracted with O. & Co. to construct part of the works, in which latter contract O. & Co. covenanted to pay M. at the rate mentioned therein per mille, but the contract was expressed to be subject to the condition that the payments should be made to M. within twenty days after the estimate of the engineer in charge, to be by him put in from time to time to the minister of public works, & service of a copy of such estimate on O. & Co.:—Held: this was sufficient to make such estimate & service of a copy thereof a condition precedent to M.'s right to recover for work done under his contract.—MCDONALD v. OLIVER (1882), 3 O. R. 310.—CAN.

73 ix. —.]—A building contract provided that the works embraced in the contracts should be fully & entirely complete in every particular, & given up under final certificate & to the satisfaction of the engineers. The contractors claimed a large sum of money for extra work, & stated that until a satisfactory arrangement was arrived at they would be unable to proceed & complete the work. Notices were given & the contracts were taken out of their hands & completed at the cost of the contractors:—Held: the contractors not having previously obtained from, or been entitled to, a certificate from the chief engineer, for or on account of the money which they claimed, the claim should properly be dismissed.—BERLINGUET v. R. (1886), 13 S. C. R. 26.—CAN.

73 x. —.]—Pltf. entered into a contract with defts. for the construction of certain main sewers. The contract provided that the work & material should in all things be performed & provided according to the plans & specifications, to the entire satisfaction of the engineer in charge of the work. The specifications provided that the contractor should, on the first day of each month, hand in to the engineer his account for work during the preceding month, & be paid on the certificate of the engineer. No final certificate was obtained from the engineer of the completion of the work, nor was the work completed to his satisfaction. In an action to recover the balance alleged to be due under the contract:—Held: the certificate of the engineer as to the completion of the work was a condition precedent to the right to recover.—ROBINSON v. OWEN SOUND TOWN (1888), 16 O. R. 121.—CAN.

73 xi. —.]—S. made a contract for the construction of a bridge for a lump sum. After the completion of the bridge, a final certificate was given by the chief engineer & payment thereof made, but S. preferred a claim for the value of work, not included in such final estimate, alleged to have been done in the construction of the bridge, & caused by changes & alterations ordered by the chief engineer of so radical a nature as to create, according to the contention of claimants, a new contract between the parties:—Held: the claim came within the original contract which made the certificate of the engineer a condition precedent to

76. —.—Pltfs. contracted with a corpn. to perform works, & the corpn. agreed to pay for them in a specified manner, with a proviso that no sum should be considered due, nor should pltfs. make any claim on account of any work executed by them, unless the engineer of the corporation should certify the amount thereof, & that pltfs. were reasonably entitled thereto. The corpn. also had the power of determining the contract if pltfs. should not in the opinion & according to the determination of the engineer exercise due diligence, & thereupon the engineer was to fix the amount earned by pltfs. The contract was determined by the corpn., & pltfs. filed a bill for an account:—Held: the certificate of the engineer not having been given, & not being shown to have been fraudulently withheld, the bill must be dismissed, with costs.—SCOTT v. LIVERPOOL CORPN. (1858), 3 De G. & J. 334; 28 L. J. Ch. 230; 32 L. T. O. S. 265; 5 Jur. N. S. 105; 7 W. R. 153; 44 E. R. 1297, L. C.

77. —.—A building contract contained provisions making the certificate of the engineer conclusive between the parties, & it was provided that all accounts relating to the contract should be submitted to & settled by the engineer, & that his certificate for the ultimate balance should be final & conclusive:—Held: in the absence of fraud on the part of the engineer, & where his certificate had been made a condition precedent to payment, his certificate must be conclusive between the parties.—SHARPE v. 73 xii. —.—Where pltf. agreed with the deft. to do certain work on terms embodied in correspondence, part of which read: "I'll pay you on the completion of each 80 ft. of tunneling; all you need to do is to have M. to certify that you have done the work":—Held: pltf. could not recover in the absence of certificate from M.—LEROY v. SMITH (1900), 8 B. C. R. 393.—CAN.

73 xiii. —.—By the contract, the building was to be erected according to certain plans & specifications prepared by defts. J. & B., architects, & all payments were to be made upon the written certificates of the architects to the effect that such payments had become due, & it was provided that, before the issue of the final certificate, the contractor should furnish evidence of payment to material-men & workmen. The contractor entered upon the performance of the work, & from time to time received certificates from the architects, the amounts whereof were paid; but a final certificate was refused, & this action was brought to recover payment from the owners & to compel the architects to give a certificate:—Held: pltf. was not entitled to recover without the certificate of the architects, that being a condition precedent to payment, collusion between the owners & the architects not being established.—LAWRENCE v. KERN (1910), 14 W. L. R. 337; 3 Sask. L. R. 253.—CAN.

—Pltf. made a contract with deft. F., through F.'s agents, to plough, pack, disc, & drag 480 acres of land, at certain rates of payment per acre. By the terms of the contract, before payment, the work was to be passed upon by an inspector, "upon whose certificate of approval, duly signed, payment will be made for all work so completed." The inspector refused to pass the work, when it was completed, & so reported to F., who refused to pay the balance, for which pltf. sued:—Held: the certificate of the inspector as to the performance of the work in accordance with the contract in a satisfactory manner was a condition precedent to the obligation to pay, the good faith of the inspector not being impugned & no collusion being shown or suggested.—SCHULTZ v. 73 xxii. —.—Pltfs. contracted for the performance of certain works, for which payment was to be made in a specified manner. A balance was to be retained by deft. as a guarantee for the completion of the contract, & was to be paid to the contractors within one month after the certificate of deft.'s engineer, specifying the completion of the works to his satisfaction. The certificate was not given, & whilst the matter was still in dispute deft. took possession of the works. Pltfs. brought their action for the balance due on the contract. No fraud or collusion as to the refusal of the certificate was alleged:—Held: the engineer's certificate was a condition precedent to pltfs.' right to recover.—KENNARD v. FRATHERSTON (1867), 1 C. A. 15.—N.Z.

73 xxiii. —.—Under a building contract payments were to be made to the contractor upon the certificate, in writing, of the engineer. The contractor having been required by the engineer to perform works for which he declined to give an order in writing, & the contractor contending that the works were not within the contract, the works were executed, & a claim was made by the contractor in respect thereof as for extras:—Held: the contractor could not recover the value of such works without a certificate in writing from the engineer.—BRUCE v. HARRIS, Mac. 386.—N.Z.

73 xxiv. —.—The certificate of the chief engineer was made by the contractor a condition precedent to any right or cause of action on the part of the contractor for payments of money under the contract:—Held: such certificate was a condition precedent & the conduct of the chief engineer or the Govt. was not such as would make it inequitable that such condition precedent should be relied on.—ANNEAR v. surveyor to be testified by a certificate under his hand, & in default of such completion the contractor should forfeit & pay to defts. £1 for each day during which the works should be incomplete after the time as & for liquidated damages, & that the contractor should be paid by defts. at the rate of 80 per cent. of the value of the work done in each month & the balance one month after the completion of the contract, provided that defts. should not be required to pay to the contractor any sum exceeding the value as valued by the surveyor or other officer of so much of the works as should have been executed by the contractor during the preceding month:—Held: a certificate by the surveyor that the work had been completed to his satisfaction was a condition precedent to the payment of the retention money.—*WALLACE v. .]—Clause 26 of a building contract provided that "the certificate of the architect is a condition precedent to the contractor's right of action against the employer." Clause 27 provided that "the architect is to be the sole arbitrator or umpire between the employer & contractor, & is to determine any question, dispute or difference that may arise either during the progress of the work or in determining the value of any variations that may be made in the work contracted for, & the certificate of the architect's decision upon such question, dispute or difference shall be final & binding between the employer & contractor & without further appeal whatsoever." The contractor was paid the whole of the amounts which were certified by the architect as due to him, but he alleged that he was entitled to a further sum which he claimed to recover in an action. He had made no application for arbn. under clause 27:—Held: the provision of clause 26, making it a condition to the satisfaction of the architect was a condition precedent to the builder's right to recover on foot of the contract; (2) he was not entitled to recover for the value of work done, as to which, while incomplete, the architect had expressed approval so far as then partially executed, but which was not subsequently completed to the architect's satisfaction.—RICHARDSON v. MAHON, [1879] 4 L. R. Ir. 486.—IR.

73 xxvi. — Pleading.]—Action brought by a builder to recover sums of money from deft. for alleged work & labour in construction of certain buildings. Agreement that pltf. should, under direction of deft.'s architect, carry on the work in conformity with plans & specifications, under superintendence of the architect. At the trial the jury were directed to find for deft., on the ground that the architect's certificate was a condition precedent to a demand for payment, & pltf. had not fulfilled his special contract:—Held: deft. should have produced evidence to show that he paid pltf. the full value of the work done, & should have shown he had not himself prevented the completion of the works.—CALLAN v. MARUM (1871), 5 I. L. T. 48.—IR.

g. When not condition precedent.]—Where the granting of a certificate by an architect is a purely ministerial function, the production of a certificate is not a condition precedent to the recovery of payment.—BAGLEY v. DE KOK (1912), W. L. D. 68.—S. AF.

h. —.]—The contract was for the performance of certain specified work at a price named, in conformity with the instructions of H., the overseer of the works. By it H. was made the sole judge as to the state & completion of the work, & generally as to any question arising under the contract; he was empowered to reject any materials which he might think unfit, & to employ others in the event of pltf. not using sufficient despatch, & no payments were to be made without his written certificate:—Held: there was clearly no covenant by defts. that the overseer should give certificates when pltf. were entitled thereto, as alleged in the declaration.—KEMPSTER v. BANK OF MONTREAL (1871), 32 U. C. R. 87.—CAN.

k. —.]—Held: the non-production of an architect's certificate approving of the work done, though required by the contract with the dismissed contractor, as a condition precedent to payment, did not preclude the sub-contractor from recovering under the oral agreement, provided the work was so done as to morally entitle him to such certificate.—*PETRIE v. precedent to the contractor's right of action that he should have the certificate of the architect that the amount claimed was due to him, was unaffected by clause 27, & in the absence of a certificate pltf. was not entitled to maintain the action, unless he could show, & that he failed to show, improper dealing between the employer & the architect.—EAGLESHAM v. McMASTER, [1920] 2 K. B. 169; 89 L. J. K. B. 805; 123 L. T. 198; 84 J. P. 146.

82. When not condition precedent — Contract with third party guaranteeing loan.]—By an agreement dated Apr. 28, 1876, T. agreed to build six houses upon land belonging to deft., according to certain plans & specifications, under the direction of deft.'s surveyor. T. covenanted to complete the houses before the ensuing Sept., & in default of so doing to pay deft. £5 per week for liquidated damages so long as they should remain unfinished. Deft. covenanted to pay to T. for the work £1,085 in certain specified instalments, each instalment being paid under the certificate of deft.'s surveyor. The last instalment was to be paid within three days after deft.'s surveyor should certify in writing that all the works had been fully completed according to the contract. Deft. afterwards agreed to extend the time for completing the houses till Oct., & on Oct. 12, the houses being still unfinished, T. agreed to borrow £110 from pltf., & deft. signed & handed to pltf. the following document: "In consideration of your advance, & T.'s authority of this date, I promise to pay to you £110 on the completion of six houses in accordance with a contract dated Apr. 28, 1876, between myself & T." T. having received the £110 from pltf., proceeded with the completion of the houses, but no certificate in writing that the works had been fully completed according to the contract was ever given by deft.'s surveyor. In an action upon deft.'s guarantee the jury found that the houses

o. — Extras.]—A contract provided that the contractor should be paid for work & extras, if any, on the certificate of the superintendent of the work. The contractor died after doing part of the work, & pltf. agreed to deliver all the material referred to in the late (contractor's) contract, & all the conditions of that contract were to apply. Disputes having arisen, the superintendent gave pltf. under deft.'s instructions a certificate that pltf. had furnished all the material according to specifications, except small matters which he would adjust under the terms of the contract:—Held: as to extra material furnished by pltf., the condition as to the superintendent's certificate did not apply; & the certificate in fact given put an end to the contract & relieved pltf. from doing anything further under it, so that the non-completion of the small matters in dispute formed no defence.—*LUDLAM v. q. — —.]—The only reference to a written certificate of the architect was in a clause of the contract relating to payments, in these words: "The remaining 20 per cent. on the contract price to be paid thirty-three days after the works are entirely completed to the satisfaction of the architect & accepted by him, provided that in each case where payment is de-

83. — Controlled by arbitration clause.]—A contract for the supply of locomotives for a tramway co. contained provisions that the locomotives should be built according to plans, to be made to the satisfaction of an engineer named, & under his inspection & to his satisfaction, & that payment should be made on his certificate, & also contained an arbn. clause. The engineer declined to certify, & the contractor demanded arbn.:—Held: the absence of a certificate was not conclusive against the contractor's right to payment, a dispute as to the certificate being a dispute within the arbn. clause.—Re HOHENZOLLERN ACT. LOCOMOTIVBAU & CITY OF LONDON CONTRACT & COMMON LAW PROCEDURE ACT, 1854 (1886), 54 L. T. 596; 2 T. L. R. 470; 2 Hudson's B. C., 4th ed., 100, C. A.

84. Architect improperly influenced.]—Under a building contract the decision of the architect of the building owners relating to any matters or thing or the goodness or sufficiency of any work, or the extent or value of any extra or omitted work, was to be final, conclusive, & binding on all parties, & payments as the work proceeded were to be made on the certificate of the architect. The architect having taken a wrong view of his position & being improperly influenced by the building owners, delayed issuing his certificate for the outstanding balance due to the contractor. After the work had been completed & after the period of maintenance had expired, the contractor brought an action against the building owners to recover the balance due to him. After the commencement of the action the architect issued his final certificate:—Held: the building owners could not, as a defence to the action, rely on the issue of the certificate being a condition precedent to the right of the contractor to commence proceedings for the recovery of the balance.—*HICKMAN & Co. v. SECT. 2.—PROGRESS CERTIFICATE.

85. Effect of—Right to dispute workmanship—Withholding final certificate.]—A contractor engaged to execute in a "workmanlike manner" certain buildings, etc., for a burial board, to the entire satisfaction of the architect, the payments in respect of the works to be made to the contractor from time to time as the work proceeded, & the balance on the final certificate of the architect that the work had been executed according to the contract. Certificates from time to time had been given by the architect, & the contractor received payments on account. It appeared, subsequently, that parts of the work had not been done in a "sound & workmanlike manner," & the final certificate was withheld. On bill filed by the contractor to have it declared that the withholding of the final certificate was a fraud upon the mandated a certificate shall be obtained from & signed by the architect in charge to the effect that he considers the payments properly due":—Semble: under this, a written certificate was not a condition precedent to recovery by the contractor.—WATTS v. MCLEAY (1911), 19 W. L. R. 916.—CAN.

r. — — — .]—A contract for the performance of work provided for payment of the contract price upon completion of the work & made no mention of the architect:—Held: although while the work was in progress both parties tacitly assumed that the work must be to the satisfaction of the architect, his certificate was not required before payment could be demanded for the work which was admitted to have been completed.—SCOTT v. SYTNER (1891), 9 S. C. 50.—S. AF.

83 i. — Controlled by arbitration clause.]—A contract for the erection of electric plant provided that the price should be payable by instalments, & such instalments should be paid within fourteen days after production of the engineer's certificate that such instalments were due. The contract further provided: "Certificates other than the final certificate of the engineer, shall not be considered conclusive evidence as to the sufficiency of any work or materials to which they relate, nor shall they relieve contractors from any obligations under this contract. The engineer shall not be bound to give a final certificate if he is of opinion that the contractors have not performed all obligations under this contract, but any question arising under this clause as to whether the contractors have performed all their obligations shall be subject to the provisions for arbitration herein contained." In an action by the sellers for payment of the price, the plant having been rejected by the buyer's engineer, who was the engineer under the contract:—Held: the engineer's final certificate had not been made a condition precedent to payment, & the sellers were entitled to sue the buyers for the price.—*HOWDEN & Co., LTD. v. *a. Whether condition precedent.]—*Pltf. sued on an agreement, by which he undertook to do certain work for defts. on a railway, in accordance with the instructions of the engineers of the road, & to receive such estimates as they might allow, certain prices being specified, & defts. agreed to make monthly payments. Pltf. complained that defts. would not make monthly payments to him in accordance with the agreement. Defts. pleaded to both counts, that they paid pltf. the amount of the estimates of all work done by him in pursuance of the agreement, under the directions of the engineers, & for which estimates were allowed by them:—Held: no defence, for the agreement required the payments to be made monthly, whether the estimates were furnished by the engineers or not.—LAKE v. CAMERON (1859), 18 U. C. R. 622.—CAN.

c. Whether conclusive — Revision by successor in office.]—Held: though the value of the work certified to by the monthly certificates was only approximate & subject to revision on completion of the whole, yet where the engineer in charge had changed the character of a particular class of work & when completed had classified it & fixed the value, his decision was final & could not be reopened & revised by a succeeding engineer.—*MURRAY v. contractor:—Held: on proof of the "unsound & unworkmanlike manner of the buildings," the withholding of the final certificate was not a fraud upon pltf., although the architect had given certificates from time to time to enable the builder to obtain money on account.—COOPER v. UTTOXETER BURIAL BOARD (1864), 11 L. T. 565.

Of this £11,000 represented materials provided for, but not actually affixed to the line:—Held: it was competent to the co.'s engineer to certify for "materials."—*PICKERING v. ILFRACOMBE RY. 88. Not an award.]—A builder agreed to build a house for deft. for a certain sum, payable by instalments of 75 per cent. upon each sum of £400 certified by the architect, the residue to be paid upon completion of the work. In case of bkpcy. of the builder, deft. might determine the contract by notice, & in that case deft. was to pay him only such sum in addition to previous instalments as deft.'s architect should certify that in all circumstances he was entitled to receive. Work had been done by the builder at the time of his bkpcy. to the amount of £1,600 & he had been paid £1,200. To an action by his assignees for the remainder, deft. pleaded that his architect had certified that the builder was only entitled to £22 in addition to the instalments already paid, & a tender of that sum. Pltfs. replied that no notice to attend was given & no opportunity given of being heard or giving evidence before the architect, & contended that the certificate was in the nature of an award, & that the architect ought to have heard both parties:—Held: the plea was good, & the replication bad.—LOADER v. HATHAWAY (1855), 26 L. T. O. S. 60.

89. Form—Mere checking of builder's charges.]
—Deft. was to pay for building, upon receiving an architect's certificate that the work was done to his satisfaction. The architect checked the builder's charges, & sent them to deft.:—Held: this did not amount to such a certificate of satisfaction as to enable the builder to sue deft., although deft. had not objected to pay on the ground that no sufficient certificate had been rendered.—MORGAN v. BIRNIE (1833), 9 Bing. 672; 3 Moo. & S. 76; 131 E. R. 766.

90. — Mere statement that sum due.]—A certificate must be given as such; a mere statement by the engineer; that he should determine the total amount to be paid, & on his final certificate payment should be made. A claim for damages for stopping the work under the contract having arisen, the engineer gave a document purporting to be a final certificate. This document in itself did not contain any reference to damages claimed for hindering or stopping the execution of the contract:—Held: (1) it was only a final certificate for work actually done, & was quite consistent with the terms of it, that a large sum might be due for damages; (2) there was nothing to show that the engineer had taken such a claim into consideration; (3) it was not an award under the clause referring disputes to the engineer.—GOWAN v. BOARD OF LAND & WORKS (1872), 3 V. R. (Law) 241.—AUS.

90 l. Form—Mere statement of amount due—Measurements not recorded.]—The contract provided that the schedule should be based "on the yard cube of concrete with all reinforcements, shuttering, excavating & centrings at £2 per yard cubic inclusive." The certificates did not give any measurements, but merely certified for amounts as due for "work done & material supplied." The architect stated in evidence that in fact such certificates were based on actual measurements, & he produced his record of such measurements:—Held: the certificates could not be impeached on the ground that they did not conform to the contract.—MILNE v. PADDAY (1914), E. D. L. 277.—S. AF.

p. When dispensed with—Improperly withheld.]—Held: withholding by the architect of a progress certificate upon improper grounds would not disentitle pltfs. to recover the amount due to them.—ALBERTA BUILDING CO. v. CALGARY CITY (1911), 16 W. L. R. 443.—CAN.

b. — Departure from agreed form—Acquiescence of owner.]—When a certificate is issued by an inspector under a contract, which he intends should be a final certificate & which is accepted & dealt with as such by the owner, although the certificate is not in the exact form stipulated for in the contract it will be binding upon the owner.—PIGGOTT v. BATTLEFORD (1913), 6 Sask. L. R. 235; 24 W. L. R. 365.—CAN.

93 i. — Whether satisfaction implied—By certificate for payment.]—A building contract provided for progress payments & that the balance of the stipulated price "shall be paid by the proprietor to the contractor within fourteen days from the architect's certificate being given that the works are completed to his satisfaction." The architect gave a certificate in this form: "I hereby certify that S. Bros. are entitled to £135 13s. 5d., being balance of amount due to them on account of contract & extras for your house at S":—Held: this was a sufficient certificate by the architect under the contract that the works were completed to his satisfaction.—HARMAN v. SCOTT (1874), 2 C. A. 407.—N.Z.

should be made upon the architect's certificates in writing & the final balance retained until after the architect had certified to the satisfactory completion of the work. On the contractor submitting a fresh account, the first having been reduced by the architect, the architect wrote the words: "I certify this account is correct":—Held: a sufficient certificate in writing. Qu.: whether sufficient as to satisfactory completion.—MEYER v. GILMER (1899), 18 N. Z. L. R. 129.—N.Z.

93 iii. — — — — —.]—One of the conditions of a building contract provided that percentage payments should be made to the contractor, at intervals during the progress of the works, at the discretion of the architect, upon certificates in writing under his hand & the balance when the whole work was completed to his satisfaction, & his certificate given to that effect. The architect certified that the contractor was entitled to receive a certain sum, "this being the final certificate in full of all demands":—Held: this was a certificate to the effect that the whole of the work was completed to the architect's satisfaction.—CLARKE v. MURRAY (1885), 11 V. L. R. 817.—AUS.

93 iv. — — — — —.]—Held: although the certificate did not in words state that the works were completed to the satisfaction of the architect, that was to be implied from the statement that the contractors were entitled to final payment.—BROWN CONSTRUCTION Co. v. BANNATYNE SCHOOL DISTRICT CORPN. (1912), 21 W. L. R. 80; varied 2 W. W. R. 742.—CAN.

93 v. — — — — —.]—In terms of a building contract the work had to be performed to the satisfaction of the architect, & a certain percentage of the contract price was only to be paid to the contractor "two months after the date of the certificate of final completion, when the architect shall have certified that the works are completed in terms of the contract & to his satisfaction & the roofs have been proved watertight." The architect gave a certificate as follows:—"Final instalment. Certificate. I hereby certify £16 13s. 9d. is due to G. on account of work executed & materials supplied":—Held: the certificate was a final certificate in terms of the contract & implied the work had been done to his satisfaction.—LOWTHER v. d. — Qualified statement — Defects developing on user.]—H. contracted with the A. specific provision to the contrary.—ELMES v. BURGH MARKET Co. (1891), 2 Hudson's B. C., 4th ed., 170.

93. — Expression of satisfaction—By letter.]—The final balance of a building contract was not to be paid until the architect had given his final certificate. The architect had by letter expressed his satisfaction with the work, but the final certificate was not given until more than a year afterwards. Another clause of the contract provided that only 80 per cent. was to be paid as the work proceeded, & the balance in two months after the architect should have expressed his satisfaction with the completion of the work. An action was commenced within two months of the delivery of the final certificate:—Held: the intention of the parties was that the satisfaction of the architect was to be expressed by his final certificate, & as wrote to the managing director of the co. in the following terms: "I certify that H. has rebuilt the furnaces with fire-clay bricks & cylinders, & has worked them twelve days as per contract. Upon my examining them I found they were working satisfactorily. Since then they have been cooled down, & upon examination it was found the centre cylinders in two cases had cracked, & the joints in the outer cylinders had opened. These H. assures me can be stopped with a mixture of plumbago, which will render the furnace perfectly sound":—Held: this did not amount to a certificate upon which H. was entitled to payment by the co.—HUTSON'S OFFICIAL ASSIGNEE v. e. — — — — — Defects to be remedied.]—A certificate setting out the existence of certain defects, & recommending payment of the balance still due on the contract, on these defects being remedied:—Held: in the circumstances, to be equivalent to a final certificate.—MCCARTHY v. VISSER (1904), 22 S. C. 122; 15 C. T. R. 72.—S. AF.

f. — — — — — Trivial items to be finished.]—An architect's certificate certifying for payment contained the words: "It is understood that certain small items are at once completed to the owner's satisfaction." The items were of a trivial character:—Held: the words should be read as a reservation & not as a condition, & did not prevent the certificate being regarded as final.—BAGLEY v. DE KOK (1912), W. L. D. 68.—S. AF.

g. — — — — — Deductions.]—In a contract for the performance of certain works, it was provided that after certain progress payments had been made to the contractor, no money should be considered to be due or owing to the contractor, nor should the contractor make any claim for or on account of any work executed or maintained by him unless a certificate that the works have been finally & satisfactorily completed & that the balance was due to the contractor, had been given by the superintending officer & countersigned by the engineer-in-chief. Under the specification of the works to be done were provisions that certain contingencies were to be provided for by the contractor at his own expense.

The superintending officer gave, & the engineer-in-chief countersigned, a certificate purporting to be a final certificate, but in the certificate were contained deductions in respect of matters mentioned in the specification. In an action by the contractor to recover the amount deducted:—Held: the certificate was merely a certificate in respect of the sum therein certified to be due, & was not a final certificate entitling the contractor to recover the balance of moneys alleged to be due

SUB-SECT. 2.—EFFECT AND CONCLUSIVENESS.A. In General.

94. When not conclusive—Architect acting fraudulently or in collusion.—Pltfs., contractors, covenanted to do certain works for a co. by Oct. 1, 1848, for £112,000, payable from time to time, according to the certificate of the chief engineer of the co. for the time being of the amount of work done, & on pltfs. failing to complete the works to the satisfaction of the engineer, the co. were to be at liberty to enter into possession & use pltfs.' plant, & complete the works. Pltfs. having been informed, in 1847, by the engineer, that the co. would not require the works to be completed within the contract time, the speed of the operations was lessened, & the works were not completed within the time limited by the contract. The co. having given notice of their intention to enter, under the agreement, & complete the works, pltfs. filed their bill, stating that they had not been fully paid for the works actually done by them, & that they had done all the works which they were bound to do, except certain portions which the co. had prevented them from doing, & charging the

h. ——— Security for defective work.—Pltfs., contractors, sought from defts. payment of money under a contract for the erection of a dam across a river. Some extensions or alterations were decided upon, & a further agreement was entered into. Provision was made for payments according to progress estimates of defts.' engineers. Completion to the satisfaction of the engineers was a condition precedent to the right to final payments. Payments according to some progress estimates were made, but further payment was withheld, on the ground that the work had not been completed according to contract. Pltfs. based their demand upon a writing signed by the engineers, denominated "Estimate No. 8," which referred to defective work on sheet piling & sluice-way, & purported to retain a portion of the contract price pending repairs.—Held: this was not a certificate of final completion, nor a progress certificate, being merely a proposal by the engineers that the stipulated contract price be paid to the contractors with the return of their deposit, less an amount to be retained to ensure their remedying certain defects.—MERRIAM v. PUBLIC PARKS BOARD OF PORTAGE LA PRAIRIE, [1911] 18 W. L. R. 151; affd., [1912] 20 W. L. R. 603; 1 W. W. R. 1082; 2 D. L. R. 702.—CAN.

k. ——— Certificate subject to counterclaim.—An architect upon completion of the works, gave the following certificate: "I hereby certify that M., contractor, is entitled to receive £660 as final payment of contract & extras in erecting residence at S. This certificate is issued subject to any counterclaim you may have against M., this being the final instalment."

for damages for not doing the work according to the plans & specifications, for omitting certain work, & for doing a portion of the work in a negligent & improper manner.—Held: (1) the certificate was a final certificate, & pltf. was entitled to recover the amount claimed; (2) deft. was precluded from setting up any counterclaim as to matters arising under the contract.—MACHIN v. SYME (1892), 18 V. L. R. 472.—AUS.

l. ——— Combined certificate on separate matters.—Where a building contract provided that, upon a certificate of the architect that the work had been completed to his entire satisfaction, the contractor should be paid such sum as, with any previous payment would amount to 97½ per cent. on the contract price, & upon a further certificate to the same effect, but further stating the final balance due, such balance should be paid within a time named.—Held: (1) the two certificates might be combined in one; (2) if such certificate was qualified, stating the contractors were entitled to receive the balance less a sum retained as security for reparation of defects, it could not be treated as a final certificate, entitling the contractor to payment of the final balance.—WALKER v. engineer with having purposely, fraudulently, & in collusion with the co., certified less than the amount due to pltfs., & praying for an injunction & account. A general demurrer to the bill was overruled, but upon the co. consenting to the removal of the plant by pltfs., a motion afterwards made for an injunction was refused, pltfs. having failed to establish a case of mala fides against the co. or their engineer.—WARING v. t. ——— Certificate negligently delayed.—Where, under a contract which made the right of the contractors to receive payment for the construction of certain works dependent upon the certificate of an engineer, who was also sole arbitrator of all disputes, the engineer unjustifiably delayed the issue of the certificate for seven months & acted in a shifting & vacillating, though not fraudulent manner, & probably caused heavy loss to the contractors by his mistakes:—Held: in the absence of collusion on the part of the corpn., the certificate could not be set aside.—WALKLEY v. VICTORIA CITY (1900), 7 B. C. R. 481.—CAN.

94 i. When not conclusive—Architect acting fraudulently or in collusion.—To an action for work & labour deft. pleaded the money was alleged to be due under an architect's certificate which had been obtained by the fraud of pltfs. & the collusion of the architect with them. Pltfs. replied it was a term of the contract that the certificate should be final & not be objected to on the ground of fraud or collusion:—Held: the replication was bad as setting up a contract void for being against public policy.—REDMOND v. WYNNE (1892), 13 N. S. W. L. R. 39.—AUS.

surveyor with respect to the value, amount, state & condition of any part of the works executed, or of any part thereof altered, omitted, or added, & also in respect to any & every question that may arise concerning the construction of this contract, or the plans, drawings, specifications, or bills of quantities, or schedule of prices, or the execution of the works hereby contracted for, or in any wise relating thereto, shall be final & without appeal." Disputes arose, & after protracted negotiations, the surveyor gave his final certificate. P. brought an action against the council, in which he alleged that the surveyor's final certificate "was not honestly made or given in the exercise of, or reliance upon, his own judgment, but was made & given by reason of the interference of & in obedience to the direction and orders of the council:—Held: as the council had interfered, though without any fraud on their part, with the surveyor in the exercise of his functions as quasi-arbitrator between the parties, the final certificate was not conclusive & binding on the contractor.—PAGE v. LLANDAFF & DINAS POWIS RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL (1901), 2 Hudson's B. C., 4th ed., 316.

97. ———.]—A building contract provided that the decision of the architect of the building owners on all matters in relation to the work should be final, & that payments should be made on the certificate of the architect. The architect, under a misapprehension of his position, allowed his judgment to be influenced by the building owners & improperly delayed issuing his certificates in accordance with their instructions. After the completion of the work & the expiration of the period of maintenance the contractor sued the building owners for the final balance alleged to be due under the contract, but the final certificate was not issued until after the commencement of the action:—Held: the building owners were precluded from setting up as a defence to the action that the certificate was conclusive as to the amount of the claim.—HICKMAN & Co. v. 99 i. ——— Under-statement of amount of work—Certificate condition precedent.]—The tender for construction of a sidewalk signed by contractors provided that the work should be completed in accordance with the conditions & specifications & payment made on the engineer's certificate. The payments were to be made at a price per superficial ft. The contractors claimed payment for work done in the vertical surface of the sidewalk where it formed a curb to the highway whereas the engineer only allowed him the superficial horizontal measurement:—Held: the engineer properly interpreted the contract & specifications & even if he had been in error as to the mode of measuring the work, there being no fraud the contractor was bound by the certificate.—GUELPH PAVING Co. v. BROCKVILLE TOWN (1904), 4 O. W. R. 483; affd. 5 O. W. R. 626.—CAN.

d. ——— Mistake in measurements—No fraud or collusion.]—Pltf. contracted to build foundations for deft. at a fixed price per cubic yard of concrete, the measurements to be as certified by the honorary architect, whose decision was to be final & binding between the parties. The architect certified for amounts representing a quantity of concrete which deft. alleged to be in excess of that actually put in:—Held: in the absence of proof of fraud or collusion, pltf. was entitled to recover the full amount certified, deft.'s remedy, if any, being against the architect.—MILNE v. PADDAY (1914), E. D. L. 277.—S. AF.

98. How far conclusive—Final evidence of satisfaction.]—By a building contract, the builder agreed to repair a house according to the plans & specifications, & to the satisfaction of the architect, the work to be done under the architect's directions. By the specification the builder was to allow for the value of the old lead, & he alleged that he made this allowance in his estimate. The architect certified his satisfaction of the completion of the contract. In an action by the builder against the owner of the house for the money agreed to be paid by the latter:—Held: no evidence could be received from deft. that the work was not done according to the plans & specifications, & unless pltf. could prove that he had informed deft. or the architect, of his having allowed for the old lead in his estimate, he must deduct the value from the amount of his charge.—HARVEY v. LAWRENCE (1867), 15 L. T. 571.

99. ——— Under-statement of amount of works—Certificate condition precedent.]—The engineer of a railway co. prepared a specification of the works on a proposed railway, & certain contractors fixed prices to the several items in the specification, & offered to construct the railway for the sum total of the prices affixed to the items. A contract under seal was thereupon made between the contractors & the co., by which the contractors agreed to construct & deliver the railway completed by a certain day at a sum equal to the sum total above mentioned. The contract contained provisions making the certificate of the engineer conclusive between the parties, & it was provided that all accounts relating to the contract should be submitted to & settled by the engineer, & that his certificate for the ultimate balance should be final determination of all disputes. The work being finished, the contractor declined to receive payment of the balance tendered him on the ground that the measurements according to which the balance was calculated were inaccurate. He then raised an action on the contract for the balance of the contract price calculated not according to the measurements of the engineer named in the contract but of one whom he himself had employed. He did not particularise wherein the measurements challenged by him were defective or conclude for a reference to the arbiter nor aver that the points in dispute were not proper matters for the consideration of the arbiter:—Held: pltf. had not stated any relevant grounds for throwing aside the measurements of the engineer named in the contract & having the claim estimated in any other manner.—MACDONALD v. MALCOLM (1855), 17 Dunl. (Ct. of 1033.—SCOT.

f. ——— As to amount due.]—During the continuance of the works disputes arose as to the amount due to pltf., although certified by the architect as agreed, & in consequence pltf. refused to continue the work, whereupon defts., after giving due notice, entered upon the premises:—Held: in the absence of proof of collusion between the architect & pltf., defts. were bound by the architect's certificate as to the amount due to pltf.—KUPPUSAMI NAIDU v. and conclusive. The railway was completed & the engineer gave his final certificate as to the balance due to the contractors:—Held: although the amount of the works to be executed might have been under-stated in the engineer's specification, the contractors could not in the circumstances maintain any claim against the co. on that ground, & in the absence of fraud on the part of the engineer, & where his certificate had been made a condition precedent to payment, his certificate must be conclusive between the parties.—*SHARPE v. 107. Date of disputes material.]—A building contract provided (clause 20) that the certificate of the architect or an award of a referee was to be conclusive, & (clause 22) that in case any dispute should arise the matter should be referred to arbn. Disputes arose, to the knowledge of the architect, before he gave his final certificate:—Held: (1) clause 22 was in the nature of a proviso on clause 20, so that if the conditions contemplated by clause 22 arose before the architect had given his final certificate, his power to give it was taken away; (2) in the above circumstances the jurisdiction of the architect to make a final certificate was ousted, & the dispute fell to be determined by the arbitrator, & the final certificate given was ultra vires.—LLOYD BROTHERS v. MILWARD (1895), 2 Hudson's B. C., 4th ed., 262, C. A.

108. Finality of certificate destroyed.]—In a building contract an architect was nominated who was given a general control over the works, which were to be carried out in accordance with his directions & to his satisfaction. By a clause in the contract he was empowered to order the removal of improper materials, & the re-execution of work not done in accordance with the drawings & the specification. By another clause any defects which might appear within twelve months from the completion of the works, arising, in the opinion of the architect, from materials or workmanship not in accordance with the drawings & specification, were upon the written direction of the architect to be made good by the contractor at his own cost, unless the architect should decide that he ought to be paid for same. A further clause, after providing for payment of the contractor under certificates issued by the architect, declared that "no certificate shall be considered conclusive evidence as to the sufficiency of any work or materials to which it relates, nor shall it relieve the contractor from his liability to make good all defects as provided by this contract." The final clause provided that in case any dispute or difference should arise as to the construction of the contract, or any matter or thing arising therefrom, except certain specified things, notice thereof should forthwith be given, & such dispute or difference should be referred to arbn., & the arbitrator should have power to open up, review, & revise any certificate, opinion, decision, requisition,

107 i. Date of disputes material.]—Held: whatever might be the effect of the arbn. clause, if a dispute arose after the engineer had made a valuation & certificate as provided for in the contract, there was then no dispute or difference within the clause.—SWINEY & M'LARNON v. BALLYMENA TOWN COMRS. (1888), 23 L. R. Ir. 122, 129.—IR.

108 i. Finality of certificate destroyed.]—Held: (1) the effect of the arbn. clauses in the contract was to destroy the finality of the architect's certificate upon any matter which was not otherwise distinctly provided for; (2) the matter in dispute not being so provided for, defts. were entitled to plead that the work was not in accordance with the contract & that the final certificate had been wrongly given.—*JOHNS & SON v. certificate is conclusive.—MURRAY v. COHEN (1888), 9 N. S. W. Eq. 124.—AUS.

105 i. Certificate condition precedent—Power of certifier's successor to reopen.]—By the contract the contractor was not paid the full amount due him until he had obtained the certificate of the engineer, for the time being, having control of the work, that the work had been completed to his satisfaction. B. was the engineer for the time being when the work was completed. He drew up a document which was intended to be a final certificate. In this certificate a certain claim was neither expressly allowed nor disallowed, but was left for the determination of the Exchequer Ct. under a clause in the contract which provided that all matters of difference between the parties arising out of the contract, the decision whereof was not especially given to the engineer, should be referred to the Exchequer Ct.:—Held: as it appeared that B. had intended to give a final certificate, an engineer subsequently appointed had or notice, save in regard to the matters expressly excepted, & to determine all matters in dispute of which notice should have been given. In an action by the contractor against the building owner to recover sums due on certificates issued by the architect, deft. set up by way of defence & counter-claim that the work done & materials supplied were defective & unsuitable, & not in accordance with the terms of the contract:—

Held: (1) the arbn. clause destroyed the finality of the certificates, & deft. was entitled to set up the defence & counterclaim to the action; (2) (STIRLING, L.J.) the provision, that no certificate should be considered conclusive evidence as to the sufficiency of work or materials to which it referred, was general, & the clause could not be read as applying only to the liability of the contractor to make good defects.—ROBINS v. GODDARD, [1905] 1 K. B. 294; 74 L. J. K. B. 167; 92 L. T. 10; 21 T. L. R. 120, C. A.

D. After-discovered Defects.

109. Whether certificate binding.—Where an employer contracted that he should be at liberty within twelve months of the architect's certificate to compel the builder to remedy & put right any work discovered to be unsound:—Held: at the end of the twelve months the architect's certificate became final & conclusive, & no action lay against the builder at the expiration of that period on account of unsound work subsequently discovered.—BATEMAN (LORD) v. THOMPSON (1875), 2 Hudson's B. C., 4th ed., 36.

110.—[An English co., which owned a railway in Russia, entered into a contract for the manufacture & delivery to them of rails for their railway. The contract provided that a sample should be sent to the co.'s engineer for approval before the commencement of the work, but it was "to be expressly understood that such approval is not in any way to relieve the contractor from any of the conditions or stipulations contained in this specification." During the progress of the work tests were to be applied by the engineer at his discretion, & the entire contract was to be executed in every respect to the satisfaction of the engineer, "who shall have the power of rejecting any rails or fishing plates he may disapprove on any ground whatever, & whose decision on any points of doubt or dispute that may arise in reference to this contract shall be final and binding on all parties. The engineer will inspect, either personally or by deputy, every stage of the process of the manufacture at the works. This examination at the works is not in any way to commit the co. to the approval & acceptance of any rails or fishing plates which, when delivered, shall not be strictly in accordance with the drawings & specification." After the rails had been delivered to the co. & paid for by them, & more than half of them laid down in Russia, it was discovered that they were defective. An action having been brought by the co. for breach of contract:—Held: it could not be maintained, as the contract showed that the parties intended the final expression of the engineer's satisfaction with the entire contract to be conclusive.—DUNABERG & WITEPSK RY. CO. v. HOPKINS, GILKES & CO., LTD. (1877), 36 L. T. 733.

111. — Mere oversights & casual omissions.—A building contract provided that no final or other certificate should in any circumstances cover or relieve the contractor from his liability for any fraud, default, or wilful deviation from the contract until four years from completion had elapsed. Within four years the employers brought an action, in which they alleged fraud, default, & wilful deviation:—Held: default did not include "mere oversights or casual omissions," but referred to intentional breaches of contract.—LONDON SCHOOL BOARD v. WALL (1890), 2 Hudson's B. C., 3rd ed., 165.

109 i. Whether certificate binding—No direct expression of satisfaction.—Defts. erected a building under a contract, which provided that only the final certificate of the architects or the final payment, were to be conclusive. No payment was to be construed as an acceptance of defective work or materials. Three weeks after erection, the building collapsed. A certificate, not purporting to be a final certificate, certifying that the contractors were entitled to a certain sum & not exonerating the contractors from the terms of the contract, had been issued by the architects:—Held: no such direct expression of satisfaction had been made, as would in the circumstances bind plffs.—COCKSHUTT FLOW CO. v. ALBERTA BUILDING CO. (1910), 13 W. L. R. 234; varied 3 Alta. L. R. 503.—CAN.

109 ii. — Payment not to exonerate contractor.—The granting of a certificate does not exonerate the contractor from liability for any defect, attributable to bad material or bad workmanship, where, by the terms of the contract, payment will not so exonerate him.—PRICE v. FORBES (1915), 7 O. W. N. 712; 33 O. L. R. 136; 23 D. L. R. 532.—CAN.

109 iii. — Certificate not made conclusive by contract—Work negligently performed.—SYDNEY MUNICIPAL COUNCIL v. EVERS & KENNEDY (1881), 2 N. S. W. L. R. 151.—AUS.

109 iv. Issued without objection.—A contract for the making of drains to the depth of 3½ ft. contained a stipulation that the work should be done to the satisfaction of an inspector to be appointed by the employer. The inspector failed to inspect the work, but gave certificates that it had been duly executed upon the faith of which the employer paid various instalments of the price. The employer subsequently ascertained that the drains fell far short of the stipulated depth. In an action by the contractor for payment of the remaining instalments:—Held: (1) he was not entitled to recover, for he had failed to carry out his part of the contract; (2) the employer was not entitled to implement or damages for the work had proceeded in the sight of his representative without objection.—MULDOON v. PRINGLE (1882), 9 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 915.—SCOT.

109 v. — — — — ——A certificate delivered by an architect for a payment on account of the contract price, & payment thereof pursuant to the contract, at a time when the inadequate quality of the material & work has not been ascertained, is no ground of estoppel against the owner who sets up his rights of warranty, in defence to an action for the balance of the contract price.—REID v. BIRKS (1910), Q. R. 39 S. C. 133.—CAN.

109 vii. — Limitation clause—Computation of time.—A building contract provided that the work should be done under the superintendence & to the satisfaction of the architect, & payments should be made from time to time on certificates from the architect for work done & completed, the employer being entitled to retain 20 per cent. to be devoted towards making good any defects which might appear within two months of the completion of the building. A final certificate having been given:—Held: the two months must be reckoned from the date of the giving of the architect's certificate, & defects complained of after the expiration of two months formed no ground of action by the employer against the contractor.—MC CARTHY v. VISSER (1904), 22 S. C. 122; 15 C. T. R. 72.—S. AF.

& specification, until four years from completion had elapsed:—Held: to prove breach of this condition it was necessary to show that deliberate & substantial variations had been made with the object of benefiting the contractor or saving his pocket, i.e., something in the nature of what was popularly known as "scamping the work."—LONDON SCHOOL BOARD v. JOHNSON (1891), 2 Hudson's B. C., 4th ed., 176.

SUB-SECT. 3.—DISQUALIFICATION OF CERTIFIER.

113. What will not disqualify—Certifier shareholder in company employing.]—A contract between a railway co. & a building contractor stipulated that payments should from time to time, during the progress of the works, be made by the co. to the contractor, such payments to be made on certificates granted by the "principal engineer of the co. or his assistant resident engineer." In case of dispute between the contractor & the assistant resident engineer the decision of "the principal engineer of the co." was to be final, but at the completion of the works, if the contractor & the principal engineer differed the differences between them were to be settled by arbn. After differences had so arisen between the contractor & the co., it was discovered by the former that the principal engineer was a shareholder in the co. On a bill to have accounts taken, one of the grounds for which was this fact, then first discovered:—Held: no fraudulent concealment being alleged, it formed no ground for relief, for by contract the contractor had bound himself to submit to the judgment of a particular individual, whose position as principal engineer made him interested for the co.—RANGER v. GREAT WESTERN RY. CO. (1854), 5 H. L. Cas. 72; 24 L. T. O. S. 22; 18 Jur. 795; 10 E. R. 824, H. L.; reversq. (1843), 3 Ry. & Can. Cas. 298.

down cost.]—Where a builder by his contract bound himself to abide by the decision & certificates of an architect as to the amounts to be paid for the work, not knowing that the architect had given an assurance to the employer that the cost of the building should not exceed a certain specified amount, although he refused to guarantee that amount:—Held: the decision of the architect made under such a bias was not binding, & directions given to ascertain under the authority of the ct. how much remained justly due to pltf.—*KEMP v. Some payments were made, when it was discovered that the reservoir did not hold water, & further payment was refused, the board, by way of compromise, agreed to pay £800 in six months, & this contract was assigned by T. to his banker, who sued the board:—Held: (1) the board might plead as a defence that T. & the engineer had conspired to give false certificates, & on this being proved the board was not liable; (2) the board need not give notice of their defence till the price was sued for.—*WAKEFIELD & BARNESLEY BANKING CO. v. A declaration, after setting out a contract by which pltf., a builder, agreed with deft. to do work to the satisfaction of the architect & to receive payment upon the certificate of the architect, no payment to be considered due unless upon production of the architect's certificate, averred performance by pltf. of all things to entitle him to the certificate, & that he had completed the work to the satisfaction of the architect; & alleged as a breach that the architect unfairly & improperly neglected to certify, & so neglected in collusion with deft. & by his procurement, by means of which pltf. had been unable to obtain payment of a balance due to him:—Held: the words "collusion" & "procurement" imported fraud, & the declaration disclosed a good cause of action.—BATTERBURY v. 122. ——— *Action against architect.]—*Pltf., who had contracted to do certain repairs to the house of A. to the satisfaction of the architect of A., sued such architect for refusing to certify that the repairs had been done to his satisfaction, & in his statement of claim pltf. stated that deft., with a view of earning his commission, induced pltf. to make a tender for the repairs, & that deft. accepted such tender, & agreed with pltf. that as soon as the work was done in a sound & workmanlike manner, he would certify his satisfaction so as to enable pltf. to recover the price thereof from A. The statement of claim afterwards averred the due execution of the work by pltf., & alleged that though deft. admitted to pltf. he was satisfied with the work, yet he, in collusion with A., & in fraud of pltf., refused to certify that he was satisfied, & falsely pretended that he was dissatisfied, by reason of which, & through such wrongful acts, pltf. was unable to recover the price of the work from A.:—Held: the statement of claim disclosed a good cause of action.—LUDBROOK v. BARRETT (1877), 46 L. J. Q. B. 798; 36 L. T. 616; 42 J. P. 23; 25 W. R. 649.

124. ——— *Wrongful delay or refusal to certify—Relief in equity.]—*Defts. employed pltf. to fix up two stoves in a church, under an agreement, by which pltf. engaged to complete the work on or before a certain day to the satisfaction of T., a surveyor, & the money was to be paid on a given day "in case the surveyor should certify that same was completed agreeably to the contract." The work was finished according to the contract, but the surveyor refused to certify:—Held: pltf.' bill for relief should be dismissed, because pltf. had their remedy at common law, it being a fair & direct issue to try whether the certificate was or was not properly withheld by the surveyor, & the surveyor having no right to refuse the certificate arbitrarily.—MOSER v. ST. MAGNUS & ST. MARGARET (CHURCHWARDENS) (1795), cited in 6 Term Rep. at p. 716; 101 E. R. 788.

123 i. ——— Improper interposition of employer—Architect prevented from certifying.]—Held: (1) upon the evidence, the architect having refrained from & refused to certify because he was instructed by defts. & their solrs. not to do so, the necessity for a certificate was dispensed with; (2) the question of the necessity for a final certificate did not arise, because defts. took over the completion of the contract.—WATTS v. MCLEAY (1911), 19 W. L. R. 916.—CAN.

125. Necessity for proof of collusion.]

—By the terms of a contract works were to be done for defts. by plffs. according to certain plans & specifications, & to be paid for by certain instalments "on production by the contractors to defts., or one of them, of the certificate of W., or other the surveyor for the time of defts., that they, the contractors, had duly & efficiently performed & completed such work to his satisfaction." In an action upon this contract, the declaration averred that all things necessary had been done by plffs. to entitle them to have the certificate of the surveyor that the work had been duly & efficiently performed & completed to his satisfaction, but that the surveyor had not given such certificate, but had wrongfully & improperly neglected & refused so to do, etc.:—Held: in the absence of collusion, plffs. were not entitled to recover, without producing the surveyor's certificate, nor were defts. responsible for the refusal of the surveyor to give one.—CLARKE v. WATSON (1865), 18 C. B. N. S. 278; 5 New Rep. 283; 31 L. J. C. P. 148; 11 L. T. 679; 13 W. R. 345; 144 E. R. 450.

Defts. became entitled to & did take over, but refused to pay anything more than a sum calculated according to a certain schedule. Plff. sued for recovery of the actual cost of the work done, without having obtained a certificate for the same:—Held: defts.' refusal dispensed with the necessity for production of the certificate & entitled plff. to recover upon independent proof of actual cost.—HILLS v. GALT TOWN (1873), 23 C. P. 66.—CAN.

127 ii. — Appointment of new architect.]—In the absence of the original architect the owner, when the contractor claimed the work was completed, appointed a new architect to inspect the work, who notified the contractor that the material & workmanship was not in accordance with the specifications & ordered him to remedy the defects, which plff. failed to do.

wrongfully refused, or wrongfully & unreasonably delayed, so to determine & certify, & the defts. took advantage of his refusal & delayed payment. 127. Waiver of certificate—Acceptance of work done.]—A shipbuilder agreed to build a ship for deft., the work to be approved of by G., & his certificate obtained. The work was to be paid for in instalments as the ship progressed, & the last instalment on the ship being delivered complete. The ship, on being finished, was delivered & accepted by deft., but the certificate of G. was not obtained:—Held: the obtaining was not a condition precedent to the payment of the last instalment, & the ship having been delivered, deft. was bound to pay the last instalment.—TAYLEUR v. BLYTHE (1856), 27 L. T. O. S. 101.

128. — Alleged oral waiver—Powers of engineer's successor.]—A contract to do work for a local authority stipulated that payment for work done should only be made on the production of a certificate from the engineer appointed under the contract, who was to fix the price of all extra work done under the contract but not included in the specification. The engineer under the contract was "J. M. of J. M. & Sons, or other the engineers of the corpn." While extra work was being done, but before a price had been agreed upon, the engineer named in the contract died, & a member of his firm was appointed to carry out his duties under the contract. The contractor contended that the engineer so appointed had no jurisdiction under seal; (2) the duly appointed successor to the engineer named in the contract had jurisdiction to determine the price to be paid for work which was begun before his appointment.—KELLETT v. STOCKPORT CORPN. (1906), 70 J. P. 154.

In an action to recover the balance of the contract price:—Held: by occupying the building deft. had not waived his right to refuse payment until the contractor got the architect's certificate & deft. had the right to appoint the architect after the completion of the building.—CYR v. O'FLYNN (1907), 7 W. L. R. 452.—CAN.

SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL—LUMP SUM.

129. Sum payable on completion—Completion condition precedent—Destruction of subject matter.]

—Where A. contracts to do work & supply materials upon the premises of B. for a specific sum, to be paid on completion of the whole, A. is not entitled to recover anything until the whole work is completed, unless it be shown that the performance of his contract was prevented by the default of B.

Pltfs. contracted to erect certain machinery on deft.'s premises at specific prices for particular portions, & to keep it in repair for two years, the price to be paid upon the completion of the whole. After some portions of the work had been finished, & others were in the course of completion, the premises with all the machinery & materials thereon were destroyed by an accidental fire:—Held: both parties were excused from the further performance of the contract, but pltfs. were not entitled to sue in respect of those portions of the work which had been completed, whether the materials used had become the property of deft. or not.—*APPLEBY v. C., Ord. 14, r. 1.]—By a contract between plffs. & defts. for the construction of a steamer by the former the price of the steamer was to be £89,800, to be paid by defts. by five instalments, which were respectively to become due at different stages of the construction of the vessel. By the terms of the contract the hull & materials of the vessel were, upon payment of the first instalment, to become the absolute property of the purchasers, subject only to the builders' lien for any unpaid purchase-money; & in the event of any instalment of the purchase-money remaining unpaid for fourteen days after same was due, the builders were to be entitled to interest thereon at 5 per cent. per annum until payment, & in the event of such default, they were to be at liberty to suspend the work, & the time of suspension was to be added to the contract time, or they might complete the vessel at any time after the expiry of fourteen days' notice given to the purchasers, & might sell her after completion, & any loss on such vessel was to fall upon the purchasers, & any balance of the proceeds of such sale which might remain, after satisfying all lawful claims of the builders, was to be paid by the builders to the purchasers. The first instalment of the purchase-money having by the terms of the contract become due & remaining unpaid, plffs. brought an action for same, & applied for leave to sign judgment for the amount so claimed under Ord. 14, r. 1:—Held: the case came within the rule, & the leave so applied for might be granted.—WORKMAN, CLARK & Co., LTD. v. k. Price fixed by schedule of prices—Whether contract for lump sum.]—

A builder, by offer appended to a schedule, offered to do the mason work of a proposed tenement, "agreeably to plans thereof now shown & to the extent of this schedule," for a certain sum. The schedule, to which this letter was annexed, gave the estimated quantities of work required, & the offeror inserted the rate at which he proposed to do each item, adding a calculation of the cost of each item at that rate, & a summation at the end of the total cost, being the sum in the offer. Full power was reserved to the proprietor to alter the quantity of work required, & the work was to be measured when finished & charged at schedule rates, or others corresponding thereto, in proportion to the lump sum in the letter of offer. The offeror made an under calculation in bringing out the cost of one item:—Held: the contract was a contract according to the schedule rates, & not Plffs. tendered, filling in their prices for each item as required, & offering to do the work for a lump sum, which represented their total. It turned out that the bills of quantities largely overestimated the work. Plffs. obtained the contract & performed the work, & sued to recover the lump sum & extras, less amounts paid them by deft.:—Held: the contract was to do the work by quantities at specified prices, & was not controlled by the lump sum mentioned.—COUGHLAN & MAYO v. The engine was intended for the purpose of pumping a mine, & was composed of various parts, which were made at A.'s factory, & conveyed thence & set up at different times at B.'s colliery, until the engine was completed. A. sued B. for the price, & in an indebitatus count claimed £3,000 "for the price & value of a main engine, & other goods sold & delivered" by him to B. :—Held : the price agreed on could not be recovered under this count, but the proper form of the count would have been, either for work, labour, & materials, or for erecting & constructing an engine.—CLARK v. SECT. 2.—QUANTUM MERUIT.

135. General rule.—Where a builder has supplied work & labour for the erection or repair of a house under a lump sum contract, but has departed from the terms of the contract, he is entitled to recover for his services, unless (1) the work that he has done has been of no benefit to the owner; (2) the work he has done is entirely different from the work which he has contracted to do; or (3) he has abandoned the work & left it unfinished.—DAKIN (H.) & Co., LTD. v. LEE, [1916] 1 K. B. 566; 84 L. J. K. B. 2031; 113 L. T. 903; 59 Sol. Jo. 650, C. A.

Annotation :—Distd. Vigers v. Cook, [1919] 2 K. B. 475.

136. Work of no benefit to owner.—Where pltf. declares on a quantum meruit for work & labour done & materials found, deft. may reduce the damages, by showing that the work was improperly done, & may entitle himself to a verdict by showing that it was wholly inadequate chosen by each party :—Held : the declaration was bad because it was not shown that any of the work had been performed & because of no averment either that the fronts were valued or that pltf. had appointed an arbitrator & called upon defts. to do the same.—ELLIOTT v. HEWITT (1853), 11 U. C. R. 292.—CAN.

p. ———.—A declaration on a deed averred that pltf. did all things necessary on his part to entitle him to have the contract performed by defts., & the time for so doing had elapsed. By a clause of the deed defts. agreed to pay pltf. for the work within a time named after the giving of a certificate by defts.' engineer :—Held : the general allegation would only cover acts to be done by pltf., & did not sufficiently aver that the engineer had granted the certificates; but this defect was covered by defts. pleading over.—SHANLY v. MIDLAND Ry. Co. (1873), 33 U. C. R. 604.—CAN.

r. Liquidated demand.—A claim for work & labour upon a quantum meruit, is "a debt or liquidated demand" in money within G. O. 11, r. 3, & final judgment can be marked on a writ indorsed with such claim.—STEPHENSON v. WEIR (1879), 4 L. R. Ir. 369.—IR.

136 i. Work of no benefit to owner.—A person employed as an independent contractor to drill a well is entitled, in the absence of an agreed price, to be paid a reasonable price for his work, even though the hole prove dry, unless there was a warrant or conditions as to the finding of water.—ROBERTSON v. BEADLE, [1917] 3 W. W. R. 184; 36 D. L. R. 176.—CAN.

136 ii. ———.—A contractor undertook to ventilate the employer's rooms; the apparatus put in by him for the purpose was, unknown to the employer, an experiment & proved a total failure :—Held : he could not recover the cost of fitting it up.—FINLAY v. OUTRAM (1851), 24 Sc. Jur. 10.—SCOT.

136 iii. ———.—An agreement provided that applt. should dig for water for resp. where pointed out & should deliver water in pipes at a certain dam, payment to be at £10 per in. of water & thereafter in proportion for every in. of water or part of an in. Applt. delivered $\frac{1}{2}$ of an in. of water :—Held : (1) the agreement contemplated that to answer the purpose for which it was undertaken to be performed.—FARNSWORTH v. GARRARD (1807), 1 Camp. 38, N. P.

137. ———.—A party contracted to supply & erect a warm air apparatus, for a certain sum. In an action for the price, the defence to which was, that the apparatus did not answer :—Held : if the jury thought it was substantial in the main, though not quite so complete as it might be under the contract, & could be made good at a reasonable rate, the proper course would be to find a verdict for pltf., deducting such sum as would enable deft. to do what was requisite.—CUTLER v. ———.—In an action on a special contract for work done under the contract, & for work, labour, & materials generally, deft. may give in evidence that the work has been done improperly & not agreeably to the contract, & pltf. in that case will only be entitled to recover the real value of the work done & the material supplied.—CHAPEL v. ——— Deviation from specification.—If a builder undertakes a work of specified dimensions & materials, & deviates from the specification, he there should be no payment unless at least 1 in. of water was produced; (2) as resp. had not received any benefit from the work done, applt. was not entitled to any payment.—STEMMER v. ACKERMANN (1916), C. P. D. 236.—S. AF.

141 i. Work different from that contracted for—Deviations from specifications—Acquiescence.—Pltf. contracted to build a bridge for defts. according to specifications for a certain price, but varied from the contract in many particulars, of which defts. were aware, but made payments to pltf. while the work was going on & very shortly before its completion; the bridge was carried away by the ice the spring after it was built :—Held : defts.' conduct was evidence of acquiescence in the deviations, & if the bridge was of any value, pltf. was entitled to recover on the common counts.—FOSSHAY v. BAXTER (1849), 1 All. 335.—CAN.

141 ii. ——— Insufficient evidence.—Where work was not done in strict pursuance of the agreement & specifications & the plans referred to in the contract, & which were part of it, were not put in evidence :—Held : pltf. could only recover on a quantum meruit, & as there was not sufficient evidence to enable the jury to deter-

144. ——Builders entered into a contract to carry out a large number of alterations & repairs to a house in accordance with specifications for a lump sum of £264. In an action by the builders to recover this sum the official referee found that the builders had failed to complete the contract in the following particulars: (1) the concrete used to underpin a wall was not in accordance with the specifications, either as to quality or quantity; (2) certain rolled steel joists supplied had not been bolted at the top in accordance with the specifications; (3) solid columns, 4 inches in diameter, had been supplied in place of hollow columns, 5 inches in diameter; & he decided that plffs. were not entitled to be paid anything under the contract:—Held: plffs. were entitled to recover the £264, subject to a deduction of the amount necessary to make the work correspond with that contracted to be done, as the defects & omissions in the work amounted only to a negligent performance of the contract, & not to an abandonment of, or failure to complete the contract.—DAKIN (H.) & CO., LTD. v. 141 iii. — Insufficient performance.—Plff. sued defts. to recover from them, under a specially endorsed writ, the balance of an account due under & in pursuance of an agreement, under seal, providing that plff. "was to run according to his best art & skill a tunnel of 200 feet for $4 per running ft.; that $150 should be advanced on account of the contract, the balance to be paid on the satisfactory completion of the work." Plff. made five tunnels, none of which were 200 feet in length, but whose total length was alleged by plff. to be 204 feet. Plff. brought his action both on the agreement & for work & labour done:—Held: there was not a sufficient performance of the agreement, & as plff. had given no particulars nor any evidence under the claim for work & labour, judgment must be entered for defts.—LAKIN v. NUTTALL (1879), 3 S. C. R. 685.—CAN.

141 iv. — Material alterations.—Held: as the variations from the specifications were not trifling, but most material, & went to the essence of the contract, the contractor was precluded from recovering for the work done.—BROLEY v. MILLS (1908), 7 W. L. R. 657.—CAN.

141 v. — Right to agreed price less expense of completion.—A. contracted with B. to build a church according to specification. The work did not comply with the specification. In an action by A. for work & labour:—Held: he could recover neither the price agreed upon nor the actual value of the work done, but he was entitled to the price agreed on in the specification less the cost of altering the work to make it comply with the specification.—CLARKE v. 141 ix. — & damages suffered.—Applts. contracted to supply an engine to resp.'s yacht for $2,000. The engine was not according to specification, & certain important portions valued by experts at $225, were omitted. To a suit for the price of the engine resp. pleaded such omissions & set up damages resulting from applts.' delay in completing their contract, which damages were proved at $750. Pending the proceedings the yacht was seized & sold by resp.'s creditors:—Held: as such sale rendered it impossible for applts. to complete their contract, & resp. had profited to the extent of the extra value added to his yacht by their work, applts. must recover for the value of such work, less the omitted portions, & damages suffered by resp.—CARRIER v. 146. — No evidence of fresh contract.]—

By a building agreement between A. & B. it was stipulated that A. should complete for a specified price certain works on certain houses of B., the whole to be completed on a specified day, & to be done to the satisfaction of a surveyor named, upon whose approval payment was to be made. A. failed to complete the work. He sued B. on the agreement for the agreed price, & on a common count for a reasonable price according to measure & value. There was evidence, on the trial, that B. had resumed possession of the houses, & was so far enjoying the fruits of A.'s labour. Upon a rule to set aside a non-suit & enter a verdict for pltf.:—Held: there was no evidence to go to the jury in support of pltf.'s claim, for he could not recover on the special count, not having fulfilled it, & the mere fact of B.'s taking possession of his own land on which buildings had been erected, or where repairs had been done or alterations made to a building thereon, did not afford an inference that he had dispensed with the conditions of the special agreement under which the works were done, or of a contract to pay for the work actually done according to measure and value.—MUNRO v. BUTT (1858), 8 E. & B. 738; 4 Jur. N. S. 1231; 120 E. R. 275.

146 ii. — — — Acceptance of work.]—Held: (1) although defts. had taken up the work, pltf. could not succeed upon a quantum meruit merely because defts. had received the benefit of his part performance unless they had done so under circumstances sufficient to raise an implied contract to pay for the work done notwithstanding the nonperformance of the special contract; (2) there was no evidence of any such implied contract.—COUGHLAN v. m. — Evidence of fresh contract.]—Upon the evidence:—Held: (1) pltf. had abandoned the work after having done a part of it; (2) there was a fresh contract to pay for the work already done upon which pltf. were entitled to recover on a quantum meruit.—ELFORD & CORNISH v. a. — Unforeseen physical obstruction.]—Resps. agreed to sink a borehole for applt. on his farm at a spot either to be selected by them or by him & approved of by them. There was no guarantee by resps. that water would be found on such a spot & applt. undertook to pay the cost of the hole on the completion of the work. After sinking for six ins. the drill encountered a hard intrusive dyke through which it could not bore. Applt. was then given the option of having the hole sunk at a spot selected by resps. but to this he would not consent. Resps. thereupon abandoned the work & demanded payment of the sum of £39, the cost of performing such work as had been done:—Held: (1) resps. were bound to sink a borehole at the spot selected by applt. & the refusal of applt. to allow sinking at any other spot was not a breach of contract; (2) resps. had failed to perform their part of such contract & were therefore only entitled to judgment for six shillings in terms of the tender.—HEAD v. The fire was caused neither by the carrying out of the work nor by any default on the part of I. & Co. E. brought an action against I. & Co., to recover the value of the work done & material supplied. E. had not at the time of the fire or at the time of bringing the action, or afterwards, obtained any certificate from the architect:—Held: E. was not discharged from the necessity of completing his work & obtaining the architect's certificate which was a condition precedent.—*EDWARDS v. Deft. refused to pay until the whole work was done, gave pltf. notice to proceed with the second roof, & on pltf. still refusing to do so, employed another man to supply & erect it. In an action by pltf. for the price of the roof he had erected:—Held: as the contract was entire, pltf. would not have been entitled to sue, if deft. had done nothing to alter the position of pltf., but as deft. had not merely taken possession of the property but had completed the second roof & so had made it impossible for pltf. to complete it, pltf. was Pltfs. applied to defts. to obtain the necessary permit & to authorise them to replace the worm-eaten with sound timber, but defts. refused, upon the ground that both these duties were cast upon pltfs. by the contract. During these negotiations the two sections of the building on the new site & a section on the old site collapsed owing to a heavy gale. Pltfs. then after doing some work at the new site abandoned the contract, & sued defts. for the amount of work they had done as on a quantum meruit:—Held: performance of the contract having been rendered impossible because of the inability to obtain a permit & the subject-matter being destroyed, pltfs. could not recover for work done before the impossibility.—*STAUNTON & KING v. The contractors also agreed to deliver a copy of the priced bill of quantities on which the tender was based. The general plan of the works showed the outlet pipe extending to low water mark, but the section showed it as extending 279 feet further into the sea. The length of pipe in the bill of quantities corresponded with the length of pipe shown in the section, but there was no price fixed in the bill of quantities for under water works. The contractor executed the work according to the section extending to about 279 feet beyond low water mark, & claimed to be paid for the work beyond low water mark at fair & reasonable prices for such work :—Held : the work done beyond low water mark was not covered by any price in the contract, & the contractor was entitled to be paid the price he claimed, the liability & not the amount being disputed.—RE WALTON-ON-THE-NAZE URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL & MORAN (1905), 2 Hudson's B. 161. Mere acceptance by employer insufficient.]—Pltf., a builder, covenanted by deed with defts., a corpn., to do certain specified work for £5,500, & that if their architects should require any alterations or additions in the progress of the works, the architects should give to pltf. written instructions signed by them, & that he should not be considered as having authority for same without such written instructions. Defts. covenanted to pay pltf. £5,500 & the value of the additional work, if any. The declaration, after stating the deed, averred that pltf. executed all the works to be done for £5,500, that the architects required him to make certain additions by means of written instructions, signed, etc., & that he executed all the additional works, & that defts. took possession of all the works. Breach, non-payment of the £5,500, & of the sum due for the additions:—Held: although defts. had accepted the additional works, pltf. was not entitled to be paid on a quantum meruit, for defts., being a corpn., were incapable of making a new parol contract of that description.—LAMPRELL v. BILLERICAY UNION (1849), 3 Exch. 283; 18 L. J. Ex. 282; 12 L. T. O. S. 533; 13 J. P. 235; 154 E. R. 850.

162. Oral agreement as to extension.]—A contractor agreed with an incorporated co. to do certain works, the contract being under seal. In this contract there was a stipulation, that if the co. should think proper at any time to make any addition to the original works, the co. should be at liberty to do so on giving him written instructions for that purpose, signed by the principal or assistant engineer. A verbal arrangement was afterwards made by the principal engineer for the execution of certain extension work allowing for a variance in the prices, but stipulating that with the exception of that variance, all the provisions of the contract should be considered as applicable to the extension work. This work was executed by the contractor under this arrangement:—

may establish, that up to the trial, he insisted on the special contract. It is not necessary that before bringing the action, he should elect to abandon the special contract.—SAVAGE v. CANNING (1867), 1 R. 1 C. L. 434.—IR.

l. No binding agreement.]—Held: pltf.'s tender not being bond fide, & the evidence not establishing a binding agreement, pltf. could recover on a quantum meruit for the work done.—DEGAGNE v. CHAVE (1896), 2 Terr. L. R. 210.—CAN.

m. No formal contract.]—A contract with a harbour board, which does not observe the formalities required by Harbours Act, 1878, s. 66, is not binding & an action for work done as upon a quantum meruit cannot be maintained under it.—REYNOLDS v. NELSON HARBOUR BOARD (1904), 33 N. Z. L. R. 965.—N.Z.

o. — Omission to sign specifications—Certificate condition precedent.]—Under the circumstances:—Held: pltf.'s omission to sign the specifications could not entitle him to set aside the contract as not complete, & to claim for the work done as upon a quantum meruit, without the architect's certificates.—GEARING v. NORDHEIMER (1876), 40 U. C. R. 21.—CAN.

163. Alteration in written contract.]—Pltf. was employed by deft. to erect buildings on deft.'s land upon written conditions, which, after being signed, were kept on deft.'s behalf by his architect. One of the conditions made the architect's certificate a condition precedent to the right to payment. Pltf. having been paid for all the works for which the architect had certified, sued upon a quantum meruit in respect of works for which no certificate had been given. Deft., in answer, set up the conditions, in which appeared an erasure in a material part. The jury having found that the erasure was made by the architect after pltf. had signed, pltf. contended that the document was void, & that he might sue on a quantum meruit:—Held: notwithstanding the erasure, the conditions were either still the governing document, or at least must be looked at to see what were the real terms of the contract, & pltf. could not recover.—PATTINSON v. LUCKLEY (1875), L. R. 10 Exch. 330; 44 L. J. Ex. 180; 33 L. T. 360; 24 W. R. 224.

SECT. 3.—BONUS AND DEDUCTIONS.

164. Contractor prevented from earning bonus—Damages—Default of employer.]—B. tendered on Jan. 29, 1903, to do certain alterations to C.'s restaurant for £12,395. At an interview on to the approval of a particular person, cannot, after he has upon the certificate of such person received the amount contracted for, sue on the original contract, contending that it did not contain the quantities actually required to complete the building; nor can he set aside the contract & sue for work & labour.—PATTERSON v. GREAT WESTERN RY. CO. (1859), 9 C. P. 229.—CAN.

r. Refusal to sign contract—After work done.]—McWILLIAMS v. JOSEPH, 1 L. C. L. J. 92.—CAN.

s. When bonus payable—Ordering of extras.]—Where the contract provides that a bonus will be paid for every week in which the contract shall be finished within the specified time, the bonus cannot be claimed for such time, as the completion of the original

Feb. 4 between B. & C., the tender was accepted. Simultaneously it was agreed that in consideration of B. undertaking to give possession of the basement & ground floor within nine weeks from the commencement, C. would pay to B. £360 as a bonus. This agreement was confirmed by B. by letter of Feb. 4. B. began to work on Feb. 11, but was at once stopped, as C. had not made arrangements with the occupier of the adjoining house as to interfering with a party-wall. B. was unable to resume working until Mar. 3 when a party-wall award was made. Possession of the ground floor was given on May 16. C. paid the £12,395, but refused to pay the £360:—Held: there was such a prevention by C. of B. earning the £360 as to entitle B. to damages, & as no attempt had been made at the trial to quantify the damages, a judgment giving to B. £360 as damages must be upheld.—BYWATERS & SONS v. CURNICK & Co. (1906), 2 Hudson's B. C., 4th ed., 393, C. A.

Part V.—Payment.

See, also, ARBITRATION, Vol. II., p. 513, No. 1518.

165. By instalments—Completion not condition precedent—Independent covenants.]—A. covenants to build a house for B. & finish it on or before a certain day, on consideration of a sum of money, which B. covenants to pay A. by instalments as the building shall proceed. The finishing the house is not a condition precedent to the paying the money, but the covenants are independent, & A. may maintain an action of debt against B. for the whole sum, though the building be not finished at the time appointed.—TERRY v. DUNTZE (1795), 2 Hy. Bl. 389; 126 E. R. 611.

t. Liability for—House built to order of husband—On wife's land.]—The wife, proprietor of a piece of land upon which a house has been built on a contract made by her husband in his own name with the builders, is responsible for the price of the house, because she consented to the construction & her husband acted as her agent, without declaring it, & even if her husband might not be considered as her agent, she would still be held responsible but only as to the extent of the extra value given to her property by the construction.—BÉLANGER v. PAQUET (1884), 11 Q. L. R. 67.—CAN.

a. — Unincorporated religious society.]—The members of the building committee of an unincorporated religious society who attend meetings held in connection with the building of a church, & the progress & character of the work, are liable to the builder notwithstanding that no written contract is entered into, & that the books & accounts of the builder show that he did not know exactly to whom he was to look for payment.—MCQUARRIE v. CALNEK (1895), 27 N. S. R. 483.—CAN.

c. — Owner—Repudiating liability except for certain sums.]—Where the owner of a building notifies suppliers of materials that he will not hold himself responsible for other than certain amounts mentioned, he thereby renders himself liable for such amounts.—LAPOINTE v. BUREAU (1916), Q. R. 51 S. C. 402.—CAN.

d. — — Damage before completion caused by owner's delay.]—Pltfs. agreed to build wooden houses for deft. with timber indicated by him, without painting, deft. to advance half the money when the houses were closed in, & if necessary to advance money for the payment of pltfs.' workmen. Considerable delay to pltfs.' work was caused by deft. failing to supply money for pltfs.' workmen; when the houses were finished the painting was not done for some time resulting in the sidings of the houses warping. In an action by pltfs. for the balance due to them under the contract:—Held: pltfs. were entitled to recover as any damage sustained by deft. was due to his delay in advancing the money for the workmen's wages.—HATER v. BROWN (1905), 2 W. L. R. 36.—CAN.

e. — — Hindering valuation of work done.]—Where a building contract is so far performed that the parties cannot be restored to their original position, & unsatisfactory work is being done, if the party aggrieved, in the absence of agreement ad hoc, interferes with the work so as to make it difficult to determine the value of that already done, he does so at the risk of having to pay the other party more than he has really earned, apart from the question of damages.—MOORE v. BRITISH COLUMBIA POTTERY CO. (1890), 2 B. C. R. 45.—CAN.

f. — Contractor—To sub-contractor.]—If a railway co. transfers to its contractor the subsidies from the Govt., it is not responsible for the difference between the contract price for the construction of its line & the amount actually paid by the Govt., unless the contractor proves that, owing to the fault of the co., the subsidies were not paid in full.—GREAT NORTHERN CONSTRUCTION CO. v. ROSS (1915), Q. R. 25 K. B. 386.—CAN.

g. Time for—Delivery a condition precedent.]—A. contracted to build a house for B., & to deliver possession thereof when finished, upon which he was to be paid:—Held: no action would lie to recover the price until an absolute & unreserved delivery of the house had taken place, & he had no right to withhold the key of the house until he received payment, though B. had not acquired any title to the land on which it was built.—JOHNSON v. CREW (1836), 5 O. S. 200.—CAN.

h. By instalments—Completion not condition precedent.]—Held: contractors could proceed by action if payment on a monthly progress certificate was withheld & they were not obliged to wait the final completion of the work before suing.—MURRAY v. R. (1896), 26 S. C. R. 203.—CAN.

165 i. — — Independent covenants.]—Contractors agreed to remove both spans of a wrecked bridge & put them ashore for the sum of $25,000, to be paid $5,000 as soon as one span is removed from the channel & another $5,000 as soon as one span is put ashore & the balance as soon as the work is completed. If they failed to complete work in one season they had the right to complete it next season:—Held: the contractors having removed one span from the channel & put it ashore were entitled to the two payments of $5,000 each notwithstanding the whole work was not completed in the second season.—COLLINS BAY RAFTING & FORWARDING CO. v. NEW YORK & OTTAWA RY. CO. (1902), 32 S. C. R. 216.—CAN.

k. — — Whether degree of completion must be proportionate to instalments.]—Pltf. agreed to build & finish a steamer for deft., to be completed within three months from Nov. 1, payment to be made in three equal parts once a month from Nov. 1. Deft. refused to pay the second instalment:—Held: (1) it was immaterial whether two-thirds of the work had been done when the second instalment became due; (2) deft. could not complain of the quality of the work until the whole was performed.—WALSH v. KINNEAR (1876), 14 N. S. W. S. C. R. 434.—AUS.

l. — — & according to contract.]—Pltfs. agreed to build a certain building for deft. according to plans & specifications, for a lump sum, payable in "three equal payments, one to be made when roof is on building, one when plastered, balance when job is completed, thirty days after completion of the building":—Held: the right of pltfs. to call for any one of the three payments was conditional upon the work, so far as completed up to the period specified, being completed according to contract.—MCDONALD v. SIMONS (1910), 15 W. L. R. 218.—CAN.

m. — — Whether claim to full performance barred.]—Upon a contract to be paid for by instalments:—Held: by payment in part defts. were not barred from claiming full performance, & to the satisfaction, etc., as a condition precedent, the contract being in consideration of performance, and not in consideration of the covenant to perform.—COATSWORTH v. TORONTO CITY (1860), 10 C. P. 73.—CAN.

n. — — Right to reject for non-compliance with contract.]—A contract for the building of a yacht provided that the property in the yacht was to pass on payment of the first instalment of the price. The purchaser paid the first instalment, but two months afterwards, after having complained on various occasions of the quality of the work being done, rejected the boat as disconform to contract:—Held: the property had passed on payment of the first instalment of the price, but

166. On entire satisfaction—Bonâ fide dissatisfaction.]—Pltfs. sued for the balance of money alleged to be due on a contract for the renovation of a theatre. Defts. declined to pay this sum on the ground that it was retention money which, by the terms of the contract, they were not liable to pay until the work had been completed to their entire satisfaction, & that this had not been done. The jury found (inter alia) that defts. were honestly & in good faith dissatisfied with the work, the effect of which was not exactly that aimed at, but differed as to whether the dissatisfaction was reasonable or not:—Held: a finding as to reasonableness of dissatisfaction was not necessary for defts., & defts. were entitled to be fastidious, so long as they were honest.—SHOOLBRED (JAMES) & Co. v. WYNDHAM & ALBERRY (1908), Times, Dec. 1st.

See, also, Cases in Part III., ante.

167. Mode of—Bills of exchange—Lien of bill-holders.]—A contract for the building of a ship provided that the purchase-money was to be paid by instalments, partly in cash & partly by means of bills of exchange, to be paid & given at specified stages of the progress of the construction, the balance being paid on completion by a bill. The ship was from the time of paying or giving the first instalment to be the absolute property of the purchaser to the extent of his advances, subject nevertheless to the builder's lien for any unpaid instalments. Any bills given during construction were to be retired by the purchaser at completion & transfer. As the construction of the ship went on, the vendor drew bills upon the purchaser, which he accepted, for the instalments of purchase-money. After these bills had been negotiated, but before any of them became due, the purchaser took proceedings for liquidation, including his liability on the bills among his debts, & his creditors passed a resolution to accept a composition. The bill-holders refused to accept the amount of composition when tendered. The purchaser shortly after the resolution gave notice to the vendor to rescind the contract. Not long after this the vendor became bkpt., & the ship was completed by his trustee. The bill-holders having claimed a lien on the ship:—Held: the principle of Waring's Case was not applicable, & the bill-holders had no lien on the ship.—Re LINDSAY, Ex p. LAMBTON (1875), 10 Ch. COLEMAN Co. (1907), 10 O. W. R. 610.—CAN.

q. — Failure to pay "fair" wages.]—Pltfs. contracted to perform certain work for defts., & agreed to pay wages at rates fixed by a fair wage schedule; defts. agreed to pay for the work from time to time the amounts certified to be due by their engineer:—Held: defts. could not keep back out of an instalment anything by reason of pltf. failing to pay wages according to the fair wage schedule.—KELLY v. WINNIPEG CITY (1908), 18 Man. L. R. 269; 9 W. L. R. 310.—CAN.

r. — How calculated.]—A contract for a lump sum provided for payment by the owner to the contractor in instalments of all wages for labour & sums paid for materials upon production of certified accounts, etc., the total amount paid during the progress of the work not to exceed a sum equal to 80 per cent. of the amount of work done & materials furnished on the premises at the contract price:—Held: the owner was to make payments for all work certified as actually done & materials as actually supplied, provided that the total of such payments did not exceed 80 per cent. of the total contract price.—CALGARY MILLING Co., LTD. v. AMERICAN SURETY Co. OF NEW YORK, [1919] 3 W. W. R. 98; 48 D. L. R. 295.—CAN.

s. — Right of set-off—Against damages for non-fulfilment of contract.]—Work was contracted to be done for a price payable by instalments during its progress, & at the sight of an architect, who was appointed arbiter in case of dispute between employer & contractors; an instalment had been sent, for behoof of a contractor, to the architect, who returned it to the employer, with a request that he would send it direct to the contractor:—Held: the employer had no right to retain the instalment so sent in extinction of a claim of damages for non-fulfilment of the work.—FIELD & ALLAN v. GORDON (1872), 11 Macph. (Ct. of Sess.) 132.—SCOT.

t. On entire satisfaction — Reasonable satisfaction.]—In an action to recover payment for the construction of works, under a contract to execute them to the satisfaction of the employer, pltf. is not entitled to a verdict, unless the jury are satisfied that deft., as a reasonable person, ought to have been satisfied with the way in which they were executed.—SMITH v. SADLER (1880), 6 V. L. R. 5.—AUS.

a. — Evidence of — Taking possession.]—The taking possession of a building erected on a man's own land, & the using of it, is not of itself a sufficient acceptance of an incomplete or imperfect performance of a contract to erect the building so as to entitle the contractor to recover.—BROLEY v. MILLA (1908), 7 W. L. R. 657.—CAN.

b. —]—Pltf. agreed to erect a building for deft. upon a lot owned by pltf. & the deft. alleged there was a departure by pltf. from the pattern of the house as agreed upon for which he claimed compensation; nevertheless he went into occupation:—Held: this was an acceptance; it was not a case of an owner merely going upon his own land, in which case taking possession would not necessarily imply acceptance.—MACKISSOCK & THOMAS, LTD. v. BLACK (1912), 21 W. L. R. 424; 2 W. W. R. 465.—CAN.

c. —]—Held: the mere taking possession under an habere would not per se have operated as such an acceptance of the houses as could render the employer liable to pay for work done.—CORCORAN v. OLLIS (1861), 13 Ir. Jur. 393.—IR.

d. — Accepting delegation of payment.]—He who accepts, in a written document, certain delegations of payment, for work done for him which he declares is satisfactory, cannot afterwards refuse to pay on the ground that the work was ill-performed.
v. AUSTRIAN-HUNGARIAN

SOCIETY (1914), Q. R. 47 S. C. 364.—CAN.

e. — — Payment of amount due.]—In the circumstances:—Held: payment of the whole amount due under the contract was not conclusive proof that the work had been done to the satisfaction of the owner.—HOPPER v. MEYER, [1906] V. L. R. 235.—AUS.

See, also, cases in Part VIII., Sect. 3, sub-sect. 4, post.

f. Employer's right to withhold — Until completion—Cost of repairs.]—A contractor bound himself to finish a building in the middle of the summer; without the owner's fault, he delivered only in Nov.:—Held: the owner, under the order of the architect, who declared that he could not receive the work on account of the advanced season, had the right to retain in his hands a sufficient sum to the following spring, when the architect would be able to receive the work.

In the spring the work required repairs before being accepted:—Held: the proprietor, after having notified the contractor, might have the work done & deduct the cost from the amount he had kept as a guarantee.—BOISMENU v. CURE ET MARGUILLERS DE L'LEUVRE ET FABRIQUE DE LA PAROISSE DE ST. CUNEGONDE (1888), M. L. R. 4 S. C. 80.—CAN.

g. Mode of — Butter manufactured in dairy plant.]—Pltf. contracted to erect a dairy plant upon deft.'s land, to be paid for out of the proceeds of butter produced by deft.'s cows. By reason of a drought, there was not sufficient feed to enable deft.'s cows to produce butter:—Held: notwithstanding the negating of any agreement not embodied in the written contract, the language of that contract properly construed imported a promise by deft. that she would produce sufficient butter for the plant within a reasonable time, & evidence as to the conditions existing at the date of the contract was admissible on this point.—HART v. contract given — Liability to contribute.]—S. offered to take shares in a co. in consideration of his being secured a contract for adding to & altering the co.'s premises. The directors passed a resolution to give him the contract, & on the faith of such resolution he sent a formal application for shares without condition, & paid the deposit. The shares were allotted, & notice of the allotment was sent to S., & his name was entered on the register; but the certificates were never delivered nor was S. required to pay any calls. The contract was never given to S. on account of the winding-up of the co.:—Held: there was a contract to take shares by S. only on condition of his obtaining the building contract, as that condition had not been fulfilled by the co. nor waived by S., S.'s name must be removed from the list of contributories.—Re ALPBOROUGH HOTEL CO., SIMPSON'S CASE (1869), 4 Ch. 169. Appropriation of—Payments generally on account—Additional work.]—Pltf., a builder, covenanted by deed with defts., a corpn., to do certain specified work for £5,500, & that if their architects should require any alterations or additions in the progress of the works, the architects should give to pltf. written instructions signed by them, & that he should not be considered as having authority for same without such written instructions. Defts. covenanted to pay pltf. £5,500 & the value of the additional work, if any. The declaration, after stating the deed, averred that pltf. executed all the works to be done for £5,500, that the architects required him to make certain additions by means of written instructions, signed, etc., & that he executed all the additional works, & that defts. took possession of all the works. Breach, non-payment of the £5,500, & of the sum due for the additions. Defts., after settling out the deed on oyer, pleaded to the £5,500, payment before action brought. Payments had been made to pltf. to the amount of £6,300. The payments were made generally in respect of the work actually done, without distinguishing the one description from the other:—Held: the sums advanced by defts. were to be treated as sums paid on account of whatever amount pltf. might eventually be entitled to recover, viz., £5,500, & pltf. was not at liberty to apply so much of the £6,300 as was necessary in satisfaction of what was due for the additional works, leaving the balance only to be applied in part discharge of the £5,500, the doctrine of the creditor's right of applying indefinite payments to whichever of two debts he might prefer, not applying.—LAMPRELL v. BILLERICAY UNION (1849), 3 Exch. 283; 18 L. J. Ex. 282; 12 L. T. O. S. 533; 13 J. P. 235; 154 E. R. 850.

172 ii. — — — 60 Vict. c. 24, s. 175 (N. B.).]—A contract provided for payments to be made monthly as the work progressed according to the estimate of the engineer in charge. The work not completed for more than one year after the date for completion, but the delay was not the fault of pltf. There was no stipulation in the contract in reference to the payment of interest on any sums due but not paid:—Held: pltf. was not entitled to interest, his claim not being for a sum certain payable by virtue of a written instrument at a time certain, within the meaning of s. 175 of 60 V. c. 24 (N.B.).—MAYES v. CONNOLLY (1902), 35 N. B. R. 701.—CAN.

170. — — — Three contracts.]—Pltf. having executed certain work for deft., who had paid for part of it, brought an action for an alleged balance amounting to £103 16s. Deft. had instructed pltf. to execute three separate building contracts. In round figures the first came to £350, the second to £75, & the third to £25. Deft. had drawn cheques, generally in respect of the work as it was done, amounting to £350 at various times prior to the date when the action was commenced, & contended that at that time payment under the second & third contracts, which together came to £103 16s., had not become due. Pltf. appropriated the whole of the £350 received on account of the three contracts generally to the paying off in full of the first contract, certain items of which were disputed:—Held: pltf. had acted wrongly in setting aside in payment of a disputed claim money paid to his account generally, & in then bringing his action for the payment of two subsequent contracts which deft. never denied that he would be at a future date liable to pay for in full.—PERKINS v. COOMBS (1896), 41 Sol. Jo. 81.

171. Work illegally carried out.]—Held: a person who had carried out any building work with the knowledge that it constituted a breach of an order made under Defence of the Realm (Consolidation) Regulations, 1914, reg. 8 E, by the Minister of Munitions, was not entitled to recover payment for such work from the building owner.—*BRIGHTMAN & Co. v. 172. Interest—No stipulation in contract.]—A contract between a railway co. & a contractor provided that payments should be made monthly, as the works proceeded, on the certificates of the co.'s engineer. There was no stipulation in the contract in reference to the payment of interest to the contractor on any sums due, but not paid to him. The contractor made a demand in writing for a sum as the balance due to him, & claimed interest thereon. His accounts were disputed, but on a bill filed by him against the co., the result showed that he was entitled to a balance less than

i. — — — How calculated.]—A municipality agreed to pay for works to be constructed by promissory notes payable in two years without interest, the notes to be delivered to the contractor on the completion of the works & to bear a date assumed to be the mean date of completion of the works as carried on in detail. The amount of the notes represented the price of the tender with average interest added, & the municipality reserved the privilege of making payments upon the acceptance of progressive estimates on the one-half of the sum which he had claimed to be due from the co.:—Held: the contractor was not entitled to interest either under the contract, there being no express stipulation on the part of the co. to pay any, or under Civil Procedure Act, 1833 (c. 42), s. 28, the demand in writing for payment not being of a sum certain payable at a certain time.—HILL v. SOUTH STAFFORDSHIRE RY. CO. (1874), L. R. 18 Eq. 154; 43 L. J. Ch. 556.

173. Necessary works—Statutory requirements.]

—Defts. being under contract with the owner to supply & fit up an emigrant ship with everything comprised in the Emigrants Comrs.' schedule, to the entire satisfaction of the surveyor to such Comrs., plths. contracted with defts. to do part of such contract work, viz., "to fit up the between decks of the ship for government emigrants, to provide all materials & labour, viz., all plumbers' & joiners' work, for 15s. per statute adult, the whole to be done to the satisfaction of the Emigration Comrs." Plths. erected many more berths in the vessel than she was measured to carry according to Passengers Act, 1852 (c. 119), & several of the berths had to be taken down, & some of them to be rebuilt & altered, by plths., by the order of the Comrs. By the like order other work, in the nature of ship's fittings, was done by plths., such as making a ventilator, deck lights, & a school-master's cabin, etc.:—Held: defts. were only liable to pay plths. at the rate of 15s. per statute adult for the number of berths with which the ship was allowed by the Comrs. to go to sea, & defts. were not responsible for any further sum in respect of the other work done by plths. under the order of the Comrs.—DOBSON v. HUDSON (1857), 1 C. B. N. S. 652; 26 L. J. C. P. 153; 28 L. T. O. S. 270; 21 J. P. 358; 3 Jur. N. S. 216; 5 W. R. 308; 140 E. R. 269.

174. — Contract to build house—Flooring & flooring boards.]—WILLIAMS v. FITZMAURICE, No. 36, ante.

175. — Work in excess of quantities—Quantities part of contract.]—On a building contract whereby additions & alterations were not to avoid it, but to be allowed for at amounts to be named by the employer's surveyor, the contract being made up of a tender framed on quantities calculated by the surveyor, & specifications referred to them, & signed by the builder alone:—Held: the builder having completed the work & claimed payment under the contract, could not claim for work as excess of the "quantities" on which it was based, nor for any additions or alterations beyond the amount allowed by the surveyor.—COKER v. YOUNG (1860), 2 F. & F. 98, N. P.

176. — — — — —.]—Where a building contract provides that the work is to be done for a lump sum "according to the plans, invitation to tender, specification & bills of quantities," the quantities are to be regarded as defining the amount of work included in the price, & if the contractor is required, in order to complete the work, to do more work than is in the quantities, he is entitled to be paid therefor an addition to the contract sum.—PATMAN & FOTHERINGHAM, LTD. v. PILDITCH (1901), 2 Hudson's B. C. 4th ed. 368.

177. — — — Quantities not part of contract.]—An architect entered into an undertaking with his employer that a house should be erected for a sum not exceeding £15,000, including architect's commission & all expenses, & engaged the services of a builder who, without being informed of the undertaking, gave an estimate based on quantities given him by the architect, & entered into a contract with the employer for the completion of the work from the architect's plans, & under his superintendence, for £13,690. with power for the works as completed from time to time, without interest or previous notice "en déduisant les intérêts composés au taux de six pour cent par an à échoir après l'époque des paiements et lesquels étaient compris dans le prix de soumission pour la totalité des deux années." The mean date was settled as 15th Dec., 1899, & the notes for the balance due were delivered in 1900:—Held: (1) no interest should be allowed prior to 15th Dec., 1899, on payments made before that date; (2) the interest should be calculated on the basis of the price actually mentioned in the contract, & upon the actual amount of the advance payments made.—VILLE DE MAISONNEUVE v. BANQUE PROVINCIALE (1903), 33 S. C. R. 418.—CAN.

n. Right of action for—Whether excluded by clause of reference.]—Held: an action raised by a contractor against his employer for payment due under a building contract was not excluded by a clause of reference in the contract, in respect that it was not clear that the clause of reference gave the arbiter authority to give decree for payment of money.—TOUGH v. DUMBARTON WATER WORKS COMRS. (1872), 11 Macph. (Ct. of Sess.) 236.—SCOT.

PART VI. SECT. 1.

o. Necessary work—Contract to construct drain—Alteration of depth.]—Depths required were marked on the profiles forming part of a contract to construct a drain; the engineer, under whose personal direction the work was being done, discovered that the depths were inaccurately given, & directed the drains to be deepened thereby occasioning to the builder considerable work beyond that provided for by the contract. Without the work the drain would have been useless. In an action against defts. to recover the value of such work:—Held: work that plth. was bound to perform under the contract itself.—GREEN v. ORFORD TOWNSHIP (1888), 16 A. R. 4.—CAN.

p. — Work included in contract.]—Works contained in addenda to specifications before execution of the contract are not extras.—DIAMOND v. MCANNANY (1865), 15 C. P. 9.—CAN.

q. — — — Compliance with bye-law.]—Under the specifications in a building contract, the contractor was bound to provide necessary soil pipes, stacks, etc., necessary to fill all requirements of city bye-laws. The contractor claimed for extras in consequence of having to supply six stacks in lieu of three:—Held: the contractor in doing such work was merely doing what he agreed to do under the contract.—ELFORD & CORNISH v. THOMPSON (1912), 19 W. L. R. 809; 1 W. W. R. 409; 1 D. L. R. 1; 5 Sask. L. R. 96.—CAN.

s. Contract to build walls & foundations—Building chimney—Beam filling.]—Plth. agreed orally to build the walls & foundations of a house for deft., & no proper plans or specifications were prepared. Plth. claimed for extras in respect of an increase in the dimensions of the building, for building a chimney, & doing beam filling:—Held: plth. could recover therefor.—IREDALE v. DREWERY (1912), 19 W. L. R. 931; 4 D. L. R. 868.—CAN.

t. Variations—Subsequent to contract.]—Where alterations were mutually agreed upon, subsequently to the contract, the builder is entitled to claim for architect to order extra works. On a suit by the builder claiming to be entitled to be paid by the employer for all quantities executed by him beyond those included in his estimate, & for extra works:—Held: pltf. was entitled to an account for what was due to him for any works executed by him under the architect's direction not included in the contract, & for any works so executed under the contract the price for which was not therein included, & for any variations made under the architect's direction of works included in the contract.—*KIMBERLEY v. .]—N. contracted to construct a railway, including earthworks, for a lump sum. The contract provided that there were to be no extras, while the specification provided that no extras were to be paid for unless ordered in writing by the engineer at the time. The contract incorporated the specification. A bill of quantities was supplied by the railway to the contractor, which contained a note to this effect: "These quantities are not guaranteed as correct, & are furnished merely for the convenience of contractors." By clause 12 of the specification, "the contractor was to satisfy himself of the nature of the soil, of the quantity of materials to be excavated from the cuttings, of all probable contingencies, & generally of all matters which could in any way influence the tender for the contract," & he was to take upon himself all the risk & responsibility of the due & careful execution of the works. Clause 57 of the specification defined "earthworks" as including "all excavations, embankments, & levelling of every description, whatever the materials may be." When the works were completed N. claimed two items, (1) £30,000 for blasting rock in the excavations, & (2) £6,000 for excavations which were in excess of the quantities supplied to him. The matter was referred to arbn., & the arbitrator made his award in the form of a special case, in which he stated that, as to the first claim, the contractor contended that the word "earthworks" meant soil which could be excavated without blasting, & did not include rock which could only be excavated by that means, & that "whatever the materials may be" in clause 57 had reference to different kinds of soil as distinguished from rock, while the railway contended that the work in question was included in the term "earthworks." As to the second point, the contractor contended that he was entitled under the contract to be paid for excess of quantities in the work done over & above the quantities contained in the bills of quantities & shown on the drawings; the railway contended that the bills of quantities were not incorporated in the contract, & that the co. were not bound by them. The arbitrator asked the opinion of the ct. on the questions whether the contractor was entitled to be paid anything in respect of either of his items of claim. The arbitrator found, as a fact, as to the first item, (1) "soil" in an engineering sense did not include "rock" which had to be blasted; (2) the word "soil" in clause 12 was used in an engineering sense; (3) the contractor had been put to expense by reason of the stuff in the cuttings not being "soil" but "rock"; (4) the intention of the parties to the contract was that the stuff in the cuttings was "soil" in the ordinary sense of the term. As to the second item, he found (1) the tender was based on the bill of quantities; (2) the parties to the contract intended the quantities of work to be done thereunder to be the quantities shown in the bills of quantities & the drawings; (3) the contractor had done a large amount of work in excess of the quantities stated in the bill of quantities & drawings:—Held: the contractor was not entitled to be paid under the contract anything in respect of the two items of claim.—Re NUTTALL & LYNTON & BARNSTAPLE Ry. Co. (1899), 2 Hudson's B. C. 4th ed. 279, C. A.

179. — Quantities grossly erroneous.]—A builder is bound by his special contract, however improvidently entered into, & he cannot, in the absence of fraud or waiver, sue for extra work on the ground that the quantities are grossly erroneous & misled him.—*SHERREN v. a. — — —.]—Pltf. did work for debts under a contract. There was a dispute as to an item for grading, which included covering the roads with cinders, watering & rolling. The grading was done & the engineer's final certificate was issued. This action was begun to recover an amount for extras: this item was not provided for by the contract, but was ordered by the engineer & the building committee some time after the execution of the contract:—Held: the terms of the contract as to payment, measurement & engineer's certificate did not apply to this item; & upon the evidence the extra work was allowed for.—ROSS v. REGINA AGRICULTURAL & INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION ASSOCN. (1911), 19 W. L. R. 53.—CAN.

b. — Agreed to at signing contract.]—Variations orally agreed to at signing the contract are not extras but part of the work which the contractor undertook.—Re ELLISDON & BASTEN (1917), N. Z. L. R. 209.—N.Z.

c. Work rendered more expensive—By errors in plan.]—The work contracted for, included the erection of a solid concrete pier to be sunk to the solid rock. The plan showed the rock at a depth of 15 ft., but in fact the rock was at a considerably lower depth.

The increased depth not only added to the expense of the work but also greatly increased its difficulty. The plan did not mislead the contractor as he contracted without reference thereto:—Held: the contractor could not recover for extras.—AMURI COUNTY COUNCIL v. THOMAS (1891), 9 N. Z. L. R. 664; 10 N. Z. L. R. 430.—N.Z.

d. — By misrepresentation as to quality of work to be done.]—A contractor led into error by verbal misrepresentations as to the quality of work expected to be done upon his contract, was held entitled to recover the increased price of completing the works "according to specifications."—ROSS v. BARRY (1891), 19 S. C. R. 360.—CAN.

e. — By delay of owner.]—It was agreed that the contractor would be put in possession of the premises & be furnished with lines & levels by a fixed date. Extra work was entailed by reason of the employer's delay in furnishing lines & levels:—Held: the contractor was entitled to recover for the extra work.—MUNRO v. WESTVILLE TOWN (1903), 36 N. S. R. 313.—CAN.

f. — Remediable by contractor.]—Pltf. constructed a sewage disposal plant for deft., under a written agreement, & claimed sums as due to him by virtue thereof or arising out of it. Pltf. said he agreed to do the work for summer prices, & complained that he was obliged to do the work in winter, because deft. delayed to furnish him grades & levels, which were to be given by deft.:—Held: pltf. could not recover, for he might have employed an engineer to give him the grades & levels, & charged the expense to deft.—MANDERS v. MOOSE JAW CITY (1914), 28 W. L. R. 821.—CAN.

g. Transport of material.]—A party agreed to execute work to conform to specification drawn for execution of the work by an engineer:—Held: he had no claim for extra work, in bringing materials from a distance, notwithstanding that he alleged that this was caused by an error in the specification.—WEATHERSTONE v. ROBERTSON (1852), 1 Stu. M. & P. 333.—SCOT.

h. — —.]—Parties contracted by way of tender & acceptance for the erection of buildings upon the mutual understanding that the materials for such work were to be transported by water, which was found to be impossible, & the material was transported in another way. On the facts & the terms of the acceptance:—Held: the contractor was entitled to recover the additional expense occasioned by it.—ALLISON v. GREATER WINNIPEG WATER DISTRICT (1916), 34 W. L. R. 494; 10 W. W. R. 573.—CAN.

181. Contract with corporation—No fresh contract under seal for extras.—Defts., an incorporated co., entered into a contract under seal with A., for the execution of certain works according to the terms of a specification annexed, which also contained provisions for extra work. A. entered upon the work under the superintendence of the co.'s engineer, & also under such superintendence, & with the approbation of the engineer, executed certain extra works, which could not be considered as coming within the contract under seal. A. afterwards made a claim upon the co. to a much larger amount than that specified by the contract, & the directors paid him a large sum, generally on account:—Held: as there was not any evidence that the co. had contracted for the extra work under seal, or that they had entered into a contract for same under the terms of their special Act, or of any general Act authorising same, they were not liable to A. for the extra work so performed by him.—HOMERSHAM v. WOLVERHAMPTON WATERWORKS CO. (1851), 6 Exch. 137; 6 Ry. & Can. Cas. 790; 20 L. J. Ex. 193; 155 E. R. 486.

182. — — —.]—On a contract by a board of health to employ pltf., an engineer, about certain works, & pay him £500 during two years, he undertaking to do his best to complete the works within that period:—Held: they were not liable for any extra work not contracted for by deed.—RUTLEDGE v. FARNHAM LOCAL BOARD OF HEALTH (1861), 2 F. & F. 406, N. P.

183. — — —.]—A builder had entered into a contract with a burial board under the seal of the board for the execution of certain repairs to the buildings at the board's cemetery; the repairs to be done & the terms upon which they were to be done were specified in the contract. Further repairs were necessary, & were executed by the builder at the instance of the board's surveyor, & approved by him when done:—Held: the builder was not entitled to recover in respect of these further repairs, there being no contract under seal as to them.—STEVENS v. HOUNSLOW BURIAL BOARD (1889), 61 L. T. 839; 54 J. P. 309; 38 W. R. 236, D. C.

184. — — —.]—By a contract under seal a contractor undertook to execute works for a corp. at a fixed price. He alleged that the work had been so essentially varied under the orders of the corp.'s engineer that he was entitled to disregard the fixed price, & claim payment on the basis of the cost of the work, either under an implied new contract, or on the ground that the whole work was "extra work" executed in accordance with the contract:—Held: (1) on the evidence there had been no essential variation justifying such a contention; (2) even if there had been such a variation he was not entitled to claim quantum meruit upon the basis of an implied new contract, because there was no contract under seal as required by Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 174.—BELL v. BRIDLINGTON CORPN. (1908), 72 J. P. 453.

185. — No discharge by deed from stipulations in contract.—A declaration set out articles executed under the seals of *pltf.*s. & defts. respectively by which it was agreed that *pltf.*s. should build & complete fit for sea for defts. two steam-vessels for a certain stipulated sum each, "such sum to be in full & entire satisfaction & payment for each such vessel, with all her apparatus & conveniences, without any other extra or additional charge, expense, or demand whatsoever"; & it was provided that, "if at any time during the building & completing of the vessels, any alteration or alterations whatsoever in the building, construction, or fitting of either of the vessels, or of her apparatus or conveniences, should be directed to be made by the surveyor or other person lawfully acting in that behalf on the part of defts., such alteration or alterations should not be made by *pltf.*s. unless on the authority of a letter signed by the secretary of defts., stating that the ct. of directors had directed such alterations to be made, & specifying the precise amount which defts. would allow for same," & that no such alteration should in any other respect affect the provisions of the contract. The declaration then went on to allege that, during the progress of the works, defts. required divers alterations to be made in the building & construction of the vessels, & also divers extra works beyond those specified in the agreement & the specification & drawings thereto annexed, which could not be reasonably inferred therefrom as necessary; that *pltf.*s. did accordingly make all the alterations so required as aforesaid to be made, & did all the extra works so ordered by defts. as aforesaid, & that defts. discharged them from the stipulation in the agreement that such altera-

k. No provision for extras.—A builder cannot charge for extras without an agreement between himself & his employer for extras.—BRINE v. SHEARING (1906), 2 E. L. R. 44.—CAN.

l. — — —.]—Extras, to a building contract, containing no provision for extras, constitute a cause of action apart from the contract itself, & may be separately sued upon.—WARNER v. WRIGHT (1908), E. D. C. 14.—S. AF.

m. Provision for alterations—Valuation by architect.—It was stipulated that alterations or additions should be valued by the architect, & the costs added to, or deducted from, the contract price:—Held: not an undertaking that the architect should value the alterations & additions when executed.—DUNCAN v. SHRIGLEY (1870), 1 V. R. (Law) 139.—AUS.

n. — Substantial change not authorised.—A clause providing that the contractor shall, when authorised by the employer & the architect, vary by way of extra or omission from the drawings or specifications, does not authorise the employer substantially to change the character of work contracted for.—RAMSAY v. BOARD OF SCHOOL TRUSTEES (1915), 32 W. L. R. 77; 21 B. C. R. 589.—CAN.

o. Set-off from claim to extras—Of alterations lessening contract price—& damages for delay in completion—Pleading.—MCGINNIS v. YORKVILLE VILLAGE (1861), 21 U. C. R. 163.—CAN.

p. — Of costs of completion—& of amount paid.—In an action by a contractor for work done for deft.:—Held: pltf. was entitled to the contract price, & to payment for extra work, less the amount he had received & the tions should not be so made unless on the authority of a letter signed by the secretary of defts., stating that the directors had directed such alterations to be made, & specifying the precise amount which defts. would allow for same. Averment, that the alterations amounted to a certain sum, & that defts. refused to pay. Plea, that there was no contract between pltfs. & defts. relating to the alterations other than the deed in the declaration mentioned, & that the alleged discharge was not a discharge by deed. Replication, on equitable grounds, that, after the making of the deed in the plea mentioned, defts. by parol, & without any letter signed by their secretary according to the stipulations of the agreement, required & authorised pltfs. to make the alterations, etc., & pltfs., at the request & by the authority of defts. made the alterations, & defts. afterwards took the vessels, & received & enjoyed, & still kept & enjoyed the benefit of the alterations so made by pltfs., & that, by reason of the premises, pltfs. were in equity discharged by defts. from the stipulations in the declaration mentioned, & that defts. ought not in equity to be allowed to set up the want of a discharge of the stipulations by deed in bar of pltfs.' claim for the cost of the alterations:—Held: the replication was bad, inasmuch as it contradicted the declaration, & showed that pltfs.' right, if any, was only an equitable one.—THAMES IRON WORKS & SHIPBUILDING CO. v. ROYAL MAIL STEAM-PACKET CO. (1861), 13 C. B. N. S. 358; 31 L. J. C. P. 169; 8 Jur. N. S. 100; 9 W. R. 942; 143 E. R. 142.

186. Written contract—Production at trial—To prove what were extras.]—Where an action was brought by a builder for the amount of extra work done, there having been a written contract between the parties:—Held: pltf. ought to have produced the written contract at the trial, in order that it might appear what was within the contract & what not, but as the objection was not taken by deft. at the trial, the verdict for deft. should be set aside & a new trial ordered, but without costs.—JONES v. HOWELL (1835), 4 Dowl. 176.

187. ——— Declaration of deceased contractor.]—In an action by an exor. for work done by testator, it appeared that the claim was for extras & alterations in a machine which had been made by testator for deft. under a written contract which was not produced. The contract price of the machine had been paid, & in order to show that deft. had assented to the alterations, evidence was offered, & received, of a declaration by deceased that deft. had paid him £20 on account:—Semle: this declaration was properly received, as being an admission against the interest of the party making it.—EDIE v. KINGSFORD (1854), 14 C. B. 759; 23 L. J. C. P. 123; 139 E. R. 311; sub nom. EDYE v. KINGSFORD, 2 C. L. R. 832.

g. Statements as to extras—Contractor failing to deliver.]—Extras, although ordered by the architect, cannot be recovered for if not included in the statement as to extras called for by the contract.—SMITH v. GORDON (1880), 30 C. P. 553.—CAN.

r. ———.]—A contract provided that the value of extra work should be submitted every month to the architect:—Held: non-compliance with provision did not disentitle the contractor to recover the value.—ALBERTA BUILDING CO. v. CALGARY CITY (1911), 16 W. L. R. 443.—CAN.

PART VI. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 2.

189 i. Employer assenting to alterations—Without knowing of increased expenditure involved.]—Before a builder can recover the price of extras not specially contracted for he must prove not only that the extras were executed to the knowledge of the building owner but also that the latter consented to such extras being executed & knew, or must be held to have known, that

See, further, CONTRACT; EVIDENCE.

188. Contract under seal—Allowance for deviations—Additional work ordered—Form of action.]—By articles of agreement under seal, pltf. agreed to build certain houses for deft., at a certain sum, according to a specification, & it was declared that any deviation from the specification should not invalidate the contract, but an allowance should be made accordingly:—Held: an action of assumpsit could not be maintained for certain additional work & materials, found at deft.'s request in the course of the building, as they were included in the term "deviation," & deft. was liable only in an action of covenant.—STEEL v. TROUGHTON (1827), 5 L. J. O. S. K. B. 260.

SUB-SECT. 2.—WHEN EMPLOYER IS NOT LIABLE.

189. Employer assenting to alterations—Without knowing of increased expenditure involved.]—Where work is undertaken on contract at a given price, the employer is not liable to any greater amount by consenting to alterations from the original plan, unless he is either expressly informed, or must necessarily, from the nature of the work, be aware, that the alterations will increase the expense.—LOVELOCK v. KING (1831), 1 Mood. & R. 60; subsequent proceedings 9 L. J. O. S. K. B. 179, N. P.

Annotation:—Refd. Thames Ironworks & Shipbuilding Co. v. Royal Mail Steam-Packet Co. (1861), 13 C. B. N. S. 358.

190. ———.]—In an action by a builder for extras, it appearing that deft. had agreed to some supposed alterations, but not that she understood that they were so, or that they would involve extra expense, the contract providing that the works should be completed to the satisfaction of deft. or her surveyor, & no expressed satisfaction with the completion of the contract being proved, pltf. was nonsuited. It is peculiarly important with respect to such additions to the contract price, that the employer should be satisfied that they are in respect to matters not included in the specification.—JOHNSON v. WESTON (1859), 1 F. & F. 693, N. P.

191. Extra work performed after contract determined.]—By a contract entered into with a local board of health for repairs to be done to a town hall, it was provided that if the contractor should from bkpey., insolvency or any cause whatever, be prevented or delayed in proceeding with the works according to the presents, or should not proceed therein to the entire satisfaction of the architect or surveyor of the board, it should be lawful for the local board, after seven days' previous notice signed by their clerk or surveyor of their intention so to do, to employ any other builder, workman, or other person, by contract, measure, & value, day work or otherwise, to proceed with the works, & to complete same, & that on the expiration of the notice the presents should, at the option of the board, become void as to the

a. Extra work not indorsed on contract—Indorsement condition precedent.]—A contract provided that if any change in the plans were desired, their value should be agreed upon & indorsed on the contract, otherwise no allowance should be made for the change:—Held: the builder could not recover for extra work, because its value had not been agreed upon & indorsed on the contract.—FLOOD v. MORRISSEY (1880), 20 N. B. R. 5.—CAN.

contractor, but without prejudice to any right of action in the parties of the second part which the contractor might be subject to for any involuntary neglect in not proceeding with the works pursuant to the contract, & the amount then already paid to the contractor by the local board should be considered to be the full value of the works executed by him up to the time when such notice should have expired, & no further claim whatever should be made by the contractor under the presents for contract works or additional works which might be done by him up to that time, & the materials, whether prepared or unprepared, which might be at that time on the premises should become the property of the local board, without any further payment for same:—Held: the contractor was not entitled to claim in respect of extra work after the contract had been determined by the board by notice under the contract, in consequence of the dissatisfaction of their surveyor.—WILKINSON v. LOWNDES (1860), 24 J. P. 487.

192. Extra work caused by employer exercising statutory powers.]—An Act of Parliament empowered a corpn. to scour an inland harbour, & they did so by taking up the mud in barges, & letting it out at the mouth of the harbour, so as to be carried down the river. They employed pl'ts. to excavate & remove certain estimated quantities of earth, etc., down the river, at certain prices, the contract, not noticing the scouring process, providing only for extra work ordered by their engineer in writing. In consequence of the cleansing process, which was continued while pl'ts. were engaged in their work, the quantity of soil they had to remove was vastly increased by great deposits of mud. They applied for & were refused any additional remuneration, & after their work was completed, sued the corpn. for compensation, but their case, as stated at the trial, did not show that the mode of cleansing adopted by the corpn. was unusual or unreasonable, & on the contrary, it appeared rather to be a proper mode of carrying out the powers of the Act:—Held: as it did not appear that the process was unlawful or wrongful, it was no cause of action, & a nonsuit upheld.—RIGBY v. BRISTOL CORPN. (1860), 29 L. J. Ex. 359; 25 J. P. 72.

193. Extra work not valued as stipulated—Valuation condition precedent to right to sue.]—A contract for building a steam-vessel contained a provision that the engineer for the time being should have power to direct additions, deductions, alterations, & deviations, to & from the contract work, & that the value of all such "additions, deductions, alterations, & deviations, should be ascertained, & added to or deducted from the amount of the contract price." In an action brought in respect of certain extra works:—Held: the ascertainment of the value of the extra works was a condition precedent to the right of pl'ts. to sue in respect of them.—WESTWOOD v. SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL (1863), 1 New Rep. 262; 7 L. T. 736; 11 W. R. 261.

194. Contract under seal—Verbal promise.]—The engineer of a railway co. prepared a specification of the works on a proposed railway, & certain contractors fixed prices to the several items in the specification, & offered to construct the railway for the sum total of the prices affixed to the items. A contract under seal was thereupon made between the contractors & the co., by which the contractors agreed to construct & deliver the railway at a sum equal to the sum total above mentioned:—Held: the contractors could not, on mere verbal promises by the engineer, maintain against the co. a claim to be paid sums beyond the sums specified in the contract under seal.—SHARPE v. SAN PAULO RY. Co. (1873), 8 Ch. App. 597; 29 L. T. 9, L.J.J.

195. Work voluntarily done—Better materials employed than stipulated for.]—Where pl'ts. contracted with the agent of an absent shipowner to effect certain specified repairs, all confined to damage by stranding, & instead of doing the work as stipulated alleged that they had, on the agent's authority, done the equivalent thereto or better, & in the same contract stipulated that they should be paid for repairs due to deterioration at scheduled prices stated by them:—Held: (1) it appearing that the agent's authority to their knowledge was limited to the specified repairs, they could not recover on the contract, which was an entire one, & in its entirety had never been performed; (2) the shipowner having taken the ship as repaired & sold it, did not thereby ratify the contract.—*FORMAN & CO. e. Waiver—By provision in contract.]—A contract provided that the contractor should not be entitled, by reason of any change, made in the works, plans or specifications or by reason of the exercise of any power vested in the engineer to claim any sum for extra work:—Held: the contractor had, by the contract, waived all claim for payment for any such work.—*JONES v. c. — Not within the contemplation of the contract.]—Held: if the extra work sued for was not within the contemplation of the contract, the contractor was entitled to refuse to do it, unless under a new contract, but having gone on without objection, he was precluded from claiming in respect of a resulting loss.—SLOWRY v. LODDER (1901), 20 N. Z. L. R. 321.—N.Z.

d. Where statement of extras furnished—& amount paid—Estoppel.]—Pl'tf. furnished a statement of extras, & was paid in accordance therewith:—Held: pl'tf. was precluded from insisting upon any claim for extras beyond what were set out in that statement.—

195 i. Works voluntarily done—More expensive character than stipulated for.]—A builder having given a written offer for building a "corner" house, specifying the items of his charge, but not mentioning any additional charge for circular work; built the house, the corner of which was rounded off, without stating that he expected a higher rate for such work:—Held: not entitled to double charge, on the Authority of architect to order deviations—Must be shown by contractor seeking to recover.]—An obligor, who binds himself to perform certain works according to a specification & other detailed & working drawings, to be furnished during the progress of the works, with power for the obligee by his surveyor to direct additions or omissions, must, in a plea of performance, quoad such parts in which no orders were given by the surveyor to vary & deviate from the original plan, show an authority in the surveyor to give such directions, or aver that the deviation or variation was an omission or addition.—*R. v. Plea that deft. deviated from the drawings by the direction of pltf.'s architect:—Held: the plea was bad, the architect not being shown to be pltf.'s agent to bind him by any deviation from the drawings.—COOPER v. LANGDON (1841), 9 M. & W. 60; 1 Dowl. N. S. 392; 11 L. J. Ex. 222; 152 E. R. 27; affd. (1842), 10 M. & W. 785, Ex. Ch.

198. ——— Question of fact.]—Where, in the progress of building work done under a contract, some process more expensive than contracted for was ordered by the architect, with the knowledge of the employer, & the builder's sub-contractor was told it was to be paid extra for:—Held: there was evidence of a contract to pay him extra for it, & of authority in the architect to make such a contract with him.—WALLIS v. ROBINSON (1862), 3 F. & F. 307, N. P.

SUB-SECT. 4.—EFFECT OF FINAL AND CONCLUSIVE CERTIFICATE.

199. When certificate binding—Contract making decision of certifier final as to extras—Right of employer to question whether extras done or ordered in manner prescribed.]—Defts. engaged pltf. to build a market-house, & the contract & conditions stipulated that no deviations in the way of extras or omissions should be made without the written authority of defts.' architect, & that they should be priced at the contract prices, that no claim should be made for extra or additional work without the production of the written order of the architect, signed when the instructions for them were given, that certain proportionate payments should be made from time to time, on the certificate of the architect that the sum claimed was a proper one, the architect's opinion to be final as to the value, that if any dispute should arise as to the meaning of the specifications or contract, the architect was to define the meaning, & that his decision as to the nature, quality & quantity of the works executed or to be executed should be final, & also his decision as regards the value of the extras & additions, which was to be regulated by the contract price. The architect gave a certificate that a certain sum, which included extras & additions, was proper to be paid:—Held: (1) neither party could raise the question of whether or not there was a sufficient order in writing; (2) a pump, drains, etc., though separately ordered, came within the meaning of works connected with the contract, & the architect's decision as to their value was final.—*GOODYEAR v. PART VI. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 3.

196 i. Authority of architect to order deviations—Must be shown by contractor seeking to recover.]—An architect instructed to do certain work at a price employed a builder, & without consulting his principal, authorised extra work not covered by the price:—Held: he had no authority either as architect or agent even though the work was essential to the stability of building, & the builder's claim must fail.—HAYWOOD & Co. v. PAULING (1907), 24 S. C. 142; 17 C. T. R. 169.—S. AF.

l. ——— No provision as to payment—Implied rights of contractors.]—A building contract provided that if the architect required additions to the plans & specifications, he should have the right to make such changes. The architect verbally ordered work not resulting from any change in the plans & specifications, but not within the plans & specifications at all:—Held: the contractors could recover from the building owners the cost of such extra work, whether as decided by the architect or upon a quantum meruit.—DOMINION PAVING & CONSTRUCTION

Co. v. TORONTO CITY (1907), 9 O. W. R. 38.—CAN.

m. ——— Custom empowering architect to bind employer.]—A custom empowering an architect to bind his employer for extras, even if proved, would be unreasonable, & could not be upheld. Where upon an emergency it is necessary, in order to complete a work, to do extra work the owner cannot be made liable therefor without his consent.—HAYWOOD & Co. v. PAULING (1907), 24 S. C. 142; 17 C. T. R. 169.—S. AF.

n. Onus of proof.]—In an action by a contractor, claiming for extras:—Held: the burden of showing that work claimed for as extra was ordered by the architect, was on pltf.—MUNRO v. WESTVILLE TOWN (1903), 36 N. S. R. 313.—CAN.

199 i. When certificate binding—Contract making decision of certifier final as to extras.]—It was provided that no extras would be paid for unless previously certified by the engineer. Extra work was included in £475, certified to in a summary certificate signed by the engineer under the head of "Grading." In a document prepared in the office of the employer, & pinned to the summary certificate, but not signed by the engineer, £175 of the £475 was referred to as "extra length" "of swamp" & "ditching." A note was then put on the summary that the amount was to be paid & made right in the next certificate, & the voucher for payment showed this amount paid as a part of the contract. The amount was never allowed as an extra in any subsequent certificate, & in the final certificate was included in general payments under the contract:—Held: the engineer had not recognised & authorised the payment of this item as extra to the contract, & it was not recoverable.—SMYTH v. R. (1882), 1 N. Z. L. R. C. A. 80.—N.Z.

199 ii. ———.]—Where the architect has given an effective certificate the builder is entitled to recover for extras both within & without the contract.—WATTS v. McLEAY (1911), 19 W. L. R. 916.—CAN.

199 iii. ———.]—Where certificates of the architect are to decide the value of the work added & his decision is to be final, however unbusinesslike the architect may be, so long as he acts honestly, there is no appeal from his decision.—HAMILTON v. VINEBERG (1912), 21 O. W. R. 75; 3 O. W. N. 605; 2 D. L. R. 921; 22 O. W. R. 238; 4 D. L. R. 827.—CAN.

199 iv. ——— Estoppel of employer—Order in writing.]—A final certificate cures the want of previous orders in writing for extras & other like conditions which are merely ancillary to the grant of such final certificate, & the result is the same if, under a count for wrongful refusal of the final certificate by the engineer in collusion with deft., the jury find that the works were satisfactorily completed, & that the certificate ought to have been

200. ————.]—By a building contract it was provided that no extra work should be paid for unless the contractors should produce special & positive written instructions for it, signed by the engineer & countersigned by the chairman of deft. co. The engineer was to furnish monthly certificates of the value of the work executed, including extra work, & the contractors were to be paid 85 per cent. of the amount forthwith, & the balance at the expiration of three calendar months after the certificate of the engineer of the satisfactory completion of the work should have been given, provided that within three months after the giving of such certificate the contractors should have delivered to the engineer a full account of all claims which they might have upon the co., & he should have given a certificate of the correctness of such account. Any disputes or differences arising upon any matter connected with the contract were to be referred to the engineer, whose decision was to be conclusive. The engineer certified for, as extra, work which had not in fact been done at all, & work which, although extra, had not been done on signed & countersigned orders:—Held: the last certificate of the engineer precluded defts. from raising the question whether extras had been done or done without countersigned orders.—*LAIDLAW v. 201. ————.]—Where a contract for the erection of certain works provided that all extras or additions, payment for which the contractor should become entitled to under the contract, should be paid for at the price fixed by the surveyor appointed by the contractor's employer:—Held: this provision impliedly gave power to the surveyor to determine what were extras under the contract, & his certificate awarding a certain amount to be due for extras was conclusive.—RICHARDS v. MAY (1883), 10 Q. B. D. 400; 52 L. J. Q. B. 272; 31 W. R. 708, D. C.

202. ————.]—By a building contract it was provided that in all cases where decorations or extras exceeded £10 the order or plan was to be signed by the architect & countersigned by two members of a building committee, & that the decision of the architect with respect to the amount, state, & condition of the works actually executed, & also in respect of any & every question that might arise concerning the construction of the contract or the plans, etc., or in any way relating thereto, should be final and without appeal:—Held: the provision in the contract as to extras was not intended to limit the architect's power of decision, inasmuch as the architect had given his certificate, it was not lawful for defts., whether the architect had in his certificate made a mistake or not, to reopen the certificate to correct alleged mistakes or for the purpose of eliminating any extras not countersigned by two of the building committee.—LAPTHORNE v. ST. AUBYN (1885), 1 Cab. & El. 486; 1 T. L. R. 279.

203. ———— Right of contractor to recover more than amount certified.]—Where a building contract contained a clause that no extras should be paid for unless ordered in writing, & weekly bills delivered for same, & that had not been done, though extra work had been executed:—Held: the fact that the architect's certificate for the final balance awarded a certain sum in respect of extras, did not entitle the builder to recover beyond the certified sum for extras in respect of which written orders had not been given, nor weekly bills delivered.—BRUNSDON v. STAINES LOCAL BOARD (1884), 1 Cab. & El. 272.

205. ———— Although clause making certificate conclusive.]—A building contract contained the usual clause referring questions which might arise to the architect, & another clause (clause 18) requiring that orders for extras were to be signed by the secretary & treasurer, & countersigned by the architect. The builder having completed the work, the architect issued a final certificate which apparently included certain extras which had not been signed for by the secretary & treasurer:—Held: the architect having no power to get rid of clause 18, plffs. were not entitled to recover the cost of extras, although included in the final certificate.—*LORDEN & SON v. In an action for the price of extra works:—Held: the engineers having given a certificate for the extra works, defts. were precluded from setting up as defences to the action that the extra works had not been ordered in writing.—*CONNOR v. 206 i. Whether condition precedent—Additional work done at instance of architect without written orders.]—Pltf. agreed to build a house for deft. for $3,250, & that no allowance beyond that sum should be made for extra work or alterations, unless orders therefor in writing should be given by the architect in charge. During progress of the work pltf. made alterations be paid for, unless same should have been ordered in writing. Additional work, with the guardians' knowledge, was done which had not been ordered in writing, but which had been directed by the architect. The guardians having refused to pay for the extra works, & a bill being filed to obtain payment of the balance, a general demurrer for want of equity was allowed.—KIRK v. 207. — Additional work done at instance of employer—Without written orders—Implied promise to pay.—A building contract contained a clause providing that no works beyond those included in the contract would be allowed or paid for without an order in writing from the employer & architect. During the progress of the work the employer insisted upon the execution of certain works which he alleged were included in the contract, but the contractor maintained that they were extras, & would be charged as such. No order in writing was given for the execution of those works:—Held: an arbitrator was justified in inferring an implied promise in the employer to pay for the works either as included in the contract price or as extras.—MOLLOY v. LIEBE (1910), 102 L. T. 616, P. C.

208. — Additional work not within contract.—By a contract for the execution of railway works, after specifying certain works to be done for a gross sum, it was provided that extra works, which the co. or their engineer should, by any writing under his hand, require to be executed, should be deemed to be included in the contract, & should be paid for at a certain rate, & that the contractor should not be entitled to make any claim for any alteration or addition which he might make without such written & signed instructions:—Held: a direction for an account of extra works done by pltf. under & by virtue of the contract did not authorise any account to be taken of works, other than the specified works, done by the contractor, with the privity of the co., without written instructions, but the ct. would give pltf. liberty to bring his action at law against the co., in respect of works done without such instructions, not, however, relieving him against the legal effect of the lapse of time during the proceedings in equity.—NIXON v. TAFF VALE RY. CO. (1849), 7 Hare, 136; 12 L. T. O. S. 347; 68 E. R. 55.

It was agreed "that the purchase-money or sum of £10,400 is inclusive of all charges for the ship or vessel finished & fitted perfectly in every respect, & no charges shall be demanded for extras, but any addition or additions which may be made by order in writing of Admiral S. as an extra or extras shall be paid for at a price to be previously agreed upon in writing." In the course of the construction of the vessel, extras & additions to the work to a large aggregate amount were done under the directions, not in writing, of certain officers or servants of the Portuguese government:—Held: pltf. was not entitled to recover the price of these.—RUSSELL v. in the building by the verbal directions of the architect. After the building was finished, the architect made a valuation of the additional work & of certain omissions, deducting the latter from the former, & certified the balance to be due to pltf.:—Held: unless deft. had dispensed with the proviso about the extra work, or had ordered the work to be done, or authorised the architect so to do, pltf. could not recover.—SMALL v. 207 i. — Additional work done at instance of employer—Without written order.—Dft. employed pltf. under a building contract, in which it was stipulated that there should be no charge for extra work, unless specially ordered in writing by the architect employed. Dft. himself requested pltf. to do extra work, & desired pltf.'s men to take their orders from him & not from the architect:—Held: pltf. might recover without reference to the contract.—MELVILLE v. 207 ii. — — — — ——It would be a fraud on the part of a building owner to desire, by his engineer, alterations additions & omissions to be made, then to stand by & see the expenditure going on upon them, & then refuse payment on the ground that the expenditure was incurred without proper written orders 207 iii. — — — — ——Extras were ordered at the instance of the employer personally & the employer was present when the orders for such extras were orally given by the architect to the contractor, & part of the amount claimed for extras was afterwards paid for by the employer upon a certificate of the architect for extras:—Held: the employer had waived his right to refuse payment for extras unless ordered in writing.—MEYER v. a. — Provision for work to be done—When ordered in writing.—Where the contract did not provide that no extra work was to be allowed or paid for unless ordered in writing, but merely that the builder was to execute extra work, directed by the employer or his architect in writing, it was held that orders in writing were not a condition precedent.—DIAMOND v. MCANNANY (1865), 16 C. P. 9.—CAN.

b. — Extras to be agreed in writing—Payment conditional on production of writing.—Under a building contract, it was agreed that no extras should be permitted or allowed unless agreed upon in writing & that the writing should be produced before payment therefor. In an action to recover payment for extras:—Held: there could be no recovery for extras claimed, no writing therefor having been produced.—OLDERSHAW v. GARNER (1876), 38 U. C. R. 37.—CAN.

c. — Provision requiring express order—& express agreement for payment—Proof requisite.—Where the contract provided that no extras were to be allowed unless expressly ordered, & payments for same expressly agreed for in writing by the proprietors or architects:—Held: a writing must be proved.—WOOD v. 210. ——— Plea withdrawn.]—Pltf. contracted to carry out sewerage works for defts. In consequence of orders the work was varied & rendered much more expensive. The engineer had given no final certificate, & many of the extras were not ordered in writing, but defts. had withdrawn their plea of no certificate & pltf. had withdrawn a charge of misconduct:—Held: upon that state of the pleadings, the referee could deal with the extras on their merits.—JACKSON v. ROMFORD RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL (1909), 73 J. P. 248.

211. ——— Claim for extras referred to arbitration—Power of arbitrator to dispense with condition.]—A contractor agreed to construct a reservoir for a municipal corp. at a fixed price in accordance with the specification. The work had to be done to the satisfaction of the corp.'s engineer, with such additions, alterations, and variations as might from time to time be directed by the corp. or the engineer as provided by the specification. The specification provided that the corp. were not to become liable for the payment of any charge for additions, alterations, or deviations unless instructions for them were given in writing by the engineer. It also provided that in case any dispute should arise, either during the progress of the works or after the determination of the contract, as to the construction of the contract, or as to any matter or thing arising thereunder, or as to any objection by the contractor to any certificate, finding, decision, requisition, or opinion of the engineer, such dispute was to be referred to the arbn. & final decision of a single arbitrator, & either party might demand an immediate determination of the dispute. Disputes arose during the progress of the works as to requirements by the engineer for executing certain portions of the work in a particular manner & with certain materials. The contractor contended that these requirements were extras, for which he was entitled to be paid in addition to the contract price. The engineer refused to give written orders for these items, on the ground that they were in accordance with the contract. The contractor carried out the work as ordered. On the completion of the contract the matter was referred to arbn. The arbitrator found that the requirements were not in accordance with the contract, that the engineer improperly refused to give orders in writing for same as extras, & that in deciding against the claim of the contractor the engineer did not act fairly or impartially, but had no dishonest motive, & he awarded certain sums to be paid to the contractor in respect of these items:—Held: upon these findings the arbitrator had power to award that the items in question should be paid for as extras, notwithstanding the absence of any orders in writing by the engineer.—*BRODIE v. 212. What amounts to—Orders given before additional work performed—Subsequent letters, certificates & final valuation.]—By agreement under seal, between pltf. of the one part, & defts. guardians of the poor, of the other part, after reciting (inter alia) that pltf. had proposed to contract to erect the workhouse at B., & perform all the works particularised in a specification prepared by S. & M., the architects, for £5,500, pltf. in consideration of the payments to be made to him, agreed with defts. that he would, in a workmanlike manner, do all the works mentioned in the specification, at the times therein mentioned, & would completely finish the whole by June 24, 1840, that if the architects should think proper to make any alterations or additions in the progress of the works, they should give to pltf. written instructions for same, signed by them, & pltf. should not be considered as having authority to do such additional works without such written instructions, & in consideration of the premises, defts. agreed with pltf. that they would pay him £5,500. The declaration, after setting out the deed, averred, that pltf., duly & to the satisfaction of the architects, executed all the works contracted to be done for the £5,500, & that, during the progress of the works, the architects required & authorised him to make certain additions thereto, "to wit, by & by means of certain written instructions, to wit, signed by the architects, confirmatory of, & ratifying & establishing, the requisition & authority so given to the pltf.," & that pltf., duly & to the satisfaction of the architects, executed all the additional works so required by them, & that they duly made a valuation thereof, & certified same to defts. The declaration then stated that defts. had taken possession of & accepted all the works as & for work done under & in pursuance of the agreement, & alleged, as a breach, the non-payment, as well of the £5,500 as also of the sum due for additions. Pltf. had proceeded to execute the works, & while they were in progress the architects required him to execute additional works, & during the progress of the works, the architects, from time to time, delivered to pltf. certificates, in the form of letters, signed by them & addressed to the clerk of the board of guardians, stating that the board might safely advance £ . . . to pltf., on account would be allowed or paid for, which were done without an order from the engineer in writing, nor unless the total payment for such additions should have been previously ascertained & certified by such engineer & unless distinctly authorised by writing under the hand of the Minister for Public Works:—Held: conditions precedent.—*SMYTH v. k. ——— Provision for valuation of additions & omissions—& increase or diminution of contract price.]—The contract provided that a fair & reasonable valuation of work added or omitted should be made by the architect, & that the sum payable should be increased or diminished by such amount, provided that, where the amount was not agreed upon, the contractor should proceed with the work on the written order of the architect, & that the amount payable therefor should be fixed as further provided:—Held: alterations only required a written order where the architect & contractor differed as to the valuation.—*MUNRO v. l. ——— Employer looking on & not objecting.]—It was stipulated with a contractor that no additional work should be done, with a view to extra payment, without a written order from the employer or his surveyor. of works executed, & certificates in this form, to the amount of £5,000, were given. No written directions were given by the architects for the additional works, except that letters were in evidence signed, some by S. & others by M., in which allusion was incidentally made to some of the additional works in progress, & containing suggestions as to the mode of executing them, & save also that, long after the works were complete, the architects, on the application of pltf., made a valuation of the additional works, which they estimated at £3,133, & signed a paper, stating that to be the amount of their valuation:—Held: the deed, in requiring written directions, meant written directions before the additional work should be done, in which sense the averment in the declaration was to be understood, & that the certificates, letters, & final valuation of the architects did not amount to such directions.—LAMPRELL v. DARKE (1861), 3 F. & F. 65, N. P.; subsequent proceedings (1862), 6 L. T. 291.

215. — Progress certificates.—A contract for the construction of large iron buildings for a lump sum, contained a clause that no alterations or additions should be made without a written order from the employers’ engineer, & no allegation by the contractors of knowledge of, or acquiescence in, such alterations or additions on the part of the employers, their engineers or inspectors, should be accepted or available as equivalent to the certificate of the engineer, or as in any way superseding the necessity of such certificate as the sole warrant for such alterations & additions. During the execution of the contract the contractors alleged it was impossible to cast certain iron trough-girders of a specified weight, & subsequently they were allowed to erect girders of a much heavier weight, & the actual weights were entered in the engineer’s certificates issued from time to time authorising interim payments. On the completion of the work the contractor claimed a considerable amount in excess of the contract price for the extra weight of metal supplied:—Held: the engineer’s certificates were not written orders, & the claim was excluded by the terms of the contract.—*THARSIS SULPHUR & COPPER CO. v. 219. ——— “Emergency defects.”]—By a contract, dated Dec. 31, 1908, A. agreed to construct sewers & manholes in accordance with specifications & bills of quantities, the contract being similar in form to that sanctioned by the Royal Institute of British Architects. A. asserted that he completed the work in accordance with the contract on Jan. 12, 1910, & gave notice to the architect to that effect. On Jan. 15, A. was adjudicated bkpt., & on Feb. 1 pltf. was appointed trustee. On Feb. 5, the architect gave notice of certain defects in the manholes, & called upon pltf. to remedy them by making them watertight. The notice further stated that unless the defects were so made good the cost of making them good would be deducted from the retention money, pursuant to clause 17 of the contract. Pltf. sued for a balance alleged to be due in respect of the agreed price of contract work plus extras, & for a declaration that he was entitled to another sum which would become due as retention money. Defts. alleged that the decision of the architect as to defects was final & binding upon both parties, pursuant to clause 16 which provided for defects during the progress of the work, & that upon the true construction of the contract it was the duty of the contractor to make the manholes of the works watertight, & that he should have selected suitable bricks for the purpose, & they counter-claimed damages:—Held: (1) so far as it was necessary to decide it, clause 16 related to emergency defects arising in course of the work as to which the decision of the architect was final & binding; (2) clause 17 referred to defects appearing after completion as to which the parties were entitled to the more deliberate judgment of the architect, which judgment, having regard to a later clause, was subject to an appeal to an arbitrator; (3) the architect having approved a sample of the bricks to be used for the manholes the contractor was not responsible because the manholes were not watertight, & the error was in design not in construction; (4) pltf. was entitled to judgment.—ADCOCK’S TRUSTEE v. BRIDGE RURAL DISTRICT COUNCIL (1911), 75 J. P. 241.

b. q. ——— Tender incorporating general conditions.]—The general conditions & specifications provided that the contractor should be bound to maintain the works “up to a period of 6 months, at a price to be tendered for at per month.” The tender was to maintain, in accordance with the specifications & general conditions: included in the schedule to the tender was an item, “Maintenance according to specification, £150.”—Held: a tender to maintain the works for 6 months for £150.—SMYTH v. R. (1882), 1 N. Z. L. R. C. A. 80.—N.Z.

r. ——— Defects due to design.]—Maintenance clauses need not be construed as imposing an obligation to maintain works inherently defective owing to their original design, where such risk was not contemplated by the parties.—LAN YEONG WOOD v. STANDARD OIL CO. OF NEW YORK (1908), 3 Hong Kong L. R. 53.—HONG KONG.

s. Defect clause—Liability to reconstruct—Damage by flood.]—Builders had contracted to secure the work from injury by inclemency of the weather, fire, accident, design, or otherwise, until its acceptance, to keep the foundations dry, & to make good any damage that might occur during progress of the work not due to negligence or lack of judgment of the architects. The building subsided owing to the backing up of water, through a sewer into the basement, which could have been prevented by a back water trap not mentioned in the specifications:—Held: under the terms of the contract, the contractors were bound to repair the damage at their own expense, with as little delay as possible.—GRACE v. OSLER (1911), 19 W. L. R. 109, 326.—CAN.

t. ——— Liability for reparation of loss.]—LONDON & LEPRI SHIPING Co. v. DUFFAS & Co. (1841), 3 Duml. (Ct. of Sess.) 929.—SCOT.

220. ——— Power of new surveyor to act on—Completion certified.]—Where the surveyor, who supervised the construction of sewage works, has certified completion, his successor, as surveyor for the time being, can act under the clause for maintenance or repair of defects.—CUNLIFFE v. HAMPTON WICK LOCAL BOARD (1893), 9 T. L. R. 378; 2 Hudson’s B. C. 4th ed. 250, 258, D. C.

221. ——— Effect of final certificate on liability under.]—In a building contract an architect was nominated, who was given a general control over the works, which were to be carried out in accordance with his directions & to his satisfaction. By a clause in the contract he was empowered to order the removal of improper materials, & the re-execution of work not done in accordance with the drawings & the specification. By another clause any defects which might appear within twelve months from the completion of the works, arising, in the opinion of the architect, from materials or workmanship not in accordance with the drawings & specification, were upon the written direction of the architect to be made good by the contractor, at his own cost, unless the architect should decide that he ought to be paid for same. A further clause, after providing for payment of the contractor under certificates issued by the architect, declared that “no certificate shall be considered conclusive evidence as to the sufficiency of any work or materials to which it relates, nor shall it relieve the contractor from his liability to make good all defects as provided by this contract.” The final clause provided that in case any dispute or difference should arise as to the construction of the contract, or any matter or thing arising therefrom, except certain specified things, notice thereof should forthwith be given, & such dispute or difference should be referred to arbn., & the arbitrator should have power to open up, review, & revise any certificate, opinion, decision, requisition, or notice, save in regard to the matters expressly excepted, & to determine all matters in dispute of which notice should have been given. In an action by the contractor against the building owner to recover sums due on certificates issued by the architect, deft. set up by way of defence & counterclaim that the work done & materials supplied were defective & unsuitable, & not in accordance with the terms of the contract:—Held: (1) as the arbn. clause destroyed the finality of the certificates, deft. was entitled to set up the defence & counterclaim to the action; (2) (STIRLING, L.J.), the provision that no certificate should be considered conclusive evidence as provided that the contractors should first have the right to remedy any work, & should without delay carry out the order of the engineers in that respect; that, should the contractors fail to carry out such orders promptly, the employers might replace defective work or take it over. On the facts:—Held: the employers had not taken over the work & the engineers were not authorised so to do.—MERRIAM v. PUBLIC PARKS BOARD OF PORTAGE LA PRAIRIE, [1912] 20 W. L. R. 603; 1 W. W. R. 1082.—CAN.

“Omissions & defects.”—Whether restricted to default of contractor.]—The contractor agreed to make good, at his own cost, all omissions & defects appearing or arising subsequent to the final certificate of completion:—Held: (1) only liable to make good omissions & defects due to his own default; (2) the agreement was not one for maintenance & repair.—ROUX v. COLONIAL to the sufficiency of work or materials to which it referred was general, & the clause could not be read as applying only to the liability of the contractor to make good defects.—ROBINS v. GODDARD, [1905] 1 K. B. 294; 74 L. J. K. B. 167; 92 L. T. 10; 21 T. L. R. 120, C. A.

222. Notice to remedy defects—Failure to give—Restrictions on liability.—Defts.' predecessors in title obtained an Act for the formation of a road which was to pass under a railway by means of a bridge. By the Act it was provided that the undertakers should not enter upon or interfere with the railway, or execute any work whatsoever under or affecting same, until they should have delivered to the co. plans, drawings & specifications of the works intended to be executed under or affecting the railway & works thereof, such plans, etc., to describe the manner of executing the intended works, & the materials to be used for the purpose, nor until those plans, etc., should have been examined & approved by the engineer of the co.; & that "the same works should be executed & thereafter maintained by the undertakers at their sole expense in all things, according to such approved plans, etc., under the superintendence

& to the reasonable satisfaction of the engineer of the co." It was further provided that the undertakers should from time to time be responsible for & make good to the co. all costs, losses, damages, & expenses which might be occasioned to the co. by reason of the execution or failure of any of the intended works or of any act or omission of the undertakers, etc. The bridge was constructed of brick piers & iron pillars, of iron girders resting upon the piers & pillars, & of timber & woodwork. In the construction of the bridge, the brick & ironwork was done by defts.' predecessors in title under the superintendence of pltfs.' engineer. The timber & woodwork, the superstructure, was done by pltfs.' engineer at the expense of the undertakers & with materials provided by them. The structure was completed in 1864. In 1872 certain repairs became necessary to the superstructure of the bridge, which repairs were executed by pltf. co. who claimed to be reimbursed their outlay in so doing by defts., although defts. had had no notice nor any knowledge or means of ascertaining that the repairs were necessary:—Held: pltfs. were not entitled to recover the expenses so incurred.—LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RY. CO. v. FLOWER (1875), 1 C. P. D. 77; 45 L. J. Q. B. 51; 33 L. T. 687.

SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

223. What amounts to—Substitution of materials—Ratification or assent.—On a contract to build for pltfs. a steamboat of iron, the builder, deft., having with their knowledge, substituted in part wood, & the vessel having been received & fitted up by pltfs., & after two trial trips taken to a foreign seaport, & there retained some months, & never returned, but resold at a great loss:—Held: it was for the jury whether there had been an assent to the alterations, or a ratification, by retention for an unreasonable time, or an acceptance of the vessel as altered, & if so, pltfs. could not recover damages.—BLYTH v. SAMUDA (1861), 2 F. & F. 430, N. P.

c. — Certificate as to defects—Whether written certificate essential.—Pltfs. agreed to build a house for deft., a portion of their remuneration to be retained by deft. for a month after completion, & until all the defects which the architect should within that period certify to exist should be remedied:—Held: the certificate as to defects need not be in writing, that not being expressly required.—OLDERSHAW v. GARNER (1876), 38 U. C. R. 37.—CAN.

223 i. — Substitution of materials.
—A deviation from specification consisted in the use by the builder of milled lime instead of cement mortar as specified in the contract:—Held: the builder was in breach of his contract.—STEEL v. YOUNG, [1907] S. C. 360.—SCOT.

223 ii. — — More expensive material substituted.—In an action for damages for breach of a building contract it is no defence that although certain materials called for in the specification were omitted, in other respects the material supplied was better & more expensive than the contract called for.—GREENE v. WALSH (1877), 6 Nfld. L. R. 135.—NFLD.

f. — Substantial portion of building not erected.—It was disputed whether certain items, part of a building to be erected, were included in the contract:—Held: a substantial portion of the building had not been erected & the contract was unperformed.—MYERS v. ROOPE (1911), 17 W. L. R. 501.—CAN.

g. — Deviations passed by architect.—A builder contracted to Subsequent depreciation in value.—Defts., ship-builders, carrying on business near Sunderland, entered into an agreement to build a steamer for pltfs. By the terms of the agreement, the contractors were to keep the vessel insured until delivery to pltfs., & the vessel was to remain at their risk until legally transferred, & the contractors were to do all to make the vessel complete & equal to the best sea-going vessel of her class. The steamer, having received her engines in the Tyne, left the Tyne in charge of a pilot employed by defts. for Sunderland to be completed there for her trial trip & for delivery. When off the Durham coast the vessel went upon some rocks, but was floated off & taken round to the river Wear & docked for repairs, & certain repairs were there erect a building in accordance with certain plans & in conformity with a detailed estimate of prices. The employers' architect during the course of erection sanctioned deviations from the details set forth in the estimate. As the building proceeded the architect granted the usual certificates:—Held: the builder was not in breach.—FORREST v. SCOTTISH COUNTY INVESTMENT CO., LTD., [1916] S. C. (H. L.) 28.—SCOT.

h. — Plans not followed.—It was required by specifications that a track should be finished to the required grades in every particular, & that the decision of the engineer on any matter connected with the grading should be final:—Held: the construction of the track a foot lower than as shown in the plans was a deviation.—COURTNEY v. PROVINCIAL EXHIBITION COMMISSION (1906), 41 N. S. R. 71.—CAN.

executed by defts. Pltfs. accepted delivery under an agreement reserving any rights as to compensation which they might possess. The vessel's first voyage was to Havre, where she collided with the dock side & sustained injury, which pltfs. attributed to the previous accident. The vessel having been repaired, pltfs. brought an action in respect of the cost of the depreciation in her reputation & for repairs:—Held: there had been a breach of contract, & pltfs. were entitled to such a sum as would make the vessel equal to contract, which they had got, as the market value of the vessel had not been affected.—SAVARY, YOUNG & Co. v. PRIESTMAN & Co. (1886), 2 T. L. R. 467, C. A.

l. — Whether default of contractor or employer.—SIDNEY BOAT & MOTOR MANUFACTURING Co. v. GILLIS (1909), 44 N. S. R. 152; 7 E. L. R. 518.—CAN.

m. Time of breach.—Declaration, that pltf. agreed to sell & deft. to buy certain land & put up a factory thereon, of the dimensions specified, & carry on there the manufacture of plated ware; that pltf. was ready to convey, yet deft. did not pay pltf., nor complete the purchase, but notified pltf. that he abandoned & would not perform the agreement, etc. Plea, on equitable grounds, that deft. made the agreement on behalf of himself & others, who were about to associate themselves as a co. to manufacture plated ware on the lot, & with the intention of procuring the land as a site for their factory in case the co. should decide to erect it thereon; that pltf. knew this when he made the agreement; & before any demand by pltf. for payment, & before any conveyance of the land, deft. & the others decided not to carry on the business, & gave notice thereof to pltf. & that they would not require the land, & that pltf. was released:—Held: the declaration was good, & the plea no answer to it.—DULLEA v. TAYLOR (1873), 34 U. C. R. 12.—CAN.

n. Work completed at a saving—Claim by contractor for difference.—A contractor, who abandons the execution of his contract, which is completed at a saving, cannot claim the difference between his contract price & the final cost of the works.—DUSSAULT & PAGEAU v. R. (1919), 58 S. C. R. 1; 44 D. L. R. 421.—CAN.

o. Pleading.—Held: on demurrer to the declaration on a special contract by deft. to build a house for pltf., it was unnecessary to set out the specifications in the declaration; but the approbation of the architect should have been averred, or the omission of it sufficiently excused.—MELVILLE v. CARPENTER (1853), 11 U. C. R. 130.—CAN.

p. —.]—To a declaration alleging that neither the work done nor the materials were to the satisfaction of the architect, defts. pleaded that certain of the work & materials provided by defts., under the superintendence of pltf., were subsequently disapproved of by the architect:—Held: bad.—MELVILLE v. CARPENTER (1853), 4 C. P. 159.—CAN.

q. —.]—To a summons & plaint setting out certain specific breaches of a building agreement, deft. pleaded, in effect, that everything was done by him according to the terms of the agreement:—Held: embarrassing.—SMYLY v. KELLY (1860), 12 Ir. Jur. 321.—IR.

r. Liability for — Defective plans.—The contractor cannot defend himself in an action against him by the owner of a building constructed contrary to building rules by alleging that the faults of construction arose from defects in the architect's plan, upon which plan the building was constructed, the contractor & the architect being responsible for these defects jointly & severally.—ROYAL ELECTRIC CO. v. WAND (1894), Q. R. 6 S. C. 398.—CAN.

s. — Contractor deprived of costs.—Pltf. sued for damages for the negligent construction of walls erected by deft.; the walls were built in a good & workmanlike manner, but were unable to stand the outward pressure of the roof as constructed; pltf. could not claim to have relied on deft.'s plan, but it probably contributed to the accident:—Held: though deft. was entitled to recover balance of the contract price he should be deprived of his costs.—HAGAR v. HAGAR (1902), 1 O. W. R. 78.—CAN.

t. — Non-performance — Contract for fixed sum.—If a person contracts to do work for a fixed sum & fails to perform his contract, he is liable in damages; the fact that he made the offer under an error in calculation will be no excuse to him.—SEATON BRICK & TILE Co., LTD. v. MITCHELL (1900), 2 F. (Ct. of Sess.) 550; 37 Sc. L. R. 400.—SCOT.

a. — Departure from specification—Defective work.—Held: (1) deft. was entitled to nominal damages because pltfs. had put in cheaper baths than the specifications called for; (2) deft. was entitled to damages for defective work in several respects.—ELFORD & CORNISH v. THOMPSON (1912), 19 W. L. R. 809; 1 W. W. R. 409; 1 D. L. R. 1; 5 Sask. L. R. 96.

Plea of leave & license.—Defts. pleaded that the variations from the plans in the declaration mentioned were made by the leave & license of pltf. & his agent:—Held: plea bad; leave & license cannot be pleaded to a breach of contract.—LEONARD v. NORTHEY (1871), 22 C. P. 11.—CAN.

— As to time for completion.—See Part II., Sect. 3, ante.

— As to maintenance.—See Part VII., ante.

225. Onus of proof—On plaintiff.—In assumpsit, the declaration stated that deft. agreed to build houses according to a specification. Breach, that he did not build according to the specification. Plea, that deft. did build according to the specification:—Held: on this issue pltf. must begin & prove that deft. had not built according to the specification.—SMITH v. DAVIES (1836), 7 C. & P. 307, N. P.

c. — Acceptance.—Pltf. agreed to erect a building for deft. upon a lot owned by pltf.; there was a departure by pltf. from the pattern of the house as agreed upon for which deft. claimed compensation, but nevertheless went into occupation:—Held: an acceptance.—MACKISSOCK & THOMAS, LTD. v. BLACK (1912), 21 W. L. R. 424.—CAN.

d. — On declaration on a contract to build a boiler for pltf., alleging partial completion by testator before his death, & a promise by defts. as exors. to complete it. Plea, as to so much of the declaration as referred to alleged imperfections of material & workmanship, that after the occurrence thereof, & before suit, the boiler was taken by pltf. from defts., as exors., whereby, & by force of the contract set out in the declaration, defts. ceased to be liable in damages in respect of the causes of action to which the plea was pleaded:—Held: good.—LEONARD v. NORTHEY (1871), 22 C. P. 11.—CAN.

e. — Certain stone supplied by pltf. for a building for which deft. was the contractor, was not in accord with the specifications. Dft. had accepted the material, after it had been worked into proper form & condition, & placed it in position without objection until after the material had lost its character as chattels & had become part of the building. In an action for the price:—Held: pltf. was entitled to recover.—GARSON v. WATSON (1907), 5 W. L. R. 534.—CAN.

f. — Defective work.—Held: deft. was entitled to recover damages for bad workmanship upon his counterclaim, although pltf. was deprived of the balance of the contract price.—DONALDSON v. COLLINS (1912), 21 W. L. R. 56; 2 W. W. R. 47; 3 D. L. R. 352.—CAN.

h. — If a contractor's work is not well executed, he is liable in damages towards the proprietor without further protest.—CAGNON v. MAHEUX (1912), Q. R. 24 K. B. 129.—CAN.

k. — A contractor for laying brick upon carpentry erected by another, cannot justify his own unsatisfactory work by complaining of the woodwork. It is his duty to protect the proprietor & to refuse to carry out his contract unless the proprietor assumes the risk.—CHEVALIER v. TOMPKINS (1915), Q. R. 48 S. C. 53.—CAN.

PART VIII.—BREACH OF THE CONTRACT.

226. Measure of damages—Loss of profits on another contract.]—In an action by three plffs. for a breach of contract in not completing certain works, whereby they were prevented from fulfilling a contract made by them with another firm consisting of two of themselves:—Held: plffs. were entitled to recover as special damage the loss of profit on their contract although it could not be enforced at law, owing to the community of the parties, & was void by Stat. Frauds.—WATERS v.

l. — Work passed by proprietor's inspector.]—In an action by a contractor for payment of an alleged balance of the contract price, the proprietor proved that none of the drains in the whole work had been dug to the depth contracted for:—Held: the work having been accepted by the inspector, he was not entitled to repetition or to damages for the insufficient nature of the work.—MULDOON v. PRINGLE (1882), 19 Sc. L. R. 668.—SCOT.

m. — Defects. counterclaim for damages because a certain building, part of the plant constructed by pltf., fell down, should be dismissed, it being admitted that the design was faulty & all the work & material supplied by pltf. on this building having been inspected & passed by the defts.' inspectors & engineers, the burden of showing that defects in pltf.'s work or material caused the building to fall was on defts. & that onus had not been satisfied.—MANDERS v. MOOSE JAW CITY (1914), 28 W. L. R. 821.—CAN.

n. — Failure of employer to inspect.]—Resp. constructed a cement tank or reservoir on the applt.'s farm. Applt. did not inspect the work on its completion, but accepted resp.'s statement that it was properly carried out, and paid for it. It was subsequently found to be defective:—Held: applt. was entitled in the circumstances to recover damages arising out of the defects in the work.—HAWKE v. LAGAL (1913), 16 W. A. L. R. 6.—AUS.

o. — Failure to object during progress—Subsequent partial destruction.]—A. contracted to put up the brickwork of certain houses on B.'s ground according to contract & at a specified rate of payment. After the walls were built, but before the roof was on, a severe gale blew down a portion of them. In a question who was liable for the loss:—Held: the risk was with the employer, & he was barred from pleading breach of contract by his having failed to object to it during the progress of the work, though he was aware of it.—M'INTYRE v. CLOW (1875), 12 Sc. L. R. 196.—SCOT.

p. — Failure to complete within specified time.]—Where a contractor fails to complete the work within the specified time, he is answerable in damages.—DAMPHOUSSE v. VALIQUETTE (1915), Q. R. 24 K. B. 62.—CAN.

q. —]—Held: in the case of the purchase of a vessel paid for by instalments while building, a purchaser was not barred from claiming damages for non-delivery at the date contracted for, by accepting delivery at a later date.—SUTHERLAND v. MONTROSE SHIPBUILDING CO. (1860), 22 Dunl. (Ct. of Sess.) 665.—SCOT.

r. — Extension of time—Work subsequently accepted—Right of set-off.]—The first count alleged that plffs. agreed to do certain work for deft., to be completed by Nov. 15, 1854, & to be paid for in a certain manner; plffs. commenced the work, & before completing it, by agreement dated Dec. 16, 1854, between plffs. & deft., after reciting the former agreement, which was to remain in force, etc., plffs. promised in all respects to execute the works by certain days therein specified; & if plffs. were not authorised, before Jan. 1 then next, by deft.'s agent to proceed with certain work therein mentioned, a certain extension of time should be allowed. After the execution of the agreement, & before the time limited, deft. hindered & delayed plffs., etc., by means of which they were put to extra expense, yet they performed the work in accordance with the plans & specifications, etc., & deft. accepted it. A verdict was taken by consent, subject to arbitration. The arbitrators awarded non-performance by plffs. of the work by the time specified:—Held: the second contract did not alter or annul the condition precedent to plffs.' right to be paid on the first contract; & the arbitrators having found that plffs. did not complete the work within the time specified, deft. was entitled to a verdict upon the first count; but the subsequent acceptance of the work by deft. entitled plffs. to recover on the common counts.—BROWN v. WYTHES (1862), 11 C. P. 561.—CAN.

s. — Subsequent agreement to pay daily sum for delay.]—Defts. contracted to instal an elevator by Nov. 1. Some delay took place & on Dec. 3 defts. gave a written guaranty to pay $15 for each day after the time elevator remained in incomplete running order. It never worked satisfactorily & pltf. acquiesced in another attempt of defts. to make it satisfactory:—Held: this was not a novation or an accord & satisfaction; amount paid must be repaid & damages must be assessed.—PORTER v. PARKIN ELEVATOR CO. (1909), 13 O. W. R. 1053.—CAN.

t. — Failure of employer to deliver material.]—CURLEY v. NEW TORONTO (1915), 8 O. W. N. 274.—CAN.

u. — Estoppel by conduct of employer.]—SIDNEY BOAT & MOTOR MANUFACTURING CO. v. GILLIS (1909), 44 N. S. R. 152; 7 E. L. R. 518.—CAN.

w. — "Vices du sol."]—The builder is responsible for the "vices du sol," although he be bound by his contract to follow certain plans & specifications under the direction of an architect employed by the proprietor.—BROWN v. LAURIE (1854), 5 L. C. R. 65.—CAN.

y. — Adding storey—Defective temporary covering.]—Where a contractor, engaged in adding a storey to a building, undertakes to protect the building by means of a temporary covering, he is answerable for all damages which may ensue by reason of stress of weather, however extraordinary it may be.—BOIVIN v. L'ACQUET (1915), Q. R. 25 K. B. 69.—CAN.

z. — Defect discovered after payment.]—An engineer furnished new engines & repaired the boiler, etc., of a steam-vessel, & subsequently received payment therefor; on the steam vessel resuming her station the machinery frequently went wrong, & different parts of it failed, occasioning frequent repairs:—Held: payment of the price of the engine would not preclude the owners from insisting in their action for damages, if the defects could not have been discovered prior to the payment.—NAPIER v. CAMPBELL (1841), 3 Dunl. (Ct. of Sess.) 879.—SCOT.

a. — Employer not damnified.]—Held: deft.'s counterclaim for damages, being much more than offset by the difference between the value of the building & what he had paid for it, should not be allowed.—

b. — Negligence of contractor.]—In a contract to build the walls & foundation of a house for deft., a window was misplaced by the negligence of the contractor:—Held: deft. was entitled to damages therefor.—IREDALE v. DREWERY (1912), 19 W. L. R. 931; 4 D. L. R. 868.—CAN.

c. Failure to accept owner's terms for taking over work.]—Held: defts. were entitled to recover on a counterclaim for defective materials & construction, pltf. having failed to accept terms upon which defts. offered to take the work off his hands.—McQUARRIE v. CALNEK (1895), 27 N. S. R. 483.—CAN.

d. — Where delay caused by both parties—Loss caused by contractor's delay only.]—Where the conduct of both parties had contributed to the delay in executing a building contract:—Held: plffs. were chargeable only with three months of the total delay, defts. being entitled only to the actual loss & damage occasioned by the three months' delay.—McLEOD (NORMAN), LTD. v. ORILLIA WATER, LIGHT, & POWER COMMISSION (1919), 17 O. W. N. 124.—CAN.

e. Measure of damages—Difference in value between work contracted for & performed.]—Held: the measure of damages was the difference between the value of the work as performed by plffs. & the value it would have had if it had been performed in a proper & workmanlike manner.—BAIN & TORREY v. EAGLE (1914), 29 W. L. R. 335.—CAN.

f. — Allowance for work executed.]—In an action by resp. for the price of work executed under a building contract, applt., who had completed the work, counterclaimed for damages under a provision in the specification, in respect of delay in completion:—Held: in estimating the damage recoverable by applt., resp. was entitled to an allowance of the value of the work actually executed.—WILLIAMSON v. MURDOCH (1912), 14 W. A. L. R. 51.—AUS.

g. — Excess of cost of completion over contract price.]—Pltf. agreed to do carpentering work in a house being built for deft. for a certain sum. He commenced the work, but left to allow the plasterers to do their work. Pltf. refused to return, on the ground that the plaster was damp, though there was other work inside the house to be done. Dft. employed another to finish the work:—Held: deft. was entitled to recover the amount paid to another to finish the work over & above the contract price.—KLUGMAN v. MITCHELL (1905), 2 W. L. R. 522.—CAN.

of the building may also be compensated for quite aside from the question of profits.—CANADA FOUNDRY CO., LTD. v. EDMONTON PORTLAND CEMENT CO., [1918] 3 W. W. R. 866; 43 D. L. R. 583.—CAN.

k. — Loss of rents.]—Deft. agreed with pltf. to exchange five houses, then in course of erection, for certain lands of pltf.'s, the houses to be completed by a certain date:—Held: the loss of rents which might have been obtained for the houses if completed at the proper time was a proper measure of damages, the contracting parties having known that the houses were intended to be rented.—SMITH v. TENNANT (1890), 20 O. R. 180.—CAN.

l. — .]—Pltfs. agreed with deft. to do the plumbing, heating, roofing, etc., for a terrace of six houses in course of erection by deft. The agreement did not state when the work was to be completed:—Held: as no time was specified for doing the work, pltfs. could be charged with delay only from the expiration of the time given to them by a notice from deft. to proceed with the work; & as, practically, from that time, deft. took charge of the work himself, pltfs. could not be held responsible for any loss of rentals that resulted.—ELFORD & CORNISH v. THOMPSON (1912), 19 W. L. R. 809; 1 W. W. R. 409; 1 D. L. R. 1; 5 Sask. L. R. 96.—CAN.

m. — Where liquidated damages provided for.]—The contractor's employment had been terminated under a forfeiture clause in the contract:—Held: the employers were not entitled to recover for loss of rents after the building should have been completed, & other items of damage of that class; such matters were covered by the provision in the contract as to liquidated damages for delay in completion.—GRACE v. OSLER (1911), 19 W. L. R. 109, 326.—CAN.

n. — Loss of trade.]—Pltf. agreed to lath & plaster an extension of deft.'s hotel which was, to his knowledge, urgently required for occupation by visitors, etc., & he well understood that the contract was one where each day was a matter of consideration & where time was a most essential & strict condition. The lath work was promptly completed, but pltf. could not proceed with the plastering because he had not secured the necessary material:—Held: deft. was entitled to damages for the loss of trade consequent on the delay.—VOGAN v. BARRY (1908), 7 W. L. R. 811.—CAN.

o. — Damage to implements.]—Owners entered upon promises in course of erection under a building contract; the buildings collapsed owing to defective construction:—Held: they were not entitled to damages for loss of business owing to the delay after the collapse, there being no definite evidence to sustain a claim therefor; nor were they entitled to damages for implements injured in the fall of the building.—COCKSHUTT PLOW CO. v. ALBERTA BUILDING CO. (1910), 13 W. L. R. 234.—CAN.

q. — Defective construction of mill.]—Held: defts. were entitled to damages suffered by reason of the loss of the use of the mill during the sawing season, but pltf. was not liable for damages not in contemplation of the parties, or not being the immediate result of the breach of contract, such as additional cost of sawing, or logs sold at a loss.—BRUHM v. FORD (1900), 33 N. S. R. 323.—CAN.

229 i. — Ship improperly repaired—Loss by detention.]—Ship-builders agreed to repair & lengthen a whale ship. The ship was delivered as complete, & thereupon sent to the whale-fishing at D. Straits, but, in consequence of the deficiency of the work, was obliged to return to port, & was there detained for twenty-two days undergoing repairs; having then lost the proper season for the Straits, she was sent to G.:—Held: the ship-builders were liable for any loss suffered by the vessel not being able to go to D. Straits, or to reach G. at the proper fishing season.—STRACHAN & GAVIN v. PATON (1828), 3 Wils. & S. 19.—SCOT.

r. — Ship not repaired—Cost of temporary repairs—Loss of profits—Delay in fostering trade.]—A contractor who undertakes to do certain repairs to a steamboat is responsible for the damages caused resulting from the non-execution of the work & consisting in: the cost of temporary repairs, including the loss sustained by the delay in effecting them; the loss of profit which the boat would have earned if it had been properly repaired; the cost of the work required to put her in good condition. The loss resulting from delay in fostering trade cannot be included in the damages.—CHATEAUGUAY & BEAUMARNOIS NAVIGATION CO. v. PONTBRIAND CO. (1909), Q. R. 37 S. C. 392.—CAN.

s. — Non-delivery of ship—Loss of season's profits.]—Defts. agreed to build & equip a scow to be delivered on the opening of navigation of the river T. in the spring of 1914. Default in delivery was made:—Held: pltfs. were entitled to damages for the non-delivery of the scow for the whole of the season of 1914.—DONOVAN v. CHATHAM BRIDGE CO. (1915), 8 O. W. N. 235.—CAN.

t. — Ship not built to specification—Deficiency in carrying capacity.]—Held: the damage to the purchaser ought to be estimated by deducting from the total price a sum proportional to the difference between the actual & the stipulated capacity.—WALKER, HENDERSON & CO. v. HUTCHISON (1885), 22 Sc. L. R. 903.—SCOT.

b. — Improper materials used in building church.]—The work in question was the building of a church:—Held: a reduction of the contract price by an amount equal to the difference in value between the bad material & that which should have been used was not an adequate measure of the set-off to which the proprietors were entitled.—WOOD v. STRINGER (1890), 20 O. R. 148.—CAN.

c. — Contract for laying water-pipe.]—A. employed B. to furnish pipes for supplying water to his house. B. supplied poor material & inefficient labour. A. put the matter right & then claimed for removal of the pipes, for repayment of £300 paid on account, £200 for damages:—Held: he was entitled to succeed.—M'DONALD v. MACKIE & CO. (1831), 5 Wils. & S. 462.—SCOT.

d. — Defective ditch.]—Defts. were the owners of mining properties & contracted with pltf. to build a ditch to carry water to defts.' property. He did not fulfil his contract in a proper manner:—Held: defts. were entitled to whatever expenses they were put to in getting the ditch into proper working order.—BANNERMAN v. DETROIT YUKON MINING CO. (1907), 6 W. L. R. 704.—CAN.

e. — Defective oven in bake-house—Injury to adjoining building.]—Deft. contracted with pltf. to erect a building, including a bake-oven, for a stated price. The arch of the oven was so constructed as to be in danger of falling. Pltf. went on using the oven for about six months from its completion, when a fire occurred in the bake-house in which the oven was, injuring the bake-house & the main building adjoining it:—Held: pltf. was confined to the damages to the oven itself.—BAKER v. ATKINS (1910), 13 W. L. R. 327; 15 B. C. R. 177.—CAN.

f. — Defective silo—Duty of employer to minimise loss.]—Pltf. agreed to build a silo for deft.; the work was badly done & deft. claimed for damages sustained through not being provided with a silo for the preservation of a crop of corn which in expectation of its construction he planted & cultivated:—Held: the amount awarded deft. should be reduced as he did nothing to minimise his loss by disposing of his corn.—RICK v. 230. — Improper materials in building house—Loss by rebuilding—Loss of ground rent.—Deft. supplied pltf. with mortar for some building operations; subsequently the building was condemned by the London County Council, on the ground that the mortar was bad:—Held: pltf. was entitled to recover from deft. the cost of pulling ready until Aug. 6. The elevator was expressly stated to be a passenger elevator; there was no evidence that pltf. knew that it was intended to be used also as an elevator for the carriage of goods:—Held: (1) for this period of delay deft. co. were entitled to damages, although the delay for the most part arose through no fault of pltf., but through occurrences which they failed to guard themselves against in their contract; (2) the damages recoverable were such as would naturally result from the breach of the contract, as the ordinary consequence of such breach, or, in the circumstances of the particular case, might reasonably be presumed to have been in the contemplation of both parties at the time they made the contract as the probable result of the breach of it; (3) deft. co. were not entitled to include in their damages the wages of men employed to carry merchandise, the rental of a hoist for the same purpose, & extra light during the hours these men worked; (4) deft. co. were entitled to damages for loss of business & inconvenience, including contingent or speculative damages.—STEVEN v. PRYCE-JONES, LTD. (1913), 25 W. L. R. 172.—CAN.

k. Assessment of—By court.—A contract provided for payment of $20 a day for delay in completion, & that should the contractor be delayed by any cause which he could not reasonably be expected to control, the architect should give the contractor such extension of time as, in his, the architect's, opinion, was fair & just:—Held: the architect, by his absolute refusal to deal with the question of damages, which necessarily involved the question of allowances for delays, abdicated his quasi-judicial office: & the ascertainment of the amount of the damages, involving the allowance for delays, was for the ct.—WATTS v. MCLEAY (1911), 19 W. L. R. 916.—CAN.

l. Liability of employer—Crown.—A., the proper officer of a Govt. department, promised to appoint a suitable person to inspect the timber for use under a contract at an agreed place. The inspector was not appointed until a considerable time afterwards, & by reason of such delay the suppliant had to pay a higher rate of freight on the timber than he otherwise would have had to pay, & was compelled to carry on his work in more unfavourable weather & at greater cost, for which he claimed damages:—Held: the Crown was not bound under the contract to have the inspection made at any particular place; & in view of Govt. Railways Act, 1881, s. 98, & the express terms of the contract, A. had no power to vary or add to its terms, or to bind the Crown by any new promise.—MAYES v. R. (1891), 2 Exch. C. R. 403; 23 S. C. R. 454.—CAN.

m. — — ——A specification provided that the comrs. of a Govt. railway would provide & fix cast iron columns, iron girders, & other iron work required for supporting a roof. The contractor was unable to proceed with the execution of his work, in consequence of the neglect of the comrs. to supply the iron girders, etc., owing to which delay he suffered loss & damage:—Held: the delay on the part of the comrs. acting for the Crown to provide & fix the cast iron columns, etc., was a breach of the contract, & the Crown was liable for the damages resulting from such breach.—ISBESTER v. R. (1877), 7 S. C. R. 696.—CAN.

n. — — — Company incorporated by statute—Plans to be submitted for approval.—A co. was incorporated by a statute which enacted that before the co. should commence the construction of the works authorised, the plans should be submitted to & approved by the Governor in Council. Plans were submitted, but were not approved. By its petition of right the co. claimed damages against the Crown for breach of contract to approve the plans:—Held: there was no contract or undertaking by the Crown that the Governor in Council would approve the plans, & the Crown was not liable.—LAKE CHAMPLAIN & ST. LAWRENCE SHIP CANAL CO. v. R. (1917), 16 Exch. C. R. 125; 35 D. L. R. 670; affd. 54 S. C. R. 461.—CAN.

o. — — — Abandonment & substitution of work.—The suppliants contracted with the Crown to do certain work on the C. canal, the contract providing that they should provide all labour, plant, etc., for executing & completing all the works set out or referred to it in the specifications, namely, all the dredging of the C. canal on section No. 8. After a portion of the work had been done, the Crown abandoned the scheme of constructing dams contemplated by the contract, & adopted another plan, the work on which was given to other contractors. After it was completed the suppliants filed a petition of right for the profits they could have made had it been given to them:—Held: the petition of right was properly dismissed.—GILBERT BLASTING & DREDGING CO. v. R. (1902), 23 C. L. T. 59; 33 S. C. R. 21.—CAN.

q. — — ——Owing to the dilatoriness of the officials of a school board & their architect, a contractor was precluded from completing his contract for the erection of a school within the time stipulated:—Held: no damages could be recovered for the delay.—EDWARDS v. PUBLIC SCHOOL BOARD S. S. OXFORD (1913), 25 O. W. R. 437; 5 O. W. N. 537.—CAN.

r. — — — Suspension of work by contractor—On non-payment of instalment by employer.—A building contract provided that, should the contractor suffer pecuniary loss by any action of the employer whereby the works should have been suspended, he should be remunerated to the extent of his loss. The contractor having suspended work under the contract owing to the employer's failure to pay moneys certified by the architect to be due:—Held: though the contractor had suffered rather from the inaction than from the action of the employer, he could recover.—PEDERSEN v. HADDOCK (1917), N. Z. L. R. 684.—N.Z.

s. — — — Delay caused by changes in construction—Agreed to by contractor.—Pltf., the contractor, alleged that by reason of certain changes, not included in the contract, he was delayed in the construction work under the contract, & suffered damage & incurred expenses thereby:—Held: pltf. was not entitled to damages by reason of the making of changes in the construction work, because he had agreed to make & had stipulated that he should be paid for making the very changes in the construction referred to.—LAWRENCE v. KERN (1910), 14 W. L. R. 337; 3 Sask. L. R. 253.—CAN.

t. — — — Duty not to interfere with contractor.—Pltf. entered into a contract with a city corpn. to construct certain sewers. In the course of his work the contents of certain city sewers, which existed in the streets in which pltf. was required to build the sewers he had contracted to construct, the existence of which was not known to & was not disclosed to him, flowed into the trenches dug by him & caused him additional expense in doing the work:—Held: pltf. was entitled to damages for the loss sustained.—BOURQUE v. OTTAWA CITY (1903), 23 C. L. T. 265; 6 O. L. R. 287; 2 O. W. R. 701.—CAN.

u. — — — Cessation of work ordered by employer's engineer.—Under a condition for payment of damages for suspension of work beyond a certain period, the employer is liable for damages resulting from such suspension though the engineer required it under the form of an "order of works."—YOUNG v. BALLARAT & BALLARAT EAST COMRS., MARTIN v. BOARD OF LAND & WORKS (1879), 5 V. L. R. 503.—AUS.

w. When right to damages lost—Delay of party claiming.—Pltf. claimed damages for breach of contract; deft. counterclaimed for like damages:—Held: each party was guilty of such delay in performing his part as to disentitle him to damages.—PAGE v. GREEN (1903), 2 O. W. R. 137; (1904), 3 O. W. R. 494.—CAN.

y. — — — Laches.—C. entered into a contract with G., the contractor for the construction of the railway, to perform works of construction on a portion of the road, & agreed to keep open at certain times & hours at his own cost & expense the main line for the passage of traffic or express trains run by G. without any charge to the latter; there was a proviso that "any time occupied on the road over & above what may be required by the hours mentioned, or any expense caused thereby shall be paid by the contractor G., on a certificate to that effect signed by the superintendent of the contractor." On action for damages caused by the interruption of the work by the passing of resp.'s trains:—Held: it was the duty of pltf. to get the superintendent's certificate within a reasonable time, & not having taken any steps to get it until six years after the superintendent had left deft.'s employment, the failure to produce such certificate was sufficient ground for dismissing pltf.'s action.—MCCARRON v. MCGREEVY (1886), 13 S. C. R. 378.—CAN.

232. Failure to give possession of site—Summer contract—Increased expenditure.]—B. contracted with a water co., in the month of June, to lay certain conduit pipes, & the co. agreed to be ready at all times to give B. possession of the sites, to enable him to proceed with the construction of the works. By means of the co.'s delay in giving possession of portions of the sites to B., B. was thrown into the winter months, when wages were higher & the works were more difficult to construct:—Held: a summer contract having, by implication, been in the contemplation of the parties when the contract was made, B. was entitled to a quantum meruit, or damages in respect of the increased expenditure which he was thereby impelled to incur.—BUSH v. WHITEHAVEN PORT & TOWN TRUSTEES (1888), 52 J. P. 392;

232 i. Failure to give possession of site—Rise in wages & prices.]—A specification of work to be done provided that the contractors would get possession of the ground immediately after acceptance of tender. By the formal contract the employers reserved the right to appoint the time when the contractors might enter on the lands & proceed with the works, the contractors in the event of the time of entry being postponed being entitled to an extension of time to complete the works.

After the works had been completed the contractors brought an action of damages against the employers averring delay in getting possession & loss owing to the rise in wages, price of materials, etc.:—Held: the employers were not bound to give possession either on the date the tender was accepted or when the formal contract was signed & the contractors could not recover.—MACKAY & SON v. LEVEN POLICE COMRS. (1893), 20 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 1093.—SCOT.

235 i. — & supply details.]—A contract provided that the contractor should be put in possession of the premises, & should be furnished with the lines & levels, by a fixed date, & that he should have no action for damages or otherwise, against deft. by reason of delay:—Held: the clause of the contract denying pltf.'s right to an action for damages applied to the giving possession of the premises only, & not to the delay in furnishing lines & levels.—MUNRO v. WESTVILLE TOWN (1903), 36 N. S. R. 313.—CAN.

a. Delay in supplying materials—Saving clause in contract.]—A contract for the erection of a steel bridge provided that any delay in the delivery of property or buildings to be delivered to the contractor by the employer should not give the contractor a claim to compensation:—Held: delay in the delivery of the bridge & the bolts & fittings therefor deliverable by the employer to the contractor was within the clause, & was not a matter for damages.—FRASER v. HAMILTON CORPN. (1912), 32 N. Z. L. R. 205.—N.Z.

b. Failure to get plans approved.]—Pltf. contracted to build two houses on a piece of land belonging to deft., which he had purchased from the Town Council subject to a condition that only one house should be erected upon it. The Town Council failed to approve the plans, & pltf. sued for damages, assessing his loss at 2½ per cent. on the price for "book-keeping," 2½ per cent. for architect's fees, & 5 per cent. for loss of profit:—Held: pltf. was entitled to recover 5 per cent. for loss of profit.—COOMBS v. MULLER (1913), E. D. L. 430.—S. AF.

c. Measure of damages—Nominal damages only.]—A specification for tenders provided that not less than 4 trial borings were to be made. Pltf., whose tender was accepted, had made 2 borings, & was prepared to make 2 more according to the specification, when deft. intimated that he considered the contract completed, & refused to authorise any more borings to be made:—Held: pltf. could only recover nominal damages.—WAKEFORD v. RAILWAYS COMR. (1881), 2 N. S. W. L. R. 258.—AUS.

d. — Loss of profits—Extras.]—Where there is a breach of contract, the damages are to be measured, as near as may be, by the profits the contractor would have made by completing the contract in a reasonable time.

A contractor claimed for loss of profits in respect of extras not covered by the contract:—Held: inasmuch as it was not possible to say that the engineer would have directed it to be done by him had the work remained in pltf.'s hands, or that he would have fixed a price for it from which a profit would have been derived, it could not be taken into consideration.—R. v. STEWART (1902), 32 S. C. R. 483.—CAN.

e. — Loss by stoppage of works.]—A contractor entered into a contract with a co. for the construction of a railroad, & for keeping it in repair; he completed the greater portion, when the co. stopped the works:—Held: an inquiry should be directed as to the damage sustained by the contractor by reason of the stopping of the works.—WHITEHEAD v. BUFFALO & LAKE HURON RY. CO. (1859), 7 Gr. 351; 8 Gr. 157.—CAN.

f. — Loss actually sustained.]—A contractor was delayed by the default of the proprietor or his workmen in beginning his work until a date after the termination of the time fixed by the contract:—Held: the delay in the after prosecution of the work should not be visited by the imposition of the penalty of so much per day, but should be limited to damages sustained thereby.—FINDLAY v. STEVENS (1910), 15 O. W. R. 212; 20 O. L. R. 331.—CAN.

g. — As at date of breach.]—Pltf. undertook the erection of a building for deft., deft. was to pay for all labour, material & other charges incidental to the work from time to time as such payments were due & notified by pltf. For this work deft. agreed to pay pltf. a fixed sum of $15,000 subject to increase or deduction by a sum equal to 20 per cent. of such sum as ultimately was found to be less than or in excess of $189,000 being the fixed estimated cost of the work. The work was stopped because deft. was unable to furnish the money to carry out his part of the contract. Deft. some time later advertised for tenders to complete the building in a modified form. Before any new contract was let he received a letter from pltf. protesting against the work being continued under any contract but theirs & warning him that he was not relieved from this contract, but he entered into a new one with other contractors:—Held: pltf. were entitled to damages for breach of contract as of the date when the new contract was let by deft. & that, in ascertaining such damages, the total cost of the building as completed under the pltf.'s contract had they resumed work on the date of the breach should be estimated, & to the extent to which that cost should exceed or fall below $189,000, 20 per cent. thereof should be deducted or added, as the case might be, to the amount to which the pltf. might be found entitled in respect of the $10,000 (balance of $15,000, less $5,000 paid), & in ascertaining the damages payable in respect of this item there should be taken into account the value of the time, labour & expense which the pltf. were saved through being relieved of their obligation to carry out their contract, & any contingencies which might have interfered with their doing so.—*JONES & LITTLE, LTD. v. h. — Local rule of trade unknown to employer.]—In an action by a builder & contractor for damages, including the fees of an architect employed by him, for breach of contract:—Held: pltf. could not avail himself of an alleged local rule of trade that architects must be engaged for buildings of the contemplated value of those to be erected, since it was not shown that deft. knew of the rule or accepted any liability thereunder.—COOMBS v. MULLER (1913), E. D. L. 430.—S. AF.

k. — Employer taking possession.]—Pltf., a contractor, was compelled to cease work owing to the refusal of deft.'s architect to furnish a progress certificate, & deft. took possession of the works. The architect in refusing the certificate had not performed his duty between the parties, which was of a quasi-judicial nature:—Held: pltf. was justified in stopping the work & was entitled to recover the damages sustained by him by reason of deft. having taken possession of & converted to his use the plant, appliances & tools used by pltf. upon or in connection with the work.—ALBERTA BUILDING CO. v. CALGARY CITY (1911), 16 W. L. R. 443.—CAN.

l. Pleading—Whether damages claimed—Effect of arbitration award.]—Pltf. contracted to do certain work for defts. by a fixed date. After the date for completion a fresh agreement was entered into by which pltf. promised in all respects to execute the works by certain days therein specified; & if plffs. were not authorised, before the 1st Jan. then next, by deft.'s agent to proceed with certain work therein mentioned, a certain extension of time should be allowed therefor. Averments, that plffs. immediately proceeded to the performance of the contract, & were then prepared to execute & complete it, but were stopped by deft. in the exercise of the power in him vested, whereby plffs. were hindered, etc. Further averment, that after the execution of the agreement, & before the time limited, etc., deft., unnecessarily, wrongfully, & fraudulently hindered & delayed plffs., etc., by means of which plffs. were put to great extra trouble & expense, yet they performed the work in accordance with the plans & specifications, etc., & deft. accepted & received the same from the plffs. & the engineer, etc., wrongfully & fraudulently gave wrong monthly estimates, etc., & deft. wrongfully procured false & untrue final estimates to be given. Averment, that more than ten days before the commencement of the suit the sum of £10,000 was due from deft. to plffs. for work, & £2,500 bonus mentioned in the agreement, whereof deft. had notice, etc. Pleas, never indebted, that deft. did not hinder & delay, & not guilty. A verdict was taken by consent for £8,000 subject to arbitration. The arbitrators awarded non-performance by plffs. of the work by the time specified; that the amount paid by deft. exceeded the amount of the engineer's estimates & bonus of £2,500; & that deft. had not paid the amount due before the commencement of the suit. Upon reference to the ct. by the arbitrators upon the facts:—Held: if plffs. were claiming damages because of the wrongful & fraudulent acts, the award had rejected such claims.—BROWN v. WYTHES (1861), 11 C. P. 561.—CAN.

236. Whether liquidated damages or penalty—Bond with penalty to secure payment.]—A contractor undertook to do certain works within a given term, or to pay certain fixed sums:—Held: (1) whether these were penalties or unliquidated damages, might properly have been decided in an action at law; (2) the fact that a bond with a penalty had been given to secure the payment of them, was itself strong evidence to show that they were liquidated damages.—RANGER v. GREAT WESTERN RY. CO. (1854), 5 H. L. Cas. 72; 24 L. T. O. S. 22; 18 Jur. 795; 10 E. R. 824, H. L.; 37. (1843), 3 Ry. & Can. Cas. 208.

m. Whether enforceable — Though owner not damaged.]—The penalty imposed for non-completion of a building by a certain date is the parties' own assessment of the damages occasioned thereby. Although the owner has suffered no loss he is entitled to enforce the clause, & this is so even where he has given supplementary contracts which have delayed the completion of the work.—DAMPHOUSSE v. VALIQUETTE (1915), Q. R. 24 K. B. 62; 24 D. L. R. 219.—CAN.

n. — Sufficiency of breach—Waiver.]—Plffs. contracted with defts. for the construction & working of a tramway. In pursuance of the contract £1,000 was paid to defts., to be declared forfeited by way of liquidated & ascertained damages in case of the non-completion of the contract, or the due observance & performance of any of the covenants. On a Monday, the day after the plans were due to be submitted for approval, defts.' solr. wrote to plffs. reminding them that the plans must be submitted. Plffs. sent the plans by their agent to the next meeting of defts. on the following Tuesday, but defts. refused to receive them:—Held: (1) not a breach for which the £1,000 could be forfeited; (2) the breach had been waived.—COONAN v. BALMAIN BOROUGH (1890), 11 N. S. W. Eq. 270.—AUS.

p. — Extension of time granted—Completion after extension.]—A building contract contained a stipulation for payment of penalties by plff., a builder, in case of delay beyond a certain period in completion of the work; deft. at the request of plff. granted additional time:—Held: he did not thereby waive his right to penalties for delay beyond such additional time.—TABRETT v. WAKELY (1889), 10 N. S. W. L. R. 77.—AUS.

q. — Engineer's certificate a condition precedent.]—Held: defts. in an action on a building contract could not succeed on a counterclaim for a penalty for delay without a certificate of the engineer.—MANDERS v. MOOSE JAW CITY (1914), 28 W. L. R. 821.—CAN.

r. Implied new contract — Whether liquidated damages clause incorporated.]—Plffs. on 31st May, contracted to complete the iron work upon a building put up for deft., by 1st July, & to pay liquidated damages for every week the work should remain unfinished after that time. Dft. had not the building ready to receive the iron work for nineteen weeks after 1st July, but plffs. did not finish their work for more than seven weeks after they were enabled to begin:—Held: such a special provision as that for liquidated damages would not be considered as incorporated in the new contract under which the work was done after 1st July, though plffs. might be liable for the delay in an action for damages.—HAMILTON v. MOORE (1873), 33 U. C. R. 520.—CAN.

237. — Weekly sum—Liquidated damages.]—Plff., a builder, contracted with deft. to do certain repairs & alterations to a house, to be completed within a specified time, "subject to a penalty of £20 per week that any of the works within a fixed time of what is to be done under the contract, is a penalty or liquidated damages, the ct. must take into consideration the intention of the parties, as evidenced by their language, & the circumstances of the case taken as a whole & viewed as at the time the contract was made. The words "as liquidated damages & not as a penalty" are not to be left out of account altogether, though they are not conclusive. In many instances liquidated damages are provided for because of the difficulty of proving damage, though actual damage may accrue. Because there are many matters, some very small, which would constitute non-completion, it does not necessarily follow that the sums named as liquidated damages are to be regarded as payable on several events: non-completion is only one single event.—ST. CATHERINE'S IMPROVEMENT CO. v. RUTHERFORD (1914), 31 O. L. R. 574; 19 D. L. R. 662; 6 O. W. N. 568.—CAN.

t. — Sum accruing at stated periods—Liquidated damages.]—Held: where a sum certain is payable accruing from day to day or from week to week or the like for non-completion to time, it is liquidated damages, & not a penalty.—GRACE v. OSLER (1911), 16 W. L. R. 627.—CAN.

237 i. — Weekly sum—Penalty.]—Dft. contracted under seal to do certain work required in the erection of two dwelling houses for plff., & covenanted that the work should be fully completed by a fixed date under a penalty of $20 a week as liquidated damages for every week beyond the said time the said works should remain incomplete:—Held: a penalty.—ARCHBOLD v. WILSON (1872), 32 U. C. R. 590.—CAN.

237 ii. — Liquidated damages.]—Dft., a builder, was liable under a bond to a penalty of £10 per week for every week during which, after a day fixed, any materials remained upon the premises, or the work remained incomplete:—Held: liquidated damages.—BONSALL v. BYRNE (1867), 1 R. 1 C. L. 573; 2 I. L. T. Jo. 6.—IR.

237 iii. — — — — —.]—In a building contract it was stipulated that the builder should pay a penalty of £5 a week for every week after a certain date, during which the works were not completed:—Held: the clause was not a penalty clause, but one of liquidate damages.—JOHNSTON v. ROBERTSON (1861), 23 Dunl. (Ct. of Sess.) 646; 33 Sc. Jur. 335.—SCOT.

238. ——— ——— ———.]—Applts. contracted to build four ships for a foreign Government, at an agreed price payable in instalments, to be delivered at fixed times. The contracts provided that " the penalty for late delivery shall be at the rate of £500 a week for each vessel." The vessels were not delivered till long after the agreed dates of delivery, & the purchasers brought an action claiming £500 a week for each vessel:—Held: these sums were to be regarded as liquidated damages, & not as a penalty.—CLYDEBANK ENGINEERING & SHIPBUILDING CO. v. YZQUIERDOY-CASTANEDA, DON JOSE RAMOS, [1905] A. C. 6; 74 L. J. P. C. 1; 91 L. T. 666; 21 T. L. R. 58, H. L.

241. ——— Daily sum—Contract in two separate parts—Delay in respect of each part.]—A contractor agreed with the owner of a house to carry out certain work for an electric light installation in the house, in accordance with a certain specification, for a fixed sum, & consented to pay £5 as liquidated damages for each day exceeding the number of days within which the work had to be completed. By the specification the wiring was to be handed over to the owner of the house in faultless condition within twenty days from the signing of the contract, & the fittings, which the that if he did not make due progress to the satisfaction of C.'s engineer, or did not work in a manner satisfactory to the latter, then C. was to be entitled to cancel the contract, or C. could take possession of the works & complete them at L.'s expense, & L. was to forfeit a penalty of £500 for such neglect or default. C. alleged non-compliance with the contract by L., & took possession of & was completing the work, & claimed the £500:—Held: the clause relating to the £500 was intended as a penal stipulation, & C. could not recover without proof of damage.—*CAPE TOWN COUNCIL v. a. ——— ——— Described as liquidated damages—Disproportionate to damage suffered.]—Held: as the large amounts stipulated to be forfeited, exceeding £110,000, were manifestly out of all proportion to the damage suffered or inconvenience undergone by deft., the penalty of forfeiture should not be enforced, notwithstanding that the sums were made payable "as & for liquidated damages."—HILLS v. COLONIAL GOVERNMENT (1904), 21 S. C. 59; 2 Buch. A. C. 355.

b. ——— Daily sum—Liquidated damages.]—A contract, which incorporated by reference a specification, was entered into by resp. for a fixed sum. The specification provided that resp. should forfeit £1 per day for each day's delay in completion after a certain time. The contract was not fully carried out, & applt. counterclaimed in respect of delay in completion:—Held: (1) applt. was entitled to succeed on the counterclaim for the recovery of £1 per day in respect of resp.'s default, such sum being in fact liquidated damages; (2) it was immaterial that the penal clause was included in the specifications, & not in the operative portion of the contract.—WILLIAMSON v. MURDOCH (1912), 14 W. A. L. R. 54.—AUS.

d. ——— ——— ———.]—To an action for the balance due under a building contract, deft. set up that by the contract pltf. was to have the house ready by a named date, under a penalty of $5 per day, which amount deft. claimed to deduct from the contract price:—Held: defence good; the $5, though called a penalty, was in fact liquidated damages.—*CHATTERTON v. e. — Onus of proof.]—A builder brought an action against the proprietor of a mansion-house for the balance of the amount averred to be due to him under contract for mason-work in connection with alterations & additions to the mansion-house. The defender claimed to deduct a sum limited to £150, which he alleged was due to him under the contract as penalty for delay in the execution of the work. Extra work had been ordered by the defender partly during the progress of the operations, & partly after the date fixed for completion. The proof did not show clearly what extras were ordered after that date, how far extras ordered before that date hindered the completion of the work at that date, or how much time was occupied after that date by the execution of extras:]—Held: (1) the fact that some of the extra work had been ordered after the date for completion did not of itself prevent the enforcement of the penalty clause; (2) the onus was upon the pursuer to show that the extra work ordered by the defender had been the cause of the delay in completing the work, & the pursuer had failed to discharge that onus.—STEEL v. SUB-SECT. 4.—RELEASE BY FORFEITURE.

257. Proviso that forfeiture not to affect liability—Date to which liquidated damages payable expressly fixed.]—By a contract between a waterworks co. & a building contractor for the building of a reservoir, it was agreed that the contractor should be liable to certain penalties, as & for liquidated damages, for each day elapsing between the day which should be fixed for the completion of the works & the day on which the completed works should be delivered to the co. There was also a clause providing that in certain events the co. might terminate the contract so far as respected its performance by the contractor, but without thereby affecting in any other respects his liabilities, & might enter into possession of the works. In pursuance of this last mentioned clause the co. terminated the contract, & entered into possession of the works. Deft., who had been surety for the contractor, then entered into an agreement with the co. to complete the works in accordance with the original contract, upon the express condition that nothing in the agreement should be construed to rescind or vary any term or condition in the original contract, but that everything should stand upon the same footing, both during completion of the works & in finally settling the accounts, as if the later agreement had not been made. Through no delay on the part of deft., but owing solely to the delay of the original contractor, the works were not completed & delivered until some time after the day fixed for completion. The co. claimed from deft. penalties at the rate agreed upon in the original contract:—Held: upon the true construction of the two contracts, deft. was liable to the penalties at the rate agreed upon in the original contract.—RE YEADON WATERWORKS CO. & WRIGHT (1895), 72 L. He was to be paid £75 for the work, & was to be entitled to have for his own use all materials pulled down. In the event of the work being delayed F. was to pay W. £1 for every working day the work was delayed. The work was in fact delayed, & some time after the expiration of the time limited by the contract for completion of the work W. complained of F.'s delay, when F. said that he could not tell if the work would be completed in four months. A fortnight after that interview W. forcibly took possession of the site, & employed another contractor to complete the work. F. had paid a deposit of £100 to W. for the due fulfilment of the work. F. brought an action to recover the £100 deposit & for damages for breach of contract:—Held: (1) W. had no right to determine the contract; (2) W. was not entitled to liquidated damages accruing after the date of his taking possession.—*FELTON v. The greater part of the contract moneys was paid to W., from time to time, about half of the amounts received being paid by W. to G. to enable him to carry on. The work was delayed greatly beyond the contract time. E. paid a sum to G. direct, on condition that he paid it to his workmen, which he did. After completion, E. agreed with G. to waive the time penalties if G. accepted a sum certified by the architect in full, & gave him a discharge; & E. at the same time paid a further sum to G. direct, on condition that he paid it to his workmen, which he did. In an action by W. against E. to recover the amount of the two sums which E. had paid to G. direct:—Held: (1) the condition that G. should give him a discharge, upon which E. had agreed to waive the penalties, being one which was not & could not be performed, the waiver never took place; (2) it was not open to W. to say that E. had elected to abandon his right to deduct the penalties by payments to G. which he (W.) repudi-

260 i. — Whether penalties within architect's jurisdiction.]—A contract provided that the work was to be completely finished by a day named under penalty; the architect had power to grant additional time & was to be the absolute judge of the extent of the additional time to be allowed; any dispute between the employer & the contractor as to any matter connected with the execution of the work was to be settled by the architect only, whose award was final. The work was not completed within the time fixed by the contract. After the actual completion of the contract the architect gave pltf. a final certificate under the contract certifying that work had been done under the contract entitling pltf. to a sum named in terms of the contract agreement. A statement at the foot showed that this sum had been arrived at without making any deduction for penalties. The architect afterwards wrote to deft. that he did not consider himself justified in imposing any penalties. In an action by pltf. to recover the balance of the contract price & for extras, deft. counterclaiming for damages for breach of contract, the jury found that the architect had decided before action brought that the additional time occupied in completion was reasonably & necessarily required as an extension:—Held: if the conditions gave the usual power to the architect to give a final certificate, then the final certificate must be taken to have dealt with the claim for penalties.

g. — Penalty discretionary.]—A contractor engaged, by the terms of his contract, to have a line open by Oct. 1. The specification provided for a penalty of £50 per week, at discretion of the co.'s engineer:—Held: this was a discretion to impose, & not merely to remit; & there was no liability which could be the subject of set-off by the co. in an action by the contractor, until the engineer had actually imposed the penalty.—MUNRO v. KENNIS & ATHENRY RY. CO. (1866), 15 W. R. 255.—IR.

h. — Illiquid sum.]—A building contract stipulated that the builder should pay a penalty of £5 a week for every week after a certain date, during which the works were not completed. In an action by the builder for payment of a balance of the contract price, the defender pleaded, that, the work not having been finished within the stipulated period, the pursuer was not entitled to insist in the action, as he was due the defender an amount of penalties larger than the sum concluded for:—Held: the defence was not properly compensation, but a claim arising out of a mutual contract; & therefore, the objection that it could not be pleaded in defence because it was an illiquid claim was unfounded.

Compensation can only be pleaded on liquid claims & does not apply where both parties have to prove their claims.—JOHNSTON v. ROBERTSON (1861), 33 Sc. Jur. 335; 23 Dunl. (Ct. of Sess.) 646.—SCOT.

k. —.]—In default of completion as stipulated it was agreed that the contractor should pay as liquidated damages, & not as a penalty, the sum of $50 for every subsequent day until the completion:—Held: damages accruing under the clause in question did not, upon mere default, become sufficiently liquidated & ascertained so as to be set off in compensation against a claim upon a promissory note.—OTTAWA NORTHERN & WESTERN RY. 264. By set-off—Contractor exceeding time for execution of extras.]—Declaration in debt stated a building contract under seal, by which pltf. covenanted to complete buildings by Oct. 23, & deft. to pay him £418 on the completion, & it was further covenanted that, if deft. should order any extra work, he should pay pltf. its value, or, if he ordered any diminution or omission, pltf. should allow the value out of the £418; also that, if the buildings should not be finished on Oct. 23, pltf. should pay the penalty of £1 per day for every subsequent day employed, as liquidated damages, provided that, if deft. should require any additional work, pltf. should be allowed so much extra time beyond Oct. 23 as might be necessary for completing same. Pltf. averred that deft. ordered extra work, which required thirty-one days of additional time, & the value of which was £84; & that the contract would have been fulfilled by Oct. 23, but for such orders, & he demanded the £418, minus a sum for diminutions, & £84 for the extra work. Deft. pleaded, as to £22, parcel of the debt in the declaration mentioned, that the extra time necessary for completing the additional work was nine days only, but that pltf. had exceeded the time ending on Oct. 23 by thirty-one days, whereby he became liable to pay deft. £22 according to the deed, which £22 deft. offered to set-off:—Held: (1) the clause for payment of £1 per day applied to the covenant for extra time in respect of extra work, as well as to the clause which fixed a day for completing the contract as originally defined, & deft. might deduct, in the form of set-off, £1 per day for the number of days by which pltf. had exceeded the necessary time for completing the extra work; (2) the set-off was not bad because pleaded to the £418, & the £84 as constituting one debt.—LEGGE v. HARLOCK (1848), 12 Q. B. 1015; 18 L. J. Q. B. 45; 12 L. T. O. S. 291; 13 Jur. 229; 116 E. R. 1151.

or allow $10 a day until completion:—Held: this authorised a deduction as liquidated damages of the amount so allowed, from the contract price.—MCBEAN v. KINNEAR (1892), 23 O. R. 313.—CAN.

m. — Need not be specially pleaded.]—Held: the sum payable as liquidated damages, on failure to complete within the time stipulated, might be deducted from the contract price without being pleaded specially by way of set-off.—SCOTT v. DENT (1876), 38 U. C. R. 30.—CAN.

n. — Or counterclaim.]—Circumstances in which:—Held: defts. were entitled to recover by way of counterclaim, the sum provided by the contract as liquidated damages.—MCMAMARA v. SKAIN (1892), 23 O. R. 103.—CAN.

o. How calculated.]—Defts. contracted to erect a building for pltf. & to complete it by Jan. 10. On June 8, three weeks after defts. had, according to their own story, completed the building, it collapsed, because the stone work in the foundations had not been properly done:—Held: the pltf. were entitled to recover at the daily rate fixed by the contract for the time which elapsed between Jan. 10 & the date on which they entered into complete use & possession of the building.—COCKSHUTT PLOW CO. v. ALBERTA BUILDING CO. (1910), 13 W. L. R. 234; affd., 3 Alta. L. R. 503.—CAN.

SECT. 4.—SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.

See, generally, SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.

265. Agreement to build.]—Specific performance of an agreement to build may be decreed, if sufficiently certain, but a general covenant to lay out a certain sum in a building of a certain value cannot be so executed.—MOSELY v. VIRGIN (1796), 3 Ves. 184; 30 E. R. 959, L. C.

266. To ascertain sufficiency of performance.]—Covenant, in Feb., 1841, by a municipal corpn. to build a market forthwith. Bill, in Sept., 1843, for specific performance of the covenant. Answer, in Dec., stating that the corpn. had not until recently determined for what goods the market should be adapted, & that the building should proceed with due diligence. At the hearing, in June, 1844, the cause was ordered to stand over for six months. In May, 1844, the corpn. had approved of the plan for the market, & in July they met to consider the order in the cause, & subsequently built the market:—Held: (1) it was regular for pltf. to bring before the ct., upon petition, the facts which had taken place subsequently to the answer; (2) all proceedings should be stayed without costs.

Proceedings taken by defts. towards the fulfilment of a contract for the erection of a building may enable the ct. to decree a specific performance of the contract, in a case where, without such proceedings, it might have been difficult to define what would be a sufficient performance.—PRICE v. PENZANCE CORPN. (1845), 4 Hare, 506; 9 J. P. 775; 67 E. R. 748.

267. Construction of railway.]—An agreement between a railway co. & railway contractors, who were also landowners, for the construction of a branch railway provided that the co. should find the land within a reasonable time & build the stations, that the contractors should give a bond to the amount of £50,000 to secure the performance of the contract, & undertake to execute the works for a double line of railway, & the ballasting & permanent way for a single line, according to the terms of a specification, to be prepared by the engineer for the time being of the co., that the co. should work the branch in a reasonable & proper manner as compared to the remainder of the main railway, & that in case of difference as to working, same should be settled by arbn., & that any of the details of the arrangement, in case of difference, should be determined by a referee to be appointed by the S.-Gl. for the time being:—Held: this agreement was too vague, obscure,

268. —.]—The directors of a railway co., by their duly authorised agent, entered into a contract with B., a railway contractor for the construction of their line at a certain price, payable in shares & debentures of the co. The directors subsequently repudiated the contract, denying the authority of their agent, & entered into an agreement, by which another railway co. was to undertake the construction of the line. B. filed his bill to obtain specific performance of his contract, & moved to restrain the directors from parting with the shares, which would have become applicable for his payment:—Held: the contract could not be severed, & as the positive relief of enforcing specific performance of the contract for construction of the line could not be granted, defts. could not be negatively restrained from parting with the shares, forming the consideration to B., in violation of the contract, especially as in the event of B. failing in his contract the co. could not be restored to their original position.—PETO v. BRIGHTON, UCKFIELD & TUNBRIDGE WELLS RY. CO. (1863), 1 Hem. & M. 468; 2 New Rep. 415; 32 L. J. Ch. 677; 9 L. T. 227; 11 W. R. 874; 71 E. R. 205.

269. —.]—Specific performance will not be decreed of a contract to employ a person to construct works, which the ct. is unable to superintend.

Where the directors of a railway co. entered into a written agreement to give pltf. "a contract for the construction of the line for £55,000, subject to a specification of the works or the line included in the sum to be agreed upon between pltf. & the engineer of the co., in case of dispute the matter to be referred" to an arbitrator, & a bill was filed for specific performance:—Held: the terms of this agreement were too indefinite to be enforced in a specific performance suit, but even had the terms been sufficiently definite, the agreement was of such a nature that specific performance could not have been decreed.—GREENHILL v. ISLE OF

PART VIII. SECT. 4.

265 i. Agreement to build.]—A father leased a farm to his son for five years & undertook to build on the farm, during the first year of the term, a house of certain expressed dimensions. There was a provision in the instrument for the determination of the lease at the end of any year by notice to that effect given in October previous. The father died after the expiry of the first year of the term, but had not done anything towards building the house. By his will he devised the farm to his son, but made no reference to the lease:—Held: the father having died after breach of the undertaking, the son was not entitled to have the house built at the expense of the father's personal estate, but at most was entitled to damages for non-performance of the agreement to build.—Re MURRAY

266 i. To ascertain sufficiency of performance.—Partial destruction of work.]—One co. agreed to construct certain works for another, which on completion were to be inspected by engineers on behalf of each, whose finding was to be conclusive; upon the engineers approving of the works, & reporting them as completed, they were to be accepted. The parties to perform the work having, as they alleged, completed it, called upon the others to appoint an engineer, which request was not complied with; subsequently a portion of the works was destroyed. On a bill filed to compel an acceptance of the works:—Held: the delay of one of the contracting parties, until after such destruction, to name an engineer, as stipulated for by the agreement, did not preclude the other from obtaining an inspection of the works; but such inspection & approval must, in the circumstances, be had by a reference to the master.—GREAT WESTERN RY. CO. v. DESJARDINS CANAL CO. (1862), 9 Gr. 503; revised, 2 E. & A. 330.—CAN.

267 ii. —Work stopped by employer—Rights of contractor.]—Where contractors for the construction of railway undertake to perform it on a commission basis, their interest is but pecuniary & not in the thing. If the work is stopped, the contractors cannot pray for specific performance; they have but a claim for damages.—WILLS v. CENTRAL RY. (1914), Q. R. 24 K. B. 102.—CAN.

270. — Inquiry as to damages more suitable remedy.]—A railway co. agreed, for valuable consideration, with a landowner to erect, construct, & fit up a station on certain lands which they had bought from him. The agreement contained no further description of the station, nor any stipulations as to the use of it. The co. having refused to erect a station in the specified place, & substituted one at a distance of two miles:—Held: the case was one in which justice could be better done by an inquiry as to damages than by a decree for specific performance.—WILSON v. NORTHAMPTON & BANBURY JUNCTION RY. Co. (1874), 9 Ch App. 279; 43 L. J. Ch. 503; 30 L. T. 147; 22 W. R. 380, L. C. & L. JJ.

271. Contract to build or repair—Defined contract.]—Though the ct. will not, as a rule, specifically enforce contracts to build or repair, it will do so in cases where the contract for building is in its nature defined.—HEPBURN v. LEATHER (1884), 50 L. T. 660.

272. Preliminary building agreement.]—The ct. will not decree the specific performance of a preliminary building agreement, nor give damages for the breach of such an agreement.—WOOD v. SILCOCK (1884), 50 L. T. 251; 32 W. R. 845.

273. Work defined—Damages inadequate compensation—Possession of site.]—The ct. has jurisdiction to grant specific performance of a contract to erect a building if (1) the work to be done is defined, (2) pltf. has a substantial interest in its execution which cannot be adequately compensated for by damages, & (3) deft. has by the contract obtained from pltf. possession of the land on which the work is to be done.—WOLVERHAMPTON CORPN. v. EMMONS, [1901] 1 K. B. 515; 70 L. J. K. B. 429; 84 L. T. 407; 49 W. R. 553; 17 T. L. R. 234; 45 Sol. Jo. 256, C. A.

274. To restrain contractor from interfering with works—After right of forfeiture exercised.]—Disputes having arisen between a railway co. & a contractor employed in making the railway, the co. insisting upon a right under the contract, owing to the alleged default of the contractor, to discharge him, take possession of the line & materials, & complete the works themselves, & the contractor resisting such claim, imputing the backward state of the works to the acts of the co., & holding forcible possession; collisions occurring between the workmen of the two parties, each being charged with impeding the operations of the other; & the completion & opening of the railway for traffic being in the meantime delayed, the ct., on the application of the co., restrained the contractor from continuing on the line or interfering with the operations of the co., directed

271 i. Contract to rebuild & repair—Inquiry as to damages more suitable remedy.]—Deft. agreed to take a lease of certain premises from pltf., & within twelve months from the date of the agreement to expend a sum in substantial repairs & improvements mentioned in the schedule to the agreement. Deft. did not execute the repairs & improvements. Pltf. claimed specific performance & damages:—Held: it was not a case for specific performance, but for an inquiry as to damages.—RUSHBROOKE v. O'SULLIVAN, [1908] 1 I. R. 232.—IR.

PART VIII. SECT. 5.

278 i. To restrain pulling down of house—Not built according to contract.]—Defts. maintained that the walls of a house partly erected by the pltf., a contractor, were falling down as a result of bad workmanship. The architect on the job gave orders that an account of what was due to the contractor for works & materials done & provided, without regard to the formal certificates of the co.'s engineer, & an issue to try whether the co., at the time they proceeded to enter upon the works & remove the contractor, were lawfully justified in so doing, reserving as well the question of the right of the contractor to compensation for loss of profit on unexecuted works, as all other directions, until after the trial & the report.—EAST LANCASHIRE RY. 276. To restrain actions commenced by employer—Contractor unable to prosecute claims—Order for accounts & inquiries.]—Actions were commenced by a builder against his employer for payment of money alleged to be due under certain contracts, and the actions were consolidated at the instance of the employer, who afterwards commenced, on his part, two actions against the builder for breaches of contract. On a bill by the builder alleging that, through the act of the employer in preventing his getting a conclusive certificate from the inspecting architect, he had been unable to continue his actions, & had been driven to a ct. of equity to obtain an inquiry as to what was due to him:—Held: he was entitled to such inquiry, without prejudice to any question as to breaches of contract that might arise on his part.—DABBS v. NUGENT (1865), 13 L. T. 396; 11 Jur. N. S. 943; 14 W. R. 94.

277. To restrain trustee from selling contractor's property—Sale detrimental to owner—Contract not specifically enforceable.]—A firm of shipbuilders agreed to alter a vessel according to a specification, & it was provided that in case of their failing to execute the alterations according to the agreement, the owners of the vessel should be at liberty, with workmen, to enter on the shipbuilder's yard, & themselves complete the alterations. The shipbuilders were adjudicated bkpts. before the vessel was completed:—Held: the ct. could not specifically perform the whole agreement, & would not restrain the trustee under the bkpcy. from selling the dock in which the vessel was lying, although the owners might be thus prevented from themselves entering & completing the vessel pursuant to the agreement.—MERCHANTS' TRADING Co. v. BANNER (1871), L. R. 12 Eq. 18; 40 L. J. Ch. 515; 24 L. T. 861; 19 W. R. 707.

278. To restrain pulling down of house—Not built according to contract.]—An application ex p. for an injunction was granted, where it was sought to restrain deft. from pulling down a house in course of erection for him by pltf., & alleged not to have been built according to contract.—DRAKE'S PATENT CONCRETE v. pltf. was to take down portions & rebuild. Pltf. omitted to do so & the architect then authorised defts. to employ some other party to do the job. Destruction of subject matter—Accidental fire.]—Pltfs. contracted to erect machinery on deft.'s premises at specific prices for particular portions, & to keep it in repair for two years, the price to be paid upon the completion of the whole. After some portions of the work had been finished, & others were in the course of completion, the premises, with all the machinery & materials thereon, were destroyed by an accidental fire:—Held: both parties were excused from the further performance of the contract.—APPLEBY v. 280. — Loss of ship.]—Pltfs., shipowners, contracted with defts., a firm of engineers, that the latter should supply the former with new engines & boilers for their steamship, the S. The contract, dated in Dec., 1871, stipulated that the engines should be completed ready for sea & tried under steam previous to being handed over to pltfs., the result of such trial to be to the satisfaction of pltfs.' inspector, the work to be completed without delay & completed with all reasonable despatch, due notice to be given by pltfs. to defts. of the date at which the steamer was to be placed in their hands after the work was ready for the completion & fixing of the engines. The price was to be £5,800, payable as the work progressed as follows, viz., when the boilers were plated £2,000, when the whole of the work was ready for fixing on board £2,000, & the remaining £1,800 when the S. should be fully completed & tried under steam, any disputes to be settled by arbn., & certain old materials, on board the S., of the estimated value of £353 to become the property of defts. The S. made a voyage after the date of the contract, & on her return pltfs., on June 28, 1872, gave notice to defts. that she was ready to receive her boilers & machinery. Defts. were at that time at work upon the engines, etc., at their factory, but same were not then ready for fixing. The S. was sent on another voyage, on which, in the following Oct., she was wholly lost. In the previous Aug. the boilers had been plated by defts., & on the 27th of that month pltfs.' inspector certified that defts. were entitled to receive the first instalment, £2,000, which was paid. By the early part of Jan., 1873, the whole of the work was ready for fixing on board, & on the 13th of that month pltfs.' inspector certified for the payment of the second £2,000, & that amount was also paid. At that time it was known by pltfs., but not by defts., that the S. was lost. In Apr., defts., having by that time heard of the loss of the S. applied to pltfs. for payment of the remaining £1,800, alleging that they were prevented by the loss from fulfilling their contract. Pltfs. refused to pay, contending that they had paid enough to cover the amount due for work actually done. At that time defts. had done 71 per cent. of the work contracted for, the proportionate value of which was £4,118. In May pltfs. demanded of defts. the delivery of the engines & boilers, which the latter refused unless the balance of the contract price was paid to them. They offered to submit the dispute to arbn. within the terms of the contract, which offer pltfs. refused, & brought an action for the machinery & to recover damages for its detention, or to recover the sums they had paid to defts. as money had & received to pltfs.' use:—Held: (1) the contract was an undividable one for work & labour to be done on the ship; (2) as its full performance was rendered impossible by the loss of the vessel both parties were released, & no property in any portion of the work certified by the inspector to have been properly done had passed to pltfs., & they could not recover same in detinue; (3) pltfs. could not recover back the two sums of £2,000 or either of them as money had & received to their use.—ANGLO-EGYPTIAN NAVIGATION CO. v. actually built to the approved model, & delivered under reservation of a claim of damages, was deficient in carrying capacity. In an action brought by the purchaser for damages for breach of contract:—Held: it was no defence to show that it was impossible to build a seaworthy ship of the required dimensions & carrying capacity according to the model.—GILLESPIE (F.) & CO. v. alia) any difficulties, impediments, or obstructions whatsoever & howsoever occasioned the contractors should, in the opinion of the engineer, have been unduly delayed or impeded in the completion of the contract, it should be lawful for the engineer to grant an extension of the time for completion. By a notice given by the Ministry of Munitions in Feb., 1915, in exercise of the powers conferred by Defence of the Realm Acts & Regulations, the contractors were required to cease work on their contract, & they ceased work accordingly. The contractors claimed that the effect of the notice was to put an end to the contract:—Held: (1) the provision for extending the time did not apply to the prohibition of the Ministry; (2) the interruption created by the prohibition was of such a character & duration as to make the contract when resumed a different contract from the contract when broken off, & the contract had ceased to be operative.—METROPOLITAN WATER BOARD v. 284. ——— Applts. contracted with resps. that the latter should build a ship for them, according to approved plans & specifications, for £127,500, the steamer to be delivered by the end of Jan., 1915. The contract provided that in the event of any delays due to causes beyond the builders' control which should interfere with construction of the vessel, the builders should be allowed a corresponding extension of time. By reason of the interference of the Government staying the building of merchant vessels for a time, it was impossible to carry out the contract. Eventually the Board of Trade sanctioned the building of a standard vessel for applts., but resps. declined to put it in hand, contending that the contract they had agreed to carry out had gone so completely that the building of the ship as a standard ship was a wholly new contract:—Held: the interference of the Government was of such a character & duration as to make the building of the ship as contracted for a wholly different contract from the contract which resps. had agreed to execute, & the contract had ceased to be operative, & resps. were entitled to refuse to build the standard ship in place of the screw

285. ——— Defts. agreed to build two ships for plths. under two contracts, which, except as to price & date of delivery, were identical. One contract contained a clause providing that "whereas no delivery date can be specified the builders will make their best endeavours to give as early delivery as possible, which they anticipate will be early in 1918. If the builders be delayed by strikes, wars, riots, insurrection, or other unforeseen occurrence of any kind whatever, the builders shall be allowed an extension of time." The other contract contained a similar clause except that the word "early" was omitted before "in 1918." In Dec., 1916, the Government made an order forbidding the construction of any but standard ships, & this made it impossible for the time being to go on with the work for plths. In an action for a declaration that the contracts were still valid and subsisting:—Held: the interference on the part of the Government had so changed the state of things that the principle of frustration applied, & the action failed.—WOODFIELD STEAM SHIPPING Co., LTD. v. 286. ——— Prohibition of importation of materials.—Plths. contracted with defts. in May, 1914, to do carpenters' & joiners' work required in the erection of a mill, part of the work to be done consisting in the flooring of the mill with maple boards. The completion of the flooring became impossible owing to a prohibition of the importation of maple, & plths. applied under Cts. (Emergency Powers) Act, 1917 (c. 25), s. 1 (1), that the contract should be suspended or annulled:—Held: in the circumstances the proper course was not to suspend, but to annul the contract.—SCHOFIELD (C.) & Co. v. MAPLE MILL, LTD. (1918), 34 T. L. R. 423.

287. ——— Ship requisitioned by Admiralty—Completion by Admiralty—Compensation.—Plths. having entered into a contract for the construction of a steamer, contracted with defts. for the sale to them of the vessel when complete at a profit of £14,000, of which defts. paid £10,000 on the signing of the agreement. When the vessel was only partially completed she was requisitioned by the Admty., who completed her according to entirely different plans:—Held: plths.' contract had become impossible of performance, & their action for the balance of their profit failed, but they might have a future equitable claim against defts. to share in the compensation payable by the Admty., in the event of defts. being treated as the owners of the ship.—DALE S. d. Failure to make progress payments.]—To a declaration in an action for breach of a contract contained in an indenture, whereby deft. covenanted to build a house for pltf's, deft. pleaded that pltf's. had by withholding the monthly payment due to deft., contrary to the terms of the indenture, & by their architect refusing the monthly estimates, etc., hindered & obstructed deft. in the prosecution of the work, & thereby, of their own wrong, caused the breach complained of. On demurrer:—Held: the performance of deft.'s covenants was dependent upon the performance of pltf's., & the pleas were a sufficient answer to the declaration.—HOSKINS v. BARBER (1879), 7 emp. Wood, 264.—CAN.

e. —.]—Under a building contract payments were to be made during the progress of the work, & if default was made in such payments for fourteen days after the amount should have been certified pltf. was to be at liberty to suspend the works. h. On delay or default—Failure to rectify defects after notice—Delay caused by default of employers.]—In an action for wrongfully preventing pltf's. from completing the works in the contract, defts. pleaded that pltf's. were not proceeding with diligence, or with such speed as would be necessary for their completion within the time specified, & that in accordance with the contract notice was served by defts.' engineer requiring pltf's. to rectify the matter, & pltf's. failed to rectify them for more than seven days after service of the notice; & defts. afterwards elected to take the whole of the works out of pltf's. hands, & gave them notice thereof. Pltf's. replied that the failure to rectify the matters mentioned in the engineer's notice, & to use the requisite diligence & speed therein referred to, was caused by delay & default of defts. & their engineer, in providing the lands permanently required for the execution of the works, & in supplying plans & drawings, & in setting out land, defining rivers, drains, & embankments, & in giving pltf's. such particulars as would enable them to proceed with said works:—Held: these replies were good.—*ARTERIAL DRAINAGE CO., LTD. v. l. — Contract reserving penalty.]—Held: defts. were not entitled to take over the work & dismiss pltf's. therefrom because the work was not completed by the date specified in the contract, the contract expressly providing a pecuniary penalty for such non-completion, to which remedy defts.

m. — Caused by employers.]—Held: defts. being responsible for the delay, were not justified in taking the work out of pltf's. hands.—BECK v. YORK (1914), 7 O. W. N. 493.—CAN.

n. — Breach of contract—Forfeiture of license to enter.]—Pltf. refused to comply with his contract & undertook to hold possession of the lands for the purpose of erecting a different building:—Held: (1) the contract amounted to a license from the owner to the builder to enter upon the lands for the purpose of erecting the building contracted for; (2) by pltf.'s own action his right to occupy the lands had come to an end & defts. could resume possession & remove pltf.—McINNIS v. PUBLIC SCHOOL BOARD OF SCHOOL SECTION 16 IN THE TOWNSHIP OF TAY (1915), 9 O. W. N. 281.—CAN.

o. — Rescission of contract—On employers refusal to pay.]—During the continuance of the works, disputes arose as to the amount due to pltf., although certified by the architect as agreed, & in consequence pltf. refused to continue the work, whereupon defts., after giving due notice, entered upon the premises. Pltf. sued for damages in consequence of the defts. having taken possession & for the balance due on the accounts:—Held: pltf. having rescinded the contract, on defts.' refusal to pay the amount certified, defts. were entitled after due notice to enter & take possession.—KUPPUSAMI NAIDU v. SMITH & CO. (1895), 1 L. R. 19 Mad. 178.—IND.

p. — Novel construction—Vague specifications.]—It was not clear from the evidence that the work, the method of construction of which was novel, could satisfactorily have been constructed upon the lines of the vague specifications. Pltf's. were dismissed by defts.:—Held: pltf's. had prosecuted absolute property of the co., & be valued or sold, & the amount of such valuation or sale credited to the contractor in reduction of the money, if any, recoverable from him by the co. The co. took the execution of the contract out of the contractor's hand under this clause, & the contractor brought an action for breach of contract, which, with all matters in difference between the parties, was referred to arbn.:—Held: the plant & materials did not become the absolute property of the co. unless loss or expense had been occasioned to them, & an interlocutory injunction should be awarded to restrain them from removing & selling the plant & materials pending the arbn.—GARRETT v. SALISBURY & DORSET JUNCTION RY. CO. (1866), L. R. 2 Eq. 358; 14 L. T. 693; 12 Jur. N. S. 495; 14 W. R. 816.

r. Whether notice condition precedent.]—Upon the evidence:—Held: defts. were entitled to treat pltf. as in default, but defts. should have notified pltf. of their intention to cancel unless the default should be remedied, that being a condition precedent to the right of cancellation; & defts. not having so notified pltf., defts. were liable for a breach of contract in stopping the work.—*McMILLAN & FARRELL v. 291 i. Sufficiency of notice.]—A notice to be given by the architect to the contractor prior to forfeiture should intimate to the contractor in what respect the architect is dissatisfied & what he requires to be done, so that during the time mentioned in the notice, the contractor might have an opportunity of removing the objection, in default of which, the architect might dismiss him at the expiration of the time, but not before.—SMITH v. GORDON (1880), 30 C. P. 553.—CAN.

291 ii. —.]—Under the circumstances:—Held: a notice specifying the particular defects to be remedied was a condition precedent to action & a protest in general terms was not a sufficient compliance therewith to place the contractors in default.—RICHMOND TOWN v. LAFONTAINE (1899), 30 S. C. R. 155.—CAN.

which it was covenanted that defts.' engineer should have power to direct the way in which various portions of the work should be done, & if it should appear to him that they were not properly executed, & with due expedition, it should be lawful for him to give notice in writing to pltf. to alter any improper work, & to supply proper & sufficient materials & labour, & with due expedition to proceed therewith, & if pltf. should for the space of seven days after such notice had been given fail to comply therewith, then it should be lawful for defts.' engineer to take the work out of pltf.'s hands. It appearing to defts.' engineer that the works were not being properly executed, & with due expedition, he gave the following written notice to the plaintiff:—"I give notice to you to supply all proper & sufficient materials & labour for the due prosecution of the works, & with due expedition to proceed therewith, & further, that if you shall for the space of seven days after the giving of this notice fail or neglect to comply therewith, I shall as engineer, & on behalf of [defendants], take the works wholly out of your hands":—Held: the notice was sufficiently specific.—PAULING v. DOVER CORPN. (1855), 10 Exch. 753; 24 L. J. Ex. 128; 156 E. R. 644.

293. — Failure to supply plans.]—Pltf. contracted with defts. to erect buildings. By the 27th clause of the specification it was agreed that, if pltf. should not, according to the determination the date fixed for completion to determine a contract & enforce forfeiture, must give the contractor a reasonable time in which to complete the work, & the contractor must, with reference to such reasonable time for completion, make default or delay in diligently continuing to execute or advance the work to the satisfaction of the engineer. The engineer is to decide having regard to a time that in the opinion of the ct. is reasonable & the contractor is to have notice of his decision.—R. v. STEWART (1901), 32 S. C. R. 483.—CAN.

291 iv. —.]—Held: the notice given to pltf. by the architect, advising pltf. that unless he "proceeded satisfactorily with the work within seventy-two hours after mailing of the letter," the architect would certify the facts to the owner, was lacking in the element of specific objection & did not indicate in what respect the work was to be prosecuted.—ANDERSON v. CHANDLER (1902), 1 O. W. R. 417; (1903), 2 O. W. R. 186.—CAN.

291 v. —.]—In a contract between pltf. & M., it was provided that in case of M.'s bkpcy. pltf. might take possession of the works & carry them on in the manner & subject to the conditions provided in the contract. The contract provided that pltf. might, on giving notice of their intention so to do, take the work out of the hands of M. & carry it on under the direction of the city surveyor. It was also provided that they might, on giving notice of their intention so to do, take the works out of the hands of M. & re-let them to another contractor. M. became a bkpt., & a notice was sent of pltf.'s intention forthwith to take possession of the works, & to take steps for ensuring the due completion of the contract, & the works were then let to a second contractor at a higher price:—Held: the notice was not such a notice as was provided for by the contract, & the right of pltf. to charge M. with the loss sustained on the re-letting being dependent on the validity of this notice, pltf. could not recover against deft., who was M.'s surety.—WELLINGTON (MAYOR, ETC.)

291 vi. — Letter following verbal conversation.]—The architect verbally pointed out certain defects to the contractor, & subsequently wrote to him: "I also notice that windows built in are not as shown on drawings, & must ask that they be altered as pointed out some time back. The timbers are not as specified. Kindly attend to these items, & oblige":—Held: this letter did not constitute such a certificate & notice as was required by the contract to justify cancellation, & the verbal conversation could not be incorporated into the document so as to supplement it.—GREEN v. PAGE (1905), T. S. 599.—S. AF.

a. Effect of giving notice—Rights of contractor.]—Held: the architect, having, under the authority of a clause in the agreement, elected to give a notice to pltf. calling his attention to certain parts of the work remaining incomplete, requiring him to complete them within three days, & stating that, failing compliance, the contract would be cancelled & the work completed by the architect, had, by taking advantage, on behalf of defts., of the benefits of this clause, conferred upon pltf. the corresponding benefits, that the work must be paid for by defts. with a deduction of the cost of such labour & materials as was incurred in completing the contract; & an election having once been made, neither the owners nor the architect could withdraw.—WATTS v. McLEAY (1911), 19 W. L. R. 916.—CAN.

b. By architect—Extent of authority.]—A building contract provided that in case the works were not carried on with such expedition & with such materials & workmanship as the architect might deem proper, then, with the special & written authority of the proprietor, he should be at liberty, after giving him seven days' notice in writing, to dismiss the contractor, & employ other persons to finish the works:—Held: (1) such special authority meant an authority to be acted of the architect, exercise due diligence, etc., defts. might determine the contract & enter on the works. The architect certified that pltf. was not exercising due diligence, & defts., under the above clause, determined the contract. To an action by pltf. for not allowing him to complete the works defts. pleaded a justification under the 27th clause of the specification, to which pltf. replied that his failure to exercise due diligence, etc., was caused by the delay & default of defts. & their architect in not providing plans & setting out the land. Defts. rejoined that the non-exercise of due diligence, etc., were not, according to the determination of the architect, caused by the default of defts. & their architect:—Held: under the contract the architect could not bind pltf. by his determination that defts. had not by their default prevented pltf. from proceeding with the work, & the replication was good, & the rejoinder to it bad.—ROBERTS v. BURY IMPROVEMENT COMRS. (1870), L. R. 5 C. P. 310; 39 L. J. C. P. 129; 22 L. T. 132; 34 J. P. 821; 18 W. R. 702, Ex. Ch.

294. Unreasonably—Absence of mala fides.—By a contract pltf. was to execute works to the satisfaction of defts., with a condition that if the works should not proceed as rapidly & satisfactorily as defts. required, they should have power to enter & employ men to complete the works, & deduct the cost from any money due to pltf. To an action by pltf. for work & labour, defts. pleaded setting out the contract, & averring that the works not having proceeded as rapidly as they required, they entered under the above condition, & they claimed to deduct the cost incurred from money due to pltf. Pltf. replied that the works did proceed as rapidly & satisfactorily as defts. could reasonably require, & that defts. "unreasonably, improperly & capriciously" required the works to proceed, etc.:—Held: in the absence of any allegation of mala fides in defts., the replication was bad.

The intention was that defts., if dissatisfied, whether with or without sufficient reason, with the progress of the work, should have the absolute & unqualified power to put on additional hands & get the work done, & deduct the cost from the contract price payable to pltf., & if these terms had been ever so unreasonable, we should have felt upon with reference to some individual contractor, & not a general authority to dismiss in his discretion any workman or contractor.

Another condition provided that the architect might dismiss any workman who might be disapproved of:—Held: this applied only to a workman as distinguished from a contractor.—SMITH v. GORDON (1880), 30 C. P. 553.—CAN.

g. On expiry of reasonable time after notice.—Held: pltf., being entitled to a reasonable time to do their work to the satisfaction of the architect, after notification of defects, bound to give effect to them, & to hold that, so long as defts. were acting bona fide under an honest sense of dissatisfaction, although that dissatisfaction might be ill-founded & unreasonable, they were entitled to insist on the condition, & consequently that the replication, which only alleges that their dissatisfaction was unreasonable & capricious, but which stops short of alleging mala fides in defts. in acting as is stated in the plea, is insufficient (COCKBURN, C.J.).—STADHARD v. SUB-SECT. 2.—TIME.

295. Before any payments due—Amount paid to be considered full value.—Pltf. contracted by deed with defts., as a local board of health, to execute certain works, according to a specification, & that the works should be begun, proceeded with, & completed, to the satisfaction of their surveyor. Payment was to be made by instalments, upon the certificate of the surveyor. By the deed it was provided "that if pltf., from bkpcy., insolvency, or any cause whatsoever, should not proceed with the works to the satisfaction of the surveyor, it should be lawful for defts., after three days' notice, signed by their surveyor, to employ other persons to complete the works, & that the deed should, at the expiration of the notice, be void, at the option of defts., & the amount already paid to pltf. should be considered the full value of the works which should up to that time have been executed, & the materials on the premises should become the property of defts. without any further payment":—Held: this forfeiture clause might be enforced by defts., although pltf. had not become entitled to any payment for the work done.—DAVIES v. 296. Within time fixed for completion.—A building contract by which pltf. contracted with defts. to construct a dock & other works in connection therewith, provided as follows:—"Should the contractor fail to proceed in the execution of the works in the manner & at the rate of progress required by the engineer, or to maintain the works as hereinafter mentioned to the satisfaction of the engineer, his contract shall, at the option of the co., but not otherwise, be considered void as far as relates to the works or maintenance remaining to be done, & all sums of money that may be due to should not have been discharged.—THORNTON-SMITH Co. v. WOODRUFF (1909), 14 O. W. R. 84, 691; 1 O. W. N. 45.—CAN.

296 i. Within time fixed for completion.—A building contract provided that if the architect during the progress of the work should discover that the contractor was not proceeding in a sufficiently expeditious manner, he might determine the contract:—Held: after the expiration of the contract time, without any extension of time having been given, the architect had no power to determine the contract under this provision.—BAILEY v. HART (1883), 9 V. L. R. 66.—AUS.

the contractor, together with all materials & implements in his possession & all sums named as penalties for the non-fulfilment of the contract, shall be forfeited to the co., & the amount shall be considered as ascertained damages for breach of contract." The contract provided that "the whole of the works should be entirely completed on or before Aug. 31, 1873." The works were not completed by that date. There were other clauses in the contract in the following terms:—"If the contractors shall not complete the works within the period limited for the purpose, or if they shall become bkpt., or if from any cause whatever, not arising from any acts done or omitted to be done by the co. contrary to the true intent & meaning of these presents, they shall be delayed or prevented in the completion of the works according to the specification, it shall be lawful for the co., without any previous notice, to take the works entirely or in part out of their hands, & to employ any other contractor to complete same. Should the engineer be at any time dissatisfied with the nature or mode of proceeding with, or at the rate of progress or maintenance of, the works, or any part thereof, he shall have full power to procure & make use of all labour & materials from the money that may then be due or that may become due to the contractor, but it is hereby expressly declared that the possession of this power by the engineer shall not in any degree relieve the contractor from his obligation to proceed in the execution of & complete the works with the requisite expedition or to maintain them as hereinafter mentioned." On Jan. 22, 1874, & consequently after the time fixed by the contract for completion of the works, defts. gave notice to plffs. to avoid the contract & thereupon took possession of the works & of the materials & implements of plffs.:—Held: the above clause, with reference to the avoidance of the contract & the forfeiture of the contractor's implements and materials, could only be enforced before the time originally fixed for completion of the works had expired.—*WALKER v. The work not having been proceeded with to the engineer's satisfaction, the corpn., before the expiration of the second extension of time, exercised the powers above conferred:—Held: (1) under the contract the power conferred could only be exercised during the time fixed for the completion of the work or the extension thereof, but under the specifications thereafter; (2) even if the corpn. could not under the contract avail themselves of the second extension as granted informally, the powers

The estate agent, under the power, extended the time & gave the contractor a reasonable time after the day named. On a demurrer by plff. to a statement of defence, relying on the power of entry:—Held: the defence was bad, for as it admitted the allegation in the statement of claim that the acts complained of were done before the extension of time so given had expired, defts. could not exercise the power relied on simply on the ground of delay up to a time within such extended period, although they might have exercised it on the proper grounds, even before the extension of time given had expired.—

A proper notice was given to them, asking them to do so, & they refused. After the necessary time stipulated for in the contract had elapsed, plffs. went on & completed:—Held: they were entitled, under the terms of the contract, to recover from defts. the amounts expended by them in reconstructing the building & finishing it according to specifications.—COCKSHUTT PLOW CO. v. unpaid balance of the amount to be paid under the contract, plffs. were entitled to be paid the difference; but, if the expense of completing the building exceeded the balance of the amount to be paid under the contract, defts. were entitled to recover the excess from plffs. For this defts. counter-claimed:—Held: (1) defts. were entitled to set off the costs of completing the building according to the original plans & specifications against the contract price; (2) they were not entitled to recover the whole amount expended by them in the work of restoring or completing, but only such as came within the plans & specifications; (3) defts. could not recover the cost of work they did not perform, nor recover damages for depreciation owing to defects.—GRACE v. OSLER 19 W. L. R. 102, 326.—CAN.

s. — Deductions for plant & materials used.]—Held: (1) the work not having been completed within the time stipulated, or in accordance with the contract, the owners could take the contract out of the hands of the contractors, & charge them with the extra cost of completing the same; (2) in making up that amount the amount awarded for the value of the plant & materials taken over from the contractors should be deducted.—BERLINGUET v. The contractor made default, & defts. completed the work:—Held: (1) pltf., having broken his contract, was not entitled to final payment after the work had been completed; (2) a clause providing for an alternative mode of recoupment after default could not be construed as providing for a different method of performance of the contract.—SIMPSON v. He was to be paid £75 for the work, & was to be entitled to have for his own use all materials pulled down. In the event of the work being delayed F. was to pay W. £1 for every working day the work was delayed. The work was in fact delayed, & some time after the expiration of the time limited by the contract for completion of the work W. complained of F.'s delay, when F. said that he could not tell if the work would be completed in four months. A fortnight after that interview W. forcibly took possession of the site, & employed another contractor to complete the work. F. had paid a deposit of £100 to W. for the due fulfilment of the work. F. brought an action to recover the £100 deposit & for damages for breach of contract:—Held: W. had no right to determine the contract, & F. was entitled to the return of the deposit, the contract price, & damages for lost profit on the unfinished balance of the contract.—*FELTON v. g. Injunction — Urgent necessity for completion.]—A contract entered into between road trustees & a contractor for the erection of a bridge forming part of a turnpike road contained a stipulation that in the event of the contractor failing to carry on the work in a satisfactory manner, or to complete the same before July 31, 1866, the trustees should be entitled, on the certificate of their engineer to that effect, to enter into possession of the works, & complete the same with the contractor's tools & material. The trustees having, in Aug., 1866, obtained this certificate, & a decree-arbitral from an arbiter named in the contract, authorising them to enter into possession, did so. The contractor having raised a reduction of the decree-arbitral, presented an application for interim-interdict against the trustees. On obtaining the report of an engineer that there was urgent necessity for the completion of the bridge:—Held: the trustees should be allowed to proceed with the works on finding caution for any damage which the contractor might instruct.—JOHNSTON v. DUMFRIESSHIRE ROAD TRUSTEES (1867), 5 Macph. (Ct. of Sess.) 1127.—SCOT.

306. Injunction—Delay authorised by engineer.]—Pltfs. contracted to execute works on a railway, to the satisfaction of the engineer of the co., by Oct. 1, 1848, making such alterations in, & hastening, the works as the engineer should direct, & the co. agreed to pay for such works a stipulated sum, & thereof to pay a proportionate part monthly, according to the value of the works which the engineer should certify to have been done, retaining 5 per cent. of the certified amount, & the contract provided that all disputes as to fact, discretion or opinion were to be referred to the absolute determination & award of the engineer, whose decision was to be final, & without appeal, & if the engineer should be dissatisfied with the works, the co. might take possession of & complete same, at the expense of pltfs., after giving them fourteen days' notice. The works were delayed, with the assent of the co., but in Jan., 1849, the engineer required the works to be prosecuted with increased speed, & insisted that the line should be opened on June 1. On May 21 the co. gave notice to pltfs., in the terms of the contract, that they would, at the expiration of fourteen days, take possession of & proceed with the works. Pltfs. thereupon filed their bill to restrain the co. from taking such possession, alleging that, when pltfs. were proceeding with due speed, the engineer had, by the authority of the directors, ordered that the works should be delayed for a considerable time, that the co. had waived the completion of the works by Oct., 1848, & that pltfs. were only bound to carry on & complete same at a rate computed on the footing of the original contract, & modified by the delay which the co. had required, that the engineer had, by the order of the directors, given monthly certificates for less than a fair proportion of the contract sum, according to the work actually done at such times, that a large sum was due to pltfs. which had not been paid, & that the co. had not, in fact, paid all the sums which had been certified. The bill denied any default on the part of pltfs., & charged that the notice was given for the fraudulent purpose of avoiding the payment of sums due to pltfs., & of ejecting them from the works, & procuring other persons to finish the works at an earlier period than pltfs. were bound to do. The bill also prayed an account of what was due to pltfs. from the co. in respect of the works, & an injunction to restrain the co. from proceeding against pltfs. for penalties under the contract, on the ground of their non-completion. Upon demurrer by the co., it was objected, (1) the contract had not been completed on the part of pltfs., & it was not a contract of which, as against pltfs., if they had been defts., the ct. could have decreed a specific performance; (2) the entire control of the works was by the contract given to the engineer, whose decision was to be without appeal:—Held: pltfs. were entitled to the aid of a ct. of equity, & the demurrer must

307. — General principles.]—Upon motion for an injunction by a contractor to restrain the co., whose works he had contracted to execute, from availing themselves of a clause in the contract enabling them to declare the contract void as to the work yet incomplete, from declaring the sums due for work done to be forfeited, & from entering on the works in progress:—Held: unless the case was so clear as to be almost undisputed, the ct. would not issue an injunction; (2) in deciding such a case, the ct. would always consider whether greater wrong would be done to pltf. by withholding, or to deft. by granting, such an injunction; (3) to issue an injunction according to the last clause of the notice of motion would be analogous to ordering specific performance of a contract, which the ct. had no power to enforce, but the remedy for any breach of which must lie in damages.—MUNRO v. WIVENHOE & BRIGHTLINGSEA RY. CO. (1865), 4 De G. J. & Sm. 723; 12 L. T. 655; 11 Jur. N. S. 612; 13 W. R. 880; 46 E. R. 1100, L. JJ.

308. — Damages ample compensation for breach.]—Pltf. contracted to execute the works of defts., & the contract provided that, in certain events, the directors might take the further performance of the contract out of his hands & themselves execute the remaining works, & also that a person named should be the referee in all disputes between the parties. Disputes having arisen, the co. by their engineer violently, as the bill alleged, took possession of the works, & upon his bill being filed, pltf. moved for an injunction to restrain them from such possession & from interfering with pltf. in the further execution of the works:—Held: as the ct. would have no power to compel a due completion of the contract by pltf., if it reinstated him, whereas he would have ample remedy in damages if he were improperly displaced by defts., the injury to defts. of granting an injunction would far exceed that to pltf. of refusing it, & an injunction must be refused. Seemle: in certain circumstances such an injunction might properly issue.—GARRETT v. BANSTEAD & EPSOM DOWNS RY. CO. (1864), 4 De G. J. & Sm. 462; 12 L. T. 654; 11 Jur. N. S. 591; 13 W. R. 878; 46 E. R. 997, L. JJ.

granted should then cease. Deft. contracted with the corpn. for the construction of the new bridge. Subsequently the engineer of pltf. reported that, in his opinion, deft. had failed to make such progress with the works as was requisite to insure their completion within the time limited by the contract. The corpn. thereupon duly served deft. with notice, under certain provisions of the contract, of their intention, to take up & complete the works; & upon deft.'s refusal to give up the works, the corpn. brought an action, & moved for an interlocutory injunction to restrain deft. from preventing them from taking up & completing the works, & to restrain him from withholding the works from them. Deft. alleged that pltf. had caused delay by their own default, & that alterations had been made & extra

309. Pending arbitration.]—An agreement between a railway co. & a contractor provided that in case the contractor should be guilty of any delay or default in the fulfilment of the contract, the co. might take the execution of the works out of his hand, & might use all or any of his plant, materials, or implements; & that in addition to all other rights & remedies which the co. might have against the contractor, the co. might apply any money to which the contractor would otherwise be entitled under his contract towards satisfaction of all losses or expenses occasioned to the co. by the delay, & that all the materials, plant, & implements, which at the time of such delay or default should be in or about the site of the works, should thereupon become the absolute property of the co., & be valued or sold, & the amount of such valuation or sale credited to the contractor in reduction of the money, if any, recoverable from him by the co. The co. took the execution out of the contractor's hand under this clause. The contractor brought an action for breach of contract, which with all matters in difference between the parties was referred to arbn.:—Held: the plant & materials did not become the absolute property of the co. unless loss or expense had been occasioned to them, & an interlocutory injunction should be awarded to restrain them from removing & selling the plant & materials pending the arbn.—GARRETT v. SALISBURY & DORSET JUNCTION RY. CO. (1866), L. R. 2 Eq. 358; 14 L. T. 693; 12 Jur. N. S. 495; 14 W. R. 816.

311. — —.]—On a motion to restrain defts. from acting on a notice, given by them or their engineer pursuant to a contract between pltf. & defts., from entering on or taking possession of works in course of execution under such contract & for damages, it appeared that defts. were carrying out a scheme for a water supply, & had contracted with pltf. to sink certain wells. The work was to be performed to the satisfaction of defts.' engineer, & any dispute was to go to arbn., & if in the judgment of the engineer sufficient dispatch was not used defts. or their engineer might dismiss the contractors & their workmen. Difficulties having arisen in carrying out the work, & delay being thereby occasioned, defts. gave notice dismissing the contractors & their men:—Held: (1) the terms of the contract were consistent as a whole, & the reference to arbn. was engrafted upon them, & the contractors were not bound to give up to the engineer the decision of every question; (2) the ct. ought to imply that defts. would not act upon the summary clauses until the arbitrators had affirmed the judgment of the engineer, & injunction granted to preserve the status quo until trial or an award should be made.—FOSTER & DICKSEE v. 312. Materials not affixed.]—B., a builder, contracted with A. & others, trustees of a new hotel about to be erected, to build the hotel, except as to the ironmonger's, plumber's, & glazier's work, for a specified sum, & covenanted to complete certain portions of the work within certain specified periods, being paid by instalments at corresponding dates, & that if he should neglect to complete any portion within the time limited, he should forfeit & pay £250 as liquidated damages. The agreement contained a clause empowering the trustees, in case (inter alia) B. should become bkpt., to take possession of the work already done by him, & to put an end to the agreement, which should be altogether null & void, & that the trustees, in such case, should pay B. or his assignees only so much money as the architect should adjudge to be the value of the work actually done & fixed by B., as compared with the whole work to be done. The course of business during the progress of the work was for the clerk of the works to inspect every article which came in under the contract, & none were received except on his approval. After the works had proceeded some time, B. became bkpt. Before his bkpcy., certain wooden sash-frames had been delivered by him on the premises, approved by the clerk of the works, & returned to B. for the purpose of having iron pulleys, belonging to the trustees, affixed to them, & at the time of the bkpcy., these frames, with the pulleys attached to them, were at B.'s shop. He afterwards, but before the issuing of the fiat, re-delivered them to the trustees, & the sash-frames being afterwards demanded of them by B.'s assignees, they gave an unqualified refusal to deliver them up:—Held: (1) the property in the wooden sash-frames had not passed to the trustees at the time of the bkpcy.; (2) they were not entitled to retain them under the agreement, as being work already done, they not having been fixed to the hotel, but even if they were within that clause of the agreement, it could not bind the assignees, inasmuch as their right accrued on the bkpcy., whereas the option of the trustees was not to be exercised until after the bkpcy.—TRIPP v. ARMITAGE (1839), 4 M. & W. 687; 1 Horn. & H. 442; 8 L. J. Ex. 107; 3 Jur. 249; 150 E. R. 1597.

313. — Right to use—After notice.]—A railway co. contracted with R. that R. should build a bridge for the co. on their railway. R. was to provide implements & materials, & if the co.'s architect considered that R. did not proceed with proper expedition, the co., on seven days' notice, might employ other or additional workmen, & in that case, might use the implements & materials of R. which for the time being should be used by R. in or about the works, & R. was to repay all additional expenses. The co. were to have a lien on the implements & materials which for the time being should be upon the ground whereon the bridge was to be built, as a security for the completion of the works, R. undertaking to execute such deeds as counsel for the co. should advise for confirming the lien & security. A fiat of bkpcy. issued against R. on July 31, on which day the co. took possession of implements & materials used by R. in building the bridge. On Aug. 1 the co. gave notice, as provided in the contract; on Aug. 2 they commenced completing the bridge, & in so doing used some of the materials, & detained the rest:—Held: the co. were not entitled to use the implements & materials till the expiration of the seven days' notice, & the previous use was a conversion, but they were entitled, after the seven days, to use all implements & materials used by the contractor on any part of the works for constructing the bridge, including the materials of a temporary railway constructed for bringing articles to the bridge from an adjoining river, & a crane at the end of such temporary railway, although not on the co.'s land.—*HAWTHORN v. J. having become a bkpt. before the vessel was completed:—Held: pltf. could not maintain trover against J.'s assignees, as the agreement did not amount to a sale of the vessel in its then present state, but was an entire contract to purchase when finished, until which time, no property passed to the purchaser.—*LAIDLER v. The agreement contained the following proviso: "Provided always & it is hereby expressly agreed between the parties, their exors., etc., that, in case A. should fail to complete the ship according to the covenants & stipulations hereinbefore contained to be performed on his part, then it shall be lawful for B. to enter upon & take possession of the ship or vessel, which from & after the payment of the first instalment shall be & be deemed & continue to be as soon as the ship or vessel shall be commenced, in every respect & for every purpose the property of B., & to cause the works hereby agreed to be done to be completed by any person whom he shall see fit to employ therein, using such of the materials of A. as shall be applicable to the purpose," etc., A. to re-pay to B. so much as he should expend thereon in excess of the contract price. A. having failed to complete the ship by the stipulated time, B. took possession of her, & after an act of bkpcy. committed by A., proceeded to finish her, using therein certain materials which were in the yard, & were suitable but had not been specifically appropriated by A. to the ship. Some of these materials had been selected by B. before A.'s bkpcy., & some were placed within the carcase of the ship, the remainder in a shed alongside, but none of them had actually been used by B. before A.'s bkpcy.:—Held: the assignees were entitled to recover against B. the whole value of these materials.—*BAKER v. 318. ——— Materials detached for convenience.]—In Mar., 1854, J. agreed with pltf. to build him a screw steamer, according to the specifications by H., for £16,000 payable by instalments, as follows: Four sums of £1,000 each on days named in Mar., Apr., May & June, £3,000 on Aug. 10, 1854, provided the vessel was plated & decks laid, £3,000 on Oct. 10, provided the vessel was ready for trial, £3,000 on Jan. 10, 1855, provided the vessel was according to contract & properly completed, and £3,000 on Mar. 10, 1855, or by bill of exchange dated Jan. 10. The building commenced in Mar. & continued till Dec., 1854, when J. became bkpt. At that time the ship was on the slip in frame, not decked & about two-thirds plated. The instalments contracted for were paid to J. by pltf. in advance. The building of the ship was carried on under the superintendence of H., on behalf of pltf., who examined & rejected the materials when necessary, & caused others to be substituted. Soon after the building began pltf. named the ship the B., & she was thenceforth known by that name by J. & his workmen. In Oct. pltf.'s name was punched on the keel by J.'s assent, for the purpose of securing the ship to pltf. In Nov. J. was pressed to assign the B. & her engines & fittings to pltf., but he declined, on the ground that he would thus be signing himself & his creditors out of all he possessed, though during the discussion he admitted that she was the property of pltf. The steam engines were designed on a peculiar plan, & the engine-room was adapted to them, & the engine work was carried on by J. at the same time as the vessel, the parts of the engine being made & marked so as to fit together, & no other engines were made by J. during the same period. Iron plates & angle irons were made for the B., & pre-arranged for different parts of her, & marked accordingly, but not rivetted to her. A large quantity of plankings prepared & intended for the vessel, but not fastened to her, were on J.'s wharf at the date of the bkpcy.:—Held: the property in the ship passed to pltf. as she advanced in her progress towards completion, & such of the materials on the wharf as had been formed into shape for the ship & had been fitted into the ship, & approved as suitable for the ship, passed with the ship, though detached after having been fitted, & lying detached at the time of the bkpcy., but such of the materials as had not been so fitted in & approved as parts of the ship did not vest in pltf., although they had been worked up into shape for the use of the vessel & were intended to be fitted into & to form part of her.—*WOOD v. Extent to which property may pass—Materials vesting in employers—Right of user of tools.]—On the bkpcy. of a builder & abandonment of the contract, the building materials & tools he had brought upon the premises were retained by his employers:—Held: the employers were entitled to retain the materials in order to complete the work, subject to a claim for the value of them & to retain the tools was to be built under the superintendence of the resps., & the contract contained the following clause: "The vessel as she is constructed, & all her engines, boilers & machinery, & all materials from time to time intended for her or them, whether in the shipbuilding yard, workshop, river or elsewhere, shall immediately as same proceeds become the property of the purchasers, & shall not be within the ownership, control, or disposition of the builders, but the builders shall at all times have a lien thereon for their unpaid purchase money." Before the vessel was completed the shipbuilders became bkpt. Materials for the ship, marked with the ship's number & the place in the ship which they were intended to occupy, were lying at the railway station for delivery:—Held: as the contract was for a complete ship, & these materials had not been incorporated into the vessel, the property in them did not vest in the shipowner, but in the trustee of the sequestrated estate of the builders.—*REID v. Subsequently defts. obtained a licence for advertising under Advertising Stations (Rating) Act, 1889 (c. 27), s. 5. In an action by plffs. to restrain defts. from taking possession of the hoarding:—Held: (1) the hoarding did not belong to the building owner but to the builder, & the action failed; (2) defts. had no title when they took possession as they had not then obtained a licence.—*PARTINGTON ADVERTISING CO. v. PART XI. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 2.

o. What are plant & materials—Kitchen utensils & supplies.—F. agreed with defts. that all the plant, materials, etc., provided by him for the work should be, until completion, the property of defts., but that upon completion, all such plant & materials as should not have been used & converted should be delivered up to F. Pltf. based his claim to ownership of the seized property upon two absolute bills of sale by F. made & registered within a month of each other:—Held: pltf. could recover the value of any goods seized which had not been provided by F. for the work; but kitchen supplies & utensils were not plant, materials, or other things provided for the work.—CLANCY v. GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC RY. CO. (1910), 15 B. C. R. 497.—CAN.

p. —Horses.—By a clause of a railway contract all plant & things whatsoever, provided by the contractor were until the completion of the work to be the property of the co., when such as had not been used & converted into the works & remained undisposed of were to be delivered over to the contractor; in other clauses the words "teams & horses" were used as well as the word "plant":—Held: horses were not included in "plant."—MIDDLETON v. GOODACRE (1913), 18 B. C. R. 343; 50 S. C. R. 75.—CAN.

322 ii. —Work taken out of contractor's hands—On account of delay.—A contract contained a clause enabling defts. upon taking the works out of the contractors' hands, to use plant & materials of any description belonging to plffs. which should be on, or near to, or employed in the execution of, the works, without paying for same:—Held: a defence alleging that defts. had taken up the works under the contract for delay, & relying on the above clause, was a sufficient answer to an action for the conversion & detention of such plant & materials by defts.—MOHAN v. DUNDALK, NEWRY, & GREENORE RY. CO. (1880), 6 L. R. Ir. 477.—IR.

r. What materials pass—Materials brought on by unauthorised sub-contractor—Before & after notice to discontinue.—By a contract all work & material as delivered on the premises was to form part of the works & be considered the property of the owner, & not to be removed without his consent; the contractor to have liberty to remove all surplus material after he had completed the works. Without the architect's consent as required by the contract the contractor entered into a sub-contract with pltf. for part of the work, pltf. commenced work under

321. Nature & objects of vesting clause—Construction.—The usual clause in contracts for the construction of works or for building leases, providing that all materials brought on the ground are to become the property of the building owner, must be construed as vesting the materials in the building owner, subject to a condition of defeasance if the builder completes the works. It is a security to the building owner for the performance of the work. If the contractor fails to complete he cannot recover the materials, although the building owner does not complete the works himself or by another contractor.—HART v. PORTGAIN HARBOUR CO., LTD., [1903] 1 Ch. 690; 72 L. J. Ch. 426; 88 L. T. 341; 51 W. R. 461.

322. When property passes—Engineer to certify amount payable for materials delivered—Effect of certificate.—By an agreement, made between pltf. co. & deft., a contractor, for the construction of a railway, it was provided that, once a month, the co.'s engineer should certify the amount payable to the contractor in respect of the value of the materials delivered, & that such certificates should be paid by the co. seven days after presentation:—Held: the property in "materials delivered," upon their being certified for by the engineer, passed to the co., though the materials were not fixed.—BANBURY & CHELTENHAM DIRECT RY. CO. v. DANIEL (1884), 54 L. J. Ch. 265; 33 W. R. 321.

323. Extent to which property may pass—Materials vesting in employer—Contractor's right of user—Execution against employer.—Rails & other chattels which, by the terms of the contract, when placed on the land became the absolute property of the co., the contractor to have no property his sub-contract, & continued to work for some time, when he was ordered to discontinue by the architect:—Held: pltf. was entitled to remove from the premises material placed there after he was directed to discontinue, & also material delivered off the premises, as well as plant constituting the fixtures & the apparatus, etc., necessary for carrying on his business, or to recover from the owner the value of any material used by him in the buildings; but not any material placed there before he was ordered to discontinue.—ASHFIELD v. EDGELL (1891), 21 O. R. 195.—CAN.

323 i. Extent to which property may pass—Materials vesting in employer—Subsequent destruction by fire.—E., a builder, contracted with I. & Co., storekeepers, to make certain additions to their store. The contract provided that all materials to be used in the work, after being placed on the site, should be considered the property of I. & Co. After much of the material had been brought on to the ground, & some of the work done, this work & material as well as I. & Co.'s store were destroyed by accidental fire:—Held: E. could not recover for the materials as goods supplied on the ground that when brought on to the site they became the property of I. & Co.—EDWARDS v. IRELAND & CO. (1892), 11 N. Z. L. R. 80.—N.Z.

323 ii. —Liability of employer for wear & tear of contractor's plant.—A petition having been presented to the sheriff, praying for warrant to inventory the materials, plant, etc., of the contractor, & to take possession & use it in completing the works without being liable for wear & tear, & for interdict against the contractor therein, except the right of using them on the land for the purpose of the works, except that on completion of the line, as a condition precedent, the plant was to be given to the contractor as part consideration, or, if used by the co., to be paid for:—Held: not liable to be taken in execution for the co.'s debts.—BEESTON v. MARRIOTT (1864), 4 Giff. 436; 2 New Rep. 437; 8 L. T. 690; 9 Jur. N. S. 960; 11 W. R. 896; 66 E. R. 778.

324. ——— Execution against contractor.]—

By a building contract it was agreed that all materials brought on the land by the intended lessee should become the property of the intended lessors. The intended lessee entered & commenced building, but obtained no lease:—Held: the materials brought on the land by him vested in the intended lessors & were not liable to be taken in execution by a creditor of the intended lessee.—BLAKE v. After the ship had been partly paid for, it was seized by defts. as a distress for rent due from the builder. The person for whom the ship was being built paid the rent under protest, & sued to recover the amount:—Held: assuming the property in the ship to have passed to pltf. under the contract, still the ship, not having been sent or delivered to the builder, was liable to distress, & pltf. was not entitled to recover.—CLARKE v. Pltf. had nearly finished the erection of one tank when the contractors became insolvent. The tanks when completed would be no fixtures:—Held: no property in the tanks so far as erected had passed to the contractors or the purchasers, & on completion pltf. would not be bound to hand over the tanks, except on having his purchase-money paid or secured by a first charge on the price to be paid to the contractors.—BELLAMY v. Defts. then sub-contracted with plths. for the supply of the battery to be erected by them on C.'s premises at the price of £286, including erection. In accordance with the terms of the sub-contract plths. sent the materials for the battery by rail to a specified station, whence they were to be carted by defts. to C.'s premises & there erected by plths. Defts. carted the goods, but plths. did not proceed with the erection of the battery, which was ultimately completed by defts., who went into liquidation. In an action against C., to which defts. were added as defts., C., in pursuance of an order, paid into ct. £269, part of the balance owing by her to defts., & upon that proceedings were stayed as against her:—Held: (1) upon construction of the sub-contract, it was not a contract for the sale of a completed article, but of the component parts of the battery, with a supplemental contract that after delivery they should be erected on C.'s premises, & the delivery of the parts was an unconditional appropriation to the contract of goods in a deliverable state within Sale of Goods Act, 1893 (c. 71), s. 18, r. 5, & the property therein passed to defts.; (2) assuming the property in the goods did not pass, plths. had no lien upon the money in ct., which represented a portion of the consideration payable by C. to defts. under the principal contract.—*PRITCHETT & GOLD & ELECTRICAL POWER STORAGE CO., LTD. v. 329. Advances on security of materials—Bankruptcy of contractor—Whether employer's lien affected.]—S. contracted with defts. to execute an extensive building operation for them, in consideration of a certain sum, & of being allowed to use certain materials. Defts.' engineer was empowered to reject any materials or work not in his opinion conformable to the plans & specifications, & to provide other materials, & employ competent persons to perform the work, if S. failed to do so, as well as to deduct the amount from the sum payable to him under the contract. S. placed on defts.' premises engines, materials, implements, & other articles of various kinds, necessary to carry on the works. During the progress of the works advances were made by defts. to S. on his application, he agreeing that all the engines, materials, etc., brought or to be brought on defts.' premises for use in constructing the works, should be a security for such advances. Those advances always exceeded the value of the property so on the premises. S. became bkpt. before the works were completed, upon which defts. erased his marks on the engines, materials, implements, etc., the opening of it, although certain operations under the contract still remained to be executed, & certain claims alleged by them to be due under the contract were still unpaid.—CASTLE-DOUGLAS & DUMFRIES RY. CO. v. LEE, SON & FREEMAN (1859), 22 Dunl. (Ct. of Sess.) 18; 32 Sc. Jur. 12.—SCOT.

330. ————.]—In Dec., 1861, bkpt. contracted with W. to build a barge for him, to be paid for in bricks, the barge to be completed on June 5, 1862. Bkpt. hired a yard for a number of months, for the purpose of completing the contract, which period expired before the completion of the work, & W. then hired the yard. In June it was agreed by bkpt. in writing that the barge should be held by W. as a security for advances made by him. In July the bkpcy. took place. The advances made by W. exceeded the amount of work done & materials supplied by bkpt.:—Held: W. had a lien upon, & was entitled to hold, the barge, unless the assignees chose to complete the contract.—*Re ATTWATER, Ex p. 331. Contract giving lien—What materials covered.]—A railway co. contracted with R. that R. should build a bridge for the co. on their railway. R. was to provide implements & materials, & if the co.'s architect considered that R. did not proceed with proper expedition, the co., on seven days' notice, might employ other or additional workmen, & in that case, might use the implements & materials of R. which for the time being should be used by R. in or about the works, & R. was to repay all additional expenses. The co. were to have a lien on the implements & materials which for the time being should be upon the ground whereon the bridge was to be built, as a security for the completion of the works, R. undertaking to execute such deeds as counsel for the co. should advise for confirming the lien & security. A fiat of bkpcy. issued against R. on July 31, on which day the co. took possession of implements & materials used by R. in building the bridge. On Aug. 1 the co. gave notice, as provided in the contract; on Aug. 2 they commenced completing the bridge, & in so doing used some of the materials, & detained the rest:—Held: (1) the co. were entitled to a lien upon all such implements & materials, so used, as were upon any land, possessed by the co., on which the building of the bridge was, in a popular sense, being carried on, but not to a lien upon the materials of a temporary railway constructed for bringing articles to the bridge from an adjoining river, nor to a crane at the end of such temporary railway, not being on the co.'s land; (2) these rights of the co. were not invalidated by other implements & materials, so agreement C. was insolvent to the knowledge of applts. After further advances had been made C. became bkpt.:—Held: applts. were not entitled, as against the trustee in C.'s bkpcy., to take possession of the materials to be used in carrying out their contracts, which were in C.'s yard at the date of the bkpcy.—SEATH v. MOORE (1886), 11 App. Cas. 350; 55 L. J. P. C. 54; 54 L. T. 690; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 586, H. L.—SCOT.

332. Contract giving power to seize & retain in event of bankruptcy—Notice of intention to seize given after filing of petition—Equitable lien.]—A building contract contained stipulations that in the event of the insolvency or bkpcy. of the builder, the architect of the proprietors should have power, after two clear days' notice, to appoint other persons to complete the work, & should also in such case have power to seize & retain all materials, plant & implements, & might either proceed with the work or sell them & apply the proceeds to the completion of the work, & that in the event of the contract being put an end to as aforesaid, the contractor should not remove either work, materials, implements, scaffolding or plant, from the premises, but all materials & work should be left or appropriated for the use of whomsoever might be appointed to finish the work. After being engaged on the contract for about eighteen months, & receiving sums on account thereof which covered the value of the materials, plant & implements then upon the premises, the contractor filed a petition for liquidation. Three days afterwards the proprietors gave him notice that they intended to employ other means to finish the work, & claimed the materials, plant & implements under the contract. It did not appear whether the proprietors at that time had notice of the petition, but they had such notice before the expiration of two days, & before they took possession:—Held: under the contract the proprietors acquired a right to a lien upon the goods in the events which happened.—Re WAUGH, Ex p. DICKIN (1876), 4 Ch. D. 524; 46 L. J. Bcy. 26; 35 L. T. 769; 25 W. R. 258.

333. Employer's lien to take effect after notice—Notice given after seizure by sheriff—Execution against contractor.]—By a building agreement it was provided that if the builder should neglect to proceed with due diligence in the performance of the work, the building owner should be at liberty to give notice in writing to the builder requiring him to proceed with the work with reasonable despatch, & that from the date of such notice the builder should not be at liberty to remove from the premises any plant belonging to him placed there for the purposes of the works, & that the building owner should have a lien upon such plant thenceforward until the notice was complied with. A judgment having been recovered by a third person against the builder, the sheriff entered under a fi. fa., & seized in execution of the judgment certain plant belonging to the builder which had been brought by him to the premises for the purposes of the work. After the seizure by the sheriff, & while the plant was still on the premises & unsold, the building owner gave to the builder, who had not proceeded with due diligence in the performance of the works, notice under the contract to proceed therewith, & he thereupon claimed as against the execution creditor a lien on the plant:—Held: the intervening seizure by the sheriff prevented the building owner's right of lien under the notice from taking effect.—BYFORD v. RUSSELL, [1907] 2 K. B. 522; 76 L. J. K. B. 744; 97 L. T. 104, D. C.

334. Substitution of contract giving employer lien & power of sale—Clauses as to lien, etc., not incorporated in second contract.]—A contract for the construction of a railway provided that if the contractor should make default, the co. might enter & complete the works & make use of the contractor's waggons, machinery & plant, & also have a lien on same, with power of sale to reimburse themselves any loss or damage they might sustain by reason of such default. The contractor having become embarrassed, the co., either out of regard for him or because his bkpcy. would have delayed the completion of the works, made a second contract with him, by which it was provided that they should take to & complete the works, & for that purpose they should be allowed £10,000, & the use of all the contractor's plant, etc., which should, on the completion of the works, be restored to the contractor in whatever state it might then be. This second contract provided that if it should then be found that anything was due to or from the co. from or to the contractor, the amount should be paid by the one to the other within three months after the engineer should have certified the amount that should be due, & it provided that "in all other respects the original contract should stand, except so far as it was altered by or should be inconsistent with the second contract." The contractor had made no default down to the date of the second contract. The co. completed the works, & the engineer certified that a large sum was due to them from the contractor. The co. thereupon refused to deliver up the plant to the contractor, & claimed power to sell the plant, & to reimburse themselves out of the proceeds:—Held: they were not so entitled, for the provisions of the second contract were in substitution of the corresponding provisions in the first contract, & the two instruments were not to be read as one, nor were the clauses of the first conferring the lien & power of sale to be taken as incorporated into the second contract.—*HUNT v. c. Materials furnished by employer in payment from him materials, at the cost prices, or such quantity as should be required, & the balance, if any, in cash. The timber had been all furnished, & the building partly completed, when it was blown down & abandoned:—Held: the timber so delivered belonged to deft.—GRAHAM v. WILEY (1858), 16 U. C. R. 265.—CAN.

for it for a fixed sum. Deft. afterwards supplied a portion of the materials, which plffs. accepted & used up in the work. In an action for the work done by plffs.:—Held: deft. was entitled to deduct from the damages the value of the materials supplied by him, without pleading a set-off. NEWTON v. FORSTER (1844), 12 M. & W. 772; 152 E. R. 1411.

337. Old materials used by builder—Duty of builder to deduct from charges—According to specification.]—By a building contract, the builder agreed to repair a house according to the plans & specifications, & to the satisfaction of the architect, the work to be done under the architect's directions. By the specification the builder was to allow for the value of the old lead, & he alleged that he made this allowance in his estimate. The architect certified his satisfaction of the completion of the contract. In an action by the builder against the owner of the house for the money agreed to be paid by the latter:—Held: no evidence could be received from deft. that the work was not done according to the plans & specifications, & unless plff. could prove that he had informed deft. or the architect of his having allowed for the old lead in his estimate, he must deduct the value from the amount of his charge.—HARVEY v. LAWRENCE (1867), 15 L. T. 571.

338. In consideration of sum payable to assignor on completion—Assignee entering into substituted contract—Rights of assignor.]—Plff. & defts. entered into an agreement with a railway co. to execute a contract for making a tunnel upon a line of railway, called "the Morley contract." Plff. then assigned to defts. all his right & interest in the contract, & defts. agreed to pay a given sum to plff. upon completion of the contract. Subsequently, it became necessary to vary the levels, & defts. agreed with the co. to make the tunnel in a different direction from that specified in the Morley contract, & upon different terms as to payment:—Held: plff. had no right to sue defts. for the sum stipulated to be paid to him by the agreement, as the Morley contract never was completed.—HUMPHREYS v. JONES (1850), 5 Exch. 952; 20 L. J. Ex. 88; 155 E. R. 415.

339. Of retention money—Bankruptcy of contractor after assignment—Completion by trustee in bankruptcy.]—A builder assigned to T. £200 of what should be coming to him under a building contract with A. The contract provided that the building should be finished by a certain day, & if not, that A. might employ another builder to complete it. When the assignment was made the time for completion had expired. Soon afterwards the builder executed a creditor's deed. The trustee of this deed completed the building, with his own money, & was repaid by A. Allowing this repayment as proper, nothing remained due on the contract. T. then filed his bill to enforce payment of the £200:—Held: the payments by A. to the trustee were proper, & the bill ought to be dismissed with costs.—TOOTH v. HALLETT (1869), 4 Ch. App. 242; 38 L. J. Ch. 396; 20 L. T. 155; 17 W. R. 423, L. JJ.

340. ———.]—A building contract provided that payments should be made, as the work proceeded, of such sums on account of the price of the work as should be stated in the certificates of an architect, such certificates to be given at the architect's discretion at the rate of 80 per cent. upon the contract value of the work done at the dates of such certificates, & that the remaining 20 per cent. should be retained till completion of the work. The contract empowered the building owners, in the event of the contractors committing an act of bkpcy., to discharge them from the further execution of the work, & employ some other person to complete it, & to deduct the amount paid to such other person for completing same from the contract price. The contractors assigned a portion of the retention moneys, i.e., the price of work done under the contract retained under the before-mentioned provision, by way of mtge. to secure a debt, & notice of the assignment was given to the building owners. After making such assignment the contractors filed a petition for liquidation, the works then remaining incomplete. A trustee in liquidation & a committee of inspection were appointed. The trustee, in pursuance of a resolution of the committee, completed the work, himself advancing

d. Whether contractor entitled to assign—Provision against assignment.]—Under a contract to construct certain railway works, the contractor was entitled to receive certain monthly payments during the continuance of the work, but such payments were provisional only, & if at the final settlement money was found due from the contractor, he would be obliged to make a refund. The contract further provided that workmen engaged by the contractor should be paid in usual manner & at usual time, & that the contractor should have no right to cede any of his obligations. The contractor subsequently agreed with the railway engineer that workmen should be paid out of the monthly payments. Plff., who had been warned by the engineer that the railway would not recognise any right he might obtain from the contractor to receive any of the monthly payments & knew of the arrangement as to the payment of workmen, accepted a cession of rights under the contract from the contractor. Thereafter the railway refused to recognise such cession & with the help of the contractor, paid money due under the contract to workmen:—Held: (1) during the continuance of the work, the rights & obligations under the contract were indivisible & could not be ceded without the consent of the railway; (2) plff. had no right as against the railway to receive any of the monthly payments.—ARMSTRONG v. SIVEWRIGHT (1893), 10 C. L. J. 257.—S. AF.

e. ——— Not amounting to prohibition.]—A contract for drainage work stipulated that defts. would not recognise any assignment of the contract. Plff. & another firm were the contractors, & shortly after work was commenced, the latter assigned their interest to plff.:—Held: an assignment of the contract was not pro-

money for that purpose, of which an amount exceeding that of the retention money assigned as aforesaid was still unpaid, there being no other assets from which he could be recouped in respect thereof. The trustee & the mtgees. both claimed the amount of the retention money assigned as aforesaid from the building owners:—Held: in the absence of anything to show that the building owners had exercised the power of taking the work out of the contractors' hands, the trustee must be taken to have completed the work under the original contract as trustee of the contractors' estate, & not as a person employed to complete the work in substitution for the contractors, & the assignment of the retention money held good as against the trustee, & the mtgees. were entitled to succeed.—*DREW v. 341. Right to set off damages for breach.]—By the terms of a contract between the Comrs. of Sewers and a wood paving co., the co. were to pave a particular street called V. Street, & the comrs. were to pay 60 per cent. of the money due a month after the engineer certified the works to be complete, 30 per cent. within three months afterwards, & 10 per cent. at the expiration of two years. During the two years the co. were to keep the wood surface of the roadway in repair, & if, before the expiration of the two years, the comrs. should give them notice, the co. were also to keep the roadway in repair for fifteen years upon being paid for same at the annual rate of 6d. per square yard. The comrs. were to be at liberty to retain from time to time "out of any money payable by them to the contractors," an amount equal to the above annual charge, by way of security, & in the event of failure by the co. to perform the contract, the money retained was to be forfeited, & to be held by the comrs. as liquidated damages for the default; & it was provided that whenever "according to the terms of this contract," any money should be due from the co. to the comrs. for damages or otherwise, the comrs. might either sue for such money or deduct or set off same against any money due from them to the co. The contract being dated on Sept. 22, 1882, the co. on Nov. 15, gave to L. & C., timber merchants, a charge on all their interest in the contract to secure a debt for goods sold & delivered, & on Dec. 9, notice of this charge was given to the comrs.

work usually undertaken by special trades & there being no want of good faith & no carelessness on the part of plffs. in letting, plffs. were entitled to recover the amount paid to sub-contractors.—MACKISSOCK & THOMAS, LTD. v. BLACK (1912), 21 W. L. R. 424; 2 W. W. R. 465.—CAN.

k. Assignment of moneys payable in respect of contract—Damages for additional expense included.]—Deft., a contractor, employed by a city corpn. to construct a drain assigned to a bank as security for certain advances the sums payable to him in respect of his contract with the corpn. Deft. was hindered in his work & put to additional expense in consequence of the escape of water into plffs.' works from the corpn.'s other drains which were defective. Deft. having recovered damages against the corpn., the bank claimed this money under the assignment:—Held: as the additional expense incurred by deft. through breach of duty on the part of the corpn., was necessary in order to enable him to complete his contract, it was money "in respect of the contract," to which the bank was entitled.—GRAHAM v. BOURQUE (1903), 2 O. W. R. 927, 1182.—CAN.

l. — Admission of funds.]—The contractor for building a church, being indebted to D. for materials furnished therefor, gave him the following order on defts., who were the building trustees, of which they were duly notified: "Pay to the order of D. the sum of $306 out of certificate of money due me on June 1 for materials furnished to above church." This defts. refused to accept, & on May 31 paid, out of moneys arising out of the contract, an order for a larger sum, made on that date in favour of another person, under an arrangement made by them with the latter alone:—Held: there was a good equitable assignment in favour of D. of money due on June 1, & defts., by the payment of the other order, were estopped from

On the same Dec. 9, but after the notice, the co. presented a petition for a winding-up order, & on Dec. 12 & 16 the provisional official liquidator was empowered & ordered to complete the contract & to obtain the necessary timber on security of the money to be received subject to L. & C.'s charge. On Jan. 13, 1883, the winding-up order was made; on Jan. 29 the liquidator, having completed the work, sent in a claim to the comrs., & on Mar. 8, the engineer certified the work to be complete. On Mar. 19, the comrs. sent to the liquidator a claim of set-off for anticipated loss by breach of the contract to repair for fifteen years, the amount of such claim being estimated by the difference between 1s. a square yard, which the comrs. considered they would have to pay for the repairs, & the 6d. a square yard provided for by the agreement. They also claimed to set off damages accrued & anticipated under other contracts for paving other streets. Except as to a trifling sum, it was not alleged that any cause of action for breach of any of these contracts accrued before Jan. 27, 1883. On May 25, 1883, the comrs. served the co., in liquidation, with formal notice to repair for fifteen years from Mar. 8, 1885:—Held: (1) the liquidator was not entitled to a first charge on the money payable under the contract for the cost of completing the work incurred by him since the winding-up; (2) the chargees, L. & C., were entitled to a charge on 90 per cent. of the money payable under the contract, subject as above, undiminished by any retainer or set-off by the comrs. either under the V. Street contract or otherwise; (3) the comrs. might prove for their cross claim under the contract of Sept. 22, 1882; (4) the comrs. were not entitled to retain any money due under the contract of Sept. 22, 1882, in respect of money due under any of the concurrent contracts.—Re ASPHALTIC WOOD PAVEMENT CO., LEE & CHAPMAN'S CASE (1885), 30 Ch. 342. — Unauthorised misrepresentation by employer's agent—Employer not estopped from denying liability.]—Defts., a tramway co., employed contractors to execute certain works. m. Bonus payable to assignor on unfinished work—Agreement by employer to refund—If assignee prevented from completing.]—D., having a contract with deft. to do work on a railway, transferred his contract to plff. at deft.'s request, on receiving a bonus of one penny per yard on the work remaining to be done. Plff. gave D. his note for the amount, on the undertaking of deft. that if plff. was prevented from completing the work, deft. would pay the penny per yard for the amount unfinished. Plff. performed part of the work, & left the rest unfinished, at deft.'s request that he should work elsewhere. contractors applied to pltfs. for an advance upon the security of retention money under the contract. Defts.' secretary, in answer to inquiries made by pltfs., erroneously represented to them that there was a certain amount of retention money in defts.' hands which would be payable after completion of the works, whereas, in fact it was not so. Pltfs. thereupon advanced money to the contractors on the security of an assignment of the retention money. There was no evidence to show that the secretary had authority to make the representations which he had made:—Held: it was not within the scope of a secretary's authority to make such representations, & in an action by pltfs. as assignees of the retention money, defts. were not estopped from denying that such money was due.—*BARNETT v. 343. Equities to which assignment subject—Employer diminishing rights of assignee after notice—Payments to sureties of contractor.—In June, 1864, Y., a builder, contracted with the justices of A. to build a gaol for £12,953, provision being made in the contract for extra work, additions, & omissions, to be certified from time to time by the architect, & the contract price to be paid as follows: the architect to certify from time to time that work to a certain amount had been done to his satisfaction, & the amount so certified to be paid to Y., subject to a deduction to be made by the architect of 20 per cent. upon the amount until such deduction should amount to 10 per cent., upon the contract price, or a reserved sum of £1,295; when the whole work should be completed, three-fourths of the balance due to be paid to Y. two months after the architect's certificate of completion, & the remainder of such balance to be paid to him at the end of six months upon the architect's certificate that the works were then in good and substantial repair. Defts., K. & B., were sureties by bond to the justices for the due performance by Y. of the contract. Y. proceeded with the work, & in Jan., 1866, the reserved sum in the hands of the justices amounted to £1,295, of which fact defts. were aware. Being then in want of money to complete his contract, Y. prevailed upon pltfs., his bankers, to make him advances to enable him so to do, in consideration of his assigning to them all future payments under the contract, together with the reserved sum of £1,295, & other securities, & Y., by deed of Jan. 27, 1866, assigned to pltfs., as a security for such advances, "all instalments & sums of money then due & payable, or thereafter to become or accrue due & payable to him, under or by virtue of the contract, either upon, before, or after the completion of the works mentioned in the same contract." K. also at the same time gave his bond for £1,000 to pltfs. as a further security, & both defts., & also the justices, had knowledge of the assignment. Pltfs. made the required advances, which were expended by Y. upon the works, £1,896 was due to them from Y. in respect thereof. On Sept. 29, 1866, Y., who up to that time had received from the justices £9,400 on account of his contract, became bkpt., & thereupon the justices, through their clerk of the peace, on Oct. 1, wrote to defts., the sureties, to know what course they deemed best to pursue, to which the defts., by letter of Oct. 5, replied as follows: "We beg to state that we are prepared to enter upon the works directly, & complete same for the amount of money, & the plant, that would have been due had Y. completed the contract. To save us further annoyance or damage from any action on the part of Y.'s creditors, we should be very grateful if you would kindly enter into a fresh contract with us upon the basis of the above terms." At a meeting of the justices on the following day, it was resolved that the proposal of defts., as contained in their letter, to enter upon the works at the new gaol immediately, & complete same under the provisions of the existing contract should be agreed to, & that it was not desirable to enter into any new contract with them. Immediately after this resolution defts. took possession of the works, & proceeded to carry them out, & completed them by Nov. 1, 1867, the architect giving his certificate of completion on Jan. 20, 1868, & his final certificate of good repair on July 22, 1868. Defts. expended £5,420 on the completion of the gaol, & received £2,800, from the justices, who had also paid £9,400 to Y., & upon the architect making up the amount & taking into account the extras & omissions in accordance with the terms of Y.'s contract, the balance certified by him as due by the justices was £1,243 16s. 6d., which sum pltfs. claimed under their deed of assignment. Defts. also claimed it, & brought an action to recover it against the justices, who thereupon paid the money into court:—Held: (KELLY, C.B., & BRAMWELL, B.; MARTIN & CLEASBY, B.B., diss.) pltfs. were not, & defts. were, entitled to 343 i. Equities to which subject—Employer diminishing rights of assignee after notice—Payment to subsequent assignee.—The Agent-General of the colony in England having entered into a contract for the construction of a line of railway in the colony, received notice from pltfs., English bankers, that the contractor had assigned to them the balance of a certain retention fund on its becoming payable by the govt. to the contractor. The Agent-General refused to accept the notice, or even to read the correspondence on which pltfs. relied as constituting the assignment, & after the fund became payable he remitted the money to the Cape, where it was paid by the govt. to the C. Bank, to whom the contractor had ceded his rights under the contract, subsequent to the notice of assignment given to the Agent-General:—Held: inasmuch as the contractor's letters to pltfs. constituted in the opinion of the ct. an absolute assignment, & as notice to the Agent-General was admitted to be notice to the govt., the payment to the C. Bank was not justified, & pltfs. were entitled to recover the money so paid from the govt.—WRIGHT & CO. v. COLONIAL GOVERNMENT (1891), 8 S. C. 260.—S. AF.

n. — Assignment subject to original contract—Right of employer to make deductions.—A contract between defts. & pltf.'s assignor for the paving of a certain street provided that the former might deduct & pay the price of any materials unpaid for by the latter. The contractor assigned to pltf. all moneys to become due under the contract, of which defts. were duly notified. Subsequently defts. deducted from the contract moneys the amount of a claim for materials furnished to the contractor, & paid the same:—Held: they had a right so to do, pltf.'s assignment being necessarily subject to the provisions of the original contract.—*FARQUHAR v. o. Completion by assignee—Acceptance of work.—S. & Co. entered into an agreement with deft. to instal a heating plant into deft.'s house for a stated sum. S. & Co. assigned the contract to pltfs. & informed deft. of the fact. At the time of giving this direction all the instalments which were due had been paid by deft. to G. Notice in writing of the above-mentioned instrument was given to deft., but he refused to be bound by it, & afterwards paid to G. the balance of the price of the vessel, amounting to more than £100 :—Held : the instrument in writing constituted a valid assignment of £100, part of the money due or to become due from deft. to G., & pltf. was entitled to recover that amount from deft., notwithstanding the subsequent payments by him to G.—BRICE v. F. refused to pay L. on the ground that the completion of the other agreements with H. was a condition precedent to the right to recover for the work done :—Held : as F. had recognised & suffered the work to be completed by L. & had the benefit of the contract he could not

While carrying on the work he assigned the contract to his sureties, & afterwards absconded, & an attachment was issued against him. The assignees carried out the contract, & then sued in his name for the money due. After action brought this attachment was withdrawn, &

defts. released by the attaching creditors from any claim by them to the money that might be recovered in this action. Within six months another attachment was placed in the sheriff's hands, of which defts. were duly notified :—Held : the assignees were entitled to recover as well for the work done by pltf. before as since his departure, & defts. paying would not be liable to the creditors of pltf.—CLARK v. 1891, the co. should have the right to deduct from the retention money, as & for liquidated damages, £500, & £5 a day for each day from such date until completion; & that, should the contractor become bkpt. or insolvent, it should be lawful for the co. "to terminate the contract, so far as respects the performance of same under the directions & by means of the contractor, but without thereby affecting in any other respects the liabilities of the contractor." The time for completion was extended until Dec. 31, 1892, & subsequently until Jan. 16, 1893. In Nov., 1892, the contractor was unable to continue the works, & the co. re-entered & took possession. Thereupon applt. took from the contractor an assignment of "all the estate, part, share, & interest of the contractor of & in the contract, & the full benefit & advantage thereof, & all rights, powers, & privileges of the contractor thereunder." On Dec. 5, 1892, it was agreed between applt. & the co. that applt. should complete the works in accordance with the original contract. Applt. completed the works on Sept. 22, 1893. The co. claimed to deduct certain sums as liquidated damages from the retention money. The matter was referred to an arbitrator, who found, as a fact, that the delay in completion was due to the delay of the original contractor, but decided that the co. were entitled to deduct from the retention money £1,745, being £500 for non-completion on the extended date, & £5 per diem for each day between the extended date & the date of actual completion:—Held: the words, "but without thereby affecting in any other respects the liability of the contractor," contained in the proviso as to terminating the contract, effectually kept alive the co.'s right to deduct liquidated damages from the retention money, & by the agreement of Dec. 5, 1892, applt. was subject to the contractual liabilities of the original contractor, & to the aforesaid deduction in the settlement of accounts as between himself & the co.—Re YEADON WATERWORKS Co. & WRIGHT (1895), 72 L. T. 538, D. C.; affd. 72 L. T. 832, C. A.

On the same day A. wrote to S. as follows: "It having been agreed that R. shall build a new house on the farm occupied by me, & that, by an agreement this day shown me between you & R. you are to do the carpenter's work, etc., & that the payment, when done, is to be made by me to you, & to no other person, according to plan & specification, I hereby undertake to pay same, by having a proper discharge":—Held: S. having done the work, could not maintain an action of indebitatus assumpsit for work & labour against A. for the value of it.—*SWEETING v. s. What amounts to novation—Part of work taken over by new contractor—Defective work by original contractor—Acceptance.]—Defts. passed a byelaw, for the purpose of acquiring the land & erecting a building at a cost of $1,500, for the raising of which sum provision was therein made. B.'s tender for carpenter work, etc., including a shingle roof, was accepted, but at a special meeting of the council, at which only three of the councillors, who were present, and threw off $4 a square, & which B. of the roof part of his contract, agreed to put on a metallic roof & L. $6 a square, & it was resolved by the council that iron shingles instead of the wooden shingles be put on the roof of the new building. All this was done subject to the approval of the person who was not present, but who afterwards approved of it, & at whose instance L. ordered the material & did the work. L. received a payment on account, but on the discovery of some defects in B.'s work, defts. refused, although they had taken possession of the building, to pay the balance, on the grounds that the roof was not properly done, & L. was a sub-contractor under B., & there was no contract under seal with him:—Held: (1) the legal effect of this was to consummate a tripartite agreement, by which B. was to give up part of his contract, & L. was to do the work for a specified price, & that between plf. L., defts., & B. there was a novation of contract so far as the roof was concerned, & as to that L. became the principal & only contractor; (2) the work there was delay on the part of the specialists whereby the builder suffered damage. The builder brought an action for breach of contract against the building owners, alleging that under the contract & specification there was an implied promise on the part of the building owners that the delivery & fixing of the specialists' work should not be unreasonably delayed, or that the delivery & fixing should be done at such reasonable times as to enable the builder to complete his work within the time fixed by the contract or within a reasonable time thereafter, & that the building owners had broken one or both of these implied promises:—Held: on the proper construction of the contract & specification, there were no such implied promise or promises, & there was no breach of contract on the part of the building owners, affording the builder a right to damages.—MITCHELL v. principal contractor indebted.]—Upon an action for goods supplied for the building of certain cottages the question arose whether the goods were supplied to a builder, afterwards bkpt., or to deft., who had employed the builder. Deft. called the builder, who stated that pltf.'s contract was made with himself, & that he had received money from deft. in respect of the cottages:—Held: he might also be asked by deft. which way the balance was between him & deft. at the time of the bkpcy.—*GERISH v. 357. — Evidence that employer real principal—Orders to others.]—On the trial of an action to recover from deft. a sum of money for work done & materials supplied in respect of certain dwelling-houses & premises, it was alleged by pltf., & denied by deft., that he, pltf., had received orders from deft. to do the work & supply the materials. The dwelling-houses were being erected by L. & B., who had originally given orders to pltf., & at the trial it was contended for deft. that credit had been given to L. & B. & that he was simply mtgee. It was contended for pltf. that deft. was really owner & personally interested in the premises, & that L. & B. were his agents:—Held: pltf. was at liberty to call other persons to prove that they had received orders from deft. personally to do work or to supply materials upon or for the same dwelling-houses, as such proof was evidence to show that deft. was really the owner & person interested in the dwelling-houses.—*WOODWARD v. 358. — Prime cost items—Contract for benefit of employer.]—Building owners contracted with building contractors for the erection of a building, for the purposes of which certain specialities were to be ordered from stated firms. Amongst the specialities were certain casements. Many months after the head contract was entered into the building owners invited pltf. to quote for the casements according to a specification, which provided that the amount of the accepted quotation would be inserted as a "prime cost item" in the building contract, that pltf. would enter into an agreement with the building contractors to execute & complete the casements within a given time under penalty, that the architect of the building owners would have power to vary the work, & that payment for the work should only be made on the certificate of that architect. Pltf. having quoted according to this specification, the building owners forwarded the quotation to the building contractors, with a request that they should place the order with pltf. Subsequently the building contractors informed pltf. that they, the building contractors, had instructions to accept pltf.'s estimate for the casements. In an action by pltf. to recover a balance of the price of these casements from the building owners:—Held: while the contract for the casements was prima facie a contract with the building contractors, it was also a contract made in fact by the building contractors acting as agents on behalf of the building owners as real principals, because it was to procure something for their benefit, & on the facts pltf. were entitled to judgment.—*CRITTALL MANUFACTURING CO. v. At the date of the tender, which the accepted, pltf. did not know the names of the builder or of the building owner. Some months after the tender a building contract was signed the building owner, which contained the usual clauses as to the employment of specialists, & which provided for the steel work a sum in excess of that at which pltf. had undertaken to carry it out. Subsequently the builder gave pltf. an order for the steel work in accordance with their tender. Shortly before the conclusion of his work by the builder, the architects, at the request of pltf., sent the builder a certificate & a cheque for £500, stating that this included £150, being part of the sum due to pltf. The builder went into liquidation without having paid pltf. the £150. In an action by the specialists against the building owner to recover that sum:—Held: the mere fact that pltf. entered the name of the builder in their books as their debtor up to the date of his bkpcy. was not a sufficient election to preclude their having recourse to the building owner, & in substance the contract with pltf. was made with the builder acting as agent for deft., & pltf. were entitled to judgment.—*YOUNG & CO., LTD. v. The specification contained certain provisional items, including the following: "Provide £450 for a low pressure heating apparatus." A hot-water engineer submitted a scheme to the architect for the heating of the school for £391, & by the direction of the architect this scheme was accepted by the builder. During the progress of the work the builder paid to the engineer £200 on account, but he was unable to pay the balance. In an action by the engineer against the council as building owners for payment of the balance of his account:—Held: upon the construction of the building contract, the builder was to erect the school for a lump sum, including, if required, the heating apparatus up to a cost of £150, & the builder, in employing a specialist to put up the heating apparatus, was acting as a principal & not as the agent of the building owners, & the action failed.—*HAMPTON v. 363. — Payment on architect's certificate.]—Deft. entered into a contract with a builder, by which the latter agreed to build a house for him, under the supervision of an architect. The contract provided that the provisional sums for goods to be ordered from special artists or tradesmen should, as the architect should certify, be payable by the builder or the building owner. Special goods according to a particular design were ordered by the builder from pltf., a metal worker, & the architect certified the sum for these goods as due from deft. to pltf., deducting the amount from the certificate given to the builder:—Held: deft. was liable to pltf.—HOBBS v. The contract also provided that certain machinery for the works was to be supplied to A. by specified firms, & that (clause 54), "if the engineer shall have reasonable cause to believe that the contractor is unduly delaying proper payment to the firms supplying the machinery, he shall have power, if he thinks fit, to order direct payment to them." On Oct. 12, 1904, A. was adjudicated bkpt. on his own petition. At this date the contract was substantially completed, & there was then due under it £1,574 15s. 10d. only, of which £1,349 17s. 8d. was retention money & £224 18s. 2d. was a sum payable on the engineer's next certificate, & these two sums were claimed by the trustee in bkpcy. At the same date A. owed £836 8s. 9d. in various amounts to the specified firms for machinery supplied to him for the works, & subsequently the engineer in 1905 made two orders under clause 54 directing payment of the £836 8s. 9d. out of the £1,574 15s. 10d. to the firms in settlement of their accounts:—Held: (1) A. by presenting his own petition in bkpcy. "unduly delayed proper payment" to the machinery firms within clause 54; (2) the power conferred by that clause on the engineer was not annulled or revoked by A.'s bkpcy., & the firms by virtue of the two orders of the engineer were entitled to be paid the £836 8s. 9d. out of the £1,574 15s. 10d. in priority to the claim of the trustee.—*Re WILKINSON, Ex p. Certain sub-contractors & employees of M. filed liens, & W. moved to have them vacated on the ground that he was entitled to apply the ten per cent. drawback in completing the contract:—Held: the amount upon which the ten per cent. drawback was to be calculated was not the whole amount of the contract price, but the amount of the work done by the contractor when he failed & abandoned the work.—Re CORNISH (1884), 6 O. PART XIII. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 2.

Replication, that by the agreement in the last plea mentioned, plf.'s rights against deft. were expressly reserved:—Held: on replication good, but plea bad, as not showing that the alleged substituted contract contained all the essentials requisite to make it a complete discharge & release of the original one.—*PORT WHITBY & PORT PERRY RY. Defts. paid plf. all but twenty per cent. as the work progressed, but their manager refused to certify as the contract required, complaining that it was improperly performed. He, however, had verbally agreed to pay plf.'s men $100 if they would discharge the corp'n.:—Held: plf. had no right of action against defts., for there was no contract between them.—*STANDING v. chimney-stacks & heating apparatus, in two years for £210,888, with penalties for delay. The chimney-stacks & heating apparatus were to be provided by specialists or sub-contractors. The building owners reserved to themselves the option to employ these specialists. Certain specialists for the work of the chimney-stacks & heating apparatus were appointed by the architect under the contract, & he made terms with them as to the works they were to execute & the prices they were to charge. These prices were subsequently paid by the builders out of the whole sum paid to them under the contract. The architect sent the builders orders to give to the specialists, & the builders made no objection, & gave them to the specialists. In the execution of these works there was delay on the part of the specialists whereby, as the builders alleged, they suffered damage:—Held: (1) the builders, & not the building owners, contracted with the specialists, & there was nothing in the contract inconsistent with such sub-contracts; (2) the builders had no right of action against the building owners for the delay of the specialists.—LESLIE & CO., LTD. v. 353. ———— By a contract in writing with specification annexed, made between a builder & building owners, the builder undertook to do the whole of certain work, for a certain sum, but part of the work was to be sub-contracted. The specialists or sub-contractors were appointed by the building owners, but they were to be paid by the builder out of the contract price. The builder undertook to finish the work by a certain date, unless the works were hindered by (inter alia) delay on the part of the engineers or other specialists. The builder was not to be liable for any defects in works provided by the specialists, unless by reason of contributory negligence on his part or his having paid any final balance to the specialists without first having the architects' written authority to do so. In the course of the

369 i. How far terms of principal contract binding on sub-contractor—Express agreement to be bound—Date of completion.]—A stipulation was contained in a sub-contract that the work done thereunder must be in accordance with the specifications & general conditions of the original contract, which empowered the architect to require the struct a council chamber, etc., for an urban district council. G. was employed by L. as sub-contractor to do certain part of the work. The sub-contract provided (inter alia) that "the terms of payment for the work in question shall be exactly the same as those set forth in clause 30 of the conditions of contract." Clause 30 of the conditions of contract was as follows: "The contractor shall be entitled, under the certificates to be issued by the architect to the contractor, to be paid at the rate of 80 per cent. of the value of the work so executed in the building until the balance retained in hand amounts to £2,000, after which time the instalments shall be up to the full value of the work subsequently executed." When the works were practically completed & so certified by the architect, £1,500 was to become due, £300 more at the expiration of three months, & £200 at the expiration of twelve months from completion. The whole cost of the work was about £35,000, & the amount of G.'s sub-contract was about £1,050. After the completion of the work, K., the surveyor employed by the architect, wrote as follows: "[the architect] desires me to say that he has been through your accounts in this case, & allowed the repairs to the terrazzo in full, although he very much doubts the propriety of the charge, but that he entirely declines to allow the charge of repairs to wood-block flooring, which he says was badly laid in many places, & was continually complained of."

contractor to remove defective work & to replace the same; & the original contract provided that the works should not be deemed completed until the architect had given his final certificate:—Held: this did not postpone the date of the completion of the work done under the sub-contract until the original contract had been passed by the architect.—KASSON (J. W.) & Co. v. MURRAY (1904), 23 N. Z. L. R. 802.—N.Z.

369 ii. ——— Whether arbitration clause incorporated—Disputes between contractor & sub-contractor.—A contractor, who had contracted with a railway co. for the construction of certain works, entered into a sub-contract for the execution of part of the work. In the contract between the principal contractor & the sub-contractor it was stipulated that the work was to be executed "according to plans & specifications," which included a "general specification," forming part of the contract between the principal contractor & the railway co. This "general specification" contained a clause providing that disputes were to be submitted to arbn. In an action by the sub-contractor against the principal contractor for certain sums alleged to be due under the sub-contract, the principal contractor pleaded that the claims made in the action fell within the arbn. clause of the "general specification," which he maintained was imported into the sub-contract:—Held: the arbn. clause of the general specification, while it was incorporated in the sub-contract to the effect of making the decisions of an arbitrator in questions between the railway co. & the principal contractor binding upon the sub-contractor, was not incorporated in the sub-contract quoad matters which concerned only the rights inter se of the principal contractor & sub-contractor.—GOODWINS, JARDINE & Co. v. BRAND (1905), 7 F. (Ct. of Sess.) 995.—SCOT.

Arbitration clauses, generally, see Part XV., post.

369 iii. ——— Defects remedied by contractor.—Deft. who had the contract for the construction of a building sublet the lathing & plastering to pltf. The work as completed by pltf. was not satisfactory to the architect in charge, & he, in accordance with the provisions appearing in the specifications, had the defects made good, & the expenses of so doing were paid by deft.:—Held: pltf. was bound by the plans & specifications since he was content to put in his tender in accordance with them, & deft. entitled to judgment on his counterclaim for making good defects in pltf.'s work.—MITCHELL v. FLODDEN (1906), 4 W. L. R. 194.—CAN.

1. ——— Alterations by employer—Covered by principal contract.—Declaration, that a section was laid out on a certain portion of a railway, & deft. had contracted with the contractors with the co. for making the road; & in consideration that pltf. would do certain work on the section at certain prices & rates, deft. promised pltf. that he should, in a reasonable time after making his contract, have possession of the section, to enable him to go on with his work; that pltf. commenced the work & did a large portion thereof, & frequently requested deft. to put him in possession of the remaining portion of the section to enable him to complete his contract. Breach, that it was not in the power of deft. to give pltf. possession when so requested, & that the co. changed & altered the line of road, so that the section was located at a place & on a line different from that on which it had theretofore been:—Held: on demurrer, declaration bad, for it appeared that the change of line had been made by the co., & pltf.'s agreement with deft. was subject to the conditions of deft.'s original contract.—*SUMMERS v. L. retained part of the money payable to G., thereupon brought an action for the balance b the architect gave his certificate that the v was completed to his satisfaction. L. set up (inter alia) that clause 30 of the contract entitled him to do so, & that there was no certificate of the architect that the work was completed to his satisfaction:—Held: L. was justified in retaining a part of G.'s contract price proportional retained from his by the council.—WALKER & Co., LTD. v. LAWRENCE & SON (1906), 2 Hudson's B. C. 4th ed. 382, C. A.

370. Liability of contractor to pay sub-contractor—For extras—Work executed under directions of engineer—Recovery by contractor for whole of extra work.—A. having agreed with certain trustees to build a bridge, according to plans & specifications, it being stipulated that he should be paid for extra work directed by the engineer of the trustees, employed B. to execute the masonry & piling, & B. also entered into an agreement with C. for executing the piling. A. was present twice during the progress of the work; on the first occasion, he only looked on, but on the second he inquired of C. why the work was suspended, & C. told him that he wanted money to go on with the extra work directed by the engineer; A. said he should have money, & gave a bill of exchange to B., from whom he took a receipt, & B. passed it to C., also taking a receipt. In an action by B.

under directions of engineer—Reference to principal contract.—Pltf., a sub-contractor, was proceeding with the work when the engineer in charge decided upon having a description of mason work superior to & different from that specified in defts.' original contract with the co. who employed them; & one of defts. then desired pltf. to go on with the work as required, & promised to pay the additional expenses incurred by the change. Pltf. sued on the common counts for the value of the work done upon that undertaking, not under the contract:—Held: although it was stipulated that he should abide by the directions of the engineer, pltf. might refer to defts.' original contract with the co. to show what kind of work was contemplated by his agreement, & that he was entitled to recover under the common counts for extra work; for, as pltf.'s contract was evidently made with reference to that under which defts. were acting, it would be impossible, without looking at both, to put a just construction on their agreement.—LOGAN v. STRANAHAN (1854), 12 U. C. R. 15.—CAN.

370 ii. ——— Plans defective as to site.—A party sub-contracted to erect a lighthouse according to plans & specifications submitted. It was afterwards found that there were greater undulations & inequalities in the ground than could have been gathered from the plan, the contractor having taken this risk. The sub-contractor found it necessary to put in extra work to complete the contract. In an action by the sub-contractor for extras:—Held: the plan was part of the contract only in so far as it was expressly referred to & incorporated in the terms of the contract, & that unless there was something in the character of the ground of an unusual & extraordinary kind which should have been brought to the notice of the sub-contractor, he must be held to have taken the risk.—BROWN v. COLEMAN (1884), 7 Nfld. L. R. 38.—NFLD.

370 iii. ——— Work omitted by change.—Defts. were the contractors for a building, & pltf's sub-contractors for the stone & masonry work. Pltf's claimed payment for extra plastering, not originally provided for:—Held:

whole against the trust for the work, including the extra piling, by C. against the trustees. On a reference of an action by C. against the trustees, A. to recover for the extra piling, the arbitrator awarded that a verdict should be for C. for his claim, deducting for that portion which had been paid to B. :—Held: there was sufficient evidence, in point of law, to support the award.—PEARSON v. GRAHAM (1834), 3 L. J. Ex. 175.

371. — Contract providing for payment of extra work—Immaterial alteration in contract by sub-contractor.—A. agreed to do for B. & Co. all the woodwork on an iron ship, which B. & Co. were building for M. & Co. according to a certain tender, the whole to be completed for £3,800. The contract or tender contained the following clause: "Any important work not mentioned in this tender that may be required to be done by the owners, to be paid for by them, in addition to the amount herein specified." The work was undertaken by A. for B. & Co. upon the faith of a guarantee by C. as follows: "In consideration of your contracting with B. & Co., for the woodwork of an iron ship now building by them for M. & Co., we hereby guarantee the payment to you according to the contract." The word "important" in the contract was inserted by A. with the consent of B. & Co. after the guarantee was signed by C. :—

although pliffs. did plastering not provided for, more plastering was omitted by the change, & pliffs.' claim failed.—WINNIEG STONE CO. v. SENECA (1910), 14 W. L. R. 570.—CAN.

372 i. — For goods supplied & used in building—Construction of contract.—L. advertised for tenders for an addition to a store, intending to furnish the bricks for the work himself. He afterwards decided that the contractor should furnish the bricks, & the architect notified the persons tendering by leaving a written notice on his desk where the specifications were put for their inspection, but no notice of the alteration was made in the specifications. Pltf., it was shown, tendered for the work, but deft.'s tender was accepted, & pltf. sub-contracted under him. Upon an action brought by the sub-contractor against the contractor for the price of the bricks :—Held: upon the ordinary reading of the contract pltf. was bound to furnish the bricks.—IRESON v. MASON (1862), 12 C. P. 475.—CAN.

p. — Completion after payment assured by surety—Parties liable.—A. contracted with a co. to make a highway, & B. became his security to them. A. then employed C. to cut out certain timber for him, & while C. was thus engaged A. failed in his contract with the co. B. told C. to go on & he would see him paid. Upon completing his work C. sued A. & B. jointly :—Held: there was no joint contract by A. & B. with C., but A. was primarily liable on his contract, & B. as a guarantor.—NICHOLAS v. KING (1849), 5 U. C. R. 321.—CAN.

q. — Amount received by contractor from owner—Further amounts not received owing to default.—Def. had a contract with a railway co. for the construction of about fifty miles of their railway, & pltf. was the assignee of a sub-contractor under def. for about four miles. Pltf.'s work was all completed, & accepted by the co., & he claimed for percentages retained by def. up to a certain date, which def. had received, & for work done after that date, for which def. had not been paid, the co. having put an end to deft.'s contract with them owing to his default :—Held: pltf. was entitled to recover the whole amount claimed by him.—MCBRIEN v. SHANLY (1874), 24 C. P. 28.—CAN.

r. — Approval of owner condition precedent—Formal approval not obtained.—In terms of a sub-contract for the erection of certain buildings it was a condition that the sub-contractor could not demand payment from the contractor until he obtained the building owner's approval of his work. The work done was unsatisfactory & the owner after making certain deductions paid the contractor for a portion of the work :—Held: the sub-contractor was entitled to claim from the contractor the amount so paid although the owner's approval had not been formally obtained.—COOPER BROTHERS v. Extras generally, see Part VI., ante.

372. — For goods supplied & used in building—Implied promise to pay.—Pltfs. were employed as specialists by the architect under a building contract to supply door handles & door furniture for the building, & shortly before the delivery of the goods he informed defts., the builders, that the goods were being supplied by pltfs. The goods were duly delivered & were used by defts. in the building. In an action by pltfs. to recover the price of these goods, from defts. :—Held: as the goods had been supplied to, & used by defts., an implied promise by defts. to pay for the goods ought to be inferred.—RAMSDEN & CARR v. CHESSUM & SONS & WARD (1913), 110 L. T. 274; 78 J. P. 49; 30 T. L. R. 68; 58 Sol. Jo. 66, H. L.

373. Defective work by sub-contractor—Liability limited—Successful counterclaim by employer against contractor for defects—Liability of sub-contractor for costs.—Pltfs. having undertaken the repairs of a steamship for the owners, employed defts., an engineering co., to construct a new crank shaft. Defts. agreed to do so, upon the terms of their not being responsible for failure of material or workmanship beyond the replacement of faulty work supplied by them. In an action by pltfs. against the shipowners to recover the price of the shaft which had been entered into a sub-contract with pltf. whereby the latter agreed to cart the material for the contract, & (inter alia) deft. was to retain twenty-five per cent. of all moneys due under the sub-contract until after the expiration of thirty-one days after being notified by deft. that no more carting was required. When carrying out his contract deft. received a notice from the Minister of Public Works that, as he had failed to comply with certain requisitions as to employment of labour & otherwise to increase the rate of progress of the works, the Minister, in pursuance of the power vested in him by the contract, did take the works out of his hands, & did also give deft. notice of his intention to carry on the works under the direction of the resident engineer. Pltf. claimed that the effect of this was to determine the contract of deft. with the Crown, & to put an end to the sub-contract & so entitle him to sue deft. for the retention money :—Held: (1) the notice & taking-over of the works did not put an end to the contract of deft. with the Crown, & both the contract & sub-contract still subsisted; (2) the Minister was the agent of deft. & impliedly undertook to complete the works in terms of the contract.—MILLS v. MCWILLIAMS (1914), 33 N. Z. L. R. 718.—N.Z.

b. — Reference to master to ascertain amount—Allowances beyond scope of reference.—WEDDELL v. LARKIN & SANGSTER (1919), 17 O. W. N. 39.—CAN.

373 i. Defective work by sub-contractor—Contractor's right to damages.—A contractor can sue a sub-contractor for damages for work improperly done in a house where sub-contractor himself is responsible to the owner for all the work done.—RITCHIE v. PLAXTON (1907), 5 W. L. R. 414.—CAN.

c. Delay by sub-contractor—Measure of damages.—Where a sub-contractor failed to furnish the contractor the steel sash required for a large building, in time to enable the building to be closed in before the frost came, & the contractor was compelled supplied by defts., the shipowners counterclaimed for damages for breach of contract in consequence of the shaft having broken down on a voyage. Pltfs., after communicating with defts., who repudiated all responsibility, defended the counterclaim, & the shipowners succeeded on their counterclaim, the shaft being found to have been of faulty workmanship. In an action by pltfs. to recover from defts. the costs of the shipowners' counterclaim, as damages resulting from defts.' breach of contract:—Held: the terms on which defts. had supplied the shaft did not relieve them from paying these costs, & pltfs. were entitled to recover the costs of the counterclaim, except so far as they were increased by any issue other than the faultiness of the material or workmanship of the shaft.—PRINCE OF WALES DRY DOCK CO. (SWANSEA), LTD. v. FOWNES FORGE & ENGINEERING CO., LTD. (1904), 90 L. T. 527; 9 Asp. M. L. C. 555, C. A.

SUB-SECT. 3.— COST AND PROVISIONAL SUMS.

374. Nature of & effect of inserting prime cost items.]—The term "prime cost" in a contract indicates that the item to which it relates will be carried out by somebody other than the contractor himself. Entering an item as a "provisional item" has the effect that the contractor bases his contract upon the sum named of provisional cost of the article. In the case of items the contract made to procure point of fact a contract in which the good owner is the real principal, because, if it is a prime contract, he gets the benefit of it; if it is a provisional contract, he suffers the loss.—CRITTALL MANUFACTURING CO. v. LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL & MARCH (1910), 75 J. P. 203.

SECT. 1.—FOR DUE PERFORMANCE BY CONTRACTOR.

See, generally, GUARANTEE.

376. Whether surety discharged — Premature payments—Excessive advances—Nominal damages.]—By agreement between pltf. & S., S. was to perform certain works for pltf. for a certain sum, & to receive from time to time three-fourths of the cost of the part completed, the first payment to be made after one-eighth was performed, the remaining fourth part to be paid one month after the whole was completed, & if S. should fail to perform the work, pltf. might employ others to perform it, & deduct the expense from the sum payable to S. Deft. entered into a bond conditioned for performance of the agreement by S. S., after performing part of the works, abandoned the contract. Pltf., at the request of S., & upon new security given by him, had advanced to S., for assisting him in performing the works, a sum exceeding the whole cost of the works performed at the time of the abandonment, but less than the whole contract price. Pltf. had the works completed at an expense which, added to the cost of the part performed by S., was less than the whole contract price agreed on with S., but which, added to the sum actually advanced to S., exceeded that contract price. Pltf. brought an action of debt on the bond, suggesting, as a breach, S.'s non-performance, & pltf.'s loss thereby. Deft. pleaded non est factum:—Held: pltf. was entitled to nominal damages only, the loss having arisen, not from the non-performance of S.'s contract, but from pltf. having advanced more than the contract required, especially as the sum advanced exceeded, not only the three-fourths, but the whole of the work completed, & as the advances had been made on a fresh negotiation with, & security taken from, S.—*WARRE v. 377. — Advance of retention money.]—A contractor undertook to perform certain works, & it was agreed that three-fourths of the work, as finished, should be paid for every two months, & the remaining one-fourth upon the completion of the whole work:—Held: the sureties for the due performance of the contract were released from their liability, by reason of payments exceeding three-fourths of the work done having, without the consent of the sureties, been made to the

to enclose the building himself to avoid damage, the measure of damages is what would be a reasonable charge for doing that which the sub-contractor failed to do, not what the contractor suffered from imperfectly enclosing the building.—*NORCROSS BROTHERS CO. v. d. — Whether contractor liable for damages.]—A sub-contractor who undertakes the construction of a section of a railway within a certain time, & only completes the same a year later than the date agreed upon, cannot maintain an action against the contractor for alleged damages caused by

A. contracted with B. to build for him a ship for a given sum, to be paid by instalments as the work reached certain stages; & C. became surety for due performance of the contract on the part of B., the builder. A. allowed B. to anticipate the greater portion of the last two instalments, & B., becoming bkpt. before the ship was finished, A. was compelled to expend a larger sum of money than the unpaid portion of the purchase-money in completing her. In an action by A. against C. to recover the excess, & also a stipulated sum by way of damages for the delay in the completion of the ship, C. pleaded that the prepayments were made to B. without the knowledge or consent of C., & that, by making such payments without his consent, A. materially & prejudicially altered his position as surety. To this A. replied that the advances so made by him to B. were made with the knowledge, authority, & consent of C., & at his request, or for his use & benefit, & on his account:—Held: the plea afforded a prima facie answer to the action, & the onus lay upon A. to prove that the advances were made with the knowledge & assent & at the request of the surety.—GENERAL STEAM NAVIGATION CO. v. ROLT (1858), 6 C. B. N. S. 550; 6 Jur. N. S. 801; 8 W. R. 223; 141 E. R. 572.

379. — Contract to insure—Failure to insure.]—

Deft. became surety for the performance by H. of a contract with pltf. for the fittings of a warehouse at a fixed price. The contract between pltf. & H. contained a stipulation that pltf. should & might insure the fittings from fire at such time & to such amount as the architect might consider necessary, & deduct the insurance from the amount of the contract, & also that H. should & would provide to the satisfaction of the architect a dry & sufficient store for the reception of the fittings from time to time as such of them were completed, & until they could be received at the warehouse. H. had completed two-thirds of the fittings, & they remained in his workshops to the knowledge & without the objection of pltf. or his architect. The workshops were accidentally burnt, & H. was unable to complete his contract:—Held: there was a contract by pltf. to insure, & by reason of his not insuring deft. was released in equity from the guarantee.—WATTS v. SHUTTLEWORTH (1861), 7 H. & N. 353; 5 L. T. 58; 7 Jur. N. S. 945; 10 W. R. 132; 158 E. R. 510, Ex. Ch.

*380. — Misrecital of fact in contract.]—*By an indenture made between a local board, pltf., of the first part, certain contractors of the second part, & deft. of the third part, the contractors covenanted to do certain work upon the basis of a certain specification, & deft. covenanted to pay any loss that might be sustained from the non-performance of the work. The indenture recited that the specification had been signed by five members of the local board as was required by the local Act. In point of fact the specification had never been signed, although it had been acted upon:—Held: the mere fact of the specification not having been signed did not release the surety from his liability.—RUSSELL v. TRICKETT (1865), 13 L. T. 280; 30 J. P. 8.

*381. — Extension of work—Time for completion shortened—Separate conditions.]—*By agreement between pltf. & S., pltf. agreed to purchase of S. the ship D., the price being a sum of money & the transfer to S. of pltf.'s ship the L. Pltf. also agreed to lend S. £6,000 on mtge. of the L., & S. agreed to repair her, so as to class her eight years A1 at Lloyd's, & also to do anything remaining to be done to the D. within two weeks after that ship's arrival in London. Deft., as surety for S., gave his bond to pltf., conditioned to be void, if S. forthwith repaired the L., & if S., within the two weeks mentioned, did all that remained to be done to the D. Pltf. & S. afterwards, without the knowledge of deft., made another agreement, whereby the time within which the D. was to be completed was shortened, & more was to be done to her than was included in the original agreement:—Held: the conditions in the bond as to the L. & the D. were separate &

The agreement provided that the contractor should be solely responsible for damage caused to adjoining property, which should be made good at his expense. Deft. guaranteed the due fulfilment by the contractor of all conditions on his part to be performed. The contractor through negligence caused damage to the property of P., an adjoining owner: P. obtained judgment for £900 against the contractor & pltf. Pltf. satisfied the judgment & claimed from deft. £900.

Pltf.'s declaration did not allege that notice was given to deft. of the action of P. against the contractor & pltf.:—Held: (1) deft. had not discharged the onus of proving that by law notice of the action should have been given; (2) deft. was not precluded by the judgment in the previous action from questioning the amount claimed against him by pltf.—*SOUTH AFRICAN INDEPENDENT UNITED ORDER OF MECHANICS & FIDELITY BENEFIT LODGE v. 382. — Works made subject to supervision & approval of third party—Without knowledge of surety.—H. contracted with defts. to execute certain sewage works, for which he was to be paid upon the certificate of the surveyor of defts. On the same date H. as principal, & pltf. & another as sureties, entered into a bond to defts. for the due performance of the contract on or before a day fixed. H. failed to perform his contract, & became bkpt., & defts. then began an action against pltf. to enforce the penalty under the bond. Before the contract with H., defts. had entered into an agreement with a large owner of property in the neighbourhood, that the works should be executed at their joint expense, under the joint superintendence & control of his & their surveyor, but this agreement was never communicated either to H. or to pltf. On the failure of H. the works were placed in the hands of the landowner. Pltf. filed his bill against defts. only to restrain prosecution of the action, & the ct. awarded an injunction on the ground that the concealment of the last-mentioned contract was a circumstance which exonerated pltf. from all liability:—Held: as the landowner, who was virtually pltf. in the action, was not a party to the suit, & as the fact of the concealment could be raised by pltf. for his defence at law, the injunction must be dissolved.—STIFF v. EASTBOURNE LOCAL BOARD (1869), 20 L. T. 339; 17 W. R. 428, L. J.

383. — Alteration in position of surety due to fraud of contractor—Certificates fraudulently obtained.—By a contract for the construction of certain sewers for pltf., made between pltf., the contractors, & defts. as sureties for the contractors, the contractors covenanted that they would "well & truly" execute the works in question, & by a separate covenant the sureties covenanted that the covenant by the contractors should be "well & truly executed, performed, observed, fulfilled, & kept." The works & every part thereof were to be conducted & completed under the superintendence of the pltf.'s engineer, whose decision as to the manner in which the work was executed was to be final & conclusive, & the contractors & defts. were not to be released from their obligations until after the expiration of six months from the engineer's certificate of completion, & the engineer had a certificate that all the conditions of the contract had been fulfilled to his satisfaction, after which the balance of 10 per cent. of the contract price of the works, which was to be retained by pltf., in their hands, was to be paid over to the contractors. The works were completed, & a certificate of completion was given by the engineer, & after the expiration of six months the engineer gave his final certificate, & the retention money was paid over to the contractors. It afterwards appeared that the works had not been executed in accordance with the contract, but had been executed in an improper & defective manner. In an action against the sureties to recover damages caused by the failure of the contractors to perform their contract, the jury found that the contract had not been complied with, that the work had been scamped & fraudulently done, that the certificates had been obtained by the fraud of the contractors, but that there was an omission on the part of the corp. to superintend the work properly, which led to the scamping of the work by the contractors:—Held: defts. were liable upon the contract of suretyship, & were not discharged upon the ground that a final certificate had been given under the contract, because upon the true construction of the contract, they were only to be discharged by a certificate valid & binding as against pltf., nor upon the ground that their position had been altered by the giving of the certificate & the payment over of the retention money, because these had been brought about by fraudulent acts of the contractors, against which defts. had guaranteed pltf., nor upon the ground of the omission of pltf. to superintend the works, because upon the true construction of the contract pltf. were merely given an option to superintend the works, but no duty to do so was imposed upon them.—KINGSTON-UPON-HULL CORPN. v. HARDING, [1892] 2 Q. B. 494; 62 L. J. Q. B. 55; 67 L. T. 539; 57 J. P. 85; 41 W. R. 19; 36 Sol. Jo. 624; 4 R. 7; sub nom. KINGSTON-UPON-HULL CORPN. v. TURNER, 8 T. L. R. 672, C. A.

p. — & claim retention money.—A building contract contained the usual provisions for retention money. The contractor, after executing a certain portion of the work, abandoned the contract. The surety completed the building under the original contract, with the consent & at the desire of the building owner. The cost of so doing exceeded the amount of the retention money in the hands of the building owner when the contractor threw up the contract:—Held: the surety was entitled to be recouped out of the retention money for any loss incurred by him in completing the contract, & as such loss exceeded the amount of the fund, he was entitled to the whole of the retention money.—CORRANS v. TRANSVAAL GOVERNMENT & COULL'S TRUSTEE (1909), T. S. 605.—S. AF.

s. — Substituted contract—Whether entitled to payment according to original contract.—Pltf. were sureties to deft. for the performance by C. of an agreement to build cottages for £1,800, which deft. covenanted to pay to C., his exors., administrators & assigns, as follows: £800 to be advanced during the work, & the remaining £1,000 to be paid on completion by the conveyance to C. of specified premises. C. failed to perform his contract, & assigned it to pltf., having received £800 on account. Pltf. & deft. then entered into an agreement, to which C. was no party, reciting C.'s previous contract; pltf.'s liability as sureties for him; his non-performance & assignment to pltf.; that deft. at pltf.'s request, had agreed to give further time for completion, & that in consideration of the premises pltf. covenanted to finish the work according to the first agreement; & the parties mutually bound themselves in £1,000 for performance of this last agreement:—Held: there was no covenant, either express or implied, on the part of deft. to convey to pltf., or to pay them £1,000.—HALL v. GILMOUR (1852), 9 U. C. R. 492.—CAN.

t. — Whether liable to subcontractor for extras.—L. agreed to construct a sewer according to plans & specifications prepared by an engineer. Part of the work was sub-let by L. to pltf. at an agreed price. After pltf. had commenced work, a new contract was made between the employers & L. & deft. became surety for L. Deft. was obliged to take over the work from L. In an action by pltf. for payment for extra work:—Held: deft. not liable.—DRAKE v. CADWELL (1910), 17 O. W. R. 539; 2 O. W. N. 282.—CAN.

u. — Misrepresentation of employer—Action for damages.—Pltf. became sureties to defts. for the completion by contractors of work, by a certain date. The contractors commenced the work, but did not complete it within the specified time, & abandoned the contract. Statements were then made by the clerk of defts. to pltf. in good faith, but erroneous either in law or in fact. Pltf.,

384. Liability for costs to be paid by contractor—
Litigation not covered by contract.]—A contractor entered into a contract with pltfs. for the execution by him of certain works. The contract did not contain any agreement by the contractor at, in the event of litigation arising between him & pltfs. in connection with the performance of the contract & of his failing in that litigation & being ordered to pay the costs, he would pay them. Defts., as sureties for the contractor, gave a bond to pltfs. conditioned for the due performance by the contractor of his contract. Litigation having arisen between pltfs. & the contractor as to the performance of the contract, judgment was given against the contractor & he was ordered to pay the costs. Pltfs. sued defts. on their bond for the amount of the costs:—Held: as the liability of the contractor to pay the costs arose, not under the contract, but under the judgment, defts. were not liable.—HOOLE URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL v. FIDELITY & DEPOSIT CO. OF MARYLAND, [1916] 1 K. B. 25; 85 L. J. K. B. 239; 114 L. T. 358; 80 J. P. 118; 60 Sol. Jo. 429; 14 L. G. R. 390; affd., [1916] 2 K. B. 568, C. A.

385. Whether surety discharged—Immaterial alteration in contract.]—A. agreed to do for B. & Co. all the woodwork on an iron ship which B. & Co. were building for M. & Co., according to a certain tender, the whole to be completed for £3,800. The contract or tender contained the following clause: "Any important work not mentioned in this tender that may be required to be done by the owners, to be paid for by them, in addition to the amount herein specified." The work was undertaken by A. for B. & Co. upon the faith of a guarantee by C., as follows: "In consideration of your contracting with B. & Co. for the woodwork of an iron ship now building by them for M. & Co., we hereby guarantee the payment to you according to the contract." The word "important" in the contract was inserted by A., with the consent of B. & Co., after the guarantee was signed by C.:—Held: the insertion of the word "important" had no material effect upon the liability of C. under the guarantee.—ANDREWS v. LAWRENCE (1865), 19 C. B. N. S. 768; 144 E. R. 989.

Part XV.—Arbitration Clauses.

SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

See, generally, ARBITRATION, Vol. II., pp. 347–355, 513.

386. Validity of arbitration clause—Exclusion of jurisdiction of ordinary tribunals—Till award made.]—Where there is an agreement to refer a question of amount due for work, etc., to an engineer, & to exclude the jurisdiction of the ordinary tribunals till an award shall be made by him, it will be valid.

Where all complaints as to delays of a vexatious kind are by the contract left to the absolute discretion of an engineer, a ct. of equity has no power to impose upon either of the parties to the contract any other terms than those which they have prescribed for themselves, & by which they have agreed to be bound; but if the evidence establishes a case of gross misconduct in the engineer, or of wilful neglect or refusal or absolute incapacity in him to perform his duties, the case may be brought within the jurisdiction of the ct.

Where the engineer has not refused to discharge his duties according to the contract, & has done nothing to disqualify himself, but is still ready & willing to proceed to decide all matters between the parties to the contract, there remains no ground for the equitable interference of the ct.—SCOTT v. LIVERPOOL CORPN. (1858), 3 De G. & J. 334; 28 L. J. Ch. 230; 32 L. T. O. S. 265; 5 Jur. N. S. 105; 7 W. R. 153; 44 E. R. 1297, L. C.

believing in these statements, & in order to free themselves from liability, undertook completion of the contract. They proceeded with the work, & afterwards discovered that the statements made to them were untrue. Pltfs. thereupon abandoned the contract & brought an action claiming damages for loss sustained by them through misrepresentations of the clerk:—Held: there was no duty cast upon defts. to give pltfs. absolutely correct information; & as the statements complained of, though made without due inquiry, had been made in honest belief in their truth, defts. were not liable in an action of deceit.—FARMER v. COOK COUNTY (CHAIRMAN, COUNCILORS, & INHABITANTS) (1894), 13 N. Z. L. R. 311.—N.Z.

b. Whether surety discharged—Change of superintendent.]—Pltf. sued the sureties on a bond to him for the payment of the cost of a house, which pltf. was to build for the principal. The person who was to superintend the work was superseded by pltf. without the consent of defts.:—Held: the sureties could not be bound by the appointment of the new inspector,—

c. Right to set off deductions for defects.]—A guarantor is entitled to set off any deductions for defects the owner would be entitled to make.—DIEBEL v. STRATFORD IMPROVEMENT CO. (1917), 38 O. L. R. 407; 33 D. L. R. 296.—CAN.

d. Whether submission or not.]—It was provided that in case of difference between the contractor & the employer the written award of the architect should be final & conclusive, & that such award should be a condition precedent to legal proceedings in respect of a matter which might be the subject of award:—Held: a valid submission to arbn.—STEIN v. OTTO (1917), W. L. D. 2.—S. AF.

e. — Assessment of sums due under building contract.]—A covenant to construct, according to plan supplied by the engineer, at specified prices & that the work should be measured, calculated & determined by the engineer whose decision shall be final is not a covenant to refer to arbn. but to pay prices to be ascertained by the

f. — Distinction between arbitration & valuation fixing price for work.]—A builder & employer agreed that E. was to inspect & value work done on the building up to the time of the agreement & his award was to be final:—Held: (1) the effect of the agreement was, that a price to be fixed by E. was to be paid for the work; (2) E. was not an arbitrator.—Re LANGMAN & MARTIN (1882), 46 U. C. R. 569.—CAN.

g. —It was provided that the contractor should complete works under the direction & to the satisfaction of the engineer, who should be sole arbiter as to the meaning of the contract & of the quantity, quality, or prices of any work or materials, & whose instructions on all subjects connected with the contract should be followed by the contractor:—Held: the engineer was not constituted an "arbitrator" by the contract, but the above provision merely made his decision in reference to the manner in which the work was to be carried out, & to all matters connected with the carrying out of the works, final.—FRASER v. HAMILTON CORPN. (1912), 32 N. Z. L. R. 205.—N.Z.

387. — Provisions against impeaching findings of arbitrator—Whether against public policy.]—A clause in a building contract providing that the valuations, certificates, orders, & awards of the arbitrator appointed thereunder should be final & binding, & should not be set aside for any pretence, charge, suggestion, or insinuation of fraud, collusion, or confederacy:—Held: not obnoxious to public policy, for, in the absence of fraud on the part of the parties to the contract, it was competent to them to agree not to raise any question of fraud in the arbitrator.—TULLIS v. JACSON, [1892] 3 Ch. 441; 61 L. J. Ch. 655; 67 L. T. 340; 41 W. R. 11; 8 T. L. R. 691; 36 Sol. Jo. 640.

388. Award whilst action pending invalid—No application for stay.]—By a clause in a contract between plffs. & defts., a municipal corp., for the execution by the former of certain sewerage works, it was provided that, in case of any dispute, doubt, or difference arising or happening touching or concerning the works, or relating to quantities, qualities, description, or manner of work done, executed, or to be done & executed by the contractors, or in any wise whatever relating to the interests of the corp. or of the contractors, such doubts, disputes, or differences should from time to time be referred to & settled & decided by defts.' engineer, who should be competent to enter upon the subject-matter of such doubts, disputes, or differences with or without formal reference or notice to the parties to the contract or either of them, & who should judge, decide, order & determine thereon. Plffs. brought an action against defts. for sums which they alleged to have become due to them from defts. under the contract, & for damages for wrongful termination of the contract by defts. Defts. did not apply for a stay of proceedings in the action under Arbn. Act, 1889 (c. 49), s. 4. Subsequently to the commencement of the action, defts.' engineer, under the before-mentioned clause, without giving notice to the parties, & without the knowledge or consent of plffs., made an award purporting to decide the matters which were the subject of the action, & defts. pleaded his award in bar to plffs.' claim in the action:—Held: it was not competent engineer to determine the matters in pending the action, & his award was no bar to plffs.' claim in the action.—DOLEMAN & SONS v. OSSETT CORPN., [1912] 3 K. B. 257; 81 L. J. K. B. 1092; 107 L. T. 581; 76 J. P. 457; 10 L. G. R. 915, C. A.

389. Disputes in relation to contract—Extras.]—By a contract for the building of a borough gaol, it was provided that, if any dispute or difference should arise with the contractors in any way relating to the contract, or if any question should arise between any of the several contractors relating to the proposed building, such dispute, difference, or question, should be settled by the architect, whose decision thereon should be absolute & final:—Held: this condition applied only to disputes as to the mode of carrying on the several works, & not to differences between the contractors & the corp. as to their claim for extras.—PASHBY v. BIRMINGHAM CORPN. (1856), 18 C. B. 2; 139 E. R. 1262.

390. ———.]—By a building contract it was provided that no extra work should be paid for unless the contractors should produce special & positive written instructions for it, signed by the engineer, & countersigned by the chairman of deft. co. The engineer was to furnish monthly certificates of the value of the work executed, including extra work, & the contractors were to be paid 85 per cent. of the amount forthwith, & the balance at the expiration of three calendar months after the certificate of the engineer of the satisfactory completion of the work should have been given, provided that within three months after the giving of such certificate the contractors should have delivered to the engineer a full account of all claims which they might have upon the co., & he should have given a certificate of the correctness

h. Whether arbitration clause in force & applicable.]—Defts. contracted with plff. for the erection of buildings: the agreement provided for progress payments, that if default should be made after the amount should have been certified plff. might suspend the works; & that a dispute between the parties as to a matter "arising in any way under or out of this contract," should be referred to arbn. without legal proceedings being first brought. Default was made in progress payments:—Held: the reference to arbn. was not a condition precedent to plff.'s right to sue for the amount of a certified progress payment.—BELL v. KEESING (1888), 7 N. Z. L. R. 155.—N.Z.

k. Stay of proceedings—Termination of arbitrator's authority.]—When the architect has given his certificate, the ct. will not stay proceedings in a suit by the contractor to charge the separate estate of a married woman with the amount certified to be due, for the purpose of the matter in dispute being referred to arbn., although the employer discharged the architect before the date of his certificate.—MURRAY v. COHEN (1888), 9 N. S. W. Eq. 124.—AUS.

l. ——— Variation of contract—Extension of time for completion—Contract determined by employer.]—A contract provided that any doubt, dispute, or difference arising or happening touching or concerning the works... or the meaning or intention of the contract or of the specifications or conditions or any other part thereof should be referred to & decided by the engineer. The employer extended the time for completion; but, before the new date, purported to determine the contract in pursuance of conditions in that behalf. An action was brought by the contractor claiming damages for breach of contract, for wrongful prevention of due & complete performance & for wrongful determination of the contract done:—Held: the action should not be stayed.—*BURTON v. n. Requisites of valid award—Whether within submission.]—Plff. built a house for deft. under a contract which provided that all disputes arising thereout should be referred to arbn., except as to matters which, under certain clauses, were left to the discretion of the architect during the progress of the work. B. was appointed sole arbitrator to decide on all disputes & make a final award as to the amount due. The award was of a sum "in final settlement of all matters relating to the contract":—Held: the reference & award were not too wide although in terms including disputes expressly excluded from arbn.—*COX v. arising upon any matter connected with the contract were to be referred to the engineer, whose certificate was to be conclusive. The engineer had done for, as extra, work which had not in fact been done at all, & work which, although extra, had not been done on signed & countersigned orders:—Held: the facts showed that differences had arisen, & the certificate of the engineer was a decision upon them within the contract.—LIDLAW v. 391. ——— Express exclusion.—A building contract provided, by clause 31, that disputes between the building owner or his architect, & the contractor, "unless provided for in the foregoing clauses," should be referred to arbn. Clause 17 provided that extra work should be ordered in writing, that alterations of the works should not invalidate the contract, "but shall be measured & valued & certified for by the architect according to the annexed schedule of prices, or where same shall not apply, at fair measure & value, & the amount thereof added to or deducted from the amount due under the contract." Certain extras were ordered in writing, but when the architect measured them up & valued them, the contractor was dissatisfied with his measurement & valuation, & sought to have the dispute settled by arbn.:—Held: this dispute came within the exception in clause 31, as being provided for by clause 17.—Re MEADOWS & KENWORTHY (1897), 2 Hudson's B. C. 4th ed. 265, H. L.

392. ————A sewerage contract provided that no claim for extras should be allowed unless submitted to the engineers within a given time, that the engineers should be sole judges as to the method of carrying out the works & the materials to be used in the construction thereof, & that in case of any dispute arising at any time, whether during the progress of the works or after completion, as to certain specified matters not including extras, & as to all other matters therein left to the decision of the engineers, their decision should be final & binding on all parties to the contract:—Held: a claim for extras was not within the scope of the arbn. clause, & an action by the contractor for the amount of the claim ought to be allowed to proceed.—TAYLOR v. WESTERN VALLEYS (MONMOUTHSHIRE) SEWERAGE BOARD (1911), 75 J. P. 409, C. A.

Written orders generally, see Part VI., Sect. 3, ante.

394. ——— Damages for delay in removing obstruction from site.—Pltf. contracted with defts. to remove a certain quantity of the bed of the river Mersey within a certain time, but in case a temporary staging erected in the river was not removed by defts. in sufficient time to enable pltf. to com-estimates had been made up, & the whole should be "adjusted" by the architect, who was appointed sole arbiter for deciding questions between the parties as to the meaning of the contract, or as to the execution of the work:—Held: an adjustment of a claim for extra work did not fall within the clause of reference.—BIRRELL v. DUNDEE GAOL COMRS. (1859), 21 Dunl. (Ct. of Sess.) 640.—SCOT.

tion of the work."—A contract provided that any difference or dispute arising as to several enumerated sorts of matters or as to "any other matter or thing in connection with the execution of the works" should be referred to an arbiter whose decision should be final. The contractor sued the employer for breach of contract in that he did not give him possession of the ground on which he was to work within such time as the contract specified:—Held: the subject matter of the action was not a matter which plete his contract within the time agreed upon, he was to be entitled to such extension of that time as the engineer should deem reasonable. Pltf. was to be paid 80 per cent. of the value of the work certified by the engineer as having been completed each month, & the balance when the work was finished, but if any "difference" arose between defts. & pltf. "concerning the work contracted for or concerning anything in connection with the contract, such difference" was to be "referred to the engineer, & his decision" was to be final & binding on the defts., & pltf. The work was not completed till some time after the date stipulated for by the contract, but this pltf. alleged to be due to the non-removal of the staging. The engineer admitted that pltf. was entitled to compensation for the time, thirty-eight days, during which he incurred expenses by the delay caused by the non-removal of the staging, but the full amount for extra work & expenses could not be agreed on between him & pltf. After some correspondence the engineer certified that the work was finished to his satisfaction & pltf. was entitled to £1,005 10s., which was paid, but pltf. claimed £2,489 13s. 11d. beyond that amount:—Held: (1) there was an implied contract that no unreasonable delay should occur in removing the staging, & if pltf. was in fact prevented from completing the contract in time by reason of any such unreasonable delay he was entitled to damages; (2) this was not a difference concerning a matter in connection with the contract such as to make the engineer's certificate final & binding, & in fact there had been no reference to, or award by, the engineer.—LAWSON v. WALLASEY LOCAL BOARD (1883), 48 L. T. 507; 47 J. P. 437, C. A.; affg. (1882), 11 Q. B. D. 229; 52 L. J. Q. B. 302; 47 L. T. 625, D. C.

395. ——— Wrongful withholding of certificate.—A contract for the sale of locomotives provided for payment of the price upon the certificate of the engineer that the locomotives were in perfect working order at C., & by a subsequent clause, that, "all disputes are to be settled by" arbn. The locomotives were delivered at C., but the engineer refused to certify, or to give his reasons for not certifying. The vendors thereupon proceeded under the arbn. clause, the purchasers taking part under protest, & an award was given in favour of the vendors:—Held: a dispute had arisen within the arbn. clause, & whether the arbitrator was right or wrong, as he had not exceeded his jurisdiction, the ct. would enforce the award.—Re HOHENZOLLERN ACT. FÜR LOCOMOTIVBAU & CITY OF LONDON CONTRACT CORPN., & COMMON LAW PROCEDURE ACT, 1854 (1880), 54 L. T. 596; 2 T. L. R. 470; 2 Hudson's B. C. 4th ed. 100, C. A.

s. ————An arbn. clause referred all disputes about "the execution of the work" to an arbiter:—Held: a question as to the correctness of measurements, according to which the balance of the contract price was calculated, made by the superintending engineer was not within the clause.—MACDONALD v. MALCOLM (1855), 1 Dunl. (Ct. of Sess.) 1033.—SCOT.

397. Fraudulent misrepresentations inducing contract.]—Pltf., a contractor, entered into a written contract with defts. for the construction of certain sewerage works; the contract contained a clause that "if at any time any question, dispute or difference shall arise between the council or their engineer & the contractor upon or in relation to or in connection with the contract the matter shall be referred to & determined by the engineer." After he had done certain work under the contract pltf. refused to complete the work, alleging that he had been induced to enter into the contract by fraudulent misrepresentations made in the specification as to the nature of the subsoil of the ground where the work was to be done, & he brought an action to recover damages for the alleged misrepresentations & to have the contract declared void. Defts. having taken out a summons under Arbn. Act, 1889 (c. 49), s. 4, to stay the proceedings & refer the dispute to arbn. under the arbn. clause in the contract:—Held: the dispute was not a dispute "upon or in relation to or in connection with the contract" within the arbn. clause, & defts. were not entitled to have the proceedings stayed.—MONRO v. BOGNOR URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL, [1915] 3 K. B. 167; 84 L. J. K. B. 1091; 112 L. T. 969; 79 J. P. 286, C. A.

398. Matters causing delay & other causes beyond builder's control—Delay due to default of owners.]—By a building contract certain matters causing delay & "other causes beyond the contractor's control" were to be submitted to the board of directors of the owners of the building, who were to "adjudicate thereon & make due allowance therefor if necessary, & their decision shall be final":—Held: the exclusive jurisdiction of the board did not extend to delay caused by interference by the building owners or their architect with the conduct of the works, by default in not giving the contractors possession of the premises, & in not providing plans & drawings in due time.—WELLS v. ARMY & NAVY CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, LTD. (1902), 86 L. T. 764.

SECT. 4.—DISQUALIFICATION OF ARBITRATOR.

399. Arbitrator agent of one party—Personal interest of engineer or architect—Secret agreement with employer limiting cost.]—An architect entered into an undertaking his employer that a house should be erected sum not exceeding £15,000, including commission & all expenses, & engaged the services of a builder who, without being informed of the undertaking, gave an estimate based on quantities given him by the architect, & entered into a contract with the employer for the completion of the work from the architect's plans, & under his superintendence, for £13,690, with power for the architect to order extra works, & with a clause providing that all questions between the parties under the contract should be settled by the award of the architect. On a suit by the builder claiming to be entitled to be paid by the employer for all quantities executed by him beyond those included in his estimate, & for extra works:—Held: (1) the architect was the agent of the employer; (2) his undertaking having been concealed from the builder, the arbn. clause in the contract could not be enforced; (3) pltf. was entitled to an account of what was due to him for any works executed by him under the architect's direction not included in the contract, & for any works so executed under the contract the price for which was not therein included, & for any variations made under the architect's direction of works included in the contract.—*KIMBERLEY v. 401. Arbitrator acting unfairly—Or with partiality.]—Where by contract the award of the architect is final, & is fairly & impartially made, a ct. of equity will not relieve against it, however severe it may be in its effects; but, where the arbitrator is found guilty of unfairness or partiality, such ct. will relieve against his award.—*ORMES v. t. "In case of dispute regarding additional work," etc.—Clause in exhaustive terms.]—Pursuer in a petitory action contracted to build a railway line for defenders. The contract contained an arbn. clause of great width providing for arbn. in case of dispute regarding cost of additional work or alteration, or extension of time, or any matter arising out of or in connection with the contract whether during execution of the work, or after its completion. The work was to be completed in Mar. 1901, & was completed in 1906. Pursuer alleged that the work done was entirely different from the work contracted for & that certain facilities which were a condition precedent of his consent to the bargain had not been given him, & he was entitled to be paid on a quantum meruit:—Held: averments of pursuer were irrelevant, & action dismissed.—SMELLIE v. CALDONIAN RY. CO. (1916), 53 Sc. L. R. 336.—SCOT.

a. Interested party — Engineer.]—The rule that a contractor is bound by a condition making the employer's engineer the arbiter of all disputes arising under it, does not extend to a case where the named engineer, while in fact the engineer of the employer, is described in the contract as, & is supposed by the contractor to be, the engineer of a third person.—GOOD v. TORONTO HAMILTON & BUFFALO RY. CO. (1899), 30 S. C. R. 114.—CAN.

b. — — —.]—A contract provided that all works should be done to the engineer's satisfaction; that he was to be the sole judge of the work & materials, in respect both to quantity & quality; & that his decision on all questions in dispute was to be considered final & binding on all parties. After the work had been done, pltf. claimed a large sum for extra work, with which claim the engineer had dealt:—Held: the engineer was not an impartial or indifferent arbitrator, & pltf. were entitled to recover for extra work.—BRENNAN & HOLLINGWORTH v. HAMILTON CITY (1917), 39 O. L. R. 367; 37 D. L. R. 144.—CAN.

c. — — —.]—The arbn. clause provided that the arbiter should not be disqualified from acting by being or becoming consulting engineer to the employer:—Held: not barred from acting as arbiter because he had revised the specifications & schedules upon which the works which formed the subject of the arbn. were performed.—ADAMS v. GREAT NORTH OF SCOTLAND RY. CO. (1889), 26 Sc. L. R. 765.—SCOT.

d. — — — Architect — Examination as witness.]—The question whether an architect's refusal to issue certificates is justified being material, it would be improper to allow the matter to be decided by the architect, whose cross-

SECT. 1.—EMPLOYMENT AND AUTHORITY.

402. Authority as agent of building owner—Resident engineer—Approval not equivalent to that of "principal engineer."—A railway co., having constructed a tunnel, proceeded to dispose of the ground under which the tunnel ran, & contracted on June 5 to sell a portion to B., subject to the condition that he was to erect no buildings nor make any excavations, etc., but according to a specification approved in writing by the principal engineer. B. entered immediately, & sent in plans in Aug. to the resident engineer, for the approval of the principal engineer. The resident engineer never submitted them to the principal, but told B. verbally that he might proceed. B. thereupon proceeded till Oct. 6, when the conveyance was completed, & the co.'s solr., finding him carrying on building operations, asked if he had the approval in writing of the principal engineer, & told him he must procure it. The principal engineer then for the first time saw the plans of the proposed buildings, & immediately condemned them as dangerous to the tunnel, & also dangerous to the proposed houses. B. insisting on proceeding, the co. caused an information to be filed to restrain him, on the ground of danger to the public. The fact of danger to the public by the continuation of B.'s plans was fully made out:—Held: the approval of the co.'s resident engineer was not binding on the co.—A.-G. v. BRIGGS, A.-G. v. BIRMINGHAM & OXFORD JUNCTION RY. Co. (1855), 1 Jur. N. S. 1084.

403. ——— Not mere servant or agent of employer.—A resident engineer was appointed to superintend the execution in Brazil of a works contract:—Held: he was not a mere servant or agent of the employers, but in an independent position, & the employers were not liable for any damage or delay caused to the contractors by an honest error made by him in the exercise of his duties, without any interference on the part of the employers.—*Re DE MORGAN, SNELL, & Co., & RIO DE JANEIRO FLOUR MILLS & GRANARIES, Ltd. h. Authority as agent of building owner—To decide details of construction.—Tenements were erected under the supervision of applts.' architect, who during the course of erection sanctioned certain deviations from the details set out in the estimate. The tenements were substantial, of good workmanship & good material, but certain rybats used in the building were not of the size proscribed & fixed by the contract. The size of the rybats was given in the schedule, but the plans did not in any way show it. The schedule contained a condition that the whole materials & workmanship were to be of the best description & completed in accordance with the drawings:—Held: the stipulations as to the dimensions of the rybats were not contractual; that the measurements were inserted as a basis for pricing & not as a contractual obligation as to exact size; the exact measurements & arrangement of the rybats was a matter of construction over which the architect had control; & it was within the authority of the architect to give directions as to construction in accordance with the contract plans.—*FORREST v. 406. ——— To waive conditions.—Where a contract for work to be done for a co. specified that written directions should be given, for the work so to be done by the contractor, by the engineer of the co.:—Held: it was not sufficient, to support a claim for such work done without the written authority of the engineer, that the engineer subsequently granted a certificate that such work had been done by virtue of the contract.

The engineer was not the agent of the co. for the purpose of dispensing with a provision in the deed which might be of vital importance to the interests of the co. (WIGRAM, V.C.).—NIXON v. TAFF VALE RY. Co. (1849), 7 Hare, 136; 12 L. T. O. S. 347; 68 E. R. 55.

"concerning the work contracted for or concerning anything in connection with the contract, such difference" was to be "referred to the engineer, & his decision" was to be final & binding, on defts. & pltf. The work was not completed till some time after the date stipulated for by the contract, but this pltf. alleged to be due to the non-removal of the staging. The engineer admitted negligence in accepting it.—MILLS v. SMALL (1908), 11 O. W. R. 1041.—CAN.

408 ii. ——— ——— Defective workmanship.—Held: a clause giving engineers power to omit portions of the work contracted for & to make the consequent deductions did not authorise the acceptance of defective workmanship, even subject to deduction.—*MERRIAM v. 408 iii. ——— ——— Acceptance deferred for specified period.—A clause in a contract declared the works contracted for would not be accepted by the engineer, in the name of the corpn., until one year after they should have been in operation:—Held: the clause did not mean that the corpn. should be irrevocably bound by his acceptance. In any event, the corpn. could not be held to an acceptance by the engineer of work which was defective, unfinished & not according to plan & specifications.—DRUMMONDVILLE v. SIMONEAU (1912), Q. R. 23 K. B. 392.—CAN.

k. ——— To authorise deviations.—Held: while engineers were placed in charge of the construction of work that pltf. was entitled to compensation for the time, thirty-eight days, during which he incurred expenses by the delay caused by the non-removal of the staging, but the full amount for extra work & expenses could not be agreed on between him & pltf. After some correspondence the engineer certified that the work was finished to his satisfaction, & pltf. was entitled to £1,065 10s. which was paid; but pltf. claimed £2,489 13s. 11d. beyond that amount:—Held: the engineer had no authority to make an express contract on behalf of defts. that no unreasonable delay should occur in removing the staging.—LAWSON v. FARNHAM LOCAL BOARD OF HEALTH (1861), 2 F. & F. 406, N. P.

Reference to principal engineer of company—Amalgamation of companies—Engineer retaining control.—A contract between the W. ry. co. & certain contractors for works upon the line contained a stipulation that any difference arising thereon should be referred to T., "if & so long as he should continue to be the co.'s principal engineer." After the making of the contract the W. ry. co. became merged in & amalgamated with the N. B. ry. co., under an Act of Parliament, which provided that, notwithstanding the amalgamation, & the partial repeal of the special Act of the W. ry. co., all contracts should be with & enforced as if such repeal had not taken place, the N. B. ry. co. being in all respects with reference to such matters substituted for the W. ry. co.:—Held: T., who still continued to be the engineer of the W. portion of the railway, but was not the "principal engineer" of the amalgamated co., was the proper referee in cases of disputes arising out of the above contract.—RE WANSBECK RY. CO. & TROWSDALE (1866), L. R. 1 C. P. 269; 12 Jur. N. S. 740.

412. — Reference to "engineer for time being"—New engineer.—By the general conditions of a contract, disputes were to be referred to the engineer for the time being of the co. A dispute was so referred, but after the first day's hearing, C., the arbitrator, declined to proceed with the arbn., on the ground that he had resigned his post as engineer to the co., & was shortly to relinquish his duties. The contractor gave the co. notice to appoint an arbitrator under Arbn. Act, 1889 (c. 49), s. 5. The co. declined to do so, contending that the new engineer was the proper arbitrator, he being the engineer for the time being:—Held: the power of the ct. to appoint a fresh arbitrator arose at the moment when C. declined to act, & the co. was not entitled to a stay & reference to the new engineer.—STRACHAN v. CAMBRIAN RYS. (1905), 2 Hudson's B. C., 4th ed., 374, C. A.

SECT. 2.—DUTIES AND LIABILITIES.

SUB-SECT. 1.—TO THEIR EMPLOYERS.

A. In General.

413. Skill & care—Novel invention—Used at employer's instance.—Pltf. employed deft., an architect, to prepare plans for & superintend the erection of model lodging-houses after the latest improvements, & pltf. further instructed deft. to put in a new patent concrete roofing, which cost which they had designed, they had no authority to depart from the designs.—MERRIAM v. PUBLIC PARKS BOARD OF PORTAGE LA PRAIRIE (1912), 20 W. L. R. 603; 1 W. W. R. 1082; 2 D. L. R. 702.—CAN.

l. ——Circumstances in which:—Held: the change made in the line of a sewer was within the power of the engineer under the contract, & the contract had not been abrogated or changed.—BRENNAN & HOLLINGWORTH v. HAMILTON CITY (1917), 39 O. L. R. 367; 37 D. L. R. 144.—CAN.

m. ——Where a builder contracts to do work according to plans & specifications, & the specification bears that the work is to be done to the satisfaction of the architect in every respect, the architect is not entitled to sanction deviations from the plans.—RAMSAY v. BRAND (1898), 25 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 1212.—SCOT.

n. ——A. having contracted with B. to use cement mortar in building the walls of a house which he was erecting for B.:—Held: B.'s architect had not authority, without B.'s consent, to sanction the use of milled lime instead of cement mortar.—STEEL v. YOUNG, [1907] S. C. 360.—SCOT.

o. — To bind Crown — To inspect material at particular place.—Under a contract to build a bridge for Govt., the timber required being only obtainable in C., the Govt. engineer agreed that it should be inspected there; no term of the contract could be altered so as to bind the Crown unless sanctioned by order in Council:—Held: the Govt. was not bound.—MAYES v. R. (1894), 23 S. C. R. 454.—CAN.

p. — To agree to assignment of part of price.—An architect sent a letter to C., a builder's merchant, stating that he had received & accepted an order from A., the builder, on him in C.'s favour, & undertaking otherwise to pay C. the amount of £200 out of the moneys otherwise to become payable to A. under the contract:—Held: (1) the architect had no authority express or implied to accept the order; (2) by the custom of the building trade an architect has not by virtue of his employment, authority to accept on behalf of his employer orders given by a contractor to merchants for materials supplied for the work.—HYNE & SONS v. PODOSKY, LENNON (Claimant) v. HYNE & SONS, [1905] S. R. Q. 147.—AUS.

q. — To dismiss contractor.—

PART XVI. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 1.—A.

413 i. Skill & care.—An architect as between himself & his employer is answerable for either negligence or unskilfulness in the performance of his duty as architect.—BADGLEY v. DICKSON (1886), 13 A. R. 494.—CAN.

413 ii. — Question of fact for court or jury.—An architect is bound to exercise reasonable care, skill, & diligence in preparation of plans & supervision of work entrusted to him, & whether he has failed or not in the exercise of those qualities, is a question of fact for the ct. or jury.—RUSSELL v.

only a quarter of what a lead or slate roof would have cost. The concrete roof proved a failure, let in water, & had to be removed & replaced, & pltf. sued the architect for negligence:—Held: though failure in an ordinary building was evidence of want of competent skill, if out of ordinary course an architect was employed in some novel thing in which he had not experience, failure was consistent with skill.—TURNER v. GARLAND & CHRISTOPHER (1853), 2 Hudson's B. C., 4th ed., 1.

Arbitration.—See No. 411, & generally, cases in Part XV., ante.

B. Examination of Site, Foundations, etc.

414. Duty to ascertain nature of soil.—If an engineer is employed by a committee for erecting a bridge & forming a road to it to make an estimate of the expense of the works, he is bound to ascertain for himself, by experiments, the nature of the soil, although a person previously employed by such committee, having made the experiments, gives him, by their desire, information of the result.—MONEYPENNY v. HARTLAND (1826), 2 C. & P. 378, N. P.

See, also, cases in Sect. 3, sub-sect. 3, post.

415. Duty to measure site—Plans defective by reason of neglect to measure.—Pltfs. employed deft. to prepare plans for a building to be erected on a site belonging to them. Deft. neglected to measure the site, & acting on information which was unauthorised by pltfs., prepared plans on the assumption that the site was smaller than it was in fact. Pltfs., having paid deft. for the plans,

s. — Survey.—A surveyor in making a survey is under no statutory obligation to perform the duty, but undertakes it as a matter of contract & is only liable for want of reasonable skill or gross negligence.—STAFFORD TOWNSHIP v. BELL (1881), 6 A. R. 273. —CAN.

t. — Agreement not under seal — Agreement executed.—Pltfs., a corpn., agreed to employ M. as their architect by an agreement not under seal; the agreement had been executed & was within the scope of the corpn.'s authority:—Held: pltfs. could sue M. for negligence.—SYDNEY MUNICIPAL COUNCIL v. McBEATH (1881), 2 N. S. W. L. R. 142.—AUS.

a. Employed by both owner & contractor—Discharge of owner.—TAHLERLAND v. RODIER (1866), 16 L. C. R. 473.—CAN.

b. Unfavourable report on supervisor—Whether privileged.—OLDHAM & COX v. BUSHBY (1914), 16 W. A. L. R. 64.—AUS.

See, further, LIBEL & SLANDER.

c. Right to delegate.—The engineer has the right to delegate to qualified assistants matters of detail such as taking levels, preparation of plans, but not any requiring the exercise of judicial discretion.—MOORE v. MARCH (1909), 13 O. W. R. 692.—CAN.

PART XVI. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 1.—B.

414 i. Duty to ascertain nature of soil.—The failure of an engineer to make tests of the bearing capacity of the soil on which a building is to be erected does not necessarily constitute negligence, especially if he be familiar with the character of the soil in question.—LEA v. MEDICINE HAT CITY, [1917]

d. Plans & documents—Duty to communicate.—An engineer hired by a corpn. to supervise the construction of certain works, in consideration of a percentage to be levied on the cost, does not violate his agreement by refusing to give communication of the plans & specifications prepared by himself.—ADDIE v. THETFORD MINES (1910), Q. R. 39 S. C. 412.—CAN.

416 i. — Property in employer—Identified by parties—Not forming part of the contract.—MOFFATT v. SCOTT (1863), 8 L. C. J. 310.—CAN.

416 ii. — Plans paid for by employer.—Where an architect has been employed & paid for the preparation of preliminary plans, the ownership in the plans belongs to the employer.—CROMPTON v. UPTON, [1903] 24 N. L. R. 500.—S. AF.

416 iii. — — — — ——In the absence of a special stipulation to the contrary, plans prepared by an architect & paid for by the employer become the property of the employer.—BOCK v. WINDER (1893), 7 E. D. C. 112.—S. AF.

e. — Preparation of — Degree of perfection.—Where an architect is employed to prepare plans & specifications for, & to superintend the work of restoration of an old building partly destroyed by fire, microscopical perfection of the architect's work is not required.—MEREDITH v. MACFARLANE (1915), 9 O. W. N. 160.—CAN.

In an action to recover the money paid for the plans on the grounds of a total failure of consideration, or, in the alternative, for damages for negligence:—Held: there had not been a total failure of consideration, but as deft. had been negligent pltfs. were entitled to damages, although, as they had sustained no loss from his negligence, those damages would be only nominal.—COLUMBUS Co. v. CLOWES, [1903] 1 K. B. 244; 72 L. J. K. B. 330; 51 W. R. 366.

C. Plans, Specifications, etc.

416. Plans & documents—Property in employer—Custom of architects to retain—Where work not proceeded with.—Pltf. was an architect who had been employed by deft. to prepare plans & get tenders for a vicarage. The payment was to be 5 per cent. on money expended if the vicarage was completed; if tenders were obtained & work not commenced, 3 per cent. on the estimated cost; if no invitations for tenders issued, 2½ per cent. The plans were prepared, but deft. then changed his mind & declined to proceed, & wrote to pltf. offering to pay, & asking for the plans. Pltf. declined to give up the plans, but sued for payment & set up a custom among architects to retain their plans if the work was not proceeded with:—

Held: such custom, even if proved, would be unreasonable, & deft. need not pay for the plans unless he got them.—EBDY v. M'GOWAN (1870), 2 Hudson's B. C., 4th ed., 9.

417. — — — — — After completion of work.—An architect was employed by a building owner to carry out alterations in certain houses. He owner.]—The architect employed by a landowner to design & superintend the construction of a house on a vacant site not subdivided into building lots for sale, incurs no liability from the fact that an oblique view is given through a window in the house designed by him, into a part of the land sold by the owner to a third party, after the inception of the building.—SAINT JEAN v. STRUBBS (1905), Q. R. 27 S. C. 266.—CAN.

h. — Prepared by other architect — Liable for defects.—SCOTT v. CHRIST CHURCH CATHEDRAL (INCUMBENT & CHURCH WARDENS) (1865), 1 L. C. L. J. 63.—CAN.

k. — Prepared by other surveyor — Not liable for defects.—A land surveyor is not answerable for errors in a plan, according to which he subdivided land, if the plan was not prepared by him.—PARQUIN v. BOURGOIS (1913), Q. R. 23 K. B. 494.—CAN.

l. Estimates — Preparation of — Degree of skill & care.—In making his estimates of the cost of a building an architect is only required to use a reasonable degree of care & skill, & if he does this he is not liable for any loss caused by error in the estimates.—GRANT v. DUPONT (1901), 8 B. C. R. 7, 223.—CAN.

m. — — — — ——Pltfs. undertook to rebuild deft.'s theatre & to secure proposals from contractors for materials, etc., such proposals not to exceed a given sum. The work was subsequently carried on, but at an expenditure exceeding that sum by 50 per cent.:—Held: pltfs., as skilled architects, must at their peril furnish a reasonably exact estimate, & had forfeited their right to remuneration by their negligence in underestimating the cost.—MILLS v. SMALL (1908), 11 O. W. R. 1041.—CAN.

prepared plans & superintended the execution of the work, which was completed, & his agreed remuneration at an inclusive percentage on the outlay was paid. The building owner then demanded the plans, which the architect refused to hand over. In an action by the building owner against the architect to recover the plans:—Held: a custom set up by deft. entitling him as architect to the property in the plans after the completion of the work was unreasonable, & afforded no answer to the action.—GIBBON v. PEASE, [1905] 1 K. B. 810; 74 L. J. K. B. 502; 92 L. T. 433; 69 J. P. 209; 53 W. R. 417; 21 T. L. R. 365; 49 Sol. Jo. 382; 3 L. G. R. 461, C. A.

418. Other documents—Architect must produce.—Pltf., the owner of an estate, appointed defts. receivers & surveyors. They also acted independently as architects to superintend repairs & alterations to the farmhouse for which they were paid separately. Pltf. discharged defts. & filed a bill for the delivery up of all documents relating to the estate. Defts. admitted the possession of certain documents connected with the property which they insisted were their own private memoranda:—Held: they were bound to produce them, in order to enable the ct. to judge whether they were of such a nature that they ought to be

n. — Onus of proof. — Where a civil engineer is called upon in his professional capacity to make investigations & estimates &, either from want of skill or negligence, his report or estimate is incorrect, he is liable to his employer for the unnecessary expense or injury thereby occasioned; it is no excuse that he relies upon the information & advice of another engineer who had made experiments & investigations of the kind required. If the actual cost of the work prove to be more than his estimates, he will be liable to his employer only if he omitted to apply to the preparation of the estimates the ordinary & reasonable degree of care & skill exercised in his profession. The onus is upon the employer to prove such negligence.—LEA v. MEDICINE HAT CITY, [1917] 3 W. W. R. 467; 37 D. L. R. 1.—CAN.

q. — Fraudulently passing work—Loss of right to remuneration.—If an architect's attention is drawn by his employer to the fact that materials are being used which are not according to the contract & he knows that that is so & deliberately passes the work, there is a want of bona fides on his part which renders him guilty of fraud & disentitles him to recover remuneration on the contract.—*WILSON v. s. — Building encroaching on street.—In an action by an architect for fees for drawing plans for & superintending the construction of a building, a counterclaim by the owner against the architect & the builder for negligence in letting the building encroach on the street was struck out, there being no allegation that the builder was the agent or acting under the instructions or directions of the architect, & the owner's right of action, if any, as against him, being, therefore, entirely distinct from his right of action against the architect.—HOPKINS v. BROWN (1914), 28 W. L. R. 276.—CAN.

t. — Liability for trespass by contractor.—Works were executed by the contractor under the personal superintendence of the engineer & his assistants, & according to plans & specifications prepared by the engineer, who directed & instructed the contractor, was frequently present on the ground, & saw the works in progress. Some of the works were executed on pltf.'s lands, & were admittedly acts of trespass:—Held: the engineer was liable to pltf. for the trespass so committed.—MONKS v. DILLON (1882), 10 L. R. Ir. 349; 12 L. R. Ir. 321.—IR.

a. — Non-performance of contract by builder.—On a counterclaim by an employer against an architect for negligence in supervision:—Held: an architect does not guarantee the performance of the builder's contracts.—GOUINLOCK v. MACLEAN (1918), 14 O. W. N. 142.—CAN.

b. — Exercised in good faith—Liability.—When an engineer, charged with the duty of superintending the execution of a contract, is empowered to pass upon the work done & the materials supplied, he is free from all liability for damages if, whether rightly or wrongly, but in good faith, he condemns either the work or the materials.—AUDET v. QUINET (1909), Q. R. 37 S. C. 385.—CAN.

419 i. Supervision must be thorough.—Pltf. had engaged B. to build a house for pltf. in accordance with certain plans. B. was to be paid on certificates by deft., pltf.'s architect, to the effect that the house was properly built in accordance with the plans. Deft. certified & B. received payment from pltf. 419. Must be thorough.—Owing to the death of one of his children pltf. decided to have the sewerage arrangements of his house examined & put into a state of complete repair, & deft. was employed for the purpose & to prepare designs & superintend the carrying out of the work. It was subsequently found that ventilating pipes had never been cemented, & also that one ventilating pipe had been carried through the nursery inside the wall & covered over by boarding & paper, & had not been cemented, & pltf.'s children had been frequently ill in consequence. Another contractor was called in to make the work good, & pltf. claimed against deft. the costs of repairs & also doctor's fees & other expenses:—Held: a formal verdict should be taken for pltf. & the matters in dispute referred to a barrister who be responsible if the jury should find that the giving of the certificates arose from his negligence & want of caution in his duty of superintending the works; there was incumbent on deft. the duty of skilled superintendence.—ARMSTRONG v. JONES (1869), 2 Hudson's B. C. 4th ed. 6.—IR.

419 ii. — An architect employed by the owner to superintend the erection & completion of a building for him under the usual building contract, whereby the architect's certificates are made a condition precedent to the liability of the owner to make payments to the contractor, & his final certificate of completion is necessary to entitle the contractor to payment of the full price of the work, & is made final & conclusive between the parties, may be liable to the owner for damages caused by the issue of such final certificate if, in fact, the building has not been properly completed according to the plans & specifications, & it is shown that the architect, assuming that he was honest & desirous of being impartial, could not have given such certificate unless he had been negligent in discharging his duty of superintending the work for the owner & in making his final inspection of it.—BRUCE v. JAMES (1913), 24 W. L. R. 752; 4 W. W. R. 1019.—CAN.

419 iii. — An architect who, being paid to supervise the building of a house, & grants a certificate to contractors that work to a certain extent has been done, on the production of which they obtain payments, is liable to his employer, if the work so done is defective & he has failed to take proper precautions to supervise & prevent the defective workmanship.—JAMESON v. SIMON (1899), 1 K. (Ct. of Sess.) 1211; 7 S. L. T. 133; 36 Sc. L. R. 883.—SCOT.

419 iv. — Pltfs., whilst acting as architects for the erection of a certain building for deft. co., issued certificates to a contractor on the completion of the installation of an electric plant. Upon these certificates the contractor received payment from defts., but the installation was subsequently discovered to be defective & useless. The faults could only have been discovered by an expert. Pltfs., before granting the certificates, did not satisfy themselves as to the quality of the work:—Held: pltfs. were under a duty to have satisfied themselves, either by special

Measure of damages.]—Engineers in the employ of a local board were negligent in the design, construction & supervision of a drainage scheme entrusted to them:—Held: they were liable in damages for their neglect for the sum necessary to make good the defects of the scheme, & their liability was not limited to the amount of their professional charges.—SAUNDERS & COLLARD v. BROADSTAIRS LOCAL BOARD (1890), 2 Hudson's B. C., 4th ed., 164, D. C.

421. — Effect of final certificate.]—An architect was employed to design & superintend the erection of a house, & by the terms of the contract between the building owner & the builder the architect's decision in all matters between builder & building owner was to be final. The architect gave a final certificate, & brought an action for his fees. Deft., the building owner, counterclaimed for negligence by the architect in the supervision of the work. The architect in his defence to the counterclaim alleged that he had taken the defects into consideration in certifying the final amount due, & had allowed a sum in respect thereof. The jury found a verdict for pltf. on the claim for £58, & for deft. on the counterclaim for £90:—Held: the building owner was entitled to recover damages for the negligence in supervision, notwithstanding the certificate.—ROGERS v. JAMES (1891), 56 J. P. 277; 8 T. L. R. 67; 2 Hudson's B. C., 4th ed., 172, C. A. knowledge, or by the report of an expert, as to the quality of the installation, before issuing the certificate, & having failed to do so, were liable for the damages suffered by defts.—PHILIP & LESLIE v. TRANSVAAL GOLD FIELDS, LTD. (1898), 5 O. R. 54.—S. AF.

419 v. —.]—It is the duty of an architect to discover bad work, materials, or defects at the time when the work is being done, or when the defects should have been patent to him as a person possessing skilled knowledge in the profession which he exercises; & if he passes or certifies as proper, complete, or satisfactory, work or materials which are improper, unsound, defective, or incomplete, & which he ought to have observed in the reasonable exercise of his profession, he will be liable in damages to his employer.—PATTINSON v. WALKER (1908), E. D. C. 266.—S. AF.

419 vi. — Work not in accordance with specifications—But better done.]—Under an issue whether defender, the overseer of a new line of road, had wrongfully failed to superintend the execution of the work, or wrongfully directed or permitted the contractor to deviate from the specifications, or wrongfully & falsely certified that the work was executed according to the specifications to the loss, injury, & damage of the pursuer:—Held: not relevant & not competent for defender to show by way of negating such loss, injury, & damage, that the work had been better executed than if it had been done exactly according to the specifications.—GORDON v. MILLAR (1839), 1 Dunl. (Ct. of Sess.) 832.—SCOT.

419 vii. — — Dry rot setting in.]—Where "dry rot" renders a building unsafe, & repairs become necessary, the costs thereof will fall upon the architect & contractor for using wood other than the kind specified. In effecting such repairs other material may be used if there be no unnecessary expense entailed thereby. The liability of architect & contractor continues over 10 years from the delivery & acceptance of the work.—CANADA SPOOL COTTON CO. v. LYALL (PETER) & SONS (1916), Q. R. 51 S. C. 227.—CAN.

420 i. — Measure of damages.]—Deft. was employed by pltf. as the architect for the erection of a house. Pltf. sued deft. for damages for negligence for allowing the eave to overlap the eave of the adjoining building & for failing to compel the use of floor boards in accordance with the specifications:—Held: slight damages had been sustained; pltf. should be awarded the sum which was due to deft. for commission.—McDONALD v. EDEY (1912), 22 O. W. R. 664; 3 O. W. N. 1514; 3 D. L. R. 893.—CAN.

420 ii. — —.]—When, owing to negligent supervision of the architect (see supra), the owner by the terms of the contract, has no defence against the contractor's claim for the amount shown by the final certificate, the damages awarded to him against the architect should be the amount it would cost to put the building into the proper condition as called for by the plans & specifications. The fact that the owner has succeeded in compromising with the contractor & getting a settlement with him for less than the amount called for by the final certificate by reason of the imperfections in the work, does not affect his right to such damages against the architect, except that the amount saved by such compromise should be taken into account in favour of the architect.—BRUCE v. JAMES (1913), 24 W. L. R. 752; 4 W. W. R. 1019.—CAN.

Effect of final certificate generally, see Part III., Sect. 3, sub-sect. 2, ante.

422. — Delegation to clerk of works.]—Pltf. sued deft. to recover £80 3s. 9d. for work done & money expended as architects for deft. in connection with the renovation & restoration of the kitchen wing of, & sundry repairs to, a mansion house. The defence was that pltf., in not seeing that certain beams in the kitchen were renewed, had not performed their duty properly, & deft. counterclaimed £150 damages. The clerk of the works was selected by deft., & pltf. left it to him to decide whether new beams were required, & did not go down themselves to look at the beams, but adopted the view of the clerk of the works that new timbers were not necessary:—Held: although pltf. were not responsible for the negligence of the clerk of the works, the question whether new beams were required was one for pltf. & not for the clerk of the works.—LEE v. BATMAN (1893), Times, Oct. 31st.

Where the clerk of the works fraudulently permitted a floor to be laid, otherwise than in the way, & without the precautions against damp, provided for in the specification, & the supervising architect failed to see that this part of his design was adhered to:—Held: the architect was personally responsible for the consequences resulting from dry rot in the floor.—*LEICESTER GUARDIANS v. 421 i. — Effect of final certificate.]—Pltf., an architect, sued for the balance due to him under an agreement with deft. for commission for his services in superintending the construction of a dwelling-house. The defence was that by his negligence & want of care & skill in the performance of his duties the contractor's work had been done in a defective & inferior manner. Pltf. contended that by the terms of the contract between deft., the building owner & the contractor, he had been made the authorised judge of the quality of the material used & of the time & manner of executing the works, & that having approved of the work & certified to its due performance no action lay against him:—Held: apart from the contract between the building owner & the contractor, pltf. was employed as a skilled professional person to perform services for reward & was subject to the usual obligations attaching to such a contract.—*BADGLEY v. negligent in certifying the due & satisfactory completion of a drainage scheme, & in over-certifying the amount of work done:—Held: they were liable to repay the amount by which the contractor was overpaid on their certificates, & their liability was not limited to the amount of their professional charges.—SAUNDERS & COL-LARD v. BROADSTAIRS LOCAL BOARD (1890), 2 Hudson's B. C., 4th ed., 164, D. C.

425. Architect as arbitrator—Liability for negligence in certifying.—A building owner employed an architect for reward to supervise the erection of certain houses by a contractor. The building contract provided for payments on account of the price of the works during their progress, & for payment of the balance after their completion, upon certificates of the architect, & that a certificate of the architect, showing the final balance due or payable to the contractor, should be conclusive evidence of the works having been duly completed, & that the contractor was entitled to receive payment of the final balance:—Held: the architect, in ascertaining the amount due to the contractor & certifying for same under the contract, occupied the position of an arbitrator, & was not liable to an action by the building owner for negligence in the exercise of those functions.—CHAMBERS v. GOLDTHORPE, RESTELL v. NYE, [1901] 1 K. B. 624; 70 L. J. K. B. 482; 84 L. T. 444; 40 W. R. 401; 17 T. L. R. 304; 45 Sol. Jo. 325, C. A. intending the erection of a house for deft.:—Held: deft. was entitled to deduct from the amount which pltf. could otherwise claim, any loss which deft. had sustained through pltf.'s negligence, in certifying for too much for contractors who afterwards failed, in consequence of which deft. was compelled to have the work done by others at a much higher price.—*IRVING v. e. Engineer as arbitrator—Duty in making award.—A contract provided that the cost of the labour expended on the works, & interest on the value of materials used in connection therewith, should be determined by the engineer:—Held: the engineer was entitled to arrive at his determination by whatever methods he chose, & was not bound to take evidence or hear parties.—*NORTH BRITISH RY. PART XVI. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 1.—G.

1. Secret commission—Claimed by clerk of works from measurer—As condition of employment.—A clerk of works with full charge of certain buildings in course of erection, unknown to his principal, stipulated with a measurer, as a condition of the latter's employment, for a commission on the tradesmen's accounts as brought out in the measurements. The measurer having been employed, the whole contract being verbal, the clerk of works sought to recover his commission:—Held: the alleged contract for a commission was pactum illicitum, & action dismissed as irrelevant, with expenses to neither party.—MAC-DOUGALL v. BREMNIER, [1907] 44 S. L. R. 804.—SCOT.

g. Engineer becoming partner of contractor—Contract for other employer.—Pltf., an engineer, was a servant of the Govt.; it was his special duty to supervise on their behalf the proper performance by a contractor of the work contracted for. While occupying that position he entered into an agreement of partnership with the contractor, whereby he was to receive a share in any profit under the contract:—Held: the contract was so tainted with illegality that the ct. would give pltf. no relief in respect of it.

Where pltf. was able to prove a partnership with the contractor in another contract apart from any evidence as to illegality:—Held: the defence of illegality had no applicability to such contract.—NOBLE v. MADDISON (1912), 12 S. R. N. S. W. 435.—AUS.

k. Claim in warranty against architect—Deviations from specifications.—A builder who has been condemned in damages by reason of defects in the construction of his works, has no claim in warranty against the architect where it appears that there were serious deviations from the specifications furnished by the architect, & that these deviations were the chief cause of the weakness of the construction. If a builder or contractor does not fully understand from the specifications what is required for the proper construction of the work according to the rules of art, it is his duty to consult the architect & follow his instructions in relation thereto.—ROYAL ELECTRIC CO. v. WAND (1895), Q. R. 9 S. C. 117.—CAN.

l. In granting certificate.—Under a contract with a public body, for the construction of certain works to the satisfaction of the engineer of such body, the engineer is not an arbitrator, but a skilled agent of the employer, his certificate being by mutual agreement a condition precedent to the contractor's obtaining final payment, he owes a duty to the contractor as well as to the employer, & is bound to act fairly towards both parties.—*YOUNG v. Pltf. invited tenders for sub-contracts, asking for a commission from the persons tendering on the amount of the tender. After the tenders were accepted, defts. discovered that pltf. was to receive these commissions & at once dismissed him:—Held: (1) the dismissal was justifiable; (2) it was immaterial that existence of the commissions was not fraudulently concealed, & that officers of the co. had had the opportunity of discovering their existence.—*TEMPERLEY v. After the completion of the contract the engineer declined to certify & stated as his reason that by the terms of the contract B. was indebted to the Govt.:—Held: this was not a sufficient reason within the contract, & B. was entitled to substantial damages, the measure of damages being the amount which ought to have been inserted in the certificate, but without interest upon that amount.—*BRUCE v. It then went on to aver, that, A. refusing to pay for the stone, pltf. trusting in deft.'s representation sued A. for the price & failed in their action & had to pay A.'s costs & also the costs incurred by their own attorneys:—Held: the declaration sufficiently disclosed a cause of action, & it appearing that deft. had no such authority as he represented pltf. were entitled to recover not only the value of the stone, but also the costs they had incurred & paid in the former action.—*RANDELL v. 428. Certificate for insufficient amount—Refusal to reconsider—No proof of fraud.—[Claim, that pltf. contracted with a co. to build a hall, the plans, the bill of “quantities,” etc., for which had been prepared by deft. who was employed by the co., & named in the contract as their architect to carry out the works. The contract provided that the architect might order additions to or deductions from it, & that the amount of them should be ascertained by the architect in the same manner as the “quantities” had been measured, & at the same rate as they had been priced at; that the contractor & the co. would be bound to leave all questions or matters of dispute which might arise during the progress of the works, or in the settlement of the account, to the architect, whose decision should be final & binding upon all parties, & that the contractor would be paid on the certificate of the architect. The claim then alleged that the contract was signed by pltf. in the belief & expectation, as deft. well knew, that deft. would use due care & skill in ascertaining the amounts to be paid by the co. to pltf., that the work was done, that additions & deductions were ordered, & certificates given by deft., but that he did not use due care & skill in ascertaining the amounts,

& neglected & refused to ascertain them in the same manner as the “quantities” had been measured, & at the same rate, & knowingly or negligently certified for a much less sum than was the net balance payable to pltf., & refused to reconsider his final certificate, by reason whereof pltf. was unable to obtain payment from the co. of the balance:—Held: the functions of the architect in ascertaining the amount due to pltf. were not merely ministerial, but such as required the exercise of professional judgment, opinion, & skill, & he occupied the position of an arbitrator, against whom, no fraud or collusion being alleged, the action would not lie.—*STEVENSON v. The declaration then averred that H. gave deft. such order, & that he required certain materials, which pltf. provided & delivered to him, to the value of £1,000, & that that sum became due to H. for the work, of all which deft. had notice, & was requested by pltf. to pay him for the materials out of such money received by him as were due to H. for the work. 431 Employment by local board—Not under seal. Defts., who were a local board within Public Health Act, 1848 (c. 63), s. 85, and an urban authority within Public Health Act, 1875 (c. 55), s. 174 were found by a jury to have authorised their surveyor to employ pltf., an architect, to prepare certain plans for offices they intended to erect, but which they did not erect, & to have ratified the act of their surveyor in procuring them, & such offices were found also by the jury to be necessary for the purposes of defts., & the plans necessary for the erection of the offices. The plans were ordered when Public Health Act, 1848, was in force, but were not finished until that Act had been replaced by 1875 Act. There was no contract under seal with pltf., nor ratification under seal of any contract with him, & the value of the work done exceeded £50:—Held: as the enactments requiring a seal were compulsory, & not merely directory, defts. were not liable to pay for the plans. Qu.: whether they would have been so liable upon an

had been furnished upon the footing of there being a competition:—Held: assuming the fact as stated by the defender, it lay upon the employer to prove that the employment was gratuitous.—LANDLESS v. WILSON (1880), 8 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 289; 18 Sc. L. R. 206.—SCOT.

Ultimately the scheme was not proceeded with. h. *Plans prepared in accordance with instructions.]—*Pltf. prepared plans & specifications according to to tender designs for the erection of municipal buildings. An assessor was to select the architect whose plans he considered best. The council were not expressly bound to appoint the assessor's choice. Pltf. was in fact selected by the assessor, & appointed by the council. He prepared plans, but the Local Government Board refused leave to borrow for the amount of the scheme. Accordingly pltf. prepared fresh plans at less cost under instructions from the council. This scheme was never carried out, & pltf. sued for his fees under the original agreement. Defts. objected that there was no contract under seal to satisfy Public Health Act, 1875, s. 174:—Held: these fees had been earned under a modification of the original scheme & not under a new scheme, & the sect. was satisfied by the original conditions of tender, & pltf. was entitled to recover.—HUNT v. ACTON URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL (1908), 72 J. P. 345; 6 L. G. R. 957.

438. Probationary drawings—Remuneration subject to approval.]—A declaration in assumpsit against deft., sued as clerk to a committee of visitors appointed pursuant to 8 & 9 Vict. c. 126, for the regulation, etc., of a county lunatic asylum, stated that it was agreed by & between pltf. & the committee of visitors, that, in consideration that pltf. would render his services as an architect in examining the site for a proposed lunatic asylum, & preparing the requisite probationary drawings for the approval of the committee of visitors, & all other drawings & documents required to be submitted to the comrs. in lunacy, & afterwards to the Secretary of State, pursuant to the statutes, & subsequently would prepare the whole of the working-drawings, estimates, & specifications for an asylum to contain 200 patients, the committee agreed that £437 10s. should be paid to pltf. The declaration then alleged that pltf. did render his services in examining the site, & did prepare the requisite probationary drawings for the approval of the committee, & had always been ready & willing to prepare all other drawings & documents required to be submitted to the comrs. in lunacy, & Secretary of State, & subsequently to prepare the whole of the working-drawings, estimates, & specifications, of which the committee had notice, but that they refused to permit him to complete the agreement, & wrongfully discharged him from the further performance thereof. Second plea, that pltf. did not prepare the requisite probationary drawings in the count mentioned. Fifth plea, that a reasonable time had elapsed after the making of the agreement, & before pltf. was discharged from the further performance thereof, for pltf. to prepare the requisite probationary drawings for the approval of the com-

k. *Plans approved or used by employer.]—*In the absence of special agreement, an architect employed to design a building is not entitled to remuneration for his plans & specifications unless the employer has approved or in any way utilised them.—*DE WITT v. mittee, that pltf. prepared certain drawings, which the committee disapproved of & rejected, & that, save as aforesaid, pltf. did not prepare any probationary drawings for the approval of the committee, & that they discharged him from the further performance of the agreement, as they lawfully might:—Held: (1) the plea was proved, by showing that a reasonable time for preparing the requisite probationary drawings had elapsed, & that none were prepared by pltf. except certain drawings which the committee disapproved of & rejected; (2) upon the true construction of the contract, pltf. was entitled to recover nothing until the drawings had been approved by the several parties whose approval was by statute required, & the subsequent drawings & estimates were all completed.—MOFFATT v. DICKSON (1853), 13 C. B. 543; 22 L. J. C. P. 265; 17 Jur. 1009; 1 C. L. R. 294; 138 E. R. 1311.

439. Negligence — Incorrect estimates.]—An engineer was employed to form plans & make estimates for the erection of a bridge. He intrusted another to examine the bed of the river, who reported it to consist of hard marl rock. On that report the engineer made his estimates. It turned out that the bed of the river was not hard marl rock, but that an additional expense for piles was necessary:—Held: the engineer was not entitled to anything for his work & labour, inasmuch as by his negligence the party had been deceived in the matter.—MONEYPENNY v. HARTLAND (1821), 1 C. & P. 352; 3 L. J. O. S. K. B. 66; subsequent proceedings (1826), 2 C. & P. 378, N. P.

440. — — —.]—If an engineer, employed by a committee for erecting a bridge & forming a road to it to make an estimate of the expense of the works, makes a low estimate, & thereby induces persons to subscribe for the execution of the work, who would otherwise have declined it, & it turns out afterwards that such estimate is incorrect, either from negligence or want of skill, & that the work cannot be done but at a much greater expense, he is not entitled to recover anything for his trouble in making such estimate.—MONEYPENNY v. HARTLAND (1826), 2 C. & P. 378, N. P.

441. Prevention by employer—Failure to accept lowest tender—Remuneration subject to special condition.]—A church having been destroyed by fire, a subscription was opened for rebuilding it, and a committee for that purpose formed, deft. being a member of it. Pltf. sent in a design, which was approved. The committee advertised for tenders for building the church according to pltf.'s design, imposing the condition upon him, that although pltf. was to make the necessary plans & specifications for carrying out his design, yet, in case the estimate for building should exceed £4,700 exclusive of commission & the salary of the clerk of the works, pltf. was not to be paid anything for his labour & trouble, & the committee were to be at liberty to decline pltf.'s design. Estimates were sent in by four different builders, but one only below £4,700, & the committee not pledging themselves to accept the lowest tender, refused to proceed, & ultimately nothing further was done, & the church remained unbuilt. The jury found that the lowest estimate was one that a man might have prudently acted upon:—Held: pltf. was entitled to recover for work & labour, in drawing the plans & specifications.—CLARK v. WINDHAM (1851), 18 L. T. O. S. 64.

442. — — — Plans for works for specified sum—Tenders in excess.]—In an action by architects, whose plans, after having been accepted, are rejected, on the ground that the work cannot be done for the amount of their estimates, it is for the jury whether it is an express or implied condition of the contract, that the estimates shall be reasonably near the actual cost.—NELSON v. SPOONER (1861), 2 F. & F. 613, N. P.

443. — — —.]—Where an architect was instructed to prepare plans for a building, the costs of which were not to exceed a specified amount, & all the tenders were above that amount:—Held: the question whether the employer could repudiate the contract & refuse to pay the architect was a question of fact for a jury.—BURR v. RIDOUT (1893), Times, Feb. 22nd.

PART XVI. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 3.

1. Negligence of engineer or architect—Cost of work limited—Plans exceeding limit.]—Where an architect is instructed to prepare designs for a building, & a certain sum is named as the limit of cost, he is not entitled to recover commission in respect of designs which could not be carried out for such sum.—FLANNAGAN v. MATE (1876), 2 V. L. R. 157.—AUS.

m. — — —.]—Pltf., an engineer, had prepared a scheme the cost of which exceeded the cost fixed upon by the parties:—Held: he was entitled to no remuneration.—GELLATLY v. BURGHESDORP MUNICIPALITY (1917), E. D. L. 289.—S. AF.

n. — — — Neglect to obtain exact limit from owner.]—Deft. intended to build a house at a cost of from $3,000 to $4,000, & instructed pltf., an architect, to draw plans, which pltf. did, but for a house to cost $7,000. Pltf. did not inquire what price deft. wished to pay, but he had the information from an intermediary that $4,200 was the amount which deft. had to finance the building:—Held: pltf. was negligent in that he did not acquaint himself with the price which deft. was willing to pay, & as he had

o. — — — Tenders exceeding limit.]—An architect is not, in the absence of any agreement relating thereto, entitled to any remuneration whatever for making plans & specifications & calling for tenders, at the request of his employers, when the lowest tender exceeds the price initially fixed between architect & employer as the limit of cost for the building contemplated, & the latter decides on that account not to proceed with the work.—PEARCE & PEARCE v. WALKER (1905), 19 E. D. C. 80.—S. AF.

p. — — — Excess caused by compliance with bye-law.]—Where an architect is instructed to prepare plans for a building to cost not more than a certain sum, but which building must also comply with other conditions as to accommodation under a municipal bye-law, then although, in order to comply with such other conditions, the tenders sent in are in excess of the sum mentioned, the architect cannot recover for his services.—WILSON v. WARD (1908), 14 B. C. R. 131; 9 W. L. R. 481.—CAN.

from estimate of cost.]—There is a distinction between an undertaking to supply plans & specifications of a building at a cost not to exceed a specified amount, & an undertaking to supply plans & specifications of a specified building over a specified area with an estimate of the probable cost. The former undertaking in regard to the amount makes it a condition, compliance with which is necessary to entitle the architect to recover for his work, because the non-compliance is a complete failure to carry out the contract, & goes to the root of the matter; but in the latter, the estimate, is not a condition, but merely the expression of his professional opinion on the probable cost of the building to be erected, which may be correct or under or over estimated, but which, even if incorrect, could not deprive him of payment for his services, though possibly it might justify a deduction in the value of his services, & possibly a right of cross-action if the wrongful estimate arose through want of skill or negligence resulting in damage to the owner.—HARVEY v. BROWN (THOMAS) & SONS, LTD., [1920] Q. S. R. 25.—AUS.

444. Building not erected.]—An architect brought an action for his charges for preparing plans, taking on for his charges for preparing which defts. put out quantities, etc., for a house not in fact had designed to build but which had in fact been built:—Held: it was for the jury the work was done on the retainer & employment of deft.—SPRATT v. DORNFORD (1862), 2 Hudson's B. C. 3rd ed. 7.

445. — Commission on estimated expense.]—An architect is not entitled to recover commission on the estimated expense of a building, which ultimately is not erected.—FARTHING v. TOMKINS (1893), 9 T. L. R. 566.

446. Refusal to deliver plans unless paid more than due—Whether bar to claim for amount due.]—Where A. contracts to do work on materials supplied to him by B., as where he contracts to survey a parish, & to set down the results of such survey in a map, upon paper furnished to him by B., his right to sue for work & labour is complete as soon as he has finished the work, & has given B. a reasonable opportunity of ascertaining its correctness; & if, there being no contract for a specific price, he demand more for the work than a reasonable price, & refuse to deliver it except upon payment of such larger price, that does not preclude him from suing for & recovering a reasonable price.—HUGHES v. JENNY (1839), 5 M. & W. 183; 2 Horn. & H. 13; 8 L. J. Ex. 177; 151 E. R. 79.

447. Payment conditional on disposal of land for building—Whether implied contract not to sell for other purposes.]—A declaration stated that L., being possessed of land, agreed with M., an architect, that he should lay out the land for building purposes, & make surveys, etc., that he should make no charge for the above services, but in the event of the land being disposed of for building purposes, M. should be appointed architect on L.'s behalf, & the parties building should pay him a percentage on the outlay, provided they did not employ him as their own architect, but in the event of L., or his exors., wishing to dispense with M.'s services, he or they should remunerate him for his services in making the preparations. L. made the surveys, etc., the land was not disposed of for building purposes, and L.'s exors. dispensed with M.'s services, & put it out of their power to dispose of the land for building purposes, & thereupon L. claimed remuneration for the preparations:—Held: he was not entitled to recover, the disposing of the land for building purposes

445 i. Building not erected—Commission on estimated expense.]—Pltf. was engaged by defts. to prepare plans & specifications for a building to cost not more than a fixed sum, for which he was to receive a commission on the cost. The plans were approved by defts., & tenders called for, & the work proceeded with. Owing to an advance in the price of materials, the work was stopped:—Held: pltf. was entitled to recover from defts. the stipulated commission on the estimated cost of the building.—HUTCHINSON v. CONWAY (1900), 34 N. S. R. 554.—CAN.

r. — Ultra vires of municipality.]—A municipality being granted a sum of money for the erection of a public library was authorised by an Act of the colonial Legislature to spend the sum required for purchase of the site & an annual sum for its support. Pltfs., architects, were employed to prepare plans. The project was abandoned & pltfs. claimed a percentage on the estimated cost for work done by them:—Held: the city had no authority to enter into any contract involving the expenditure of municipal funds in respect of the building, & pltfs.' action was dismissed.—SYDNEY v. CHAPPEL (1910), 43 S. C. R. 478.—CAN.

See, further, cases in Sub-sect. 4, post.

s. Plans not approved or used by employer.]—In the absence of special agreement, an architect employed to design a building is not entitled to remuneration for his plans & specifications unless the employer has approved or in any way utilised them.—DE WITT v. CAPE CANNING CO. (1894), 11 S. C. 116.—S. AF.

t. One of two engineers going abroad—Whether contract for joint employment.]—An agreement was made that B. & E. should be the engineers of a co., to superintend the construction of tramways; E. prepared various plans & drawings, but in consequence of the work not being proceeded with at once, went abroad, & took no further part in the construction of the line; the work was subsequently completed by B. in conjunction with another engineer. In an action by B. & E. for remunera-being the event in which he was to have any remuneration, & even if the declaration could be taken as charging the exors. with wrongfully putting it out of their power to dispose of the land for building purposes, no contract could be implied from the agreement that L. or they should not dispose of the land otherwise than for building, in which case M. was not entitled to anything.—MOFFATT v. LAURIE (1855), 15 C. B. 583; 24 L. J. C. P. 56; 24 L. T. O. S. 259; 1 Jur. N. S. 283; 3 W. R. 252; 139 E. R. 553.

448. Death of engineer—Payment by instalments—Instalment due at death.]—Defts. employed S. as consulting engineer for fifteen months to complete certain works. S. was to be paid £500 for his services in equal quarterly instalments. Before the work was finished, & whilst two quarterly instalments which were due to him were still unpaid, he died:—Held: his personal representative was entitled to recover them.—STURBS v. HOLYWELL RY. CO. (1867), L. R. 2 Exch. 311; 36 L. J. Ex. 166; 16 L. T. 631; 15 W. R. 869.

SUB-SECT. 4.—AMOUNT.

449. No special agreement—Whether entitled to 5 per cent. commission.]—Pltf. claimed £511 3s. as the balance due to him for work & labour as an architect. The bill of particulars set forth the work which pltf. had done, & the estimated expenditure for the buildings of which he had superintended the erection, & distinctly claimed 5 per cent. commission thereon, as the proper & customary reward of such professional services. Proof having been given of the sum on which the commission would be chargeable if pltf. was entitled to charge it, it was contended by pltf. that he was entitled to charge 5 per cent. commission, according to the custom of the profession:—Held: (1) such a claim could only be established by proof of an express contract to pay such a commission; (2) although the particulars claimed a commission on the amount expended, it was open to pltf. to prove the value of his services, for the statement of the services was the essential portion of the list of particulars, & all that was said about the commission was an unnecessary specification of the mode in which it was proposed to calculate the value of the work & labour; (3) the jury having given a verdict for pltf. for the amount tion under the agreement:—Held: it was not a contract for joint employment, & so long as the work was efficiently done, it could competently be executed by either of the associated parties.—BEATTIE v. EDINBURGH NORTHERN TRAMWAY CO. (1891), 28 Sc. L. R. 763.—SCOT.

449 i. No special agreement—Basis of remuneration.]—An architect is entitled to a fair & reasonable reward for the amount & quality of his work, but, apart from agreement, the percentage scale upon which that remuneration is customarily calculated by the profession, affords no measure of what is reasonable remuneration. Where there is no such agreement it is the duty of the ct. to inquire into the amount & quality of the work actually done.—LUBKE v. KEGEL (1913), W. L. D. 91.—S. AF.

a. Percentage on cost—How calculated.]—Percentage of cost of a building means percentage of the actual cost, not percentage of an estimated cost at the time of the engaging of the architect.—SHAWINIGAN FALLS SCHOOLS COMRS. v. LAFOND (1911), Q. R. 23 K. B. 193.—CAN.

b. — — —.]—Def't. requested pltf. to prepare plans for a building to cost $1,800; the plans, as finally prepared & approved, were for a building which would cost $25,000:—Held: pltf. was entitled to be paid a percentage on the latter amount.—CHAFFIELD BROTHERS & Co. v. NOLAN (1905), 38 N. S. R. 74.—CAN.

c. — — — Architect dismissed before work completed.]—Pltf. was engaged by def't. as architect for the erection of a building. Pltf.'s remuneration was to be 5 per cent. of the cost of the building. During the course of the work of erection def't. became dissatisfied & took the superintendence out of pltf.'s hands:—Held: pltf. was entitled to 5 per cent. on the value of the work done before the building was taken out of his hands & 2½ per cent. on the value of the work done afterwards.—GOVINLOCK v. MACLEAN (1918), 14 O. W. N. 142.—CAN.

d. — — — Whether interest allowable.]—In an action by a consulting engineer to recover the commission agreed upon as his remuneration for his services installing a water-works plant:—Held: pltf. was entitled to the commission, but not to interest on e. — — — Or quantum meruit.]—Pltf. was employed by def't. to design & supervise the construction of certain work at a reasonable rate of remuneration, & alleged the usual & reasonable rate of remuneration was 7½ per cent. upon the total cost of such work & that by reason of def't.'s refusal to continue the said employment he had sustained damages in a certain sum, being 7½ per cent. upon the cost:—Held: pltf.'s claim was not one on a quantum meruit for work actually done, but was a demand for compensation for the total agreed remuneration in respect of an employment contracted for but not carried out.—SALISBURY MUNICIPALITY v. MACMULDROW (1916), App. D. 252.—S. AF.

f. Quantum meruit—Plans not completed to employer's satisfaction.]—It no defence to an action by an architect for payment for his services in preparing plans, etc., for a building, to say that the plans were never completed to def't.'s satisfaction. The architect is entitled to be paid for work he has done at the request of def't.—MACLURE v. CUSACK (1912), 20 W. L. R. 611.—CAN.

g. — — — Defective plans.]—Defts., the employers, counterclaimed against pltfs., the architects, for their negligence in the preparation of plans, which resulted in a serious defect in the building:—Held: pltfs. could not recover anything for the preparation of the plans as they had not supplied proper ones.—CAUCHON & VAN TYNE v. MACCOSHAM (1914), 28 W. L. R. 500; 19 D. L. R. 708.—CAN.

h. — — — Plans rendered useless change of scheme.]—Pltfs. prepared plans for certain work on defts.' instructions, but were stopped & asked to prepare plans for a second scheme. They were again stopped, & the process was repeated a third time. None of the plans under the first three schemes were submitted for approval, the stoppage in each case being due to alteration in defts.' minds as to what was required. Plans for a fourth scheme were approved, but the work was not proceeded with:—Held: pltfs. were entitled to reasonable remuneration for the preparation of the three earlier sets of plans in addition to their claim for the fourth set.—

l. — — — Work abandoned.]—To an action by pltfs., architects, to recover for preliminary plans & drawings defts. set up a special agreement that preliminary plans for alterations, if the alterations were not proceeded with, should be paid for only to the extent of the draftsman's actual work upon them:—Held: not an unconscionable or unreasonable agreement, & pltfs. were entitled to recover on a quantum meruit.—BOND & SMITH v. COLONIAL INVESTMENT & LOAN Co. (1908), 11 O. W. R. 617.—CAN.

m. — — —.]—The council of D. advertised for competitive plans for a school house, & pltf.'s plans were accepted. On a vote of the electors of the town a scheme to raise a sum to pay for the school house was defeated. Pltf. claimed remuneration on a percentage basis:—Held: pltf. was entitled to remuneration on a quantum meruit.—ERB v. DRESDEN (1909), 13 O. W. R. 503.—CAN.

n. — — —.]—An architect who is employed to prepare designs for a proposed structure, & with proper skill complies with his instructions, is entitled, if the employer decides not to proceed further, to a reasonable remuneration for his work, unless the evidence clearly shows a contrary understanding between the parties.—*DE ZWAAN v. o. — — — Lowest tender exceeding alleged limit of price.]—It was disputed whether the price of a building for which plans were prepared had been limited or not. Tenders were called for, & pltf., the architect, claimed £320, being commission on the lowest tender, which far exceeded the alleged limit of price. The jury found a verdict for £200:—Held: there was evidence to value these properties & to be paid a percentage of the value of the interests of the T. union therein. F. mistakenly thought that the agreement entitled him to be paid the proper percentage of the whole value of the properties. His mistake was innocently induced by correspondence & negotiations between him & the T. union before the agreement:—Held: as there was no mutual mistake & the parties were never ad idem, the agreement could not be rectified, but it must be rescinded, & F. was entitled to remuneration on a quantum meruit, but not necessarily according to Ryde's scale.—FARADAY v. TAMWORTH UNION (1916), 86 L. J. Ch. 436; 81 J. P. 81; 15 L. G. R. 258.

459. — Particulars of demand—Sufficiency of.]—In an action by an engineer, for work & labour & materials, a bill of particulars giving a general account of the nature of his demand is sufficient, as that he claims in respect of certain surveys, stating the number of miles & branches.—HIGGINS v. p. — Work not completed according to plan—Negligent supervision.]—An agreement whereby an architect undertakes to prepare the plans & specifications, receive tenders & award the contracts, direct the contractors & superintend the work of erecting two houses, creates a divisible obligation which is capable of being executed by parts, & the absence of the architect from the work during the course of its completion merely gives the proprietor the right to reduce the salary agreed upon in proportion to the damages he has suffered.—MANN v. RUDOLPH (1909), 9 Q. R. 37 S. C. 299.—CAN.

q. — — —.]—An architect who through negligence in supervising work for the owner & in making his final inspection gives his final certificate when the work has in fact not been properly completed according to the plans & specifications is nevertheless entitled to be paid for his services quantum meruit, when he has been employed on the usual terms.—BRUCE v. JAMES (1913), 24 W. L. R. 752; 4 W. W. R. 1019.—CAN.

—.]—Pltf., architect, was engaged by defts. in connection with the erection of a building. The contractors for the roof were very faulty in their work, & it proved a failure. Unknown to defts., pltf. attempted unsuccessfully to make good the roof & ultimately defts.' agent removed the roof & erected another:—Held: pltf. was entitled to his fees but he must pay or indemnify defts. against the expense of the abortive attempt to patch up the roof.—MEREDITH v. R. C. EPISCOPAL CORPN. OF OTTAWA (1914), 7 O. W. N. 550.—CAN.

s. — Work partly unauthorised—No intention of employer to complete.]—Pltf. sued for the preparation of plans, etc. for a building. Deft. never had an intention of procuring plans & specifications; his purpose was to carry on meetings & interviews in such a way as not to commit himself, while gathering as much information & advice as he could from pltf. without having to pay for it:—Held: most of the pltf.'s work was unauthorised & useless, but a certain part being authorised for this part the deft. must pay.—LACHANCE v. WILSON (1908), 7 W. L. R. 646.—CAN.

t. Amount claimed—Sole evidence of value.]—In an action by architects for fees for preparing plans for a building which was never erected, there being no evidence as to the value of their services, of any weight as opposed to the testimony of pltfs. themselves:—Held: pltfs. were entitled to recover the amount which they claimed.—SMITH v. CRUMP (No. 2) (1910), 14 W. L. R. 207.—CAN.

a. — Ditches & Watercourses Act, s. 29—Claim prima facie valid—Onus of proof.]—Under Ditches & Watercourses Act, s. 29, an engineer certified that he was entitled to $45 for fees & charges for his services:—Held: his certificate established prima facie the validity of his claim, & the onus was on pltf., objecting to show its incorrectness.—CUDDAHEE v. MARA (1906), 12 O. L. R. 522; 8 O. W. R. 423.—CAN.

b. — Not supported by contract—Amount paid into court.]—WARR v. HITCHCOCK (1919), 16 O. W. N. 355.—CAN.

c. — Exceeding employer's intentions.]—Pltf., an architect, was instructed by deft. to give an estimate for a proposed building. Pltf. prepared drawings, plans & an estimate & delivered them to deft., who protested that he did not know pltf. was going to take so much trouble:—Held: in an action for the payment of his fees that the pltf. was entitled to recover.—CHISHOLM v. WODLENGER (1913), 26 W. L. R. 274.—CAN.

e. — Building enlarged after fees agreed.]—Dft. entered into a contract with a co., called in the contract "the builder," for the construction of a theatre; the builder was to provide drawings & specifications, secure proposals from contractors, & supervise the work; the cost of the building was not to exceed a stipulated sum, & the builder was to receive a stipulated sum

460. — Reasonable time—Right of employer to revoke.]—A. employed B. to make certain surveys, etc., but did not stipulate that they should be ready within any specified time. Some months after the agreement had been entered into, A. gave B. notice that he would no longer require his services. B., notwithstanding the notice, proceeded with the work, & brought an action for a quantum meruit:—Held: if a reasonable time had not elapsed for B., considering his character & engagements to have done the work when the notice was given, B. was entitled to recover.—BRAITHWAITE v. CRAWSHAY (1850), 16 L. T. O. S. 81.

461. Qualifying as witnesses—Ryde's scale.]—On an arbn. to settle the amount of compensation due to A. & Co. the taxing master did not allow the costs of certain architects & surveyors called during the arbn., on the ground that their charges were too high. The fees were in accordance either with Ryde's scale, or with the scale of charges adopted by the Liverpool Architectural Society. The ct. reversed the decision of the taxing master on another ground, but said that nothing in their judgment must lead to the supposition that they gave any approval to such scales of charges.—BROCKLEBANK v. LANCASHIRE & YORKSHIRE RY. CO. (1887), 3 T. L. R. 575, C. A.

for full profit, commission & compensation for performance of the work. The contract also provided that no alterations should be made in any contractor's work except upon the written order of the owner. After contracts were let deft. directed an increase in the size of the building:—Held: "the builder" was really the architect, & he was entitled to a reasonable sum for the service rendered in connection with the increased size of the building.—MILLS v. SMALL (1907), 9 O. W. R. 893; 10 O. W. R. 499.—CAN.

f. — Supervision—Dismissal before work completed.]—Pltf. was instructed by deft. to prepare plans & specifications for some houses for a stated sum. The plans were prepared & paid for. A question subsequently arose as to the fees paid for inspection & superintending the work under construction. Deft. dismissed the pltf., but he continued to superintend some of the work. In an action for services rendered:—Held: pltf. was entitled to recover except for the work he had superintended after being dismissed.—SCHWAB v. SURAGGE (1906), 3 W. L. R. 463.—CAN.

461 i. Qualifying as witness.]—Qualifying expenses ought to be allowed to all witnesses who testify as to value, etc., where it is necessary for them to make valuations & calculations.—KE LAING'S CLAIM (1907), 26 N. Z. L. R. 703.—N.Z.

g. Competitive plans—Not accepted—Destroyed in transit—Measure of damages.]—Architectural plans of a building submitted in competition & not accepted, were in the course of transit destroyed by fire:—Held: the proper measure of damages was the value of the plans to the architect for exhibition purposes, & not the cost of their reproduction.—NICOLAIS v. DOMINION EXPRESS CO. (1914), 20 B. C. R. 8.—CAN.

k. Assistants—Employed by engineer.]—The amount to be paid to assistants employed by an engineer in matters of detail such as taking levels, preparation of plans, etc., is a matter of quantum meruit.—MOORE v. MARCH (1909), 13 O. W. R. 692.—CAN.

PART XVII.—BILLS OF QUANTITIES AND QUANTITY SURVEYORS.

SUB-SECT. 5.—BY WHOM PAYABLE.

462. Whether builder liable—Employment by owner.]—An architect employed by a building owner to superintend building operations, the contract for which was silent as to who was to pay the architect's commission, sought to recover his commission from the builder, not do so, unless the builder had amount of the commission from owner in addition to what was due the contract.—LOCKE v. MORTER (1885), 13 Q. B. 101.

463. Whether implied warranty as to accuracy—Architect taking out.]—Deft. employed an architect to prepare plans & a specification for a house, & to procure a builder to erect it for him. The architect took out the quantities, & represented to pltf., a builder, that they were correct, & pltf. thereupon made a tender, which was accepted. The quantities proved to be incorrect, & pltf. expended upon the building a much larger amount of materials than he contemplated:—Held: there was no evidence that the architect acted as deft.'s agent in taking out the quantities, or that deft. guaranteed their accuracy, & pltf. could not recover more than his contract price.—SCRIVENIER v. PASK (1866), L. R. 1 C. P. 715; Har. & Ruth. 834, Ex. Ch.

464. — Whether builder bound — Right to sue for extras.]—A builder is bound by his special contract, however improvidently entered into, & he cannot, in the absence of fraud or waiver, sue for extra work on the ground that the quantities are grossly erroneous & misled him.—SHERREN v. HARRISON (1860), 2 Hudson's B. C. 4th ed. 5, N. P.

465. — Quantities not made basis of contract — Action for negligence in taking out.]—A firm of architects took out quantities & supplied them to the builders, & were paid by them. In an action by the builders against the employer & his architect for damages occasioned to the builders by alleged errors in the bills of quantities:—Held: (1) there was no warranty by employer or architect of the accuracy of the quantities; (2) no action lay for negligence in taking out the quantities; (3) the quantities were not made the basis of the contract.—YOUNG v. BLAKE (1887), 2 Hudson's B. C. 4th ed. 110.

462 i. Whether builder liable—Employment by owner.]—POTTRAS v. DESLAURIERS (1872), 4 R. L. O. S. 375.—CAN.

1. Whether landowner liable—Lessor of proposed employer.]—Pltfs., architects, prepared plans for a theatre to be erected on deft.'s land, receiving instructions from C., deft.'s agent, who collected rents & looked after her real estate:—Held: deft. was not liable for pltfs.' services in preparing the plans; the theatre was not to be built for her, but for a co., of which C. & one of pltfs. were promoters, & her only connection with the co. was as a subscriber for shares & lessor of the proposed site.—SMITH v. CRUMP (No. 1) (1910), 14 W. L. R. 295.—CAN.

m. Whether company-promoter liable — Instructions given by co-promoter — Conduct amounting to adoption.]—Pltf. was instructed by deft. B. to prepare plans for a building to be used in connection with a co. which defts., M. & B., were engaged in promoting.

The plans were prepared & examined by deft. M. In an action by pltf. for his fees:—Held: M. was not liable; examining plans could not be considered adoption or ratification, but that the pltf. was entitled to recover against the deft. B.—ARMES v. MANCILL (1912), 23 O. W. R. 50; 4 O. W. N. 93; 5 D. L. R. 885.—CAN.

PART XVII. SECT. 1.

463 i. Whether implied warranty as to accuracy—Architect taking out—Custom.]—In a contract for the execution of works by a contractor in Hong Kong, it being found by the assessor that it is a well-ascertained practice for the tenderers to rely on the architect's figures in the bill of quantities:—Held: the ct. will give effect to that practice.—LAN YEONG WOOD v. STANDARD OIL CO. OF NEW YORK (1908), 3 Hong Kong L. R. 53.—HONG KONG.

466 i. — Quantities merely estimate.]—Contractors alleged that they were put to large expense & compelled to do much extra work, in consequence

466. Quantities merely estimate—Custom contradicting contract.]—An architect on behalf of a building owner invited tenders for the erection of a building upon plans & a specification & conditions of contract, & a bill of quantities attached to the specification. A builder sent in a tender for the work, together with a schedule of prices for the purpose of determining the amount to be paid or allowed in respect of any alterations or deviations from the original plans, & his tender was accepted. A contract was entered into, which referred to the schedule of prices as the prices upon which the contract was based, for the execution of the works in accordance with the plans & specification for a lump sum, the bill of quantities not being mentioned in the contract. The quantities set out in the bill of quantities were in material & substantial respects insufficient, & the actual quantities required for carrying out the works exceeded those there set forth. There was a general usage in the building trade that where tenders were invited for the erection of works in accordance with plans, & a bill of quantities was furnished, a person making a tender was entitled to assume the correctness of the quantities, & if they proved to be greater or less than the actual quantities, the price was to be reduced or increased accordingly:—Held: (1) the bill of quantities was merely an estimate, & did not amount to a warranty by the building owner that the quantities were correct, & the builder was not entitled to be paid beyond the fixed lump sum for the work done; (2) the custom contradicted the contract & could not be relied on.—Re FORD & Co. & BEMROSE & SONS, LTD. (1902), 18 T. L. R. 443; 2 Hudson's B. C. 4th ed. 324, C. A.

467. — Protection only against honest mistakes.]—A contractor having sued the other party to the contract (a public authority) in an action of deceit, for damages for fraudulent of misrepresentations in plans & bills of works exhibited at the time of letting. On the profile plan & in the bill of works, the quantities were described as probable & approximately accurate but it was expressly stated that they were not guaranteed or warranted accurate. The contract was for a lump sum for all work involved, except in the case of alterations in the grade or line of location:—Held: there was no guarantee, express or implied, as to the quantities, nor any misrepresentation respecting them.—JONES v. R. (1877), 7 S. C. R. 570.—CAN.

467 i. — Honest mistake.]—A railway co. invited tenders for the construction of a line of railway &, for the information of intending offerers, exhibited what purported to be a journal of bores taken along the proposed line. The so-called journal was not the actual record kept by the borers, who were not professional borers but were ordinary servants of the co., but was compiled by the cos'.

to take out quantities; the work went to tender, but none being accepted, pltf. sued defts., who set up that they never authorised R. to employ pltf., & that as a corpn. they must contract under seal:—Held: as defts. had instructed R. to get tenders, they impliedly authorised him to get quantities taken out, & the objection as to the necessity of sealing must be overruled.—WAGHORN v. WIMBLEDON LOCAL BOARD (1877), 2 Hudson's B. C. 4th ed. 52, N. P.

Annotation:—Reid. Hunt v. Wimbledon L. B. (1878), 3 C. P. D. 208.

474. To measure up deviations—Custom.]—Custom of the building trade for an architect to call in a quantity surveyor at the employer's expense.—BIRDSEYE v. DOVER HARBOUR BOARD COMRS. (1881), 2 Hudson's B. C. 4th ed. 76, N. P.

475. — Dispute between architect & employer.]—An architect was employed by a building owner to direct alterations in a theatre, & a certain builder was intrusted with the work. The architect having employed a quantity surveyor to measure up all the work which had been done upon the theatre for the purpose of a final settlement of accounts with the building owner, the surveyor sued the building owner for the amount of his charges. Previous to the employment of the surveyor the building owner had expressed his dissatisfaction with the builder's charges & the amounts certified by the architect, & said he intended to have the work measured by an independent surveyor, when the architect suggested that, as the building owner had questioned the charges which he had certified for, it would be well that his surveyor should go over the work with those appointed by the building owner, whom he should charge with all the expenses that would be incurred in vindicating the correctness of the accounts. It was proved that by the general usage or practice of the building trade an architect was authorised to employ a quantity surveyor to measure up the work which had been executed for the purpose of a final certificate, but that where a dispute had arisen between a building owner on one side & his architect & builder on the other, it would make a difference in the operation of the custom:—Held: (1) the general usage of which evidence had been offered would be unreasonable as applied to the circumstances, & a jury would hesitate to establish it, as it must often prejudice a building owner; (2) the surveyor was employed by the architect as his own surveyor in view of the differences which had arisen between him & the

SUB-SECT. 2.—LIABILITIES.

476. To contractor—Inaccurate quantities—Payment by successful tenderer.]—Deft., an architect, took out quantities which were appended to the tenders, & it was stipulated that the successful tenderer should pay deft.:—Held: pltf., the successful tenderer, could sue deft. for negligence in furnishing inaccurate quantities.—BOLT v. THOMAS (1859), 2 Hudson's B. C. 4th ed. 3, N. P.

477. — Employment by architect or building owner.]—There is no privity of contract between a quantity surveyor, employed by the architect of a building, & a builder tendering for the construction of the building, so as to enable the latter to sue the surveyor for negligence or breach of contract in preparing inaccurate bills of quantities.—PRIESTLEY v. STONE (1888), 4 T. L. R. 730; 2 Hudson's B. C. 4th ed. 134, C. A.

Annotation:—Distd. North v. Bassett, [1892] 1 Q. B. 333.

478. To employer—Clerical error by skilled clerk.]—Pltfs., who had employed defts., as quantity surveyors & measurers, on buildings of the value of £12,000, which had been completed & measured up, sued for negligence in a clerical error in the calculation, whereby they had overpaid two sums of £118 & £15 15s.:—Held: defts. having employed a competent skilled clerk who had carried out hundreds of intricate calculations, were not liable for negligence in respect of these two clerical errors.—LONDON SCHOOL BOARD v. NORTHCROFT (1889), 2 Hudson's B. C. 4th ed. 147.

SUB-SECT. 3.—REMUNERATION.

A. Amount.

479. Percentage rate.]—Deft., intending to erect a warehouse, employed S., an architect, to prepare plans, & S. employed pltf. to take out quantities. Tenders were sent in, but none accepted, & no building erected. Pltf. sued deft. for 2½ per cent. on the lowest tender. Deft. set up that the architect had only a limited authority:—Held: (1) it was for the jury to say whether the architect's authority was so limited, & if not, deft. was liable to pay pltf. reasonable remuneration; (2) a 2½ per cent. on the lowest tender set up as customary was unreasonable, & pltf. awarded damages

476 i. To contractor—Inaccurate quantities—Payment by successful tenderer—Plea of negligence.]—Pltfs., quantity surveyors, supplied their plans & specifications of certain quantities to the successful tenderer for the work. Not being paid, they brought an action against him in a common court for work done, & deft. pleaded never indebted:—Held: under that plea deft. could not give evidence that the work was negligently done; such evidence could only be given under a plea of cross action.—ANDERSON v. WADEY (1899), 20 N. S. W. L. R. 412.—AUS.

476 ii. — — — — —.]—Pltf., being a builder & desiring to tender for the building of a house for W., received certain bills of quantities & draft of contract from deft., an architect & quantity surveyor, employed by W. The draft contract contained a provision that a percentage should be allowed by the builder for the bill of quantities, & that the amount should be paid by pltf. to deft., but that pltf.

was to satisfy himself as to their correctness, & that no allowance should be made for shortcomings. The fees were paid by pltf. to deft., but the amount of the tender had been increased accordingly. Owing to an under-calculation of the bill of quantities by deft. pltf. suffered damage:—Held: in the absence of proof that deft. had been employed by pltf., had knowingly made any false representations to pltf., or had guaranteed the accuracy of the measurements, he was not liable to pltf. for the said damages.—SKIPPOON v. DE WITT, [1904] 21 S. C. 505; 14 C. T. R. 747.—S. AF.

476 iii. Right of set-off.]—An architect who is also a quantity surveyor, & is employed & paid by a builder for taking out quantities for the construction of a building, is liable for any loss caused to the builder owing to his negligence in taking out the quantities. But against such loss he may set off any profit which has accrued to the builder through the miscalculations.—HOOPER & SON v. REID, 9 C. T. R. 637.—S. AF.

n. Sums wrongfully charged to building owner.]—Where in the accounts drawn up by an architect & quantity surveyor, who had been employed to take out quantities by the builder, the building owner was charged with certain sums occasioned by the architect's errors in the quantities, & he had paid the same:—Held: the builder could not recover damages from the architect for such errors, as none had been suffered by him.—HOOPER & SON v. REID, 9 C. T. R. 637.—S. AF.

PART XVII. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 3. —A.

o. Fees as quantity surveyor—Plans prepared as architect not approved.]—In the absence of special agreement, an architect employed as surveyor is entitled to remuneration for taking out quantities at the request of the employer, even although the plans & specifications prepared by him as architect have not been approved of.—DE WITT v. CAPE CANNING CO. (1894), 11 S. C. 116.—S. AF.

B. Lithographers' Charges.

480. Employment by quantity surveyor—Right to retain cash discount.]—Pltfs., who had employed defts., as quantity surveyors & measurers, on buildings of the value of £12,000, which had been completed & measured up, sued for money had & received in respect of £74 charged by defts. for lithography:—Held: as to a sum of 15 per cent. allowed by the lithographer to the quantity surveyor, although defts. being pltfs.' agents, the payment of any commission to defts. was illegal & improper, yet, as it was agreed that defts. should employ their own lithographer, they might retain this, which was really a discount for cash.—LONDON SCHOOL BOARD v. NORTHCROFT (1889), 2 Hudson's B. C. 4th ed. 147.

C. By whom payable.

481. Employer—Work not carried out—Stopped by employer.]—Defts. employed K. to draw a specification of a building proposed to be erected. K. employed pltf. to make out the quantities, which work was to be paid for by the successful competitor for the building contract. Defts. having refused to allow the building to proceed:—Held: they were liable to pltf. for making out the quantities.—MOON v. WITNEY UNION GUARDIANS (1837), 3 Bing. N. 482. ——— Custom.]—An architect, who had made out the quantities on a building contract which was not carried out, allowed to recover from the employer on a custom known to the parties.—LANSDOWNE v. SOMERVILLE (1862), 3 F. & F. 236.

483. ——— Employment to reduce quantities.]—An architect was employed to make plans for a theatre. The employer objected to the cost of the theatre as planned, & the architect employed a quantity surveyor to reduce the quantities, but the employer ultimately decided not to build:—Held: the quantity surveyor could recover his charges against the employer, only upon evidence of actual instructions, & not by virtue of any cus-

484. ——— Bankruptcy of contractor.]—Pltf., a quantity surveyor, was employed by A., the architect of S., who wished to erect a house at L., to take out quantities, which he did in consideration of a payment calculated at 2½ per cent. on the accepted tender & £18 15s. 6d. for lithography. The work went to tender & C.'s tender was accepted, pltf.'s charges being expressly included in it. The work was commenced, but when it was partly finished & partly paid for, C., the builder, became bkpt., & S. took the work out of his hands. Pltf. sued S. for his charges:—Held: as there was an accepted tender & deft. had found a builder, pltf. had no cause of action against deft.—YOUNG v. SMITH (1879), 2 Hudson's B. C. 4th ed. 70; affd. (1880), 2 Hudson's B. C. 4th ed. 75, C. A.

485. Contractor—Successful tenderer—Custom.]—Pltf., a quantity surveyor, was employed by an architect to take out the quantities for a building about to be erected; deft., a builder, tendered for the work upon the basis of a specification, containing the following clause: "To provide for copies of quantities & plans, 25 guineas to be paid to the surveyor" (naming pltf.) "out of the first certificate." Deft.'s tender was accepted, & he received the first instalment of the price of his work from the building owner. In an action by pltf. to recover the 25 guineas according to the specification, evidence was given that, by the usage of the building trade, the builder whose tender was accepted was liable to the quantity surveyor for the amount due for the quantities, but if no tender was accepted, the building owner or architect was liable:—Held: the usage was reasonable & valid, & there was evidence of a contract with pltf., upon which he was entitled to recover.—NORTH v. BASSETT, [1892] 1 Q. B. 333; 61 L. J. Q. B. 177; 66 L. T. 189; 56 J. P. 389; 40 W. R. 223; 36 Sol. Jo. 79, D. C.

486. ——— Out of first money received—What amounts to receipt.]—Pltf., a quantity surveyor, was employed by the architect of a building owner to prepare a bill of quantities for tenders. The bill as prepared contained an item for the quantity surveyor's charges & a memorandum to the effect that they should be payable out of the first money received by the builder:—Held: (1)

481 i. Employer—Work not carried out—Work abandoned by employer.]—Pltf., a quantity surveyor, was employed by deft.'s architect to take out quantities for some buildings to be erected for deft. for which tenders were required. Pltf. took out quantities; in the invitation to tender it was provided that the successful tenderer should pay the quantity surveyor. Deft. subsequently changed his mind & abandoned his intention to build:—Held: deft. was liable to pay the quantity surveyor.—GRIBBON v. MOORE (1869), 2 Hudson's B. C., 3rd ed. 12.—IR.

p. Contractor—Successful tenderer—Variation of plans.]—The owner of a house, desiring to make alterations employed an architect to prepare plans. The architect having done so, employed pltf., a surveyor, to take out the quantities, which were lithographed, & sent to various builders, including deft., to invite tenders, the circular informing them that the builder whose contract was accepted should pay pltf.'s fees. Deft. had themselves previously to the employment of an architect, prepared a plan for the owner, but one with which he was not satisfied. The tender of deft. was the lowest; but, it being greatly in excess of the expenditure contemplated by the owner, pltf. prepared a bill of reduction, but this reduced plan the owner also considered too expensive, & then employed deft. to execute a modification of the original plan prepared in his office. The works were eventually executed by deft. under a contract, in which it was agreed between the owner & deft. that deft. should not be liable for pltf.'s fees. Pltf. now brought an action for his fees against deft., relying on a custom of the building trade, by which the builder whose tender is accepted, or who is employed to carry out the plans, or any modification of them, is directly liable for the surveyor's fees, the owner being liable, if the work is abandoned altogether, or he adopts an entirely independent plan. Deft.'s foreman stated that the works were carried out according to deft.'s own original plan, & that pltf.'s calculations were not used at all for them. Pltf.'s witnesses stated that there was the strongest similarity between the work as carried out & pltf.'s reduced

485 i. ——— Custom.]—In an action by a surveyor against a contractor for joinder work on a building for payment of his fee as measurer, on the grounds (1) that he had acted on the employment of the contractor; & (2) that it was the universal practice for the contractor to pay the measurer's fee:—Held: the contractor was not liable.—BEATTIE v. GILROY (1882), 10 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 226; 20 Sc. L. R. 162.—SCOT.

q. ——— Contract abandoned.]—Def., a builder, contracted with pltf., a building surveyor, that if pltf. would supply the quantities for a certain projected building, deft. would, if he was accepted as the building contractor, pay pltf. out of the first instalment: pltf. furnished the quantities, but deft. subsequently abandoned the building contract:—Held: performance of deft.'s contract with pltf. having been rendered impossible by his own act, he was bound to pay pltf. for the quantities furnished.—M'CONNELL v. KILGALLAN (1878), 2 L. R. 1r. 119.—IR.

the builder whose tender on the quantities was accepted was liable to the quantity surveyor for the charges specified in the bill out of the first instalment received under the contract; (2) the taking over by the builder of a mtge. on the building bond fide to protect his claim under the building contract was not such a receipt of money under the contract as to entitle the quantity surveyor to recover, nor such a prevention of his receipt of the instalment as to entitle the quantity surveyor to sue for his charges.—CAMPBELL & SON v. BLYTON (1893), 2 Hudson's B. C. 4th ed. 234.

In considering the cases set out in this title regard must be had to their date, & the effect of the above Acts & of Friendly Societies Acts, 1829 (c. 56), & 1834 (c. 40), incorporated in 1836 Act by s. 4 thereof.

Part I.—Nature and Objects.

1. Nature of building societies.]—This [society] is not a joint stock co.; still less is it a common law partnership, but it is a society of a special kind formed & regulated under particular Acts of Parliament for special purposes (LORD SELBORNE, C.).—BROWNIE v. PART I. SECT. 1.

1 i. Nature of building societies.]—Building societies are societies for the purpose of raising, by subscription of the members, a stock fund for the purpose of making advances to members out of the funds of the society upon mtge.—COLONIAL INVESTMENT Co. v. BORLAND (1911), 19 W. L. R. 588; 22 W. L. R. 145; 1 W. W. R. 171; 2 W. W. R. 960; 6 D. L. R. 211; 5 Alta. L. R. 71.—CAN.

1 ii. — Not a partnership.]—A building society being an assocn. of persons subscribing to a common fund to be advanced on interest to some of the members on the security of landed property, does not constitute a partnership.—Re CAPE OF GOOD HOPE PERMANENT BUILDING SOCIETY (1898), 15 S. C. 323; 8 C. T. R. 360.—S. AF.

1 iii. Carrying on lottery.—Cash prizes instead of loans.]—The objects of a society registered under 1886 Act were, according to its rules, to raise a fund by payments, subscriptions, or contributions made by its members, to apply such fund in assisting its members to obtain freehold or leasehold property, to make loans or advances to its members & to other persons, & to afford means for the profitable investment of small savings. Under these rules, it was provided that the society's capital was to consist of any number of shares of a nominal value; that such portion of the society's funds, as the

—The object of [benefit building] societies is to raise a fund by means of which the members may be enabled to purchase land or houses. The mode by which this is to be done is by investing the subscribed moneys upon very advantageous terms under powers given them by statute.—ARMITAGE v. WALKER (1855), 2 K. & J. 211; 26 L. T. O. S. 182; 20 J. P. 53; 2 Jur. N. S. 13; 69 E. R. 756. Annotations.—Mentd. Callaghan v. Dolwin (1869), L. R. 4 C. P. 288; Walker v. General Mutual Bldg. Soc. (1887), 36 Ch. D. 777; Davies v. Second Chatham Permanent Bldg. Soc., Mackenzie v. Everton & West Derby Permanent Bldg. Soc. (1889), 61 L. T. 680.

3. ——— Distinguished from freehold land society.]—There is great distinction between a freehold land society & a benefit building society. A freehold land society buys land with the funds subscribed by the members, & then divides that land among them; but a benefit building society advances to members, out of the subscriptions made by the members, sums of money to be laid out in the purchase of land or buildings, which are then mortgaged to the society (ROMILLY, M.R.).—GRIMES v. HARRISON (1859), 26 Beav. 435; 28 L. J. Ch. 823; 33 L. T. O. S. 115; 23 J. P. 421; 5 Jur. N. S. 528; 53 E. R. 966; subsequent proceedings, 27 Beav. 198.

4. ———.]—The 1836 Act recited that certain societies, commonly called building societies, had been established in different parts of the kingdom, principally amongst the industrial classes, for the purpose of raising by small periodical subscriptions money to assist some of the members in obtaining small freehold or leasehold properties. That was only one of the objects of the societies. It must have been well known to the Legislature that the other object was that the investing members should get a high rate of interest for their money, & that it was known is obvious from another sect. It was the object to assist, therefore, some of the members to obtain freehold or leasehold property, & some a high rate of interest (JESSEL, M.R.).—Re GUARDIAN PERMANENT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY (1882), 23 Ch. 5. ———.]—The [1836 Act] was not artificially drawn. It is obvious that those who promoted it were influenced mainly by a wish to help the industrious classes to obtain dwelling-houses or small plots of land, & probably supposed that by limiting the maximum of a share to £150 they had secured that the shareholders should use the society only for the purpose of obtaining mtges. not above the value of £150. It was very soon found out that there was nothing to prevent a person who wished, as a speculative builder, to borrow £15,000 from taking 100 shares if he could find a society willing to lend so much on mtge., & societies were formed & registered under the Act as building societies on a very large scale (LORD BLACKBURN).—*MURRAY v. 6. ——— Mode of transacting business.]—Building societies exist under the provisions of the 1836 Act; the principle is this, members subscribe monthly sums which are accumulated till the fund is sufficient to give a stipulated sum to each member & then the whole is divided amongst them (LORD CRANWORTH, C.).—*FLEMING v. 15. — Society known to be insolvent—New rule altering rights of members in winding up.—A building society under its rules issued three classes of shares—A., B., & C. Of these the C. shares were preferential, the holders being entitled to be paid interest in lieu of bonus & other periodical payments. In Oct., 1889, the society passed a rule that after Dec. 31, 1890, no further advances should be made upon shares then existing, and that from & after the passing of the rule the withdrawal of shares, other than C. shares, by priority of notice should cease, & that the funds of the society should be applied, amongst other things, to the payment of capital & interest on the C. shares. At the time of passing the rule, & thenceforward, the society was known both to its officers & members to be insolvent in the sense that the assets of the society were not sufficient to repay in full the sums due to members on their shares, but there were no outside creditors :—Held : the new rule was invalid in so far as it varied any then subsisting

16. — New rule to facilitate realisation of assets.—It is competent for a building society, even when in a state of insolvency, to pass a new rule for the purpose of facilitating the realisation of the assets of the society, provided that such rule is bond fide passed for such purpose & does not affect the rights of the members of the society inter se in respect of their liability or in respect of the distribution of assets.—SIXTH WEST KENT MUTUAL BUILDING SOCIETY v. NORTHUMBERLAND BUILDING SOCIETY (1889), 22 Q. B. D. 373; 60 L. T. 558; 37 W. R. 368; 5 T. L. R. 265, C. A.

18. — Grounds for refusal—Rule retrospective in operation.—A building society by resolution duly made an alteration in one of their rules giving members the power to withdraw any shares held by them subject to certain regulations which were made to apply to all withdrawals of which notice had been given before the date of the resolution, & one of the regulations provided that in case the society should be dissolved, withdrawing members, whose withdrawal notices had then expired, should lose their priorities and be paid pari passu with the other members. The registrar of building societies having refused to register this alteration of rules on the grounds that it was retrospective in its operation, & that it purported to prescribe the matters which, by 1874 Act, s. 32, are directed to be provided in an instrument of dissolution:—Held: mere retrospectiveness is not of itself a sufficient reason to entitle the registrar to refuse to register, & he was bound to register the alteration, his duty being confined to considering whether the rule was bad or not for non-conformity with the terms of the Act.—R. v. BRABROOK (1893), 69 L. T. 718; 58 J. P. 117; 37 Sol. Jo. 747; 10 R. 1, D. C.

19. — Effect of—On right of redemption—Covenant to pay according to “rules for time being.”—Pltf., an advanced member of deflt. society, claimed to redeem a mtge. which he had given to the society to secure the repayment of an advance made by them to him in respect of his shares. The society was registered under 1874 Act. By one of the rules the sum advanced was to be repaid with interest in the course of twenty-two years, by a series of monthly subscriptions consisting of principal & interest. By another rule a member who had received an advance secured by mtge. was entitled to redeem the mtge. before the expiration of the term for which the advance was made in manner provided by the rules. By the rules which were in force at the date of pltf.'s mtge. advanced members were not bound to contribute to losses of the society. Pltf.'s mtge. contained a covenant by him to pay to the society “all subscriptions & contributions, interest, fines, premiums of insurance, & other moneys, & to do & perform all acts & things, which, according to the rules for the time being of the society, & the provisions herein contained, shall from time to time become due & payable & which ought to be done & performed by the mtgor.” The proviso for redemption was expressed in similar terms. Before pltf. gave notice to redeem his mtge. the rules of the society had been altered, & the altered rules provided that the board of directors should have power to charge to a member paying off any share or shares in respect of which an advance had been made such a sum or sums in respect of such share or shares as would, pro rata with the other subscriptions & paid-up shares in the society, in the opinion of the board be sufficient to cover any loss or anticipated loss of the society:—Held: pltf.'s mtge. was subject to the altered rule, pltf. could redeem only on the footing of that rule.—WILSON v. 20. — — — — ——An advanced or borrowing member of a building society executed a mtge. to the society to secure an advance made by them to him. The mtge. contained a covenant by the mtgor. to pay to the society all subscriptions, fines, & other moneys which, according to the rules for the time being of the society, should from time to time become due & payable by him in respect of the security or the shares by virtue of which the advance was made to him. The proviso for redemption was expressed in similar terms. The rules in force at the date of the mtge. did not render advanced members liable to contribute to the losses of the society. The rules were afterwards altered by the introduction of a provision that an advanced member should not be entitled to redeem his mtge. without paying, in addition to what would have been due from him under the original rules, his proportion of the losses of the society. The altered rules were certified by the registrar of building societies, as provided by 1874 Act:—Held: the new rules applied to the mtge., & pltf. desiring to redeem his mtge. must do so in accordance with those rules.—ROSENBERG v. NORTHUMBERLAND BUILDING SOCIETY (1889), 22 Q. B. D. 373; 60 L. T. 558; 37 W. R. 368; 5 T. L. R. 265, C. A.

21. ——— After notice of withdrawal—On settlement of disputes.]—Pltf. became a member of deft. society in 1883, and in Mar., 1887, gave a notice of withdrawal to the society. More than a month after this notice had been served the society was incorporated under 1874 Act, certain alterations were made in the rules, &, in July, 1887, a certificate of registration of the alteration of the rules was granted. It was provided by the original rules of the society that the rules might be added to, repealed, or altered & amended. By the rules of 1887 it was provided that all disputes between the society & members should be settled by reference to arbitration:—Held: pltf., although she had given notice of withdrawal, remained a member of the society, & the dispute between her & the society must be referred to arbitration.—*DAVIES v. 22. ——— On right of withdrawal.]—Pltf. was the holder of four fully paid-up shares in a building society. By one of the rules of the society a member on giving one month's notice in writing might withdraw his shares. The rules also provided that they might be altered by a majority of three-fourths of the members. Pltf. gave the requisite notice of withdrawal; but after such notice & before he was repaid the above rule was altered by giving the directors power to pay off in priority members holding less than £50 in the society:—Held: although pltf. had at the date of his notice of withdrawal under the rule then in force a vested right to be paid the amount due on his shares, he was still a member of the society, & as such was liable to have this right divested by a subsequent alteration in the rule duly made; he was therefore bound by the altered rule.—*PEPE v. 23. ———.]—A building society having suffered loss, passed a resolution in 1889 to reduce the shares from £12 to £10. The rules then in force entitled any unadvanced member to withdraw his payments on account of shares by giving one month's notice, such withdrawing members to be paid in rotation, but not more than one withdrawing member was entitled to be paid at each monthly meeting. In Feb., 1890, altered rules were adopted entitling members to withdraw amounts standing to their credit by giving one month's written notice, the amount due in respect of shares to be five-sixths of the net amount paid on them. In 1892 an instrument of dissolution, under 1874 Act, s. 32, was executed & registered; some members had given notice of withdrawal before the losses were known, others before the reduction of the shares, others after the reduction. One member had not assented to the reduction. Other members had not given notice of withdrawal:—Held: all the members were bound by the reduction.—BARNARD v. TOMSON, [1894] 1 Ch. 374; 63 L. J. 30. Alteration of rules—Liabilities of advanced members increased—Covenant to pay according to “rules for time being.”—Alteration subject to rules of law & equity.—A permanent benefit building society, comprising unadvanced or investing members, & advanced or borrowing members, lent to the advanced members at a premium the sums to which their shares would amount when fully paid up, taking from each of them a mtge. of freehold, copyhold, or leasehold property, to secure the sums advanced & the premiums, with interest thereon respectively. By his mtge. deed each advanced member covenanted to pay to the society, at the times & in manner prescribed by its rules “for the time being,” the sums payable periodically, by way of subscription or otherwise, in respect of his shares until (1st) the shares with interest on the amount thereof in advance should be realised, & until (2nd) the premium & interest thereon should be paid, & that in the meantime, except when varied by those presents, all the rules “for the time being” of the society should in respect of the said shares be observed by the member. The proviso for redemption took effect in each case “if the said shares & premium & interest thereon respectively should be duly realised & paid according to the covenant.” S.

in 1866, obtained, for a premium of £130 10s., an advance of £600, in twenty-four shares of the society of £25 each, & executed a mtge. in this form. The society afterwards, in 1873, passed new rules, one of which provided that advanced members should, before redeeming their securities, pay an additional sum as a contribution towards certain losses sustained by the society, and another of which (Rule I) provided that, so far as the rules of law & equity would permit, the rules then passed should apply to all the members as well present as future, & to all its transactions as well past as future:—Held: (1) S. & the other members who were advanced before the passing of the new rules were notwithstanding the reference in their covenants to the “rules for the time being,” entitled to redeem their securities on payment only of those sums which they were liable to pay according to the rules in existence at the date of their respective contracts; (2) Rule I excluded from the operation of the new rules those members whose contracts would be substantially varied by them.—Re NORWICH & NORFOLK PROVIDENT PERMANENT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY, SMITH’S CASE (1875), 1 Ch. 31. ——— No covenant to pay according to “rules for time being.”—An advanced member of a building society executed a mtge. to the society, with a proviso for redemption on payment of “the several sums, whether consisting of monthly subscriptions, fines, interest, or other payments which, under the constitution of the said society & the rules & regulations thereof,” ought to be paid in respect of his shares, & a covenant for payment to the same effect. At the time of the mtge. the rules of the society did not provide for any contribution by advanced members to losses of the society, but subsequently thereto the rules were duly altered by empowering the directors to make a levy on members of a contribution to losses; & under the rules so altered a levy was made. The mtgor. claimed to be entitled to redeem without paying any part of such levy:—Held: although the mtge. did not refer to the rules “for the time being,” the mtgor., by virtue of his contract, which was one of mtge. & membership combined, was bound by the altered rules, & was therefore not entitled to redeem except upon payment of his proportion of the levy.—BRADBURY v. SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

33. Appointment of officers—Corrupt agreement to pay in consideration of being appointed—Consideration illegal.]—Pltf. had for some years been engaged in promoting building societies of a particular type on a basis or plan he had settled, & on which he claimed a sort of "royalty." On the foundation of each society he took agreements from persons desiring to be appointed officers of the societies as surveyors or otherwise by which they undertook on his obtaining them such offices to pay him a sum of money. By the agreement the payment was stated to be a portion of pltf.'s "royalty" to assist in paying the loss of his time while establishing the society, use of his copyright rules, & his risk in providing all the necessary books, printing, & papers for the proper working of the society under his guidance until the first appropriation is made & for other services, & was expressed to be in consideration of the party being appointed to a specified office in the society. It was also provided that rules of the society should be the basis of the contract. By the rules the officers of the society were to be appointed by the promoters, of whom pltf. was one:—Held: the agreement was corrupt & fraudulent.—STARR v. WALL (1889), 6 T. L. R. 108, D. C.

34. When solicitor treated as "officer"—Receiving fixed salary—Acting as financial manager.]—W., a solr., was appointed & acted as sole solr. to the L. Society, which was incorporated under 1874 Act, at an annual salary out of which he was to provide offices, clerks, etc., & undertook to pay over to the society all fees & costs paid to him by clients of the society. An order was subsequently made for the compulsory winding-up of the society, & pursuant to the rules under Cos. (Winding-up) Act, 1890 (c. 63), application was made by the official receiver to bring to the notice of the court certain acts of misfeasance committed by W., & for an order that he should contribute to the assets of the society sums received by him as officer thereof:—Held: although prima facie a solr. is not any more an officer of a society than is a banker, yet inasmuch as W. had agreed to do all the work that the society had for him to do in consideration of a fixed salary, & to forego as far as the members of the society were concerned all the ordinary rules with regard to payment, & as he had acted practically as the society's financial manager, he was an officer of the society within sect. 10 of that Act, & as such his estate was liable to contribute to the assets of the society all sums that he had received as an officer of the society.—Re LIBERATOR PERMANENT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY (1894), 71 L. T. 406; 10 T. L. R. 537; 2 Mans. 100; 15 R. 149, D. C.

g. Appointment of officers—Necessity of corporate seal.]—A resolution was passed by defts., that pltf. be engaged for the society's office as clerk:—Held: having regard to the statutes incorporating defts., & the character of pltf.'s employment, the contract should have been under defts.' corporate seal.—HUGHES v. CANADA PERMANENT BUILDING & SAVINGS SOCIETY (1876), 39 U. C. R. 221.—CAN.

h. Liability for illegal ballot for loan—Conducting lottery.]—By the rules of a society registered under 1886 Act the right to loans was to be allotted for by the members, & on the application of a member, winning a right to a loan, who was unable to dispose of the same on satisfactory terms, such right was to be purchased by the society for a specific sum in cash. A ballot was held under the rules & a managing director was con-

35. Liability for misappropriation—Agreement by society to stifle a prosecution—Promissory notes given in pursuance of agreement—No right of recovery.]—The secretary of a building society, who had made default in accounting for money paid to him & was threatened by the society with a prosecution for embezzlement, applied for assistance to pltf.s., who were his relatives, & they gave a written undertaking to the society to make good the greater part of the debt due from the secretary, the expressed consideration being the forbearance of the society to sue the secretary for the amount for which pltf.s. made themselves responsible, & in pursuance of that undertaking they gave two promissory notes & some title deeds as collateral security to the society. Pltf.s. in giving the undertaking were actuated by the desire to prevent the prosecution, & that was known to the directors of the society; but no promise was made that there should be no prosecution. The society brought an action on the promissory notes in the Q. B. Div., & pltf.s. brought an action in the Ch. Div. to set aside the promissory notes & the collateral securities on the ground that they were made for an illegal consideration. The Q. B. action was transferred to the Ch. Div. & the two actions tried together:—Held: (1) it was an implied term of the agreement that there should be no prosecution, & the agreement was therefore founded on an illegal consideration, & void; (2) the society could not recover on the promissory notes nor enforce the securities.—JONES v. MERIONETHSHIRE PERMANENT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY, [1892] 1 Ch. 173; 61 L. J. Ch. 138; 65 L. T. 685; 40 W. R. 273; 8 T. L. R. 133; 36 Sol. Jo. 108; 17 Cox, C. C. 389, C. A.

36. Liability—For unauthorised acts—Guarantee of prior mortgage debt to prevent sale at loss—Transaction not authorised by rules.]—A building society advanced in 1876 to A, a member, £1,000. A. disposed in security an ex facie absolute disposition of certain subjects, which were already burdened by a prior mtge. In 1879 A.'s estates were sequestrated, and the directors of the society, in order to prevent a sale of the subjects at an alleged loss, granted B. a bond of corroboration guaranteeing the payment of his prior mtge. In 1882 an order for the voluntary winding-up of the society was made, & the liquidators instituted this

k. Appointment of trustee—On death or retirement—Rules.]—A building society, in the exercise of its statutory powers provided by its rules that, on the death or retirement of a trustee, a new trustee should be elected in his place in a manner contrary to the statute, & that the appointment should action concluding for reduction of the bond of corroboration granted to B. as being ultra vires of the directors & in violation of the rules & constitution of the society:—Held: the bond was ultra vires, being a transaction not authorised by the rules, & not incidental to the conduct of the society's business.—SMALL v. SMITH (1884), 10 App. Cas. 119, H. L.

38. — For acts of co-directors—Ultra vires advances to member on security of shares—In pursuance of resolution passed by all directors.—The directors of a building society passed a resolution authorising advances to members on the security of their shares. Pltf., who was a director, concurred in this resolution. An advance was accordingly made to a member on the security of his shares, and the society thereby incurred a loss. Pltf. was no party to making this advance. In an action by pltf. to recover from the society deposits made by him, defts. counter-claimed in respect of the loss which they had incurred, on the ground that the advance was ultra vires, and was attributable to the illegal resolution which authorised such advances:—Held: pltf. was not liable, for the cause of the loss was the wrongful act of the directors who made the advance, who were not the servants or agents of pltf., & for whose acts the pltf. was not liable.—CULLERNE v. LONDON & SUBURBAN GENERAL PERMANENT BUILDING SOCIETY (1890), 25 Q. B. D. 485; 59 L. J. Q. B. 525; 63 L. T. 511; 55 J. P. 148; 39 W. R. 88; 6 T. L. R. 449, C. A.

39. — To refund to society—Bonus received be duly certified & forwarded to the proper officer. One of the trustees having retired a new trustee was elected in his place in the manner prescribed by the rules, but without the statutory formalities:—Held: the appointment was valid, & as the rules did not require that the appointment should be certified by any particular person, it was sufficient that its authenticity was guaranteed by the signatures of the board which elected the trustee & of the secretary of the society & the appointment forwarded to the registrar, in accordance with the rules.—HEYDON v. LILLIS (1907), 4 C. L. R. 1223.—AUS.

1. Vesting of property in trustee—Resignation & appointment of new trustee—Vesting of property without assignment.—A statute provided that on the removal of a trustee, the property should vest in the succeeding trustee for the same estate & interest without any conveyance or assignment:—Held: the word "removal" was not restricted to compulsory removal, & on acceptance of the resignation of a trustee by the board & the due appointment of a new trustee, the society's property vested in him without any

m. Authority to sell mortgaged land by auction—Unauthorised withdrawal from sale by secretary.—Where the committee of a building society authorised its secretary to place lands mortgaged to it in the hands of an auctioneer for sale:—Held: the secretary had no authority to withdraw the land from the sale without a resolution of the committee to that effect.—ROSS v. VICTORIAN PERMANENT PROPERTY INVESTMENT BUILDING SOCIETY (1882), 8 V. L. R. 254.—AUS.

n. Receipt of money—Misappropriation—Liability of society.—Deft. borrowed money from pltf. society, the loan being secured by mtge. By an agreement between deft. & pltf.'s secretary it was arranged that the latter should collect the rents of the mortgaged property for deft. & apply the same in payment of the principal & interest of the borrowed money. The rents were duly collected but the secretary embezzled them, & pltf.

from borrower.]—A building society claimed from the directors & the exors. of deceased directors four sums of £105, £1,000, £500, and £250, received by them from D. on the occasions of four large advances made to him by the society, & divided between the directors. The transactions had been profitable to the society:—Held: on the evidence, the sums had been paid by the borrower as a bonus to the directors & could not be retained by them. The directors & the exors. of deceased directors were jointly & severally liable to the society for the sums so received & for the costs of the action.—*MUNICIPAL PERMANENT INVESTMENT BUILDING SOCIETY v. See 1874 Act, ss. 17, 18, 20, 26, 40, 42; 1877 s. 2.

40. Petition in bankruptcy—Signed by secretary duly authorised—Affidavit of authority unnecessary.—A bkpcy. petition by a building society against a debtor was signed by the society's secretary, who was duly authorised in that behalf:—Held: the petition did not require to be supported by an affidavit of the secretary stating that he was such secretary & that he was authorised to present the petition.—Re TOVEY (1910), 26 T. o. Duty to account—Effect of failure—Appeal.—A building society petitioned the sheriff court alleging that their secretary had been dismissed from office; that he had refused to comply with a demand to give in an account of his intrusions with the funds of the society, & to pay over all money & to deliver all books & other property belonging to them, & praying for a decree ordaining him so to do. The sheriff having allowed a proof of their averments, defender appealed to the Ct. of Session:—Held: the case was not appealable.—*FIRST EDINBURGH & LEITH 415TH STARR BOWKETT BUILDING SOCIETY v. 42. Liability on promissory note—Signed by officers for value received by society—Personal liability of signatories.]—A promissory note was made in the following form: "M. Building Society. Two months after demand in writing we promise to pay to P. one hundred pounds with interest, etc., for value received. One month after demand we jointly & severally promise to pay B. the sum of £120, with interest, etc., for value received. (Signed) H. & S., trustees; F., secretary"—Held: deft., F., was personally liable on this note; the addition of the word "secretary" to his signature did not cut down or exclude his liability, his signature being placed where a party usually signs such a document, & from its position showing nothing like a counter-signature as "secretary" merely.—*BOTTOMLEY v. 46. Right to remuneration—Rules authorising payment out of funds—Liability of directors.]—Pltf. was the surveyor of a building society, the object of which was to advance money to its members to enable them to buy or build houses, but not itself to buy or build. By one of the rules of the society, the surveyor was to look only to the funds of the society for his compensation. By resolutions at general meetings, at which deft., as one of the directors, was present, pltf. was directed to prepare plans, etc., for houses which the society was building, the compensation being a percentage upon the outlay. The society became insolvent, & pltf. sued deft., as one of the directors, for this percentage:—Held: pltf. was bound by the rules of the society to seek his compensation from the funds of the society solely.—ALEXANDER v. WORMAN (1860), 6 H. & N. 100; 30 L. J. Ex. 198; 3 L. T. 477; 25 J. P. 312; 158 E. R. 42.

47. Right to pension—Voluntary allowance made before winding up—Employment in ultra vires business.]—A building society, in addition to the usual business of a building society, carried on banking & other businesses. All these businesses were housed in one building & were managed by the same board of directors & were served by the same staff. The society was ordered to be wound up in 1911, & the banking business was held to be ultra vires the society. In 1903, A., a correspondence clerk of the society, retired at the request of the board & was promised a pension; & in 1906, B., a clerk in the banking business, retired at the request of the board & was promised a pension. Both pensions were duly paid until the winding-up order, & A. & B. claimed to prove in the winding up for the capital value of their respective pensions:—Held: (1) A.'s pension was merely a voluntary allowance not founded on any contract, & his claim failed; (2) B., apart from any question of contract, being employed in the banking business which was ultra vires, could not prove against the assets of the society.—Re BIRKBECK PERMANENT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY, [1913] 1 Ch. 400; 82 L. 52. Liability of trustee—Acting ministerially—Breach of trust by directors.]—A building society was established & the rules certified under 1836 Act; the directors subsequently changed the name & sought to convert it into a freehold land society. They made no alteration in the rules, but they applied the funds of the society towards the payment of the purchase-money of a piece of land they contracted to purchase.—Held: the trustees were not responsible for the funds as they only acted ministerially when they signed the cheques for payment; they should, however, be refused the costs of the suit.—*GRIMES v. 53. Liability of treasurer—Moneys held as "bailee"—Robbery by violence.]—Declaration against the sureties of the treasurer of a building society, conditioned that he should duly & faithfully discharge the duties of his office, & duly account to the trustees for money, goods, & chattels which he should receive on account of the trustees, alleged that he, as such treasurer, received £170, the monies of the society, & that according to the rules of the society he ought to have paid over the same monies to the bankers of the society, to the credit of pl'tfs., within, etc. Breach. Plea, that after he had received the monies, & before the time when he ought to have paid the same to the bankers, he without any default on his part, was robbed by violence of the whole of the said monies, by the same being feloniously & violently stolen from his person, & thereby he was unavoidably, & without any act or default of his, prevented from paying the said monies to the bankers of the society:—Held: the treasurer of a benefit building society was a bailee of the monies which he received on account of the society, & did not by 1836 Act, s. 4, & Friendly Societies Act, s. 20, become debtor to the society, & therefore he was discharged by the robbery; & consequently the plea was an answer to the action.—*WALKER v. SUB-SECT. 3.—DIRECTORS AND MANAGERS.

56. Exercise of powers—Whether invalidated by failure to observe formalities.]—A rule of an unincorporated building society declared that the minutes of the managers entered in the minute book, & signed by the managers concurring therein, should be sufficient authority for the execution of any of the powers referred to:—Held: the omission of the managers to sign in conformity with this rule did not invalidate their execution of the powers entrusted to them.—*PRIESTLEY v. 57. Power to convey good title—Purchase of land from building society.]—Purchasers of land from a building society must not delude themselves

57 i. Power to convey in fee—Purchase of land from society.]—A mtgo. was made to the president & treasurer of a building society, their successors with the idea that the directors & the trustees of the society can convey a good & valid title; they are bound to call for the title-deeds, as in the event of their taking a defective title they must bear all the consequential risks.

& assigns, in trust for the society. The society having subsequently exercised the power of sale, the then president & treasurer, successors of the original mtgees., conveyed to the purchaser by a deed under a seal not the society's:—

A building society purchased a piece of freehold land, & the vendors upon payment of one-fourth of the purchase-money conveyed the land to the trustees of the society in fee, & signed a receipt for the whole of the purchase-money. The directors of the society & the trustees at the same time signed an agreement to pay the remaining purchase-money by instalments, & declared that in the meantime the deed should remain in the hands of the vendors, & that in default of payment they would execute a legal mtge. to secure the unpaid purchase-money. Default was made, & an action was brought to recover the purchase-money, & on a claim filed, a decree was made to carry the agreement into effect. The society, immediately on the execution of the conveyance by the vendors, sold the land in lots to divers persons, who, without looking into the title, paid their purchase-money & took a conveyance in fee from the trustees. The society omitted to pay the instalments of the purchase-money, & a bill was filed by the original vendors against the whole of the allottees & sub-purchasers of the land:—Held: they were bound to pay the purchase-money & redeem the mtge., or otherwise the whole of the estate must be sold; but if any party redeemed the land, the others must contribute towards the money paid for redemption, or otherwise the land of the party omitting to pay his contribution must be sold to discharge what was due in respect of his allotment.—PETO v. HAMMOND (1861), 30 Beav. 495; 31 L. J. Ch. 354; 8 Jur. N. S. 550; 54 E. R. 981.

58. Power to bind members—Acts ultra vires of directors—Trustees acquiescing—Whether other members bound.]—A society was formed, certified, & inrolled as a benefit building society; its rules did not indicate an intention that it should act as a benefit freehold land society. The directors bought land & mortgaged it to secure money borrowed for the purchase, & certain members, acting as trustees, covenanted to pay the mtge. debt, & under that covenant they had to pay the money. It did not appear that every member acquiesced in or was even cognisant of the transaction:—Held: the act of the directors & trustees was ultra vires, & the trustees could not compel contribution among the shareholders to recoup their loss.—Re KENT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY (1861), 1 Drew. & Sm. 417; 30 L. J. Ch. 785; 4 L. T. 610; 25 J. P. 805; 7 Jur. N. S. 1045; 9 W. R. 686; 62 E. R. 439.

59. Liability for funds misappropriated—Whether action lies by person paying—For money had & received.]—Pltf. purchased the interest of a member of a building society in certain premises mortgaged to the society, & thereafter paid certain subscriptions or instalments in respect thereof to deft., the manager, who misapplied the money. By the rules the manager, in conjunction only with the treasurer & one of the trustees, was justified in receiving subscriptions:—Held: an action for money had & received would not lie to recover back the subscriptions so paid, as the money was received by the manager for the society & not for pltf., & even if it would lie, the member & not pltf. should have sued.—HAVERSON v. COLE (1857), 6 W. R. 17.

60. Liability for funds misapplied—Investment in breach of trust.]—The directors of a benefit building society, duly enrolled under 1836 Act, attempted to convert it into a freehold land society, & for that purpose changed the title into "freehold land society" but made no alteration in the rules. They afterwards entered into an agreement to purchase a piece of land, for the purpose of dividing it among the members, & paid a portion of the purchase-money out of the funds of the society. One of the rules of the society authorised the directors to invest surplus monies in the purchase of land:—Held: the purchase was unauthorised by the rules of the society, & the directors should be ordered to refund the monies which they had so misapplied.—GRIMES v. HARRISON (1859), 26 Beav. 435; 28 L. J. Ch. 823; 33 L. T. O. S. 115; 23 J. P. 421, 5 Jur. N. S. 528; 53 E. R. 966; subsequent proceedings, 27 Beav. 198.

61. Action for account—By whom brought.]—A benefit building society, among its rules, had one that any member giving notice might withdraw his share, & have the money paid by him returned. Certain members, who had given such notice, filed a bill, on behalf of themselves & all other members not being defts., against the directors, praying for an account of the dealings of the society, that all losses occasioned by the fraud & mismanagement of the directors might be made good by them, & for payment of the debts & liabilities of the society. Some of the members had not given notice of withdrawal; but the bill did not state that their names were unknown to the pltfs.:—Held: on a demurrer for want of equity & for want of parties, the bill was defective for want of parties, for neither pltfs. nor defts., they all being directors, represented the non-withdrawing members.—HARMER v. GOODING (1849), 3 De G. & Sm. 407; 13 L. T. O. S. 134; 13 Jur. 400; 64 E. R. 537.

SUB-SECT. 4.—THE SECRETARY.

62. Power to bind society—By giving orders for work.]—If the secretary of a friendly building society formed under 1836 Act, gives orders for work & the work is actually done, the trustees of the society are bound to pay for it, if there be evidence to satisfy the jury that the secretary was the general agent of the directors, even though the work was not ordered at a board meeting.—ALLARD v. BOURNE (1863), 15 C. B. N. S. 468; 3 New Rep. 42; 143 E. R. 868.

63. Liability to make good deficiency—Misappropriation of moneys of society—Priority over other creditors.]—The secretary of a benefit building society established & certified under 1836 Act, the rules of which provided that the secretary's accounts should be regularly presented & audited, misappropriated the moneys of the society that came into his hands, & died leaving his estate insolvent:—Held: under Friendly Societies Act, 1834 (c. 40), s. 12, the society was entitled to be paid out of the estate the amount of the defalcations in priority to other creditors, & the want of due diligence on the part of the society in examining the accounts was no bar to the claim.—MOORS v. MARRIOTT (1878), 7 Ch. D. 543; 47 L. J. Ch. 331; 42 J. P. 452; 26 W. R. 626.

64. — Misappropriation by private clerk of secretary—Clerk authorised by secretary to receive moneys.—The secretary of a benefit building society employed H. as his private clerk to transact the business of the society. H. was not an officer of the society. The directors had drawn cheques from time to time, which were handed over to H. by the direction & with the knowledge of the secretary, for the purpose of being paid by him to the withdrawing members, but instead of being so applied, they were misappropriated by H.:—Held: the secretary was liable to make good the moneys so misappropriated.—Re MUTUAL AID PERMANENT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY, Ex p. JAMES (1883), 49 L. T. 530; 48 J. P. 54.

65. Embezzlement by—Description in indictment—“Servant of trustees.”—The secretary of a benefit building society embezzled moneys received by him which had been borrowed by the trustees for the purposes of the society in their individual capacity, there being no rule of the society under which the money was so borrowed:—Held: in an indictment for embezzlement, the secretary was properly described as the servant of W. & others, W. being one of the trustees & a member of the society.—*R. v. 67. — Incorporated society.—A limited co. became a borrowing member of a benefit building society, borrowed £2,000 & entered into the usual building society mtge. for repayment of principal with fines & premiums. This advance was secured by a bond of indemnity. The mtge. was not paid & the co. was ordered to be wound up. The building society carried in a claim in the winding up, when it was objected on behalf of the liquidator that the mtge. was ultra vires. In an action brought on the bond which raised the question whether an incorporated co. could become a member of a building society:—Held: though under 1836 Act, which was passed for the benefit of industrious individuals, a co. could not be a member, the policy of the 1874 Act was different, & a limited co. could become a member of a building society just as much as it could become a member of any other corp.—*BRISTOL & CLIFTON PERMANENT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY v. 70. Test of membership—Unincorporated society—Admission of members recorded in books.—A joint-stock brewery co., being in want of a loan of money, effected the following arrangement with a benefit building society: They, by a common deed of mtge., mtged. their real estates to the trustees of the society, to secure a sum of £7,500, & interest at 5 per cent. per annum. They agreed to take fifty shares in the society of £120 each, & gave sixty bills of exchange for £75 ls. each, payable at intervals of one month, in respect of the monthly subscriptions, premiums, & interest upon the fifty shares; they also gave a bond for £15,000 as an additional security for the £7,500. This sum of £7,500 was made up of an alleged loan to the brewery co. of £6,000 & £1,500 as the agreed premium of £30 each upon fifty shares. Upon a bill by the brewery co. against the trustees of the society, alleging that by means of the payment by pltf. of a large number of the sixty bills of exchange & by other payments, the sum actually advanced by the building society to them was nearly, if not entirely, paid off, & praying to be let in to redeem the mtge. upon payment of what should be found due from them upon taking the accounts in the ordinary manner as between mtgor. & mtgee., & for the delivery up of the bond & the remaining bills of exchange:—Held: in the absence of the books of the society, which are the primary evidence of the due admission of members, according to the rules of the society, pltf. were not to be considered members of the society.—*DOBINSON v. which no advance had been made, gave due notice of withdrawal & received the estimated amount of their shares under the rules of the society before the shares were fully paid up or matured. The society was, within a year afterwards, wound up in the county court, under the winding-up clauses of Companies Acts, & the judge, on the application of creditors, made an order declaring that holders of such shares not matured at the commencement of the winding up were, notwithstanding withdrawal, liable to contribute to the assets of the society:—Held: the order was wrong, for, on withdrawal of their shares, the holders ceased to be members of the society.—Re SHEFFIELD & SOUTH YORKSHIRE PERMANENT BUILDING SOCIETY (1889), 22 Q. On an application by the liquidator to have members so withdrawing declared liable for calls on the shares they had so held:—Held: there was nothing in Companies Acts to prevent an unlimited co. from validly providing by its memorandum & articles of association for a return of capital to the members of the co., or for the withdrawal of members from the co.—Re BOROUGH COMMERCIAL & BUILDING SOCIETY, [1893] 2 Ch. 242; 62 L. 81. Title to shares—Payment by society to registered owner—Without notice of trust.—In 1876 A., as agent for his wife, purchased three shares in a building society, and without the knowledge or consent of the wife he had them registered in his own name. All subscriptions in respect of the shares were paid out of the wife’s separate estate, and she kept the share certificates, and as between herself and her husband she was entitled to the shares. By the rules of the society it was provided that shareholders should receive a certificate for every share, which must be produced on the transfer or withdrawal thereof for the purpose of having a memorandum indorsed thereon; and also that no transfer of the scrip should pass the interest of the shareholder therein named until the same should have been registered in the books of the society. In 1883, A. without the knowledge or consent of his wife withdrew the shares and obtained payment for them. When he presented himself for payment the secretary asked for the certificates, but A. represented that they were in the possession of his brother, who was also a shareholder of the society, and would be produced on the following day, and the secretary thereupon paid him the money. Upon an action by the wife to have herself registered as the owner of the shares:—Held: payment had been made to the person legally entitled without notice of the wife’s claim, and the action must be dismissed.—*NOLLOTH v. The line is to be drawn at the time when there is a stoppage of the society’s business, or a recognition,

t. — Subject to deduction—Payment in rotation.—A shareholder of a building society incorporated under 1874 Act, the members of which were entitled under the rules to withdraw on giving certain notice thereof, & to be paid out according to the priority of their notices, sent in a notice of withdrawal. Before he had been paid out, the society resolved that a certain proportion per £1 be deducted from all shareholders accounts & placed to a suspense account; this resolution was intimated to him. He was subsequently paid out subject to this deduction & he granted a receipt for the sum paid him as “placed to the debit of my share account.” After the society was in funds to pay him out in full he claimed the balance:—Held: the shareholder was entitled to the balance.—GLASGOW WORKING MEN’S PROVIDENT INVESTMENT BUILDING SOCIETY v. GALBRAITH (1884), 21 Sc. L. R. 782.—SCOT.

a. — In respect of prior to withdrawal.—The rules of a building society provided:—“Any member holding unadvanced shares shall be entitled to withdraw from the society on application to the directors in writing, & shall be entitled to receive the amount standing at his credit in the books of the society in respect of his shares as at the immediately preceding annual balance, together with the amount of subscriptions paid by him thereafter”:—Held: under this rule a member withdrawing was liable to a deduction of 40 per cent. on the value of his shares in respect of losses incurred by the Society, as appearing from the last balance-sheet, although that balance-sheet was approved after the date of his withdrawal.—*SCOTTISH PROPERTY INVESTMENT CO. 87. Time for payment—Power of arbitrator to fix.—The rules of a benefit building society authorised the directors to invest the funds on mtges. for ten years at any rate of interest, or in building on or improving land mortgaged to them, & authorised members to withdraw their shares upon giving a certain notice, & provided that such members should not be liable to any future fines, but should be entitled to receive the net amount of their subscriptions paid with interest, & also a share of profits. No time was specified in making such payments, & the directors had power to pay such claims in the order in which they arose. The amount payable to a withdrawing member having been referred to arbitration:—Held: it was competent to the arbitrator to consider when, consistently with the due prosecution of the other objects of the society, such payment should be made, & to fix a time for such payment accordingly.—*ARMITAGE v. d. Notice of withdrawal — Conditional cancellation.—Unadvanced members who had given notice of withdrawal were invited by circulars sent out by the society to cancel their notices. The circulars did not expressly mention a condition that cancellations would not be used unless shareholders, representing at least nine-tenths of the amount under notice of withdrawal cancelled their notices, & the form of cancellation sent along with the circular was absolute in its terms. Nine-tenths did not cancel their notices of withdrawal:—Held: cancellation was con-last dividend and notice of withdrawal—At rate in deposit.—Pltf. was a member and shareholder of deft. building society, &, in Mar. 1887, was the holder of £250 paid-up investment shares. On Mar. 2 he gave notice of withdrawal of £125 part thereof, at a month's date, and that sum was duly paid to him. On July 15, the directors apportioned to the paid-up investment shares then on the register an interim dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, for the half-year ending June 30; but they refused to pay any interest or dividend to the pltf. on the £125 withdrawn. Thereupon pltf. claimed 15s. as interest on that sum from Jan. 1, the date of the last dividend, to Mar. 2, the date of notice of withdrawal, at the rate allowed on deposits namely 4 per cent. pursuant to rules 19 & 21 of the society. The directors had passed the following resolutions, on Nov. 5, 1886, that "subject to the rules the interest allowed on moneys withdrawn do not for the present exceed 2½ per cent. per annum"; and on Feb. 18, 1887, that "No interest be allowed upon interim withdrawals until further consideration." Pltf. had no notice of these resolutions. By rule 9 of the society, paid-up shares might be withdrawn or repaid upon the terms set forth in rule 21. Rule 19 provided that interest should be allowed on investment shares at such rates as the board should from time to time fix, & rule 21 that any member might withdraw the subscriptions in respect of investment shares, subject to the conditions specified below, after one month's notice in writing. . . . A member withdrawing a portion only of the amount at the credit of his share account, should not be paid interest thereon at a rate exceeding that for the time being allowed on deposits. Interest on all shares should cease at the date of notice of withdrawal. For debts. it was contended that, as there was no contract to pay interest, the only interest pltf. was entitled to was the interest fixed by the board, & here the board had fixed no interest, and that the resolution of Feb. 18 was fatal to pltf.'s claim:—Held: pltf. was entitled to interest on the £125 withdrawn from the date of the last dividend up to the date of notice of withdrawal, and such interest ought to be at the rate allowed on deposits, namely 4 per cent.—PERRATT v. LONDON SCOTTISH PERMANENT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY (1888), 59 L. T. 31, D. C.

89. Shares fully paid up—Priority according to dates of notices.—The rules of a building society provided that any member desirous of withdrawing should, by giving a month's notice in writing, be entitled to receive back his subscription money in the manner therein mentioned; that members withdrawing, whose shares were fully paid up, should be entitled to 5 per cent. interest from the time such shares were so paid up, or from the time the previous dividend was paid; and that if more than one member should give notice to withdraw they should be paid in rotation according to the priority of their notices. The society was ordered to be wound up under the Companies Acts, and at the date of the winding up the shareholders consisted of three classes, viz.: (1) members who gave early notices of withdrawal of their shares, and who claimed to be paid out of the assets in priority to those who gave later notices;

(2) members who gave later notices, and who claimed that all the withdrawing members should be paid pari passu; and (3) members who gave no notices. On the question whether the members who gave notice of withdrawal before the winding up commenced, were entitled to have interest added to their respective claims from the date of the winding up to the respective dates of payment of their claims:—Held: such of the members whose shares were fully paid up at the dates of their respective notices were entitled to be paid interest on the amounts due to them, from the times when such shares were fully paid up, or from the times of the payment of the last dividend, until the times of the payment of the amounts due to them, the members who gave notice of withdrawal prior to the commencement of the winding up being paid in priority to other members, according to the respective dates of their notices.—Re MIDDLESBROUGH, REDCAR, SALTBURN-BY-THE-SEA & CLEVELAND DISTRICT PERMANENT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY (No. 2) (1885), 53 L. PART VI. SECT. 4, SUB-SECT. 1.

91 i. Nature of fines—Whether penalty.—The bye-law of a building society provided that a member neglecting to pay his monthly dues, should be fined a specified sum per share each month, “until the end of one year, when the share or shares in default shall be declared forfeited to the society.” It then directed that a month before the expiration of such year, the secretary should send a notice to the defaulter, calling his attention to the bye-law; & provided that in case of the defaulter being a borrower these fines should be trebled; & that at the end of six months’ default the mtge. should be liable to foreclosure, & to be declared forfeited:—Held: the bye-law, being penal in its character, should be construed strictly.—*OTTAWA UNION BUILDING SOCIETY v. 98. For what period chargeable—Rules containing scale for first six months only—Fine limited to six months.]—The rules of a benefit building society, duly certified by the Registrar of Friendly Societies, provided that every mtge. should contain full powers of sale and covenants in accordance with the rules as a security for any money advanced, and that in case the mtgor. should neglect or refuse to observe and perform the covenants for payment of advance instalments, as well as any fines inflicted for neglect of payment as provided for in a table to the rules, then after certain steps taken the board of directors should be at liberty to sell the mortgaged property, and if any member should be desirous of redeeming, he should be allowed to do so on payment of all advance repayments, and any fines due in respect thereof up to the time of redemption, and the present value of the future repayments. The table referred to purported to show the fines to which borrowing members were liable for default of payment of their monthly subscriptions and interest on their shares from one to ten, according to an increasing scale, for a period of from one to six months, but made no provision beyond six months. The pltf. borrowed £1,400 from the society, and took twenty-eight £50 shares, and his mtge. was expressed to be for securing the repayment of £1,400, with interest at 7½ per cent., by monthly instalments of £31 10s. for five years. The payments having fallen into arrear, and the society having taken possession, pltf. brought an action for redemption, and the society claimed to be entitled to fines for each unpaid instalment increasing month by month in the same proportion as for the first six months:—Held: upon the reasonable construction of the rules, the rights of the society were restricted to a six months' fine in respect of each unpaid instalment of each share.—*LOVEJOY v. 102. Declaration of forfeiture by society.]—A society was registered under 1836 Act as a benefit building society, but was converted into and called a freehold land society, and a plot of land bought and allotted among its members. The land was paid for partly by members' subscriptions and partly by borrowed money, for which the society was liable. The society did not appear to have been conducted at any time in the usual way benefit building societies are:—Held: the shares of a member did not become forfeited on his merely ceasing to pay his subscriptions, etc., until so declared by the society in pursuance of the rules.—R. v. D'EYNCOURT (1864), 4 B. & S. 820; 9 L. T. 712; 28 J. P. 116; 122 E. R. 667;

subscription &, some considerable time after the expiration of sixteen weeks, the board of directors actually passed a resolution forfeiting the shares, & the society claimed subscriptions up to the time of the resolution:—Held: the shares were automatically forfeited on default for sixteen weeks.—No. 7 BOWKETT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY, QUEENSLAND v. WARREN, [1914] S. R. Q. 125.—AUS.

101 ii. ———.]—The rules of a building society provided, that every member failing to pay his monthly instalments shall be fined 1d. per share for every month such instalments were in arrears, & such fines might be liquidated from the first money paid in by the defaulter, or deducted from the amount already paid in by him, &, so soon as the fines should amount to the sum at his credit, the amount thereof should then be forfeited to the society, & be carried to the contingent fund, & the member should thereafter cease to have an interest in the society:—Held: the rule automatically operated a forfeiture of shares.—IRVINE & FULLARTON PROPERTY INVESTMENT & BUILDING SOCIETY v. CUTHBERTSON (1905), 43 Sc. L. R. 17.—SCOT.

103. Effect of forfeiture—Liability to contribute not discharged.]—A shareholder of a benefit building society, who has forfeited his shares by non-payment of fines, etc., although he is neither a director nor member of executive committee, is liable to be put on the list of contributories, on the winding-up of the society.—Re ST. 104. Waiver of forfeiture—Acceptance of arrears after forfeiture under rules—Not amounting to waiver.]—A rule of a building society provided that each member should pay 10s. per share subscription at every monthly meeting, & any member not having executed a mtge. to the society, continuing to neglect payment of his monthly subscriptions for six consecutive monthly nights, should thereupon cease to be a member of the society, and forfeit all his interest therein. By other rules, the entire management was vested in twelve directors, five to be a quorum. Pltf., a member, not having executed a mtge., for seven successive months made default in payment of his monthly subscriptions, but on a subsequent monthly meeting night paid them to two of the directors, who attended for the purpose of receiving subscriptions, and they accepted the arrears, in ignorance of the stringency of the rule, & gave receipts for them. At the first monthly meeting after that the directors resolved that pltf. had, on the sixth default, ceased to be a member of the society, and had forfeited all his interest therein; & they erased his name from the list of members, & returned him the arrears paid by him to the two directors:—Held: pltf. had forfeited his interest in the society; the acceptance of the arrears by the two directors did not waive the forfeiture; and the rule was not unreasonable.—CARD v. CARR (1856), 1 C. B. N. S. 197; 26 L. J. C. P. 113; 28 L. T. O. S. 124; 140 E. R. 83.

105. Application of general law of mortgage.]—Pltfs., trustees of a building society, were first mtgees. of house property for a sum of money which was an advance out of their funds to E., one of their subscribers, & defts., the bank, were second mtgees. of E. The first mtge. was in the usual form of a building society's mtges. The bank, with the consent of pltfs., had sold part of the property in order to reduce the balance of E.'s account; & in order to complete the redemption it was arranged, at the request of the bank, that upon payment of the balance of the amount estimated to be due to pltfs. upon their securities, instead of the usual statutory receipt on the indenture, pltfs. should execute a surrender & release of the property. This was done, but the bank not being prepared to pay certain costs, charges, & expenses, the surrender remained in the hands of one of pltfs., & the suit became necessary. E., in 1866, became bkpt., the other deft., S., was his creditors' assignee:—Held: there was no difference between the rights of a building society who were mtgees. & an ordinary mtgee., & the ct. had power to direct a sale instead of a foreclosure, but only upon terms.—BELL v. LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN BANK, [1874] W. N. 10.

into possession of mortgaged property—Power to spend money on protection of security.]—In 1878, the directors of a building society in exercise of their powers under the rules, advanced £25,000 to J. upon the security of, inter alia, a second mtge. of a leasehold colliery. In 1881 the first mtgees. of the leasehold colliery comprised in the society's security threatened to foreclose, & the directors made a further advance to J. of £41,000, £40,000 of which they borrowed for the purpose under their borrowing powers; & they subsequently entered into possession of the colliery, & paid an arrear of wages then due to the colliers, & they further expended considerable sums in payment of rents & royalties, & in working & maintaining the colliery until the society went into liquidation:—Held: (1) as the first advance was within their powers, the directors had power by implication to do those things which might result from the working out of the relation subsisting between first & second mtgees., & accordingly had power to redeem the first mtgee., & to exercise their borrowing powers for the purpose of paying him off; (2) they also had power to enter into possession of the mortgaged property, & to pay out of the assets of the society the rents reserved by the lease, & the proper expenses of maintaining & working the colliery without rendering themselves liable to such expenditure; but (3) an inquiry must be directed as to the sum paid by the directors for arrears of wages when they took possession, as such payment was not one for which there was a potential necessity. —SHEFFIELD & SOUTH YORKSHIRE PERMANENT BUILDING SOCIETY v. See 1874 Act, ss. 13, 28; 1894 Act, s. 13.

112. Leasehold estate—Advances upon security of leasehold colliery—Inclusion of interests in personal estate as collateral security.]—The directors of a benefit building society, having a large discretion vested in them as confidential agents, may properly make advances on classes of securities forbidden to ordinary trustees, & are not precluded from making advances on securities of a speculative nature. By the rules of a building society constituted under 1874 Act, with the object of raising by the subscriptions of the members a fund for making advances to members on mtge. (inter alia) of leasehold estate, it was provided amongst other things that none of the directors should be answerable for any act or default of any other of them or for the insufficiency or deficiency in title of any security taken for the repayment of any advances, unless the loss should happen through their own neglect or default; & that the funds of the society should be applied at the discretion of the board in making advances to members in respect of the shares held by them on (inter alia) legal or equitable mtge. of leasehold property. In 1878 the directors advanced £25,000 to J. upon two securities, the principal of which was a second mtge. of a leasehold colliery, taking at the same time as collateral security a charge upon certain beneficial interests under a trust of personal estate. During the transactions which resulted in the advance, the chairman of the board was in direct communication with the borrower, & took an active part in inquiring into the nature & value of the security, while the other directors simply exercised in good faith their judgment on the materials submitted to them; the advance was made upon a valuation & report by a competent surveyor selected by the chairman from five surveyors whose names were submitted by the borrower:—Held: (1) an advance upon the security of a leasehold colliery was not ultra vires the society; (2) the inclusion of the interests in personal estate as collateral security did not ex necessitate vitiate the whole loan, though the propriety of the transaction must be tested as if no such ingredient entered into it; (3) it was within the powers of the directors to accept a leasehold colliery as security for an advance; (4) as the rules of the society did not limit the directors to securities under which a legal estate would be vested in them, & the risk of foreclosure by the first mtgee. was one which a man of business & ordinary prudence might be willing to incur, the directors were not guilty of negligence in acting on the report of the surveyor, & taking a second mtge. as their principal security; & (5) the chairman, against whom the action came on in default of pleading to allegations that the advance was made upon improper security, was, but that the other directors were not, liable to make good to the society the loss of the sum advanced.—SHEFFIELD & SOUTH YORKSHIRE PERMANENT BUILDING SOCIETY v. AIZLEWOOD (1889), 44 Ch. D. 412; 59 L. J. Ch. 34; 62 L. T. 678; 6 T. L. R. 25.

113. First mortgage—Postponed to subsequent loan—Transaction ultra vires.]—A building society was prohibited by its rules from lending on property subject to any previous mtge., but had power to release any portion of a mortgaged estate if satisfied that the remainder would be a sufficient security. The society had lent H. £17,000 upon first mtge., & having exhausted its borrowing powers & being in want of cash, it entered into an arrangement under which H.

date of granting same, become liable for such a rate of interest as along with the interest allowed by the bank will amount to 5 per cent. until such member has received said advance, when he shall pay to the society interest thereon at the rate of 5 per cent. on the full amount of said advance; & all interest shall be payable at the terms of Martinmas & Whitsunday; & members failing to pay the same within fourteen days thereafter shall be charged interest thereon at 5 per cent. from the term of payment:—Held: the rule ceased to be operative when the society ceased to be a going concern.—NORTH BRITISH

k. Bank interest.]—A rule provided that any member holding a share, in respect of which no advance had been made, & which, by the subscriptions paid & the profits thereon, should have accumulated to £25 (the amount of said share), should be entitled to receive the amount thereof, with bank interest from the date of completion, & his connection with the society in respect of same should cease:—Held: there being no stipulation to the contrary, & as the funds of the society were operated on from day to borrowed £6,000 from an insurance co. upon the security of the property he had mortgaged to the society, & the society joined in the security & released the property so as to give the co. a first charge for £6,000. The £6,000 was paid to H. & handed over by him to the society, who credited him with the amount in part discharge of the £17,000:—Held: (1) the transaction was ultra vires the society, & its directors had no power to give the co. any charge in priority to that of the society; (2) the co. had no equity to claim equality for their mtge. with that of the society; & (3) the case was not one in which the ct. ought to impose any terms upon the society.—*PORTSEA ISLAND BUILDING SOCIETY v. SECT. 3.—CONSTRUCTION AND EFFECT OF MORTGAGES.

117. Implied covenant to pay — Payment of advance in instalments—Whole amount payable on default of three instalments.]—Pltfs., trustees of a building society, advanced to deft. £4,000, to be repaid by monthly instalments, & deft. by deed, for securing such payments & the observance of the rules of the society, demised certain leasehold premises to pltfs. It was agreed that upon non-payment of three successive instalments, or non-observance of the rules, pltfs. might sell the premises, & upon any sale the whole amount thereinbefore stipulated to be paid by instalments as aforesaid, & remaining unpaid, should be held immediately payable, & be retainable accordingly from the proceeds of sale, subject to such discount as the directors of the society for the time being might think proper to allow. Deft. also covenanted to pay the instalments. Upon non-payment by deft., pltfs. exercised their power of sale, & brought an action upon the deed to recover the whole of the difference between the proceeds of sale & the amount of unpaid instalments. Another deed for acquiring a further sum on the same terms incorporated all powers & authorities given by the first deed for recovery of the money thereby made payable:—Held: (1) the terms of the first deed implied a covenant to pay the whole amount upon non-payment of three instalments; (2) the terms of the second deed implied the same covenant.—SHERIFF v. GLENTON (1873), 28 L. T. 65; 37 J. P. 517.

118. Covenant to observe rules — Rules authorising society to consolidate mortgages—Binding on second mortgagee with notice.]—A mortgaged two leasehold plots of land, & the houses in course of erection thereon, to a building society to secure £500. On the same day he executed a second mtge. of the same property to B. Subsequently A. mortgaged three other plots of land & houses to the society to secure £600. B. had a charge on that property. The first mtge. contained a covenant by A. to observe all the rules of the society, one of which provided that if the society held more than one mtge. from any member, such member should not have power to redeem one property alone without the consent of the board. B. acted as A.'s solr. in the matter of the first mtge., & was the witness to his execution of it. A. became bkpt., & the society having taken possession of all the houses, B. brought a redemption action. The society claimed to consolidate their mtges. as against him:—Held: the covenant to observe the rules amounted to an express covenant that the society should have power to consolidate, & B. having notice of that covenant had expressly taken his mtge. subject to the risk of consolidation, & the society had a right to consolidate.—ANDREWS v. CITY PERMANENT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY (1881), 44 L. T. 641.

119. Right of liquidators to transfer mortgages—Without concurrence of mortgagors—Mortgages “to society” —“Society” including “successors & assigns.”]—In the winding up of a society the liquidators agreed to sell & transfer the mtge. securities held by the society, & the question arose whether the concurrence of the various mtgors. was necessary:—Held: this must be determined by the language of the mtge. securities themselves, & as the expression “the society” was defined in the society's mtges. as including its “successors & assigns,” where the context should so admit or require, the mtges. were transferable.—SUN BUILDING SOCIETY v. WESTERN SUBURBAN & HARROW ROAD BUILDING SOCIETY, [1920] 2 Ch. 144; 89 L. J. Ch. 492; 123 L. T. 423; 36 T. L. R. 536; 64 Sol. Jo. 549.

120. Set-off of subscriptions paid — Right of society to—Against repayments due under mortgage.]—A member of a building society obtained an appropriation of £500 in respect of certain shares, repayment of which was secured by mtge. to the society. He also continued his subscriptions after his appropriation. Afterwards he made default in his repayments under the mtge., & also discontinued his subscriptions. By the rules of the society he was then entitled to have his subscriptions placed to his credit in respect of his repayments under the mtge., but he made no request to that effect, & it was not done, but the society entered on the mortgaged estate, & sold

The member had mortgaged the equity of redemption in the mortgaged estate to A., & his other property, including the subscriptions, had been assigned to B.:—Held: as between A. & B. the doctrine of marshalling applied, & the repayments to the society must be apportioned ratably between the mortgaged estate & the subscriptions.—*MOXON v. 121. ——— Repayments not premature.]—Deft. society was registered under Building Societies Acts, & existed for the purpose of making advances to its members out of a fund, raised by means of the subscriptions of the members, upon the security of freehold, leasehold, or copyhold estates. Pltf. purchased four shares in deft. society, £25 being the full amount to be paid up by fortnightly subscriptions on each share. Under r. 32 of the rules any member having obtained an advance might elect to discontinue his subscriptions on his shares upon notice, & the amount of subscriptions already paid on such shares should be placed to his credit in his repayment account in respect of advances. By r. 27, if any member, having obtained an advance by sale, was desirous of terminating his engagements with the society, the amount of any of his subscriptions might be placed to the credit of his repayment account, subject to a deduction from same of 1 per cent. per annum upon the amount advanced, in addition to the amount of premium paid, for such time as he might use the advance, & if the amount paid for subscriptions should not be sufficient to pay the deduction, the difference should be paid by the member before the property was redeemed. Pltf. became entitled under the rules as a member to bid for an advance of £400, & bid £554 for an advance of £400, the repayment of the £554 to be by quarterly instalments in twelve & a half years. At the same time he discontinued his subscriptions on his shares, having paid £31 19s. 10d. upon them. Pltf., as security for the advance, mortgaged his house to defts. & handed them the title deeds. The instalments due upon the advance were regularly paid up to Oct., 1895, when pltf. gave defts. notice of his desire to repay the balance of his account. In Dec., 1895, he sent defts. a cheque for £10 13s. 10d., which made his repayments £554, after taking into account the £31 19s. 10d. paid upon his shares for which he was to be given credit. At that time there were still three instalments due, but pltf. claimed to set off against those future instalments the £31 19s. 10d., & then nothing remained due in respect of the advance. Defts. contended that under r. 27 pltf. must first be debited with a sum of 1 per cent. per annum upon the amount advanced, amounting to £47:—Held: r. 27 applied only to repayment of advances which took place prior to the period when such advances would fall to be paid off, & not to cases where the repayment was not premature.—WEEKES v. SOUTH LONDON EQUITABLE BUILDING SOCIETY (1897), 13 T. L. R. 291, C. A.

122. ——— Right of advanced member to—Against earliest instalments of advance payable—Weekly payments made before mortgage executed.]—Pltf., a member of a benefit building society represented by defts., applied for a loan of £250.

Notice having been given by the society that the money would be ready at the end of three months from the notice, pltf., in accordance with the rules, paid 12s. per week until a satisfactory security should be provided, & the weekly payments amounted to £16 4s. when the mtge. was eventually executed for £220. The rules further provided that a sum amounting to 10 per cent. upon the money advanced should be paid quarterly from the date of the mtge., but pltf. refused to pay the three first quarterly instalments, on the ground that they must be considered as satisfied by the previous weekly payments:—Held: the society were not justified in demanding the instalments without first setting off the £16 4s. paid previously.—INGLIS v. CAVE, [1869] W. N. 131.

123. Death of advanced member—Satisfaction of repayments due without recourse to subscriptions paid—Subscriptions payable to legal personal representative.]—A member of a building society obtained an advance on the security of certain property, which he subsequently conveyed to trustees. The member's shares in the society were not transferred to the trustees. The member made payments in part discharge of the mtge., but at his death there was a balance owing to the society. After his death the trustees sold the mortgaged property, & paid into ct. a sum sufficient to satisfy the balance of the mtge. debt, & they then claimed to have the amount standing to the credit of the deceased member's subscription account paid to them to recoup them the sum paid into ct.:—Held: the subscription money ought to be paid to the legal personal representative of the mtgor.—*Re BURTON, SCOTT v. 124. Determination of amount payable—Mortgage to terminating society—Payment of dues to end of estimated probable duration—Future payments treated as if due immediately.]—Pltf. became a member of & purchased twelve & a half shares in a building society, constituted under 1836 Act, & the society advanced £750 in respect of such shares, upon a conveyance of certain property to the trustees of the society by way of mtge. According to the rules of the society, 10s. per month subscription, & 4s. per month redemption money, were payable on each share until £120 per share should be realised for the non-purchasing members. On a bill against the trustees for redemption:—Held: upon the terms of the mtge. deed & the rules of the society, pltf. was entitled to redeem only upon payment of all the future subscriptions on his shares until the dissolution of the society, the probable duration of the society to be ascertained by calculation, & the future payments to be treated as if immediately due.—*MOSLEY v. 125. ——— Sums due or thereafter to become due.]—The owner of shares in a benefit building society gave a mtge. security on leaseholds for sums advanced to him by the society in respect of his shares. He subsequently claimed to be entitled to redeem the premises so mortgaged, upon the terms of repaying the amounts advanced to him by the society, less the amount of subscriptions which he had paid & the proportion of profits in the society to which he was entitled, & he instituted a suit for redemption:—Held: he was not entitled to redeem, except upon the terms of paying all sums which, according to the rules of the society were then due, or might, thereafter, become due during the probable duration of the society.—*SEAGRAVE v. 130. ——— Erroneous calculation by trustees.]—The calculation of a bonus in a benefit building society was made upon the assumption that the borrowing members were not to participate in the bonus, & the bonus declared was much larger than it ought to have been:—Held: a borrowing member redeeming was entitled to the bonus actually declared prior to his notice to redeem, but he was to be debited with all extra monthly charges & payments for the utmost possible prolongation of the society.—*ARCHER v. A. was thereby induced to mtge. his land for twenty years, the loan to be repayable on the instalment plan:—Held: he could

H. was also secretary of the society, & in that capacity had received & misapplied money belonging to the society. He had conveyed the equity of redemption in the mortgaged property to pltf., who claimed to redeem on payment of the mtge. debt, with interest, subscriptions, fines, & other payments due from H. as member. The society claimed in addition to that the amount which H. had embezzled, contending that it came within the words "other moneys":—Held: the words applied to debts ejusdem generis with what had been mentioned before, & the sums which H. had embezzled were not ejusdem generis with the mtge. debt, interest, & subscriptions, but were due from H. on a totally different contract, & the society could not insist upon pltf. paying such sums before redeeming the property.—BAILES v. 134. Effect of winding-up on right to redeem—Incorporated society—Redemption on payment of difference between advance & repayments with interest.]—A building society, registered under 1874 Act, had for its objects: (1) to form a good investment for investors; (2) to advance to shareholders money for building & other purposes, to a not greater extent than the amount of their shares, on their granting a bond for same over heritable security. The rules provided that the shares were to be limited to £25, that a shareholder who had not received an advance was to pay up his shares by monthly instalments, & when such instalments with profits amounted to £25 per share he was to be paid out. As to a member who had received an advance, it was provided that he should pay up his advance by monthly instalments on his shares with interest at the rate of 5 per cent. on the loan. It was also provided that members could withdraw on giving a month's notice. On withdrawal by an unadvanced member, he was to receive the whole instalments paid on his shares with interest. On withdrawal by a borrowing member, he was to pay up the whole of his debt, interest, & penalties, after deducting the amount of the monthly instalments paid upon his shares with interest calculated thereon. A. took shares for the sole purpose of obtaining an advance. He executed a bond in common form as security, & the society granted him a back-letter, to the effect that they agreed not to enforce the bond so long as the regular payments of the instalments, interest, & other sums due upon his shares were paid. A. regularly paid his instalments with interest charged on the whole sum lent. Losses having been incurred, the society was in Feb., 1880, ordered to be wound up voluntarily. There were no outside creditors. In July, 1880, A. gave notice, under the rules, of withdrawal to the liquidators, & claimed a discharge of his bond on his paying to them the difference between his loan & the amount in cumulo of the instalments paid by him, with interest added. The liquidators denied his right to withdraw after liquidation, unless he paid up the whole loan & left the instalments to be refunded according to the result of the liquidation:—Held: (1) the advance had pro tanto been extinguished by the total amount of the instalments paid by A.; (2) from & after the date of the winding-up order A. had a right to redeem his security by paying to the liquidators the difference between his advance & his instalments with interest added thereon as against excess of interest which he had been charged, & on payment of such difference, with interest thereon, he was entitled to be relieved of all further liability as a contributory or otherwise.—BROWNIE v. 135. — Unincorporated society—Right to redeem in accordance with rules.]—It was provided by the rules of a building society that any member who had given any property in security to the society might, on giving three months' notice, redeem same by renouncing the shares & paying the balance of the advance, & that, thereupon, his interest in the society should cease, or that when the subscriptions of any advanced member were equal to the amount of the advance, his payments on the shares & his connection with the society should cease. Losses having been incurred, the society, in May, 1882, ceased to carry on business, & in July, 1884, a winding-up order was made. One advanced member completed his repayments in June, 1883, & two others gave notice of withdrawal in April & May, 1882. There were no outside creditors:—Held: (1) the above members were entitled to redeem their securities in accordance with the rules, & to cease to be members of the society; (2) although the members were entitled to share profits, they were not bound to bear a share of the losses.—TOSH v. 137. Liability of redeeming member to contribute for losses—Rules apportioning losses between members generally—Redemption on payment of all additional charges.—The rules of an unincorporated building society, which was being wound up by the ct. provided that losses should be apportioned amongst the members generally, that any member who had made the full payment or repayment on his shares should remain in the society until he had made all additional payments or repayments allotted to him, & if he had mortgaged any property to the society for an advance on his shares such property should not be redeemable until all such additional charges had been paid:—Held: the proportion of the deficiency falling to each member who sought to redeem a mtge. must be paid by him before he could be allowed to do so.—Re ALBION MUTUAL PERMANENT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY (1888), 43 Ch. 138. Liability to contribute to losses of investing members.—A rule of a building society provided that, in the event of there being a deficiency of income by which the society might be prevented from meeting its anticipated expenditure & liabilities, the amount should be apportioned between the investing & borrowing members. Another rule provided that property mortgaged to the society to secure advanced shares should be so secured until the amount of such shares should be repaid to the society, with all fines & other payments incurred in respect thereof. Losses having occurred:—Held: (1) under the first rule "liabilities" included the sums due to the investing members in respect of their shares, & the borrowing members were liable to contribute ratably to any losses thereon incurred by the investing members; (2) under the second rule a borrowing member was not entitled to redeem his mtge., except on payment of what might be due from him in respect of his above-mentioned liability.—Re WEST RIDING OF YORKSHIRE PERMANENT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY (1890), 43 Ch. 139. Rules authorising deduction from sums standing to credit of members—Liability of advanced members to be debited with losses.—By r. 12 of a building society, the directors were empowered to deduct annually from the amount standing to the credit of any member such sum as might be necessary to meet the current expenses & contingencies of the society, in the event of the yearly profits being insufficient to meet such expenses & contingencies. Deft. became a member of the society in May, 1888. For some time prior to that date the secretary of the society had been misappropriating the money of the society, but his defalcations were not discovered until the following August. The current year of the society ended in October. Deft., on the discovery of such defalcations, sought to redeem a mtge. which he had received from the society. The society refused, & called upon him to make good his proportion of the loss resulting from the defalcations. Deft. then ceased to continue the payment of his subscriptions. In an action by the society for subscriptions & consequent fines, & deft.'s alleged proportion of the loss from such defalcations:—Held: deft. was liable to pay the subscriptions & fines, but was not liable to pay a proportionate loss from such defalcations.—DURHAM & NORTHUMBERLAND WORKING MEN'S PERMANENT BUILDING SOCIETY v. DAVIDSON (1892), 61 L. J. Q. B. 473; 67 L. T. 269; 56 J. P. 660; 8 T. L. R. 428, C. A.

141. Losses incurred after advance—Retention of mortgage as security.—In 1867, pltf., an advanced member of a building society, gave a mtge. to defts., the trustees of the society, to secure all such principal or interest money & other payments as he ought to pay according to the rules. Pltf. made all the required payments, the term of which expired in 1884. The rules of the society provided that when any advanced member had made all his payments during the term, they were to cease & the trustees were to return his title deeds & indorse a receipt, & on completion of his term the member was entitled to share in surplus profits. The rules were silent as to losses. After the advance to pltf. the society suffered losses, & defts. claimed to retain the mtge. as a security for the share of those losses, to which they contended pltf. was liable to contribute. The society was not incorporated under 1874 Act. There were no outside creditors, & the society was solvent. In an action by pltf. for (inter alia) a discharge of his mtge. & delivery up of his title deeds:—Held: pltf. could not be called on to contribute to losses, & was entitled to the relief claimed.—BUCKLE v. LORDONNY (1887), 56 L. J. Ch. 437; 56 L. T. 273; 35 W. R. 360; 3 T. L. R. 369.

142. — Advanced member of unincorporated society—Liability to contribute for ordinary debts—No further liability unless stipulated by rules.—Building societies are not governed by the doctrine of partnership, but by the doctrine of principal & agent, all the members being principals & the directors their agents. All members of a society not registered under 1874 Act are liable to contribute toward the payment of the ordinary creditors of the society, & there is no difference in this respect between advanced & unadvanced members. Unless the rules or the terms of their mtges. expressly exonerate them from liability, advanced members cannot redeem without contributing to ordinary debts. In the absence of any contract by the rules or otherwise to that effect, advanced members are not liable to make any further contribution to the losses of the unadvanced.—Re WEST LONDON & GENERAL PERMANENT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY, [1894] 2 Ch. 352; 63 L. 143. Costs of redemption action—Right of mortgagees to add costs of suit to security—Conduct not oppressive nor vexatious.]—The directors of a building society in answer to one of their members & mtgors. stated that £736 was due to the society on the mtge., the society having been for some years in possession. Soon afterwards the directors informed the mtgor. that they intended to sell the mortgaged property, they having power under the mtge. deed so to do. The mtgor. filed a bill to restrain the sale, & for redemption. The directors informed the mtgor. that they had no intention to press a sale. The mtgor. then proposed that a decree for the usual accounts should be taken, & a decree for an account was taken. The mtgor. carried in surcharges to the amount of £1,227 principally for fines & commission, which he claimed to have disallowed, but which were allowed to the mtgees., but the mtgees. were charged for certain occupation rents, & were disallowed charges for repairs, so that the amount due at the filing of the bill was found to be £517 instead of £736:—Held: there was nothing in the conduct of the mtgees. which would deprive them of the right to add their costs of the suit to their security.—*COTTERELL v. 144. — Taxation on lower scale—Mortgage under £1,000.]—A mtgor. received an advance of £900 from a building society, & conveyed to the society property to secure payment by him of £900 & interest in one hundred & twenty instalments, amounting together to £1,275, & also of certain fines & charges in the event of his failing to pay the instalments. A decree for redemption having been made, the costs of the suit to be added to the security:—Held: as the sum originally advanced was less than £1,000, the costs must be taxed on the lower scale, & the fines & charges which might be incurred could not for such purpose be considered as added to the sum advanced.—COTTERELL v. STRATTON (1874), 9 Ch. App. 514; 43 L. J. Ch. 573; 30 L. T. 589; 22 W. R. 607, L. J.

SECT. 5.—ENFORCEMENT OF MORTGAGE.SUB-SECT. 1.—SALE.

145. Power of sale—Whether exercisable—Statutory power incorporated in mortgage—Sale on default of performance of any covenant.]—By a building society's mtge. it was provided that if default should be made in the performance of any of the covenants, then the total sum for which the mtge. should then be redeemable should be considered as actually due & payable, & the power of sale given to mtgees. by Conveyancing & Law of Property Act, 1881 (c. 41), should apply & be exercisable by the trustees of the society. The mtgor. neglected to pay one of the instalments, & the trustees contracted to sell the property:

143 i. Costs of redemption action.]—Where a mtgor. seeking to redeem land alleged to have been sold by the mtgee., proved that the alleged sale was, on technical points, invalid, but his bill contained charges of fraud & collusion against the mtgee. & the purchasers which were not proved:—Held: though entitled to a redemption decree, he should pay the costs of both —Held: the statutory power of sale, whether applicable to a building society mtge. or not, was incorporated in the mtge. by the act of the parties, & as the money had become due, the power was exercisable.

The contract for sale was dated within less than three months of default, & no notice of the proposed sale had been given to the mtgor. nor to a second mtgee. under the above Act, s. 20 (1). The purchaser ascertained the want of notice, & required the concurrence of the mtgor., which was agreed to, & the second mtgee. was ready to do the same. The conditions of sale stated that the property was being sold by mtgees. under a power of sale, & that the assignment was to be taken without the concurrence of other parties:—Held: (1) if the mtgor. & second mtgee. had not waived the notice, they had waived the right to object to the want of it; (2) want of notice did not prevent the vendors from exercising their power of sale; (3) the purchaser would get the title he had contracted to take; (4) the vendors must bear the costs occasioned by the concurrence of the mtgor. & second mtgee.—Re THOMPSON & HOLT (1890), 44 Ch. D. 492; 59 L. J. Ch. 651; 62 L. T. 651; 38 W. R. 524.

146. — By whom exercisable—Power limited to trustees of society—Transfer of mortgage without concurrence of mortgagor.]—A member of a building society mortgaged property to the trustees of the society to secure repayment by instalments of an advance, & the mtge. deed empowered the trustees or trustee for the time being of the society, in case of default, to sell the mortgaged property. The mtge. was afterwards, without the concurrence of the mtgor., transferred to R., who was not a member of the society, & he put up the property for sale purporting to act under the power:—Held: the power of sale could not be exercised by any person other than the trustees or trustee for the time being of the society, & the vendor could not make a good title to the property.—Re RUMNEY & SMITH, [1897] 2 Ch. 351; 66 L. J. Ch. 641; 76 L. T. 800; 45 W. R. 678; 13 T. L. R. 479; 41 Sol. Jo. 607, C. A.

147. — Improper exercise of—Sale disadvantageous to mortgagor—No proof of fraud or undervalue.]—If a mtgee. exercises his power of sale bonâ fide for the purpose of realising his debt & without collusion with the purchaser, the ct. will not interfere, even though the sale be very disadvantageous, unless the price is so low as in itself to be evidence of fraud.

A. mtged. his interest in an agreement for a building lease to a building society. In erecting the buildings under the agreement, A. encroached on the land of an adjoining owner, & his landlords refused to grant him the lease, & his payments to the building society fell into arrear. A. entered into negotiations to procure a conveyance of the ground encroached upon. Pending, & with notice of such negotiations, the building society sold under their power of sale. A. brought an action to set aside the sale, alleging that the society had taken advantage of the difficulties about the lease to sell in collusion with the purchaser at a gross undervalue:—Held: there was nothing improper in the circumstances of the sale, & no proof that

148. — Sale to officer of society at auction—Invalidity as against mortgagor.—A building society, selling as mtgees. under their power of sale, put up property for sale by public auction. The secretary to the society knew all the circumstances of the sale, & in conjunction with the society's solr., arranged with the auctioneer about the sale, & personally took to the auctioneer the directors' instructions for the sale, & told him what the reserved price was to be:—Held: (1) the secretary was in the same position as to the purchase of the property as the mtgees. themselves, or their solr. or agent acting for them in the sale, & was unable to bid for, or buy, any of the lots at such sale, though stating at the time that he was buying on his own account; (2) a sale made to such secretary at the auction must, in the event of the mtgor. redeeming, be set aside.—MARTINSON v. CLOWES (1882), 21 Ch. D. 857; 51 L. J. Ch. 594; 46 L. T. 882; 30 W. R. 795; affd. (1885), 52 L. T. 706, C. A.

149. — Position of purchaser — Liability for — Fines for non-payment of instalments.—The mortgaged property of an advanced member of a building society became saleable in consequence of his default. The property was sold by the society to pltf., who took the forfeited shares, part of the purchase-money being payable by £20 instalments:—Held: he was liable, under the rules, to fines for non-payment of the instalments of the purchase-money.—HANDLEY v. FARMER (1861), 29 Beav. 362; 54 E. R. 667.

150. — Prior sale subject to equitable mortgage.—A member of a building society, in consideration of a sum of money to be advanced to him by instalments, deposited the deeds of certain houses of which he was lessee with a memorandum in writing engaging "to execute a mtge. deed to the society when called on." He afterwards executed a mtge. with power of sale. After the memorandum of agreement, but before the mtge., he sold the houses, "subject to the mtge." to A., who had notice of the agreement. The power of sale under the mtge. was subsequently exercised, & a question arose as to the title to the houses as between B., who purchased under the power, & A., who alleged that, at the time of his purchase, he had no notice that the mtge. would contain a power of sale:—Held: A. was bound by the terms of the mtge., & was trustee of the property for B.—LEIGH v. LLOYD (1865), 2 De G. J. & Sm. 330; 6 New Rep. 371; 34 L. J. Ch. 646; 12 L. T. 813; 13 W. R. 1054; 46 E. R. 403, L. C.

151. Application of proceeds of sale—Deduction of amounts due or becoming due—Rebate on account of future instalments.—A member of a benefit building society mortgaged property to the society. The mtge. deed provided, according to the rules, that the gross amount of principal & interest should be repaid by equal monthly instalments. The rules made a provision for a rebate, in the discretion of the directors, to a mtgor. making payments or redeeming in advance. Another rule provided that, upon three months' default in the monthly instalments, the society might sell the premises, & deduct from the proceeds all money due or to become due to them from the mtgor. That rule was silent as to any rebate. The mortgaged property having been sold by the society, upon the mtgor.'s default:—Held: the mtgor. could not claim any rebate in respect of the instalments which had not accrued due when the sale was made, & it was not in the nature of a penalty.—MATTERSON v. ELDERFIELD (1869), 4 Ch. App. 207; 20 L. T. 503; 33 J. P. 326; 17 W. R. 422, L. C.

152. — Retention of all subscriptions, fines & unpaid principal—Right to retain future interest.—A member of a permanent benefit building society obtained an advance in respect of his shares on his executing a mtge. in the form prescribed by the rules, by which he was to pay the principal & interest at 5 per cent. by monthly subscriptions extending over seven years. The deed contained a power of sale by the trustees of the society in case of default in payment of the subscriptions, & it was declared that the trustees should retain out of the purchase-money, after payment of expenses, all such subscriptions, fines, & other sums of money & payments which should be then due, or which

148 i. Power of sale—Improper exercise of—Sale to officer of society at auction—Invalidity as against mortgagor.—A building society advertised for sale the mortgaged property under their power. At the auction it was stated by the auctioneer that the price to be paid for the premises was to be over & above the amount of other mtge. debts against a portion of the same estate. One of the directors, who was also solr. to the society, bid off the property, though it afterwards appeared that he acted only as agent for a third party:—Held: the sale must be set aside & the mtgor. be allowed to redeem.—MONTGOMERY v. FORD (1855), 5 Gr. 210.—CAN.

1. — Different lands — Different mortgages—Sale in one lot.—Mtgees. having several powers of sale over different lands comprised in different mtges. are not authorised in selling all the lands in one lot; but such sale may be sanctioned where the mtgees.

clearly prove that a sale so made had been more advantageous to all parties concerned, than a sale in separate lots would have been.—ROSS v. VICTORIAN PERMANENT PROPERTY INVESTMENT BUILDING SOCIETY (1882), 8 V. L. R. 254.—AUS.

151 i. Application of proceeds of sale—Unpaid instalments—Deduction of amounts due or becoming due—Rebate on account of future instalments.—A member obtained from a building society as "advanced shares" a loan, repayable "by way of annuity" in thirteen years by monthly "subscriptions" or instalments of £30 each, together with certain fines in default of punctual payment. The loan was secured by a mtge. deed, whose terms were in accordance with those directed by a rule which stipulated that in case of the borrower being two months in arrear, the trustees might sell the mortgaged premises, & after paying all expenses, should "retain in trust for the society all repayments, fines, & other payments & sums then due to the society in respect of the said shares, & the then present value of future repayments to be made in respect of the shares calculated to the end of the term for which the said shares have been advanced, & which future payments shall be discounted after the rate of 5 per cent. per annum interest on such repayments upon the principle of repayments made at the end of each year." The mortgaged premises were subsequently sold, & the society claimed twenty-three months' instalments, which were then in arrear & the fines upon them, "the present value of future payments at 6 per cent. discount, as per rule":—Held: the society was entitled, in addition to arrears & fines, to the value, at the date of payment, of the future repayments in respect of the mtge., calculated from such date to the end of the term for which the mtge. was originally taken, subject to a rebate or discount at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum.—Re O'DONOHUE'S ESTATE (1876), 10 L. R. Eq. 221.—IR.

should afterwards become due, in respect of the shares during the remainder of the period of seven years, it being agreed that in case of any such sale, all the money which would at any time afterwards become due from the mtgor. in respect of the shares, according to the rules of the association, should be considered as then immediately due & payable, & should pay the residue of the purchase-money to the mtgor. The mtgor. paid a few of the subscriptions & then fell into arrear, & the mortgaged property was sold by the trustees:—Held: the trustees of the society were entitled to retain out of the proceeds of the sale all subscriptions & fines payable up to the time of the completion of the sale, & such further sum as represented the balance of the principal sum remaining at that time unpaid, but they were not entitled to any payment in respect of interest accruing after the principal had been all repaid.—Re GOLDSMITH, Ex p. OSBORNE (1874), 10 Ch. App. 41; 44 L. J. Bcy. 1; 31 L. T. 366; 39 J. P. 132; 23 W. R. 49, L. C. & L. JJ.

SUB-SECT. 2.—FORECLOSURE.

See 1874 Act, s. 13.

153. Right to foreclose—Mortgage in form of trust for sale.]—Property was conveyed by a member of a building society to the trustees, on trust for sale, to secure the money due to the society:—Held: the trustees were not entitled to a foreclosure, but to a decree for sale.—SCWETZER v. MAYHEW (1862), 31 Beav. 37; 54 E. R. 1051.

154. — Mortgage in respect of shares.]—A building society is entitled to foreclosure of mtges. to members made in respect of their shares, although the deeds & rules contain only powers of sale in case of default in payment of subscriptions.—INGOLDBY v. RILEY (1873), 28 L. T. 55.

155. — Consolidation of two mortgages—Default in respect of one.]—A building society had taken two mtges., dated respectively May 12, 1871, & Nov. 21, 1874, for distinct debts, which were to be repaid by monthly instalments extending over a period of twelve years. The mtgor. had become bkpt., & as to the 1874 mtge. default had been made. The 1871 mtge. had passed into the hands of a bank, which had paid all the monthly instalments already due, & had offered to compound the instalments still to fall due by an immediate payment. A declaration having been made that the building society was entitled to resist the redemption of the bank's mtge. alone, & had a right to consolidate & foreclose the two mtges.:—Held: the doctrine of consolidation could not be applied to a case where there had been no default with respect to one of two existing securities.—CUMMINS v. FLETCHER (1880), 14 Ch. D. 699; 49 L. J. Ch. 563; 42 L. T. 859; 28 W. R. 772, C. A. Annotations:—Consd. Harris v. Tubb (1889), 60 L. T. 699. Reid. Harter v. Colman (1882), 19 Ch. D. 630.

building society does not differ from that in the case of an ordinary mtge.—PROVIDENT PERMANENT BUILDING SOCIETY v. GREENHILL (1878), 9 Ch. D. 122; 38 L. T. 140; 42 J. P. 775; 27 W. 157. — Reference to rules of society.]—In a foreclosure action by a building society judgment was taken in the following form: "Account of what is due or payable to pltf. society under or by virtue of their security, regard being had to the redemption tables of the society, & for the costs of the action; in default of payment of the amount to be certified within six months from date of certificate to be due, foreclosure. Reference to chambers to appoint a receiver of the rents & of the leasehold premises."—BONEY v. CHARTER, [1887] W. N. 52.

158. — Inclusion of present & future subscriptions owing & payable—Account of mortgagor's share of profits of society.]—Where a building society is entitled to foreclosure of mtges. to members made in respect of their shares, although the deeds & rules contain only powers of sale in case of default in payment of subscriptions, etc., a decree for foreclosure in such a case properly includes an account of all subscriptions "due & owing & payable, & hereafter to become due & owing & payable," & an account of the mtgor.'s share of profits made by the society, if the rules provide for their distribution.—INGOLDBY v. RILEY (1873), 28 L. T. 55.

SUB-SECT. 3.—PROOF IN BANKRUPTCY.

159. Right to prove for premiums on advances—Insufficiency of mortgage—Principal, interest & premiums payable in instalments—Premium in nature of capital.]—A member of a building society borrowed from the society, on the security of a mtge., £1,200, for which he was to pay £144 premium & interest at 5 per cent. per annum. The principal, premium, & interest were made payable by the borrower to the society in a fixed number of monthly instalments, each of which consisted of principal, premium, & interest. The borrower having filed a liquidation petition, & the mtge. being insufficient:—Held: the premium was not in the nature of interest, & the society were entitled to prove for it in the liquidation.—*Re PHILLIPS, Ex p. t. Right to foreclose—Amount recoverable.]—Deft. subscribed for shares of stock & obtained an advance on mtge. to be repaid in monthly instalments according to the rules. The instrument was to become void on performance by the mtgor. of his obligations by payment of subscriptions & other sums to be paid from time to time according to the rules.

The mtge. contained no provision by which the principal became due in any other way than by the monthly payments; but, by the rules, in the event of default of payment of interest, dues, etc., for a period of two months, the whole amount borrowed became at once due & payable without further notice:—Held: the amount for which pltf. could foreclose must be limited to the amount due for monthly payments to the time of sale; to be computed mtge. to a banking company. A building society agreed to pay off the first mtge., & to make a further advance, having no notice of the second mtge., & by a deed indorsed on the first mtge. deed, the first mtgees. reconveyed to the mtgor., & by another deed he conveyed the land to the building society to secure repayment of the sum aid to the first mtgees., & the further advance :-

as the legal estate had passed by a reconveyance & not by a receipt under 1874 Act, s. 42, it was vested in the building society, & gave them priority over the second mtgees.—CARLISLE BANKING CO. v. THOMPSON (1884), 28 Ch. D. 398; 53 L. T. 115; 33 W. R. 119.

161. — Costs of—Allowance of.]—On an ordinary taxation the taxing master disallowed the costs of a deed of reconveyance from a benefit building society of property in a registered county, thinking that a receipt was sufficient under 1836 Act, s. 5:—Held: his decision was wrong.—RE PAGE (No. 2) (1863), 32 Beav. 485; 55 E. R. 190.

162. Statutory receipt—Vesting of legal estate in prior mortgagee.]—Property was mortgaged to a building society, & afterwards to A. The mtgor. borrowed money from B. to pay off the building society, which was done on Sept. 4, & a receipt was indorsed on the mtge. Fourteen days afterwards, the mtgor. executed a new mtge. to B.:—Held: the legal estate vested, under 1836 Act, in A., & not in B.—PROSSER v. RICE (1859), 28 Beav. 68; 54 E. R. 291.

163. — Vesting of legal estate in person best entitled—Right to tack further advances.]—A member of a building society having made a mtge. to the trustees of the society & a subsequent equitable charge in favour of plffs., requested defts. to pay off the first mtge. That was done, & the receipt of the trustees was indorsed upon the first mtge. & the title deeds handed over to defts., & the mtgor. at the same time executed a mtge. of the property to defts., who had no notice of plffs.' charge:—Held: (1) defts. had the better equity; (2) on the satisfaction of the first mtge. the legal estate in the property was vested, by virtue of 1836 Act, s. 5, either in the original mtgor. or in the parties who had the best right to call for it, in either of which cases it had passed to defts.

Defts. at the time of paying off the first mtge. made a further advance, which was included in the mtge. to them:—Held: they were not entitled to tack that.—PEASE v. JACKSON (1868), 3 Ch. App. 576; 37 L. J. Ch. 725; 32 J. P. 757; 17 W. R. 1, L. C.

164. — — — — —.]—A. being possessed of houses held by two under-leases borrowed money from a building society, & in order to secure repayment demised the houses to the society by two leases, each ten days short of the term out of which it was derived. A. afterwards obtained an assignment of the lease which had been granted to his own lessor, & then, concealing the mtge. of the under leases, mortgaged the houses to B. for a term one day short of the original lease. Subsequently, C. paid off the building society, & made a further advance to A. C. at the same time took from the building society a receipt in conformity with 1836 Act, & from A. by way of mtge. two leases similar to those which had been granted to the building society. B. on discovering C.'s mtge., commenced an action of ejectment against A. & C. for breaches of covenants contained in the leases to C.:—Held: the action must be restrained, C. being entitled to priority over B. in respect of the sum paid to the building society, though not in respect of the further advance.—*LAWRENCE v. .., the lessee of a term, in Nov., 1865, mortgaged it to the trustees of a building society of which he was a member, to secure payment by him of all money which might become due from him pursuant to the rules of the society. In Sept., 1868, A. again mortgaged it to plff. to secure £70 then due from him to plff., & such further sums as should thereafter be advanced by plff. Notice of the mtge. to plff. was not given to the building society. Previously to June, 1875, A. applied to defts. to advance to him £150 on the security thereof. He informed them that the property was subject to the mtge. to the building society, but was not subject to any other incumbrance. In July, 1875, defts. paid to the trustees of the building society £57 18s. 11d., being the full amount due from A., & thereupon the trustees, under 1836 Act, s. 5, signed a receipt indorsed on the deed of mtge. to the society, acknowledging that all money intended to be secured by the mtge. to the building society, had been paid. In the same month defts. paid to A. £92 1s. 1d., being the balance of the £150 agreed to be advanced, & thereupon he executed a mtge. of the term to defts. to secure payment of the £150. A. afterwards became insolvent. An action for foreclosure having been brought in a county ct., the judge, by his decree, declared that the hereditaments were subject (1) to a charge of what might be due to defts. in respect of the £57 18s. 11d. paid by them to the building society, (2) to a charge of what might be due to plff. by virtue of the mtge. to him, (3) to a charge of what might be due to defts. on the security of their mtge., so far as same might not be included in the first charge:—Held: (1) (BRETT, M.R., & BOWEN, L.J.) the case fell within Pease v. Jackson, No. 163, ante; (2) BAGGALLAY, L.J. on the authority of Pease v. Jackson, No. 163, ante, defts. had the better equity, & the better right to call for the legal estate, & the legal estate in the property comprised in the mtge. to the building society had vested in defts. by virtue of the indorsed receipt, but the security acquired by defts. by reason of the legal estate becoming vested in them did not extend beyond the amount advanced by them to pay off the building society, & should be allowed to do so on payment of all repayments, fines, or other sums due in respect thereof up to the time of redemption & of the present value of future repayments, calculated to the end of the term, & discounted at such rate of interest & on such terms as the directors might determine:—Held: the society had the right to say upon what terms future repayments should be computed, & could insist on repayment of the whole amount of the mtge., which included the principal sum & interest for the whole period the mtge. had to run.—WESTERN CANADA LOAN & SAVINGS SOCIETY v. HODGES (1875), 22 Gr. 566.—CAN.

quently P. purported to transfer to S. the mortgaged premises, in consideration of a loan, S. agreeing to accept the mtge. The trustees of the building society subsequently indorsed, upon the mtge. deed, a receipt for the money secured thereby:—Held: the receipt of the trustees so indorsed was effectual, under 1836 Act, s. 5, to pass the legal estate to S.—*STAMERS v. Upon being so paid off the building societies indorsed on their respective mtges. receipts to the mtgor. in accordance with s. 5, & delivered the indorsed deeds with the title deeds to applts. Neither the building societies nor applts. had any notice of resps.' mtge. The mtgor. had prior to the payment to the building society conveyed one house in fee to deft., who was ignorant of the mtge. to the society, & he at once took possession of it, but pltf. knew nothing of the sale & purchase:—Held: in accordance with previous decisions, though not agreeing with them, the effect of the indorsed receipt was to vest the legal estate in pltf., & to give him, to the extent of the money paid to the society & the interest thereon, priority over deft.'s claim.—SANGSTER v. 169. ———.]—The statutory receipt given by a building society under 1874 Act, s. 42, on payment off of a legal mtge. vests the legal estate in the person having the best right to call for a conveyance thereof. A third party who pays off a legal mtge. at the request of the mtgor. has prima facie a better right than the mtgor. to call for a conveyance, & becomes, in default of evidence of intention to the contrary, entitled in equity to stand in the shoes of the mtgee. The mere fact that as part of the same transaction the mtgor. executes in favour of the third party a memorandum of equitable charge containing an agreement to give a legal mtge. when called upon does not abrogate this prima facie right.

In 1902 D. mortgaged freeholds to a building society. In June, 1905, D.'s bankers, at his request, paid off the mtge. The building society delivered the title deeds other than the mtge. deed to the bank, & D. executed in favour of the bank a memorandum of equitable charge containing an agreement to execute a legal mtge. when called upon. Shortly afterwards the building society handed the mtge. deed to the bank, indorsed with the receipt authorised by s. 42. The receipt was dated the day of payment off, though in fact executed afterwards. In Nov., 1905, by means of forged title deeds, D. obtained an advance from defts.' predecessor in title, & executed what purported to be a legal mtge. of the property to him. In 1906 pltf. paid off the money owing to the bank. D. executed a mtge. of the property to them, & the bank handed them the title deeds, but did not convey the legal estate to them. Pltf. were in ignorance of the transaction with defts.' predecessor, & he was ignorant of the bank's claim when he advanced his money to D.:—Held: the statutory receipt operated to vest the legal estate in the bank, & the bank's mtge. was still alive for the purpose of giving pltf., as having the best right to call for the legal estate, priority over the incumbrance vested in defts.—CROSBIE-HILL v. 170. ——— Whether final discharge of mortgagor's liabilities.—By the rules of a benefit building society a subscription of 10s. a share per month was payable from Sept., 1845, until the objects of the society were fully accomplished. One of those objects was the formation of a fund, from which money might be advanced to the shareholders to enable them to purchase freehold or leasehold property, & they were declared to be entitled to receive the sums mentioned in certain tables. One of the tables stated the amount which a shareholder was entitled to receive on each share for thirteen years, viz. £60 during the first year, £120 at the end of the thirteenth year,

b. Whether final discharge — Arrears of interest.—The granting by a member of a building society incorporated under 1874 Act, of a heritable bond in security of an advance to him by the society does not supersede the rule of the society in regard to the advance, & that a discharge of the bond & of all interest thereon does not import a discharge of an obligation under the rules of the society to pay 10 per cent. upon arrears of interest

& sums varying between them in the intermediate years. The rules also declared that the advance should be secured by a mtge., & that if any shareholder should be desirous of satisfying the security he should be at liberty to do so, "by paying the subscriptions that would have become due on the shares advanced, up to the end of the thirteenth year"; also, that when the £120 for each unadvanced share, with all the expenses & liabilities of the company, should be fully realised, the society should terminate. In June, 1851, deft., the owner of four shares, received an advance of £280, & executed a mtge. deed, in which he covenanted to pay the subscriptions & interest payable on his shares according to the rules of the society. The society sustained losses, & at the end of the thirteenth year there were not sufficient funds to pay the unadvanced shareholders £120 a share:—Held: (1) deft. was entitled to redeem his property in July, 1858, the thirteen years not terminating until the following Sept., but, notwithstanding such redemption, his liability to the payment of the monthly subscriptions continued so long as there was not realised £120 per share for the unadvanced shares; (2) the covenant in the mtge. deed extended to the payment of the subscriptions subsequent to the thirteen years, & might be sued upon, although the security was vacated.—*FARMER v. He afterwards conveyed the property to deft., subject to the mtge., & deft. covenanted to pay all subscriptions & other payments to become due in respect of pltf.'s shares by the rules of the society. The shares were not assigned, but remained in the name of pltf. By one of the rules, the managers were to have power to determine the amount of money to be paid by any mtgor. in full for the claims of the society upon his property, on payment of which the shares in respect of which the security might be made should be wholly extinguished. The society having resolved that members might redeem their mtges. on payment of so much per share, deft. paid the amount, & the usual receipt was indorsed on the mtge. deed:—Held: pltf.'s shares were thereby extinguished, & pltf. released from any further liability to the society, & deft. could not be called on under the covenant to pay to pltf. money which he had paid to the society in respect of the shares subsequently, in consequence of the sum fixed by the managers for the payment in full not being found sufficient to meet the exigencies of the society.—*PRIESTLEY v. In Dec., 1892, C., the solr. who acted for the society & also for H., & after H.'s death, for N., having fraudulently represented to the society that notice to pay off their mtge. had been given, procured the statutory receipt to be indorsed on the mtge., & obtained possession of the title deeds of the property. The money owing to the society was never paid off, N. at that time being unaware of the existence of the mtge. N. shortly afterwards agreed to sell the property to C., & by a deed of Dec. 29, 1892, which recited the trust for sale in H.'s will, N. in consideration of £700 paid to him by C. at or before the execution of the deed the receipt whereof N. thereby acknowledged, conveyed the property to C. in fee. The purchase-money was not in fact paid. The conveyance & the other title deeds, except the mtge. & the statutory receipt, were shortly afterwards deposited by C. with pltf. as security for an advance of £650. In 1893 C. was adjudicated bkpt., his frauds were discovered, & he was convicted & sentenced:—Held: (1) the society were entitled in the circumstances to show that they had never been paid off; (2) the statutory receipt & the mtge. were delivered only as an escrow, & the mtge. not having been paid off, & the legal estate being still in the society, they had priority over pltf.—*LLOYDS BANK, LTD. v. 179. ——— Draft to bearer drawn by member on society—For amount due on withdrawal.]—By the rules of a benefit building society, its members were holders either of completed shares of £30, or of uncompleted shares of £30, to be paid up by monthly instalments. A notice of twenty-eight days was to be given by any member wishing to withdraw his shares, who was, at the same time, to leave his pass-book at the office, & if at any time the money in hand was not sufficient to pay all the members wishing to withdraw, they were to be paid in rotation according to the priority of their notices. By the practice of the society, members holding completed shares were allowed to withdraw only whole shares, but members holding uncompleted shares were allowed to withdraw the whole or any part of the money standing to the account of the shares. Interest was paid half-yearly on completed shares, but not on uncompleted shares. The mode of withdrawing shares, whether completed or uncompleted, was by the member giving notice of withdrawal, upon which he was furnished with a form of request for a draft, on the receipt of which request, signed by him, a draft for the amount was forwarded to him, made payable to bearer. The drafts were usually paid within a week of the notice to withdraw. Drafts payable to bearer were forwarded half-yearly to the holders of completed shares, in respect of the interest due on the shares, without any previous request:—Held: such drafts were liable to stamp duty, not being within the protection of 1836 Act, s. 4, & Friendly Societies Act, 1829, s. 37.—A.-G. v. K. had been the occupier of the cottage & premises as tenant to the owner thereof, who, being a member of the society, had mortgaged same to the trustees of the society as security for an advance made to him out of the funds of the society. At the time the receipt was given the mtge. was in force, & the member had made default in the payments by the deed covenanted to be made by him to the trustees, who had entered into the receipt of the rents, & K. had attorned tenant to the trustees:—Held: the receipt was liable to stamp duty, & was not exempt by reason of 1836 Act, s. 4, & Friendly Societies Act, 1829, s. 37.—A.-G. v. 183. Income tax—Right of advanced member to deduct—From present & future repayment—On sum representing interest.]—W. borrowed from a building society a sum of money on mtge. of certain property. The advance was repayable over a term of years by periodical instalments covering principal, interest, & charges for working expenses. W. regularly made the repayments in respect of his advance until his death, which occurred some time prior to 1881. In that year the executors of W. applied to the society for liberty to deduct income tax from such repayments. The directors of the society stated that they had nothing to do with the question of income tax as payable upon property upon which the society had made advances, & that the repayments must be paid in full in accordance with the society's rules. Shortly afterwards the society was ordered to be wound up. In 1885 the executors of W. applied to the official liquidators of the society to allow them to deduct income tax from the repayment falling due that month, not only in respect of that repayment, but also of all repayments since 1877. That was refused, on the ground whatever might be the law on the subject of income tax, that part which represented income tax due prior to the winding-up of the society could not be deducted, as any claim in respect of it must be proved in the ordinary way as a claim in the winding-up. In the result, the executors, under protest by the liquidators, deducted income in respect of repayments made since 1877. No mention of income tax was contained in the society's rules, & the society, whilst a going concern, invariably refused to allow advanced shareholders to deduct anything from the repayments in respect of income tax. A summons having been taken out on behalf of the liquidators asking that the executors of W. might be ordered to pay the sum which they had deducted for income tax :—Held : the executors were entitled to deduct income tax in respect of the present repayment, & also from future repayments, but only upon so much thereof as represented interest, but they could not be allowed to deduct anything for income tax in respect of past repayments.—*Re MIDDLESBROUGH, REDCAR, SALTBURN-BY-THE-SEA, & CLEVELAND DISTRICT PERMANENT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY, Ex p. 184. — Liability of society to pay—Interest received from borrowing member by instalments—No deduction by borrower.]—A benefit building society lent money to borrowing members at a fixed rate of interest, & took from them a security on their property. The repayment of the loans was by weekly payments of a fixed sum in respect of principal & interest, the proportion of interest to principal in each payment decreasing as time went on, & the principal remaining due decreased. No deduction was allowed to be made by the borrower in respect of income tax. The society were assessed to income tax under Schedule D, on the interest they received as being interest of money within Income Tax Act, 1853 (c. 34), s. 2 :—Held : the expression "interest of money" in s. 2 was not restricted to annual interest, & the interest received by the society was not in respect of a loan on land but of a contract relating to interest of money lent, & was assessable in their hands to income tax.—*LEEDS PERMANENT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY v. 185. Limitation on borrowing power—Method of calculation in case of permanent society—“Amount secured to society by mortgages from members”—What included.]—In ascertaining the amount for the time being secured to a building society by mtges. from its members within 1874 Act, s. 15 (2), such amount is not to be limited merely to the amount of principal secured, but covers all loans due on the members' securities at the time of the loans to the society, whether for principal, or interest, or fines, or otherwise, & all instalments not then accrued due, but secured by the mtge. & outstanding. In ascertaining the amounts advanced out of an ultra vires loan on security the whole amount secured is to be included, although a commission was charged for the advance & deducted from it.—*NEATH BUILDING SOCIETY v. 186. — “Total amount borrowed & not repaid by society.”—In calculating the extent of a building society's borrowing power, as limited by 1874 Act, s. 15 (2), “the total amount borrowed & not repaid by the society” is not to be taken as reduced by sums secured to the society from non-members ; & the amount “secured to the society by mtges. from its members” need not have been advanced to them on the value of their shares.—*Re WEST RIDING OF YORKSHIRE PERMANENT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY, Ex p. 193. ———.]—A benefit building society with £100 shares was, by one of its rules, authorised to borrow money for the purposes of the society, & in 1853 A. advanced £300 to the society upon a promissory note. In 1861 it was desired to reduce the shares from £100 to £10, & by way of effecting that object a new society was formed, which purported to take over the assets & liabilities of the old society. The interest on the £300 was regularly paid, first by the old, & afterwards by the new society. The new society having been ordered to be wound up, A. claimed to be paid the £300 out of the assets:—Held: the above rule of the old society was, ultra vires, as a rule authorising unlimited borrowing.—Re LIVERPOOL & DISTRICT PERMANENT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY, MCCONNAN'S CLAIM (1871), 15 Sol. The society received large sums of money on deposit from persons who were not members:—Held: the rule authorising the borrowing of money was bad, &

the deposits did not create debts upon which the society could be sued.—Re PROFESSIONAL, COMMERCIAL, & INDUSTRIAL BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY (1871), 6 Ch. App. 856; 25 L. T. 397; 19 W. R. 1153, L. J.

The rules contained no borrowing power, but in August, 1867, an alteration in the rules, giving the directors "power from time to time to borrow for the purposes of the society such sums & at such rates of interest & under such terms & conditions as they might think proper & expedient," was certified by the barrister:—Held: the borrowing power conferred by such altered rule was strictly limited to the purposes of the society as stated in the first rule, & persons who had lent to the directors money, which was employed in a loan to another society, could not enforce their claim under the winding-up of the

In 1911 the society was ordered to be wound up, & questions of priority arose between the outside creditors, the unadvanced shareholders, & the bank customers on current & deposit account, for convenience called the depositors. The assets were insufficient for payment of all the claimants in full but were more than sufficient for payment of the outside creditors, who were subsequently paid by arrangement, & the shareholders:—Held: (1) the power to borrow must be limited to borrowing for the proper objects of the society, & the carrying on of the banking business was ultra vires; (2) the depositors were not entitled to recover money paid by them on an ultra vires contract of loan on the footing of money had & received by the society to their use.—*SINCLAIR v. Right to make repayment conditional—Production of loan pass-book by lender or person authorised—Condition precedent to repayment.—A. lent money to a building society upon the terms, in writing, that the sum lent should be repayable after the lender had given notice of his intention to withdraw it, & that no money would be paid out by the society except on production by the lender, personally or by some one with his written authority, of a loan pass-book given to him when the loan was made:—Held: the condition as to the production of the book was a condition precedent to the liability of the society to repay the money, & until that condition had been complied with, Stat. Limitations did not begin to run against the lender.—ATKINSON v. BRADFORD THIRD EQUITABLE BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY (1890), 25 Q. B. D. 377; 59 L. J. Q. B. 360; 62 L. T. 857; 38 W. R. 630, C. A.

Pltf. gave notice of withdrawal of his deposit, but at the time when such notice was given other depositors had already given notice of withdrawal of their deposits, so that when pltf.'s notice matured the society had not sufficient funds in hand to pay pltf.'s claim. In an action by pltf. to recover the amount of his deposit:—Held: (1) the meaning of the condition was that the society might postpone payment & the depositors' right to recover their deposits until there was an "available balance in hand" sufficient to pay depositors in rotation according to the priority of their notices of withdrawal, & as it was proved that at the time when the action was brought the society had no such available balance in hand, pltf. was not entitled to succeed; (2) the expression "available balance in hand" contained in the condition included not merely money actually in the hands of the society, but also money which without undue loss or delay could be realised, e.g. money invested in Consols or any other

207. ——— Power of directors to pledge personal credit of members—Rule ultra vires.]—One of the rules of a building society provided that the society was established for the purpose of raising by monthly subscriptions & deposits on loans a fund to make advances to members of the value of their shares, etc. Another rule provided that at the end of every five years a general account of the affairs of the society should be prepared, showing the gross receipts & expenditure & liabilities, & that if on taking the accounts there appeared to be a deficiency of income, by which the society might be prevented from meeting its anticipated expenditure & liabilities, the amount of such deficiency should be equitably & equally apportioned by the directors between the investing

& borrowing members, & be paid forthwith by such monthly or quarterly instalments as the directors should determine:—Held: the last rule did not enable the directors to pledge the individual credit of the members to the lenders of money to the society, but even if it did, & was thus ultra vires, as being inconsistent with the nature of a building society, that rule might be rejected, leaving the borrowing power unaffected.—Re MUTUAL AID PERMANENT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY (1885), 30 Ch. Eventually pltf. recovered judgment in an action on her bond in the Ch. Div., & subsequently treating her bond as a mtge., commenced an action for foreclosure against the society. While that action was pending, a petition was filed & an order made for winding up the society in a county ct. Upon application of pltf., the county ct. judge refused leave to continue the foreclosure action:—Held: the bond was not a mtge., & a foreclosure action could not be maintained upon it.—*ANDREW v. 210. ——— ——— ———.]—The directors & trustees of a building society, to secure a loan, gave a charge on the assets of the society. The charge was given in accordance with a rule, whereby the directors were empowered to borrow money for the society either as representing the society & binding its assets, or on their own personal security by bond or promissory note, in which case the assets were to be charged with payments by them. The assets of the society included mtges. of real estate, & in some cases the society had foreclosed & were in possession:—Held: the charge was only a security by way of promise to pay by the society, & not a charge by way of mtge., & did not pass an interest in land within Mortmain Acts.—*Re GOULDEN, WALMSLEY v. 211. ——— Funds of society appropriated for repayment of loan—Good equitable assignment.]—Pltf. advanced money to a building society, for repayment of which the funds & property of the society were made liable, & brought an action for a receiver & declaration of charge. The society alleged that pltf. had no cause of action as a secured creditor, & moved to stay proceedings:—

Held: the funds of the society being appropriated for repayment of the loan, there was a good equitable assignment, & a good cause of action.—BAKER v. LANDPORT & MID-SOMERSET BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY (1912), 56 Sol. Jo. 224.

214. — Deeds deposited at bank for overdraft—Right of bank to retain deeds as security for repayment.—A benefit building society which had no power to borrow money, was allowed by its bankers to make large overdrafts. In 1876 a memorandum was signed by the officers of the society & confirmed by the directors, stating that certain deeds of borrowing members which had been deposited with the bankers were deposited not only for safe custody, but as a security for the balance from time to time. In 1881 an order for winding up the society was made, & the bankers claimed to retain the deeds as security for the balance of their account. No evidence was given as to the application of the money which was drawn out by the society, but it was admitted that some part was applied in payment of members withdrawing from the society, & the remainder in payment of salaries, legal expenses, & expenses of mortgaged property. The Ct. of Appeal decided (1) the overdrafts were ultra vires; (2) the bankers were not creditors of the society in respect of the overdrafts, but they were entitled to hold the deeds as a security for repayment of so much only of the money advanced by them as was applied in payment of the debts & liabilities of the society properly payable & had not been repaid to the bankers, excluding payments to withdrawing members; (3) the burden of proving that lay on the bankers, & in satisfying that burden the bankers could not have the benefit of the rule in Clayton's Case, Devayne v. Noble (1816), 1 Mer. 57; & the ct. made an order directing inquiries, with a declaration that in making the inquiries the bankers were to be charged with all sums received by them on account of the society since it ceased to have any balance to its credit with the bankers, & that they were not to be allowed any sums advanced by them since that date which were applied in making payments to withdrawing members or otherwise than in paying such debts & liabilities of the society as aforesaid. The bankers having appealed against the order:—Held: without expressing any opinion upon the question of payments to withdrawing members, or the bankers' right to hold the securities, the decision & order of the Ct. of Appeal were in other respects right.—BROOKS & Co. v. terminated on Apr. 11, 1884. There was no power for the trustees of the society to borrow, but defts., with the assent of pltfs. & other members of the society, borrowed money for the purposes of the society. Defts. claimed to stand in the place of the persons to whom they had made payments, for which the society was liable, out of the borrowed money:—Held: (1) if any of the officers of the society had made any payments for which the society was liable, there not being any money of the society out of which such payments could be made, such officers were entitled to stand in the place of the persons to whom such payments were made, & to maintain a claim against the society for the amount of such payments; (2) an inquiry should be directed, whether any & what payments had been made within the above declaration, & whether any & what liabilities under r. 34 were still outstanding.—*OWEN v. 216. — Deposit note given after incorporation—In exchange for promissory notes given previously.]—Directors of an unincorporated building society, which had no borrowing powers, gave their own promissory notes for money lent for the benefit of the society. Afterwards the society was incorporated under 1874 Act, & then the directors gave the lender a deposit note for the same amount in lieu of the promissory notes. The society being wound up:—Held: the deposit note was not binding on the society, as the directors had no authority to borrow money.—Re COMPANIES ACTS, Ex p. WATSON (1888), 21 Q. B. 217. — Joint & several promissory note of trustees.]—The rules of a building society authorised the trustees to borrow money for the purposes of the society, the amount not to exceed two-thirds of the amount for the time being secured by mtges. to the society. The trustees of the society borrowed £50 from pltf. & gave him a joint & several promissory note. When the loan was made the society was registered under 1836 Act, & subsequently it was incorporated under 1874 Act. The society paid the interest on the note until pltf. gave notice for repayment of the principal, when the secretary of the society wrote a letter admitting that the money was on deposit with the society, & subsequently paid £25 on account:—Held: notwithstanding the trustees were liable on the note, there was evidence that the money was lent to the society, & as the loan, although made before incorporation, had been made in accordance with the old rules, the society, by reason of 1874 Act, s. 15, was liable.—HEATH v. KIDSGROVE PERMANENT BUILDING SOCIETY (1887), 82 L. T. Jo. 449.

218. Ultra vires banking business—Sums owing from customer with credit balance—Set-off.]—Deft. occupied offices belonging to pltf. society, & he was also a customer of the society in the banking business carried on by them. The society went into liquidation in June, 1911, & at that time there was rent for two quarters due by deft. for the offices occupied by him. An arrangement was made in Sept., 1911, by the liquidator of the society & deft. for a set-off, against the amount of rent due, of £38 3s. 3d., the amount of the dividends in the liquidation to which deft. was entitled on his current account. In Nov., 1911, it was decided by the High Ct. that the banking business carried on by the society was ultra vires, & that none of their customers could rely on any legal liability on the part of the society towards them. After that decision the official receiver refused to allow any set-off against the rent due from deft. & sued for the full amount. Deft. set up the arrangement of Sept., 1911, as a defence:—Held: there was no consideration for an agreement by way of set-off, since by the High Ct. decision of Nov., 1911, there was no debt due from the society to deft. at the time the arrangement was made.—BIRKBECK BUILDING SOCIETY v. BIRKBECK (1913), 29 T. L. R. 218, D. C.

219. — Recovery of overdraft to customer.]—The liquidator of a building society, which as part of its operations had carried on a banking business, subsequently held by the ct. to be ultra vires, brought an action for money had & received against deft., a customer of the bank, to recover a sum in respect of overdrafts due from him. Deft. set up the defence that the contract under which the money was advanced to him was ultra vires & that the money was not recoverable:—Held: the contract, being ultra vires, was one which the society was not competent to enter into, & did not exist in point of law, but there being nothing illegal or wrong in it, defts. had no answer to an action for money had & received.—BROUGHAM v. DWYER (1913), 108 L. T. 504; 29 T. L. R. 234, D. C.

220. — Right to follow assets after payment of outside creditors—Distribution pari passu.]—A building society formed in 1851 under 1836 Act, & empowered by its rules to borrow to an unlimited extent, started & developed a banking business. In 1911 the society was ordered to be wound up, & questions of priority arose between the outside creditors, the unadvanced shareholders, & the bank customers on current & deposit account, for convenience called the depositors. The assets were insufficient for payment of all the claimants in full, but were more than sufficient for payment of the outside creditors, who were subsequently paid by arrangement, & the shareholders:—Held: the assets remaining after payment of the outside creditors must be taken to represent in part money which the depositors could follow, as having been invalidly borrowed, & in part money which the society could follow, as having been wrongfully employed by its agents in the banking business, & subject to any application by any individual depositor or shareholder with a view to tracing his own money into any particular asset, & to the costs of the liquidation, ought to be distributed pari passu between the depositors & the unadvanced shareholders according to the amounts respectively credited to them in the books of the society at the commencement of the winding-up.—*SINCLAIR v. 221. Personal liability of directors—Incorporated society—Loans in excess of prescribed limits—Secretary acting with authority of directors.]—

A building society was authorised to receive money on deposit up to a certain limit. The course of business authorised by the directors was, that the secretary gave a provisional receipt to the depositor, & then prepared a formal receipt, which was signed by two directors & countersigned by himself. The secretary received money on deposit to an amount exceeding the limit of the borrowing powers of the society. He appropriated to his own use a great part of the money deposited, & so managed the books of the society as to keep the directors in ignorance that the limit had been exceeded. In an action by a depositor against the directors to recover the amount of a deposit made after the limit of the borrowing powers had been reached:—Held: every director who was a member of the board when the deposit was received was personally liable for the amount so received.—CROSS v. FISHER, [1892] 1 Q. B. 467; 61 L. J. Q. B. 609; 66 L. T. 448; 56 J. P. 372; 40 W. R. 265; 8 T. L. R. 220; 36 Sol. Jo. 198, C. A.

222. ——— Amount not exceeding alternative limits.]—By the rules of a terminating society the amount to be received upon deposit or loan was limited to an amount not exceeding two-thirds of the amount for the time being secured to the society by mtges. from its members. In an action against the directors under 1874 Act, s. 43:—Held: they were personally liable in respect of sums received by the society on deposit or loan in excess of the limit prescribed by the rules, notwithstanding the amount received on deposit or loan did not exceed the other of the alternative limits prescribed by s. 15.—LOOKER v. WRIGLEY, LEIGH v. WRIGLEY (1882), 9 Q. B. D. 397; 46 J. P. 758, D. C.

223. Unincorporated society—Joint & several promissory notes of members of committee—Liability of signatories & persons authorising.]—The members of the committee of a building society borrowed money from their bankers for purposes not strictly within their borrowing powers, & gave a promissory note for the amount borrowed. Soon after the transaction the society suspended business. On bill filed by one of the members of the committee who signed the note, against the bankers & other members of the society to ascertain his liability:—Held: only the persons who signed the note, & the persons who authorised the signatures, were jointly & severally liable to make good the amount.—*MOYE v. received the following certificate: "I. P. Benefit Building Society. This is to certify that R. has this day deposited £70 with the I. P. Benefit Building Society, for a period of three months certain, upon which interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum will be allowed." The certificate was signed, "J. W., C. L., directors." Pltf. afterwards discovered that the rules of the society did not empower it to borrow money, & sued J. W. & C. L.:—Held: defts. were personally liable, as the certificate amounted to a warranty on their part that the society had power to borrow money.—RICHARDSON v. WILLIAMSON (1871), L. R. 6 Q. 225. ——— Misappropriation by treasurer of ultra vires loan.]—By the certified rules of an unincorporated building society the directors were empowered to borrow money up to a prescribed limit. The course of business was for the treasurer of the society to receive the loan & give the lender a receipt, together with an undertaking on behalf of the directors to give a promissory note of the directors for the amount, & the notes were subsequently exchanged for the receipt. Pltfs. advanced £100 to the society, paying the amount to the treasurer, & receiving from him a receipt & undertaking. That sum was never paid over to the society, but was appropriated by the treasurer to his own use, & no promissory note for the amount was procured for pltfs. At the time of the loan the society had borrowed in excess of the limit allowed by the rules. Pltfs. having sued the society & the directors to recover the amount:—Held: the individual directors were personally liable to pltfs. for the amount of the loan, but the society was not so liable.—*CHAPLEO v. 221 i. Personal liability of directors—Loans in excess of prescribed limits—Credit given to society.]—One of the rules of a building society provided that the directors should have power to borrow any sum for the purposes of the society not exceeding two-thirds of the amount secured to the society by mtges. from its members. The directors at a time when such limit had been exceeded bona fide accepted a deposit from a third person:—Held: there were no damages for which the directors in the absence of fraud, could be held liable, inasmuch as the depositor gave credit to the society, & his loss was due to inability of the society to pay, & not to the fact that there was no authority to borrow.—LANGFORD v. MOORE (1900), 17 S. C. 1.—S. AF.

d. Personal liability of members.]—Persons dealing with a building society must make themselves acquainted with its rules, & where, under such rules, the directors have power to borrow money not exceeding a certain limit, the members are not bound, in case the limit is exceeded, to pay such excess except to the extent to which the society benefited by the excessive borrowing.—Re CAPE OF GOOD HOPE to the bankers on the account. Annual balance sheets, which showed the amount due to the bankers, were sent to all the members of the society, & adopted at the annual meetings. The society was afterwards ordered to be wound up, & it having been decided that the overdraft was ultra vires, as the rules did not give any borrowing powers, the official liquidators commenced an action against the bankers to recover all money which had been paid to the bankers by the society, & applied by them in discharge of the advance to the society:—Held: (1) the acts of the directors, being unauthorised, could not be considered as acts of the society, & were not binding on it, & pl'tfs. were not prevented from recovering the money, though the directors acted under a mistake of law; (2) the acts of the directors had not been ratified by the fact that no member of the society had raised any question on the balance sheet; (3) the bankers must be allowed to stand in the place of the withdrawing members who had been paid with the money advanced, who, if they had not been so paid off, would be entitled to priority to the continuing members; (4) the bankers were entitled to a lien on any mtge. securities taken by the society for advances made out of the money advanced by the bankers, & they were entitled to such securities according to their order of priority, & they ought not to be postponed to other securities granted to the society in respect of advances made out of its other funds.—BLACKBURN & DISTRICT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY v. to take money on deposit—To lend—To act as agent.]—The powers of an incorporated society included the right to take money on deposit, which gave the society one of the characteristics of a banking business; the right to lend money on security, & the right to do agency business. The directors in order to have money available at the times it would be required, had a system of

—Held: (1) the manager held the money as agent for the finance co. until he should pay it to some person competent to give a receipt on behalf of the building society, & as he never paid it over, the money must be taken to be still in the hands of the finance co., which was liable to repay it to the building society; (2) as it was trust money a suit to recover it was maintainable, & the finance co. must repay the money, with interest.—*HARDY v. 237. — Illegality of society—Right to enforce subscriptions due—Remedy of members.]—A society was registered under 1836 Act as a benefit building society, but was converted into & called a freehold land society, & a plot of land bought & allotted among its members. The land was paid for partly by members' subscriptions & partly by borrowed money, for which the society was liable. The society did not appear to have been conducted at any time in the usual way benefit building societies were:—Held: though the funds had been misapplied, the society was not illegal, & that subscriptions due under the rules could be enforced from members. Seem: the remedy of members not assenting to the conduct of affairs by the society was in a ct. of equity for a breach of trust or injunction against future misapplication of the funds.—*R. v. 246. Appointment of arbitrators—After action commenced—Stay of proceedings.—The rules of a building society provided that every dispute between the society & any member, on which the decision of the board should not be deemed satisfactory, should be settled by a reference to arbn., pursuant to 1874 Act, & that five arbitrators should be elected by the members at a general meeting, & in case of dispute the names of the arbitrators should be written on pieces of paper, & placed in a box, & the three whose names were first drawn out by the complaining party should be the arbitrators to decide the matter in dispute. A dispute arose between an investing member & the society as to the amount which he was entitled to receive on withdrawal, & ultimately he brought an action against the society to enforce his claim. Up to that time no arbitrators had been elected under the rules. After the service of the writ a general meeting of the members was held, & five persons were elected as arbitrators. 243 i. In rules—Ouster of jurisdiction of court—Incorporated society—Effect of failure to object to jurisdiction.—The rules of a building society, incorporated under 1874 Act, provided that all matters in dispute between it & any member should be referred to the Registrar of Building Societies. A member of the society having fallen into arrear in repayment by instalments of an advance made by the society, the society, in terms of a rule providing for such a case, raised an action for the member's removal from the property disposed to the society in security of the loan. Defender stated no plea to the effect that the jurisdiction of the ct. was excluded, & on the merits the Lord Ordinary decerned for removal. Defender reclaimed:—Held: having taken a judgment on the merits without objection to the jurisdiction defender could not thereafter be allowed to maintain that the jurisdiction was excluded.—*DUNDEE PROVIDENT PROPERTY INVESTMENT CO. v. 250. Notice of intention to proceed—Service of.—A rule of a benefit building society provided that all summonses, circulars & notices should be deemed duly served by putting same into the post, addressed to the members according to the last entry on the register given by them for that purpose:—Held: the rule only related to the ordinary business of the society, & did not apply to the case of notices of appointments by arbitrators for the purpose of proceeding with a reference.—*HILTON v. 251. Statement of case by arbitrators—Power of court to order—Award made after rule obtained—But before notice of rule.—The power given to the ct. by Arbn. Act, 1889 (c. 49), s. 19, to order an arbitrator to state in the form of a special case for the opinion of the ct., any question of law arising in the course of the reference, applies to arbn. under 1874 Act.

In an arbn. under 1874 Act one of the parties to the arbn. obtained at chambers an order nisi calling upon the arbitrators to show cause why they should not be required to state a case for the opinion of the ct. Later on the same day, but without having had notice of the order nisi, the arbitrators made & signed their award:—Held: the jurisdiction of the ct. was not ousted, & the order nisi was rightly made absolute.—*TABERNACLE PERMANENT BUILDING SOCIETY v. 252. Enforcement of award—Inquiry into validity on application to enforce—No imputation of corruption or misconduct.—Where there is no imputation of corruption or misconduct against the arbitrators appointed under 1836 Act, a ct. of equity is bound, by the spirit & letter of the Act, in no way to disturb an award made under it, in the case of withdrawing members, or to inquire into the validity of such award.

Where the rules of a benefit building society authorised members to withdraw their shares, & provided that such members should be entitled to receive the net amount of their subscriptions paid with interest, & also a share of the profits, & a principal sum & interest only were awarded:—Held: the ct. would not calculate whether the amounts were correct according to the rules, or whether the principal sum included profits or not.—ARMITAGE v. WALKER (1855), 2 K. & J. 211; 26 L. T. O. S. 182; 20 J. P. 53; 2 Jur. N. S. 13; 69 E. R. 756.

253. — Jurisdiction of justices.—A benefit building society was, in 1852, duly registered under 1836 Act, as a benefit society, but in 1855 the society bought freehold land, & allotted it among the members, such land being paid for partly by members' subscriptions, & partly by borrowed money. In 1855, L., one of the members, who agreed to take an allotment of land, & to pay as usual his subscriptions, ceased to pay his subscriptions, & the matter was afterwards referred to arbitrators, who made an award that L. owed £69 to the society. Application having been made to a police magistrate to enforce payment:—Held: however irregular & incompetent it might have been in the society to purchase land & convert itself into a freehold land society, yet the society was not thereby dissolved, & all the magistrate had to do was to see whether the society was enrolled, & the award duly made according to the rules, leaving any member to take proceedings in equity if he thought fit.—*R. v. 254. — Bad in part — Whether severable.—Where an award directed a sum to be paid for costs, which the arbitrator had no power to do, except by a rule made after the member had given notice to withdraw:—Held: that part of the award was bad, but, being separable, it did not vitiate the rest.—*ARMITAGE v. 255. Dispute between society & advanced member—Relationship of mortgagor & mortgagee—Action for account against society.]—The rules of a building society established under 1874 Act, stated that disputes between the society & its members should be settled by arbn. A borrowing member of the society brought an action against the society for an account of what was due to it under his mtge., alleging that in order to complete a sale of the mortgaged property he had been compelled to pay the sum claimed by the society, without having time to investigate the accounts, of which he disputed the accuracy & impeached various specific items. On motion by defts. for a stay of proceedings:—Held: the dispute was one which must be settled by arbn.—WRIGHT v. MONARCH INVESTMENT BUILDING SOCIETY (1877), 5 Ch. D. 726; 46 L. J. Ch. 649.

256. ———.]—By the rules of a building society incorporated under 1874 Act, it was provided, pursuant to s. 16 (9), that a reference of every matter in dispute between the society & any member of the society should be referred to the arbn. of the Registrar of Friendly Societies. Pltf., who was an advanced member of the society & had executed a mtge. for securing his subscriptions & fines in respect of the advance, commenced an action against the society for an account in respect of the mtge. transaction:—Held: the jurisdiction of the ct. was ousted, & the society was entitled to have the dispute referred to arbn.—HACK v. 258. ———.]—Action to set aside sale of mortgaged property—Collusion & fraud.]—By the rules of a building society registered under 1874 Act, it was provided that disputes between the society & its members should be settled by arbn. The society sold to a member the property comprised in a mtge. executed to the society by other members:—Held: an action by the mtgor. members to set aside the sale upon the ground of collusion & fraud was not a dispute liable to be referred to arbn. within either the society's rules or 1874 Act, s. 34.—FRENCH v. MUNICIPAL PERMANENT BUILDING SOCIETY (1884), 53 L. J. Ch. 743; 50 L. T. 567.

259. ———.]—Action for breach of covenant in mortgage—1884 Act.]—A rule of a building society which provides that any dispute arising between the society & any member thereof shall be referred to arbn. is no bar to an action by the society in its capacity of mtgee. against one of its members in his capacity of mtgor. for breach of any covenant contained in the mtge.—WESTERN SUBURBAN & NOTTING HILL PERMANENT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY v. 260. Dispute between society & withdrawing member—Whether member giving notice liable to be treated as member—Construction of rule.]—By one of the rules of a benefit building society formed under 1874 Act, it was provided that a member might by notice in writing withdraw, & should be entitled, "provided there shall be sufficient funds available," to receive within one month after the notice, or earlier if the board should think fit, the subscriptions he had paid on his shares. Another rule provided that the board should have power to determine all matters of dispute between the society & any member or person claiming on account of any member, & that if the party should be dissatisfied with their decision, the matter should be referred to arbn. A member gave notice to withdraw. The society declined to pay his subscriptions at the end of the month, on the ground that they had not sufficient funds in hand;

PART X. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 1.

255 i. Dispute between society & borrowing member—Relationship of mortgagor & mortgagee—Ejectment against mortgagee.]—Rules of a building society provided for arbn. in cases of any dispute between it & a member. The society without arbn. brought ejectment against a borrowing member who was a mtgee. in default:—Held: to render the rule applicable in bar of the action, it must be shown that there was a dispute between the society & deft. quâ member.—DELANEY v. SANDHURST BENEFIT BUILDING & INVESTMENT SOCIETY (1879), 5 V. L. R. 189.—AUS.

k. Dispute between society &

matured member—Whether liable to be treated as member—Construction of rule.]—A rule of a building society that "any dispute between the society & a member or any person claiming through a member & the directors on any matter shall be referred to arbn." does not apply to the holder of unpaid matured shares, whose "connection with the society" has, under its rules, "ceased & determined" upon maturity of his shares.—SYME v. UNITED VICTORIA PERMANENT BUILDING SOCIETY (1904), 29 V. L. R. 671, 917.—AUS.

260 i. Dispute between society & withdrawing member—Whether liable to be treated as member—Construction of rule.]—The rules of a building society provided that "any shareholder or any person claiming by or through any shareholder . . . feeling aggrieved by any decision of the directors or shareholders, of whatever nature such may be, shall appeal to a board of arbitrators":—Held: a member who had given notice of withdrawal, but had not received payment of the value of his shares, was still a shareholder in the sense of the rule above quoted; & a plea by the society that the dispute between it & the shareholder, as to whether he could be paid out in ordinary course, was one which fell under the clause of arbn. sustained.—MITCHELL v. CALEDONIAN PROPERTY INVESTMENT BUILDING SOCIETY (1886), 23 Sc. L. R. 651.—SCOT.

the member contended that they had:—Held: though the retired member might be in some sense a creditor, he was still so far a member as to be bound by the rules, & the dispute must be referred to arbn.—WALKER v. GENERAL MUTUAL BUILDING SOCIETY (1887), 36 Ch. D. 777; 57 L. T. 574; 52 J. P. 278; 3 T. L. R. 847, C. A.

261. — — — — —.]—Pltf. became a member of deft. society in 1883, & in March, 1887, gave a notice of withdrawal to the society. More than a month after the notice had been served the society was incorporated under 1874 Act, certain alterations were made in the rules, & in July, 1887, a certificate of registration of the alteration of the rules was granted. The original rules of the society provided that the rules might be added to, repealed, or altered & amended. The rules of 1887 provided that all disputes between the society & members should be settled by reference to arbn.:—Held: (1) pltf., although he had given notice of withdrawal, remained a member of the society, & the dispute between him & the society must be referred to arbn.; (2) where the rule referred to arbn. all disputes arising or that might arise regarding the construction of the rules, such a dispute as the above must be referred.—*DAVIES v. 262. Dispute between society & officers—Misappropriation of money received to use of society.—A building society brought an action against a former director to recover money of the society improperly received & retained by him:—Held: the claim was not made against deft. in his capacity of member, but as being in a fiduciary position, & having received money for which he ought to account, and the question was not one which ought to be referred to arbn., the dispute not being between the society & a member in his capacity of member.—*MUNICIPAL PERMANENT INVESTMENT BUILDING SOCIETY v. 264. Action against administrator of deceased member.—A building society's rules provided for the settlement of disputes by arbn. After the death of a member of the society, certain fines & subscriptions became due, for which the trustees sued his administrator in the county ct.:—Held: the administrator was a member of the society, & had been so treated by them, & a rule should be made absolute for a prohibition to the county ct. to restrain proceedings, that the dispute might be settled by arbn. under the rules.—KNOX v. SHEPHERD (1860), 2 L. T. 351.

265. Dispute between society & transferee of shares—Claim to be admitted to membership.—By the rules of a benefit building society, constituted under Friendly Societies Act, 1829 (c. 56), and 1836 Act, it was provided that disputes between the trustees & "any one or more of the members of the society, or any person or persons claiming on account of any member or members," should be referred to arbn. F., who had been the holder of shares in the society, transferred them to P., but defts., trustees of the society, refused to recognise P. as a member. P. sued to recover the value of the shares:—Held: as defts. denied that P. was a member, the question whether he was entitled to the value of the shares could not be referred to arbn. under the rules of the society, & the action was maintainable.—PRENTICE v. LONDON (1875), L. R. 10 C. P. 679; 44 L. J. C. P. 353; 33 L. T. 251; 39 J. P. 711.

266. Dispute between society & advanced member—Relationship of mortgagor & mortgagee—Action for breach of covenants in mortgage.—A rule of a building society, requiring disputes between the society & any member thereof to be referred to arbn., applies only to matters in dispute between the society & any member, as member.

A building society lent money to a member on mtgc. of leasehold property, & the member covenanted to observe & fulfil the rules of the society, & also to pay the rent reserved by the lease. The trustees of the society sued for breaches of both the covenants:—Held: as some part of pltf.' claim was not a matter in dispute between the society & deft. as member, but only as mtgor., the society was not bound by its rule to refer to arbn. the subject-matter of the action. Qu.: whether, in such case, if pltf. had declared only for the matter in dispute between the society & deft. as member, they would have been bound to refer.—*MORRISON v. of any bye-laws, additions, alterations & amendments, which should, or might, or might thereafter arise between the trustees, officers, or other shareholders of the co. ; & that the decision of the board, if satisfactory, should be conclusive, but if not satisfactory, reference should be made to arbn. A shareholder had received an advance, & executed a mtge. deed, whereby he covenanted to pay the subscriptions & interest payable on his shares, according to the rules of the society. The society, brought an action on the covenant :—Held : that was not a dispute between the society & deft. as shareholder, but as mtgor., & the case was not within the rule & the action was maintainable.—FARMER v. GILES (1860), 5 H. & N. 753 ; 30 L. J. Ex. 65 ; 2 L. T. 387 ; 24 J. P. 663 ; 8 W. R. 649 ; 157 E. R. 1381.

268. — Neglect of society to appoint arbitrators.]—A declaration, in covenant, set out an indenture of mtge. between the trustees of a benefit building society & deft., a member, by which, in consideration of £600, appropriated & paid to deft., in respect of his shares, deft. mortgaged land to the trustees, for the use & benefit of the society, & covenanted to observe all the rules of the society, & to make all payments, in respect of his shares, which were required by the rules. Breaches : (1) that deft. did not pay certain monthly instalments, according to r. 19 ; (2) that he did not pay the subscriptions upon his shares, according to r. 13 ; (3) that he did not pay certain fines incurred by him, under rr. 13, 14, by non-payment of the instalments & subscriptions. Pleas : (1) that r. 33 provided that the directors should decide upon all disputes that might arise between the society & any member, respecting the construction of or any omission in the rules, or respecting any other matter relating to the society & such member, & that the decisions of the directors, if satisfactory to both parties, should be conclusive, but, if not satisfactory, such dispute should be referred to arbitrators ; that the causes of action were matters in dispute between the society & deft. as a member, respecting matters relating to the society ; that arbitrators were duly appointed according to the rules, & continued to be arbitrators thenceforth, etc. ; & that deft. never had notice of or assented to any decision of the directors, & had always been ready & willing, as the directors & pltf. well knew, to refer the matters to the arbitrators ; (2) that r. 18 declared that, before any member should be allowed to receive the amount of the appropriation mentioned in the rule, he should deliver to the manager a statement in writing containing the nature & situation of the premises intended to be offered as security, & if, after a survey, & report made to the directors, they were satisfied that the premises were sufficient security, they should have the title examined & approved, & then £200 should be advanced by the association upon the member executing a mtge. to them of the property purchased by the appropriation, or other property ; that r. 19 provided that, if, after execution of a mtge., a member failed, for six monthly nights, to pay & observe all subscriptions, payments & regulations, the directors should appoint a person to collect the rents & profits of the premises, & if those were insufficient, or if the member refused to allow or empower such collection, or, if required, himself to collect & pay, the directors were empowered to sell the property mortgaged, that the causes of action were in respect of subscriptions & other payments, due from deft. for more than six calendar months after the execution by him, as a member, of the mtge. deed ; & that deft., after his execution of the deed, neglected for six monthly nights to pay & perform his subscriptions, payments & regulations ; that the mortgaged premises always had been & were sufficient security ; & that, if the directors had appointed a person to collect the rents & profits, the proceeds would have sufficed to discharge all costs of collection, & reimburse to the association all the subscriptions & other payments ; & that deft. had always been ready & willing to allow & empower such collection, but that neither the directors nor the trustees had appointed any person to collect the rents & profits, or required deft. to collect them himself. Replication to plea 1, that the rules were duly certified, allowed & enrolled, & the first meeting of the society after such enrolment was held, before deft. became a member or executed the mtge. deed ; that, by accident, mistake & oversight on the part of the society & its officers & members, no arbitrators were elected or appointed, according to r. 33, at such meeting or afterwards ; & that, when deft. became a member, & when the causes of action accrued, & at the commencement of the suit, there were no arbitrators to whom any such matters as mentioned in the rule could be referred. Without this, that arbitrators were duly appointed, etc. :—Held : (1) the declaration showed a right of action in pltf. as trustees, under Friendly Societies Act, 1829 (c. 56), s. 21, & 1836 Act, s. 4 ; (2) plea 1 was good, inasmuch as the summary remedy provided for the settlement of disputes by arbn. was exclusive, and ousted the superior courts of jurisdiction ; (3) the traverse, in the replication to plea 1, of the allegation that arbitrators had been duly appointed, was a sufficient answer to such plea ; (4) the power to collect rents, or to sell, given to the directors by r. 19, did not prevent bringing an action on the express covenant to pay the subscriptions.—REEVES v. WHITE (1852), 17 Q. B. 995 ; 21 L. J. Q. B. 169 ; 18 L. T. O. S. 271 ; 16 J. P. 118 ; 16 Jur. 637 ; 117 E. R. 1562.

—The provisions for arbn. of disputes between a friendly society & its members, in Friendly Societies Act, 1829 (c. 56), ss. 27, 28, incorporated into 1836 Act, do not apply to questions arising in a suit by a member against a building society for the redemption of a security given by him for his future contributions on his receiving his share in advance, because no means are provided for working out a decree for redemption, delivery of deeds, etc., & the jurisdiction of a ct. of equity is not ousted in such a case.—*FLEMING v. for referring to arbn. any dispute between the society & any member thereof, had, upon having the amount of his shares advanced to him, executed a mtge. of premises to the trustees, under the rules of the society, to secure payment of the subscriptions, interest, & bonus payable by the rules of the society in respect of those shares. Subsequently he claimed to redeem his mtge. for a less sum than the trustees, as mtgees., were willing to accept, & upon their refusal to refer the dispute to arbn., obtained an order of two justices for the delivery to him of the mtge. deed:—Held: that was not a dispute which could be referred to arbn., & a certiorari should be granted to remove the order of the justices for want of jurisdiction.—*R. v. PART X. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 2.

1. Dispute between society & withdrawing member—Whether member giving notice liable to be treated as member—As to amount payable on withdrawal.]—Held: a member of a building society, who had fully paid up his shares, & was in terms of the rules entitled to withdraw after due notice & to receive the amount of his shares standing at his credit, did not cease to be a shareholder, after having given notice, on the expiration of the period of notice, but continued to be a shareholder till he should be paid out, & a dispute between him & the society management.]—Among the rules of a building society was one which provided, that any member who should be desirous of withdrawing from the society any share or shares, should be allowed to do so on giving two months' notice in writing of his intention to the secretary, subject to certain deductions for expenses, provided that the deductions should not extend to widows & children of deceased members, & who should always have a priority in cases of withdrawal. Another rule provided, that the board of management for the time being, or the major part of them, should determine all disputes which might arise respecting the construction of the rules, or of any of the clauses, matters, or things therein contained, & also of any additions, alterations, or amendments which should or might thereafter arise between the board & any member of the society, or persons claiming on account of a member, & in the event of their decision being unsatisfactory, then to be referred to arbn. Pltf., a member of the society, gave notice to the secretary, that he wished to withdraw the amount of his shares. Previously to his giving such notice, other members had also given similar notices, & as their notices expired, they were paid the sums of money due to them, in consequence of which there was not sufficient money at the society's bankers to meet pltf.'s claim. Defts. alleged that they had the right to pay claims in the order in which they fell due, which pltf. disputed, & refused to refer the matter to arbn., but brought his action for the sum due to him:—Held: that was a matter arising between the board of management & a member of the society as such, & pltf. was bound to submit to arbn., & was precluded from bringing an action.—WRIGHT v. DEELEY (1866), 4 H. & C. 209; 30 J. P. 631.

275. ——— Sult for amount of subscriptions due—Inquiry as to funds.]—A bill by a retiring member of a benefit building society against the trustees, to recover pltf.'s share was supported, & inquiries & accounts were directed, as a rule to refer to arbn. did not oust the jurisdiction of the ct. in such a case.—*SMITH v. 277. ——— Matters of internal dispute.]—It is contrary to the language of Friendly Societies Act, 1829 (c. 56), & against the policy of the law, that internal disputes between the members or as to the amount which he was entitled to receive fell to be determined by arbn. under a rule, by which disputes between shareholders & the directors were to be so determined.—MITCHELL v. CALEDONIAN PROPERTY INVESTMENT BUILDING SOCIETY (1886), 23 Sc. L. R. 651; 13 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 918.—SCOT.

office holders of a building society & the society should be the subject of actions at law & suits in equity.

A bill, filed by a member of a building society, who wished to withdraw his shares, against the society, their trustees & directors, to have principal & interest paid him, stated that the rules were duly certified, & were, "so far as material," as followed. It then set out certain rules, numbered 12, 13, & 14, but no rule as to referring disputes to arbn. It set out a letter containing an offer by the directors to refer all matters in dispute between pltf. & them to arbn. "under the rules," & stated that defts. sometimes alleged that the dispute ought to be referred to arbn., but that pltf. charged that, having regard to the relief thereafter prayed, he was not bound to refer the dispute to arbn., & prayed (inter alia) that it might be declared that pltf. was entitled to the benefit of rr. 12, 13, of the society:—Held: the ct. was able to take judicial notice of the rule of the society for referring disputes to arbn., though it was not set out in the bill.

Where pltf. alleged misconduct against the directors of a building society in extending the business of the society to that of a bank of deposit, but did not state when the extension was made, & prayed no relief on the ground of the alleged misconduct, the ct., on demurrer, treated the allegation as immaterial.

A bill by a holder of shares in a building society against the society & their directors alleged misconduct against the directors in respect of acts which, for anything that appeared, might have been authorised by the rules of the society as stated by the bill, & prayed that pltf. was not bound by certain new rules that had been passed, & prayed the benefit of certain of the original rules, & for relief against the directors personally:—Held: that was a dispute for the decision of which arbitrators were the proper authority, & demurrers by the society & by the directors must be allowed.—THOMPSON v. PLANET BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY (1873), L. R. 15 Eq. 333; 42 L. J. Ch. 364; 28 L. T. 549; 21 W. R. 474.

278. Effect of notice of withdrawal.]

—Defts. were trustees of a benefit building society enrolled pursuant to 1836 Act, & the statement of claim alleged that pltf. became a member of the society, & was the holder of first-class shares, & during his membership paid his subscriptions, that by a rule of the society any member holding first-class shares desiring to withdraw from the society, should, after giving three months' notice, receive back the whole amount paid by him for subscriptions, that pltf. gave the requisite notice of withdrawal, & there then became due to him from the society £35 8s. 6d., which pltf. was entitled to be paid according to the rule:—Held: the statement of claim was bad, for it alleged a dispute between a building society & a member thereof, & a rule must be assumed to exist referring disputes of that kind to arbn. or justices, & the mere notice of withdrawal given & assented to would not prevent the application of the rule.—HUCKLE v. WILSON (1877), 2 C. P. D. 410; 26 W. R. 98.

279. — — — — —.]—A statement of claim alleged that pltf. was an unadvanced member of deft. society, which was certified & enrolled pursuant to 1836 Act, & up to July 10, 1882, subscribed money to the society in respect of three paid up shares amounting to £227 10s. which, according to the rules of the society, were of the value of £303 4s. 4d., that pltf. gave notice to withdraw, & defts. refused to repay the £303 4s. 4d.: Held: the statement of claim was bad, for it disclosed a dispute between a building society & a member, & it must be assumed that a rule existed referring such a dispute to arbn.—JOHNSON v. ALTRINCHAM PERMANENT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY (1883), 49 L. T. 568; 48 J. P. 24, D. C.

280. Dispute between society & officer—Restitution of misappropriated property.]—The committee of a benefit building society authorised the vice-president to purchase a real estate for the society, & furnished him with part of the funds. He purchased, but appropriated the estate to himself:—Held: (1) the trustees, in whom the funds & property ought to be vested, were entitled to sue on behalf, etc., to compel a restitution of the estate; (2) the jurisdiction was not ousted, by a rule of the society for referring disputes to arbn.—MULLOCK v. JENKINS (1851), 14 Beav. 628; 21 L. J. Ch. 65; 18 L. T. O. S. 203; 51 E. R. 426.

281. Audited accounts—Whether conclusive—Right of members to impeach for fraud.]—One of the rules of a building society provided for an annual audit of accounts, & that after the auditing & signing of the accounts the treasurer should not be answerable for mistakes, omissions, or errors afterwards proved in the accounts. In an action by members against the treasurer for accounts:—Held: though the audited accounts must be received as prima facie evidence, the rule afforded no protection against the right of the members to impeach the accounts on the ground of fraud.—HOLGATE v. SHUTT (1884), 27 Ch. D. 111; 53 L. J. Ch. 774; 51 L. T. 433; 32 W. R. 773, C. A.; subsequent proceedings, 28 Ch. D. 111, C. A.

282. — — — Auditor not appointed in accordance with Act & rules.]—The rules of a building society provided that the books should be audited every twelve months by auditors appointed by the society, but contained no provision as to the appointment of auditors. Friendly Societies Act, 1829 (c. 56), s. 33, provided that the accounts of such societies should be audited by two or more members of the society appointed for that purpose. In an action by members of the society against the secretary, an order was made for an account of all money & property come to the hands of deft. In taking such account deft. claimed to treat as settled accounts, accounts which had been audited by one person only, who had always acted as auditor of the society, but who was not a member. The ct. having dismissed a summons asking that the accounts might be disregarded as not being audited in accordance with the rules:—Held: the accounts had not been properly audited, & the order must be discharged, without prejudice to the right of deft. to show that the accounts ought to be treated as settled accounts on any ground other than that they had been audited in accordance with the Act & rules.—HOLGATE v. SHUTT (1884), 28 Ch. D. 111; 54 L. J. Ch. 436; 51 L. T. 673; 49 J. P. 228, C. A.

283. Annual statutory accounts—Inclusion of leaseholds of which society in possession as mortgagees—Acknowledgment of mortgagor's title.]—A mtge. by a member of a building society to the society provided that, if the mtgor. paid all the instalments according to the rules of the society, the society would “at any time thereafter, upon the request of the mtgor.,” endorse the mtge. deed with a receipt, & that it should thereupon be vacated. It also provided that, upon default in payment of any of the instalments, the balance of the advance unpaid should immediately become due, & that the society might thereupon enter into possession. The mtgor. being in default, the society entered into possession & received the rents for a period of over twelve years. Within the period of twelve years before action brought, the mtge. & the amount outstanding had been included, under the heading of mtges., in balance-sheets of the society signed by the auditors & delivered to the committee:—Held: the title of the mtgor. was barred under Real Property Limitation Act, 1874 (c. 57), s. 7, & the committee were not the mtgor.'s agents to receive acknowledgments of his title contained in the balance-sheets.—WILSON v. WALTON & KIRKDALE PERMANENT BUILDING SOCIETY (1903), 19 T. L. R. 408.

284. ———.]—A member of a building society mortgaged leaseholds to the society to secure an advance of £400 on her shares repayable with interest by monthly instalments extending over ten years. The rules of the society provided that when the claims of the society upon any mortgaged property had been satisfied the statutory receipt should be indorsed upon the mtge. at the expense of the mtgor. The deed conveyed the property to the society upon trust to permit the mtgor. to receive the rents until default in payment of any instalment, & upon default, to enter into possession of the rents & to apply same in payment of all sums due from the mtgor. & to pay the balance, if any, to the mtgor.; the deed also contained a trust for sale. In 1887 the mtgor. made default & the society went into possession & managed the property, treating it in their books as a mtge. transaction, & by 1902 all sums payable under the deed were satisfied. After 1902 the society entered the rents to a suspense account in their ledger until 1910, when the society was ordered to be wound up; the same year the lease of the property expired. In the winding up the mtgor. claimed the surplus rents standing to the credit of the suspense account, on the ground that the society were trustees thereof for her & that Stat. Limitations did not apply:—Held: (1) the deed, though in form of trust, was in substance a mtge., & Stat. Limitations commenced to run when the society took possession in 1887, & the claim of the mtgor. was barred; (2) the annual statutory accounts which the society published pursuant to 1874 Act, s. 40, & in which the leaseholds were included in the properties of which the society were in possession as mtgees., were not acknowledgments of the mtgor.'s title within Real Property Limitation Act, 1874 (c. 57), s. 7, so as to preclude the operation of that sect.—Re METROPOLIS & COUNTIES PERMANENT INVESTMENT BUILDING SOCIETY, GATFIELD'S CASE, [1911] 1 Ch. 698; 80 L. 285. Unincorporated society—Amalgamation illegal—Transfer of assets & liabilities to new society—Recovery of money lent to old society.]—A benefit building society with £100 shares was, by one of its rules, authorised to borrow money for the purposes of the society, & in 1853 A. advanced £300 to the society upon a promissory note. In 1861 it was desired to reduce the shares from £100 to £10, & by way of effecting that object a new society was formed, which purported to take over the assets & liabilities of the society.

The interest on the £300 was regularly paid, first by the old, & afterwards by the new, society. The new society having been ordered to be wound up, A. claimed to be paid the £300 out of the assets:—Held: (1) for one society to take over the mass of assets & liabilities of another society was ultra vires; (2) it being illegal for the new society to undertake a liability to A. for the £300, acquiescence could not validate the transaction.—Re LIVERPOOL & DISTRICT PERMANENT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY, MCCONNAN'S CLAIM (1871), 15 Sol. Jo. 177.

m. Banking company & building society—Administration of assets as one fund.]—The directors & shareholders of a building society which had been successfully carried on determined to form a banking co. which was to absorb the business of the society. The society purported to sell all its assets to the banking co. & the co. took over all the liabilities of the society, & thenceforward for many years the co. carried on its business in the old buildings of the society, having the same directors, & its manager being the secretary of the society. The co. advanced money to the society in its business. No contract was ever executed, nor were the assets of the society actually transferred to the co. The society had no power thus to sell its business, though it was within the powers of the co. to make the purchase. The society went into liquidation, & the co. also went into liquidation, & the question was raised as to the right of the co. to prove upon the assets of the society in respect of the advances made to it:—Held: that inasmuch as the affairs of the two institutions had become so inextricably mixed up under the so-called amalgamation or sale of the assets of the society to the co., the ct. should order the assets of both institutions to be administered in the winding-up as if they formed one institution only.—Re METROPOLITAN PERMANENT BUILDING & INVESTMENT SOCIETY (1900), 20 V. 293. Priority in repayment—Of withdrawing members over other members—Expiry of notice of withdrawal before date of dissolution.]—A building society having suffered loss, passed a resolution in July, 1889, to reduce the amount of its shares from £12 to £10. The rules at that date entitled any unadvanced member to withdraw his payments on account of shares by giving one month's notice, such withdrawing members to be paid in rotation, but not more than one withdrawing member was entitled to be paid at any one monthly meeting. In Feb., 1890, altered rules were adopted entitling members to withdraw amounts standing to their credit by giving one month's written notice, the amount due in respect of shares to be five-sixths of the net amount paid on them. In 1892 an instrument of dissolution, under 1874 Act, s. 32, was executed & registered. Some members had given notice of withdrawal before the losses were known, others before the reduction of the shares, others after the reduction. One member had not assented to the reduction. Other members had not given notice of withdrawal:—Held: all the members were bound by the reduction, & the rule as to priority of payment applied to all who had given a month's notice of withdrawal which had matured before the date of the instrument of dissolution.—*BARNARD v. On Aug. 8, at the adjourned meeting, a resolution was carried for voluntarily winding up. On Nov. 1 the deed of dissolution was registered. The notices of withdrawal given by different members under the rules of the society had matured before the four above-mentioned dates respectively:—Held: the members who gave notice of withdrawal prior to the date of the resolution for winding up were entitled to the surplus assets in priority to the other members.—*Re COUNTIES CONSERVATIVE PERMANENT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY, DAVIS v. On Aug. 8, at the adjourned meeting, a resolution was carried for voluntarily winding-up. On Nov. 1 the deed of dissolution was registered. The trustee of a deed of dissolution of a building society was ordered to pay pltf.'s costs of an action for an account, where, through his negligence & complete reliance on his co-trustee, who had absconded, defalcation to the extent of some £400 had taken place, which the trustee had himself made good.—Re SECOND EAST DULWICH 745TH STARR-BOWKETT BUILDING SOCIETY (1899), 68 L. A resolution was passed by the requisite majority at such a meeting "that the society be wound up voluntarily," & two liquidators were appointed:—Held: (1) the resolution operated as a dissolution of the society under its rules within 1874 Act, s. 32 (2), & was not an attempt to wind up voluntarily under s. 32 (4); (2) the liquidators had power under s. 32 to sell & transfer mtge. securities belonging to the society.—SUN BUILDING SOCIETY v. The rules provided that the shares were to be limited to £25; that a shareholder who had not received an advance was to pay up his shares by monthly instalments; & when such instalments with profits amounted to £25 per share he was to be paid out. As to a member who had received an advance, it was provided that he should pay up his advance by monthly instalments on his shares with interest at the rate of 5 per cent. on the loan. It was also provided that members could withdraw on giving a month's notice. On withdrawal by an unadvanced member, he was to receive the whole instalments paid on his shares with interest. a borrowing member, he was to pay up the whole of his debt, interest, & penalties, after deducting the amount of the monthly instalments paid upon his shares with interest calculated thereon. A. took shares for the sole purpose of obtaining an advance. He executed a bond in common form as security, & the society granted him a back-letter, to the effect that they agreed not to enforce the bond so long as the regular payments of the instalments, interest, & other sums due upon his shares were paid. A. regularly paid his instalments with interest charged on the whole sum lent. Losses having been incurred, the society was in Feb., 1880, ordered to be wound up voluntarily. There were no outside creditors. In July, 1880, A. gave notice, under the rules, of withdrawal to the liquidators, & claimed a discharge of his bond on his paying to them the difference between his loan & the amount in cumulo of the instalments paid by him, with interest added. The liquidators denied his right to withdraw after liquidation, unless he paid up the whole loan & left the instalments to be refunded according to the result of the liquidation:—Held: (1) the advance had pro tanto been extinguished by the total amount of the instalments paid by A.; (2) from & after the date of the winding-up order A. had a right to redeem his security by paying to the liquidators the difference between his advance & his instalments with interest added thereon as against excess of interest which he had been charged, & on payment of such difference, with interest thereon, he was entitled to be relieved of all further liability as a contributory or otherwise.—*BROWNIE v. 313. Priority in repayment—Of withdrawing members over other members—Notices given when society known to be insolvent.]—One of the rules of certain building societies provided as follows: "On & after the expiration of the first twelve months, any member may withdraw the subscription money which he may have contributed, with such an amount of interest as may be determined by the committee, such member to give notice of his intention to withdraw in writing to the secretary, & should more than one member give notice to withdraw at one time, the member so giving notice shall be paid in rotation, according to the priority of notice, provided always that the society shall not be required or obliged to make such payment as aforesaid, until they have sufficient funds in hand for that purpose, & also to meet the then existing legal liabilities of the society":—Held: the rule provided only for withdrawal from the societies while they were or were believed to be solvent, & notices of withdrawal, which were given or which matured at a time when the societies were known to be insolvent, though before the actual date of the winding-up order in each case, did not entitle the shareholders who had given them to be paid the amount of their subscriptions in priority to other shareholders in the winding-up.—*Re SUNDERLAND 36TH UNIVERSAL BUILDING SOCIETY (1890), 24 Q. 314. ——— Preferential shareholders.]

—On a special case to obtain the opinion of the ct. on the following questions: (1) whether the C. shares (see No. 315, post) were preferential as regarded capital, or only as regarded payment of interest, (2) whether a new rule passed in 1889 (see No. 315, post) was ultra vires or otherwise invalid, (3) in what priority, if any, the society ought to pay withdrawn shares:—Held: (1) as to the first question, the C. shares in respect of which notice of withdrawal was not given before

c. — Husband of married woman.—Where a married woman is a shareholder the husband is not liable as a contributory, whether the shares were purchased with his money, or with the separate money of his wife.—Re ST. JOHN BUILDING SOCIETY (1889), 28 N. B. R. 597.—CAN.

d. — Mortgagors.—The rules of an incorporated society provided for three classes of shares, viz. monthly investing shares, paid up investing shares & capitalized shares or stock. By the rules advances were to be made only to members. Mtgors. were required to subscribe their names in a book containing the rules, by which they agreed to become holders of shares to the amount of the loan, & the mtgs. recited that the mtgors. were members for a number of shares equal to the loan. It was not intended that they should make payment on account of the shares, & they never did so, the object of the managers in inserting the recital in the mtge. evidently being an attempted compliance with the rule that advances were only to be made to members. The society went into liquidation, & on an application to place the mtgors. on the list of contributories, as members of the society:—Held: they were not liable.—Re ST. JOHN BUILDING SOCIETY (1889), 28 N. B. R. 597.—CAN.

e. — Personal representatives of deceased member—Joint shareholders.—In the case of the death of one of two joint shareholders, the estate of the deceased shareholder is not liable.—Re ST. JOHN BUILDING SOCIETY (1889), 28 N. B. R. 597.—CAN.

f. — Representative character.—A rule declared that personal representatives of a deceased member should be entitled to his shares & all benefit & advantages accruing thereupon, & should be subject to the rules, the change of rules in 1889, were preferential as regarded payment of interest only, & not as regarded payment of capital, but the holders of those C. shares who gave notice to withdraw before the change of rules, were entitled to be preferred over holders of shares who had not given notice; (2) as to the second question, the new rule was invalid in so far as it varied any then subsisting rights of members.—SIXTH WEST KENT MUTUAL BUILDING SOCIETY v. SHOVE (1895), [1899] 2 Ch. 64, n.; 68 L. J. Ch. 482, n.; 81 L. T. 87, n.; 39 Sol. Jo. 601.

315. ———.]—When a building society is known to be insolvent, no rule can be passed altering the rights of the members of the society, so as necessarily to affect their rights inter se in respect of liability or in respect of distribution of assets, to the injury of some of such members, for the benefit or advantage of others, even although it may be a rule which could properly be made by a society not in contemplation of liquidation. But a rule passed with the object of facilitating realisation of assets & enabling the society to get rid of burdensome obligations may legitimately be passed by a building society which is known to be insolvent, as auxiliary to its existing rules.

A building society issued preferential shares, known as C. shares, the proprietors of which were entitled to be paid interest in lieu of bonus & other periodical profits. The remaining shares, known as A. & B. shares, were issued on ordinary conditions. A new rule, passed in 1889, of the society provided as follows: "After Dec. 31, 1890, no further advances shall be made upon shares then existing. From & after the passing of this rule the withdrawal of shares, other than C. shares, by priority of notice shall cease, & all funds derived from repayment of advances, from realisation of properties in possession, or from any other source, shall be applied first, to the expenses of management & secretary's salary, the payment of capital & interest on C. shares, & the remainder pro rata to the repayment from time to time of the subscriptions standing to the credit of the holders of unadvanced shares, until the total assets of the society shall have been realised & distributed." At that date the society was known to be insolvent. By a further rule, passed in 1891, it was provided as follows: "In order to facilitate the realisation of any properties now or at any time in possession of the society, the directors shall have power to sell same or any part thereof to any member, &

& liable to the same payments as if they were original members:—Held: personal representatives were liable to be placed on the list of contributories, though only in their representative character.—Re ST. JOHN BUILDING SOCIETY (1889), 28 N. B. R. 597.—CAN.

g. — Order of priority.—There is no order of priority in their liability to contribute towards outside creditors, as between the holders of fixed or permanent capital stock, holders of unmatured investing stock, & holders of matured shares who have accepted dividends.—Re ST. JOHN BUILDING SOCIETY (1889), 28 N. B. R. 597.—CAN.

h. Priority in repayment—Of matured shareholders.—Holders of shares which had matured prior to liquidation have no priority of repayment, but must rank pari passu with the other shareholders.—Re YORK COUNTY LOAN & SAVINGS CO. (1908), 11 O. W. R. 888.—CAN.

receive in payment, either wholly or in part, any fully paid-up or subscription shares held by the member, whether under notice of withdrawal or not, provided that such shares shall be taken subject to the deduction of any withdrawal fee in force for the time being." At the time the 1891 rule was passed the only creditors of the society were members of the society in respect of their shares. The assets from all sources of the society were not sufficient to repay in full to members the capital sums due on their shares:—Held: (1) the 1889 rule was invalid so far as it sought to give priority in respect of capital to the holders of C. shares, who had not given notice of withdrawal before the change in the rules, over holders of A. & B. shares, but the C. shares retained their preferential right to interest; (2) the 1891 rule was not ultra vires, & unless the power thereby given were exercised with the fraudulent purpose of benefiting a particular member, the directors could not be made liable for a breach of trust; (3) the C. shareholders were entitled by the terms of the original contract to payment of interest, notwithstanding the society was insolvent.—SIXTH WEST KENT MUTUAL BUILDING SOCIETY v. HILLS, [1899] 2 Ch. 60; 68 L. J. Ch. 476; 81 L. T. 86; 47 W. R. 647.

316. — Notices not maturing until after resolutions.]—A member who had given a notice of withdrawal, which matured before the passing of resolutions for dissolution:—Held: to have thereby acquired a right to repayment in priority to the other members.

Members who had given notices of withdrawal, which matured after the passing of resolutions for dissolution:—Held: to have acquired no priority.—Re AMBITION INVESTMENT BUILDING SOCIETY, [1896] 1 Ch. 89; 65 L. J. Ch. 113; 73 L. T. 508; 44 W. R. 141; 2 Mans. 607.

317. — Of representatives of deceased or insane members—Of holders of paid-up shares.]—A building society incorporated under 1874 Act, by its rules provided for withdrawals (1) by representatives of deceased or insane members, (2) by members unadvanced on notice. After payment of withdrawn shares to the representatives of deceased or insane members, the persons holding unadvanced shares paid up for the subscribed term were to have the preference, & were to be paid in full, & in rotation, according to their respective subscriptions being fully discharged:—Held: the priority of payments should be (1) to representatives of deceased or insane members who had applied to withdraw; (2) to holders of realised shares; (3) to those who had given notice of withdrawal of their paid-up shares, according to the priority of their notice.—THOMPSON v. ATLAS PERMANENT BUILDING SOCIETY (1894), 97 L. T. Jo. 218, C. A.

318. — Of withdrawing depositor over other depositors—Of outside creditors.]—A registered co., carrying on business in the nature of that of a building society, had power to receive money by way of deposit from any person or partnership. Deposits were withdrawable upon giving a certain notice, according to the amount thereof. In Dec., 1881, C. deposited £300 with the co., upon which interest was duly paid until June, 1884. In Dec., 1884, C. gave notice that he required to withdraw his deposit, but same was not repaid, nor was any date fixed for its repayment. In Jan., 1885, a petition was presented for the winding-up of the co., & it was ordered to be wound up.

The question arose whether, in the distribution of the funds of the co. C. & all other unpaid depositors, who had given notice of withdrawal of their deposits before the date of the presentation of the petition, were entitled to rank as creditors of the co. in priority to those depositors who had not given such notice at that time:—Held: there was no priority as between the depositors, or between them & the outside creditors, but they must all rank pari passu.—Re PROGRESSIVE INVESTMENT & BUILDING SOCIETY LTD., Ex p. CORBOLD (1886), 54 L. T. 45.

Early in 1900 the society was found to be insolvent, & subsequently a creditor petitioned for a winding-up order. Semble: 1836 Act having been repealed by 1894 Act, s. 25, the society came within the class of cos. forbidden by Cos. 325. ——— Unadvanced member—Who has given proper notice of withdrawal—Form of petition.]—An order to wind up a benefit building society whose rules do not give it express power to borrow, may be obtained on the petition of a person, who, under the rules of the society, has deposited money therein with a view of becoming a shareholder, but before becoming one, has given proper notice to withdraw the money & been unable to obtain it. But such petition must not be a mere creditor's petition, but must express that petitioner is a creditor in respect of money advanced by him as a member of the society, which he has given notice to withdraw.—Re QUEEN'S BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY (1871), 6 Ch. Acts, a building society registered under 1836 Act, but not incorporated under 1874 Act, the ct. may in its discretion refuse to make any order, notwithstanding there is no other way in which such a co. can be wound up under those Acts.—Re SECOND COMMERCIAL BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY, LTD. (1879), 48 L. 327. ——— Petition by unpaid withdrawing member—No substantial interest of petitioner.]—F. in 1853 paid up the full amount payable upon ten shares in a benefit building society, & thereupon became a member of it. The rules provided that, any member not having received an advance might withdraw the balance to his credit on notice, but such withdrawal would be subject to his proportion of expenses & other deductions. In 1854 F., being entitled to do so, gave the notice, but the money was not repaid to him, & three years later a resolution was passed by the society which, in effect, left the losses to be exclusively borne by persons who were members antecedently to the resolution. The resolution was admitted to be bad, as being ultra vires of the society, but money was borrowed on the faith of it, & the claims of the lenders obtained a priority against the members. These claims were shown to exceed the value of the whole assets of the society. At the time F. was absent from England, but was aware of the position & proceedings, & twelve years after presented a winding-up petition:—Held: the petition must be dismissed, as F. had no such substantial interest in the society's assets as would entitle him to support it, & had acquiesced in the resolution complained of.—Re LONDON PERMANENT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY (1869), 21 L. 328. ——— Society not insolvent.]—By the rules of a benefit building society it was provided that any member holding investment shares, who should be desirous of withdrawing his investment, should be allowed to do so upon giving a month's notice in writing, & that if several members should give notice at one time they should be paid in rotation according to priority of notice. Provisions were also made for the reference of disputes to arbitration. A., the holder of five investment shares representing £250, gave notice of withdrawal. The society had previously received notices from a large number of members of their desire to withdraw their investment shares to the amount of about £350,000, which sum then remained to be paid. Subsequently, alterations were made in the rules, & it was provided that payment to withdrawing members of their shares should be made by instalments. A., not having been paid, at the expiration of the month gave the statutory notice under Cos. Act, 1862 (c. 89), s. 199, & subsequently presented a petition for winding-up the society. The society was perfectly solvent, but time was required to realise the assets:—Held: petitioner as a withdrawing member was in a different position to an outside creditor, & was not entitled ex debito justitiæ to an order for winding up the society, & the ct., in the exercise of its discretion, would dismiss the petition with costs.—Re PLANET BENEFIT BUILDING & INVESTMENT SOCIETY (1872), L. PART XIII. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 1.

323 i. Jurisdiction to wind up—Under Companies Act, 1862—Society certified in 1873 under Act of 1836.]—In a petition by a creditor for the winding up, under Cos. Act, 1862, s. 199, of a building society, consisting of more than twenty persons, & established & certified in 1873 under 1836 Act, the ct. granted a winding-up order, holding that the society, having been in 1873 formed in pursuance of 1836 Act did not fall within the class of cos. forbidden by Cos. Act, 1862, s. 4, & that in virtue of Interpretation Act, 1889, s. 38, the

that might be necessary for the purposes of the society, under which considerable sums of money had been borrowed on deposit, & some of the depositors pressed for their money, which the society was unable to pay without calling on their members. The committee of the society had accordingly proposed that the business should be transferred to another company & the society wound up, to which the great majority of the shareholders had agreed. After the petition was presented, the creditors of the society executed a release to petitioners from their debts, & the committee offered to effect a transfer of their mtges. :—Held : (1) as the release of petitioners operated as a release to the whole society, petitioners were under no direct or indirect liability in respect of the existing debts ; (2) the society being one of unlimited liability, & the rule as to borrowing ultra vires, the insolvency was not proved ; (3) the interest which petitioners had in the profits, as advanced members, was not sufficient to induce the ct. to make a winding-up order contrary to the wishes of the great majority of the other members, & the petition must be dismissed, but without costs.—Re PROFESSIONAL, COMMERCIAL, & INDUSTRIAL BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY (1871), 6 Ch. 330. ——— Petition by unadvanced shareholder—Contrary to rules.—A building society, not registered under 1874 Act, having lost part of its funds, but still having enough to pay its creditors, one of its unadvanced shareholders liable to contribute to losses presented a petition for a winding-up order under Cos. Acts, 1862 (c. 89) & 1867 (c. 131), at the same time totally disregarding the provisions of the society's rules as to winding-up. Before the hearing a scheme of reconstruction & registration under 1874 Act was resolved upon by the shareholders & depositors, not one of whom supported petitioner at the hearing :—Held : the ct. having a discretion whether to make a winding-up order or not, the circumstances were such that the ct. was not satisfied that it was "just & equitable" to wind up the society & would not exercise its jurisdiction under Cos. Acts.—Re LONDON & METROPOLITAN COUNTIES BENEFIT BUILDING & INVESTMENT SOCIETY (1889), 1 Meg. 135.

331. ——— Petition by creditor refusing to accept composition—Order of no advantage to creditor.—A building society was established & certified in 1868 under 1836 Act, but was never incorporated. Early in 1900 the society was found to be insolvent, & a winding-up petition was then presented against the society, but C., one of its creditors, did not appear on that petition, which was withdrawn, all the other undisputed creditors of the society agreeing to accept 12s. 6d. in the pound, which was paid to them. There was nothing for distribution amongst the shareholders, as the assets when sold did not realise enough to pay the composition. The balance of that was provided by the directors out of their own pockets, & they took an assignment of the claims of the assenting creditors, & retained in hand enough to pay, & offered C. 12s. 6d. in the pound on his debt. C. refused the offer, & petitioned for a winding-up order, alleging irregularities by the society's officers, & that an investigation into its affairs was necessary. The ct. was of opinion that

Ct. of the County Palatine of Lancaster, under the provisions of Cos. Act, 1862 (c. 89), Part II., relating to the winding-up of unregistered cos., the society being established under 1836 Act, & at the date of the presentation of the petition not having become incorporated under 1874 Act. The petition was dismissed & notice of appeal given, but between the date of the notice of appeal & the hearing thereof, the society obtained a certificate of incorporation under 1874 Act :—Held : the Ct. of Appeal had no jurisdiction to entertain the appeal, as the society, having become incorporated, was no longer subject to the jurisdiction of that ct.—*Re OLD SWAN & WEST DERBY PERMANENT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY, Ex p. Then, finding that the annual value of the property was not equal to the rentcharge, they obtained leave from the ct. to get rid of the land, & gave notice to the tenant in occupation of the land & to the owner of the rentcharge that they repudiated the land. The owner of the rentcharge claimed to prove in the winding-up for arrears which had accrued since the repudiation:—Held: (1) the society were only liable so long as they were owners of the land; (2) the liquidators had sufficiently repudiated the ownership of the land, & no subsequent claim could be made for the rentcharge.—*Re BLACKBURN & DISTRICT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY, Ex p. 341. ——— Exercise of powers without sanction of court—Power of sale—Conveyance not executed by all liquidators.]—A mtge. was made to the trustees of an unincorporated building society. The mtge. deed provided that, in case of default by the mtgor., the property should be held upon trust that the trustees for the time being should, if & when required by the directors of the society, sell the property. An order was made for the winding-up of the society, as an unregistered co., under Cos. Act, 1862 (c. 89), s. 199. By a subsequent order six directors of the society were appointed liquidators, & it was ordered that all the acts required or authorised by the Act to be done by the official liquidators might be done by any two of them. By another order it was ordered, following s. 203, that all such property real & personal, including all interest, claims & rights in, to & out of property real & personal, & including things in action, as might belong to or be vested in the society, or to or in any person or persons in trust for or on behalf of the society, should vest in the official liquidators, & in pursuance of s. 96, that they should be at liberty to exercise any of the powers conferred on them by s. 95 without the sanction or intervention of the ct. After that, two of the six liquidators, without any further sanction of the ct., sold the mortgaged property, & executed a deed by which they purported to convey it to the purchaser in fee, freed & discharged from the mortgage debt:—Held: (1) the power of sale was validly exercised; (2) the conveyance only passed the legal estate in two-sixths of the property.—Re EBSWORTH & TIDY'S CONTRACT (1889), 42 Ch. 343. General rule.]—The liability of members of a building society, registered under 1836 Act, for its ordinary debts, such as rent, rates & taxes, does not depend on the doctrine of partnership, or on the contract of the members inter se, but on the doctrine of principal & agent, & if the assets are insufficient, the members, both advanced & unadvanced, are liable as contributories for such ordinary debts, if incurred while they are members.

344. — For costs of winding-up & realisation.]—A building society, registered under 1836 Act, had lent money to its advanced members in respect of their shares in the society. Some of the mtges. by the advanced members secured the principal advanced, & such sums as might become payable to the society under the mtge., or the rules or bye-laws, or "in any other way." The other mtges. secured the mtgor.'s instalments, subscriptions, fines, & other sums payable according to the rules. The rules provided for the release of a member's security on his paying the amount due for principal, interest, fines, & other payments, & empowered the trustees, for the purposes of the society, to borrow sums up to a certain limit, at interest, & in order to procure such loans, to give their personal security, with a right to be indemnified out of the first funds of the society which should be received, but neither the rules nor the deposit receipts given under them purported to give any security to the depositors upon the funds or assets of the society. The shares of both advanced & unadvanced members were of the same nominal value. The assets of the society, when it was ordered to be wound up, were sufficient to pay the ordinary creditors, but not the depositors also, in full:—Held: (1) the actual costs of realising the properties as they existed at the commencement of the winding-up must first be paid out of the assets as they then existed, & the rest of such assets must be applied in paying ordinary debts & loans on deposits, pro rata; (2) to meet the estimated costs of winding-up, other than costs of realisation, a call must be made on all the members, both advanced & unadvanced, in proportion to their shares, & the deficiency due to the ordinary creditors must also be met by calls on all the members.—Re WEST LONDON & GENERAL PERMANENT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY, [1894] 2 Ch. 352; 63 L. 348. Past advanced or investing members—Satisfaction of liabilities before winding-up.]—Past members of a building society, whether advanced or investing members, who have satisfied all their liabilities to the society in accordance with the rules before the commencement of the winding-up of the society, are not liable to contribute with members at the date of the winding-up to the losses of the society.—Re WEST RIDING OF YORKSHIRE PERMANENT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY, *Ex p. 349. Unadvanced members—For call adjusting rights inter se.]—A permanent building society having fallen into difficulties, in consequence of the defalcation of a secretary, was wound up by order of the ct. By the rules of the society, shares might be taken at & commence from different times, but the ultimate value of each share was to be £120, & members were to continue to pay their subscriptions monthly for fourteen years, or until all shares of the same date should have attained the full value of £120. The rules also provided that the funds of the society should belong to the members in proportion to the time they had been subscribers, & that at the end of fourteen years from the date of each share, or when the accumulated subscriptions with interest amounted to £120 the unadvanced shareholders, i.e., those to whom no advance of their shares had been made on mtge., should be repaid £120 per share. At the winding-up of the society, the assets were insufficient to repay in full the unadvanced shareholders the amount they had paid upon their shares. Some of those shareholders had paid up the greater part of their shares, whilst others who had recently become shareholders had paid up much less. A call had been made by the official liquidator upon all the shareholders for the purpose of satisfying the claims of the unadvanced shareholders, but had been already discharged as to the advanced shareholders:—Held: the order must also be discharged as to the unadvanced shareholders, & the assets must be distributed among the unadvanced shareholders pro rata under the society's rules, in proportion to the time for which they had subscribed to the society.—Re DONCASTER PERMANENT BUILDING SOCIETY (1867), L. 350. — To extent of sum due at date of winding-up.]—A building society formed under 1836 Act, but not registered under 1874 Act, was ordered to be wound up. All the debts of the society had been paid, & there was a sum of surplus assets for the division amongst the members. The rules provided (inter alia) that when it should be deemed advisable to bring the operations of the society to a termination, a general meeting should be held, which should have power to dissolve the society, & when all payments due to the society by members or any other person had been satisfied, & the debts of the society

351. — For amount due on preference shares.]—A building society issued under its rules paid up preference shares at a guaranteed rate of interest, the holders not being liable to contribute to losses nor to participate in profits. The ordinary members were liable under the rules, whether on withdrawing their shares, or on repaying advances thereon, or on redeeming their securities, for a fair proportion of the losses, expenses, bad debts, & other charges of the society. The society was wound up & there was a deficiency of assets:—Held: the ordinary members were liable for the full amount due on the preference shares, including interest thereon since the date of the winding-up order, & those members who had not received advances on their shares must satisfy that liability by submitting to a deduction from their claim against the assets.—Re RELIANCE PERMANENT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY (1892), 61 L. Upon the question, whether advanced members ought to be placed upon the list of contributories:—Held: they ought for the purpose of discharging the debts due to third parties, but having paid all the subscriptions that would become due up to the end of fourteen years, they were not liable to calls for the purpose of paying to the unadvanced members the money due to them from the society.—Re DONCASTER PERMANENT BUILDING SOCIETY (1866), L. Under the rules of the society the advanced members were not made liable to contribute to losses, but the directors were at liberty to allow to an advanced member, upon discharging any mtge., a fair proportion to the best of their judgment of the surplus profits of the society in respect of his advanced shares. At the date of the winding-up order D., an advanced member, was indebted to the society in respect of the advance made to him, which was secured upon a mtge. of leasehold property. D. died subsequently to the date of the winding-up order, & the exors. & trustees of his will were settled upon the list of contributories of the society. The mtge. given by D. was to secure payment of all share or subscription money, expenses, fines, forfeitures, & money whatsoever to be paid by the mtgor. pursuant to the rules of the society in respect of the shares so received by him in advance as aforesaid, or otherwise in respect of his being a member of the society:—Held: (1) an advanced shareholder was the debtor of the society in respect of the money which he was bound to pay back, & was not a shareholder liable as a contributory; (2) the exors. & trustees of D. were not liable to be put on the list of contributories.—Re BRITANNIA PERMANENT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY (1891), 65 L. The object of above course was to make both C. & B. creditors of the society rather than shareholders. The writ was issued, & judgment went by default as arranged. C. afterwards filed a petition to wind up the society, but the county ct. judge refused to allow C. & B. to rank as creditors in the winding-up:—Held: in the circumstances the transaction was not bonâ fide but was ultra vires, as the directors had a fiduciary position with respect to the other shareholders, & the county ct. judge's decision was right.—Re SHEFFIELD PERMANENT BUILDING SOCIETY, CROOKES' APPEAL, BRAILSFORD'S APPEAL (1889), 5 T. 363. Priority in repayment—Of widows & children of deceased members.]—Upon the construction of a scheme of arrangement entered into between the creditors & contributories of an unincorporated building society, in the course of its winding-up by the ct., it was declared that the surplus assets ought to be distributed according to the rights of the shareholders under the rules of the society. The question then arose whether the widows & children of deceased members were entitled to precedence, having regard to the provision in the rules that if more than one member should give notice to withdraw at one time they should be paid in rotation, according to the priority of notice, provided always that the widows & children of deceased members should always have the precedence. The rules also provided (clause 25) that, in case of a member dying, his shares & interest should belong to his exors. or administrators, or other the person or persons thereafter mentioned; that, when on the death of any member without leaving a will a sum of money not exceeding £50 should become payable, such sum should, in default of letters of administration being taken out to the deceased member, be paid to any person nominated by deceased in writing, such person being husband, wife, father, mother, child, brother or sister, nephew or niece, of such member, & in case there should be no such nomination, or the person so nominated should have died before the deceased member, or in case the member should have revoked such nomination, then such sum should be paid to the person who should appear to be entitled under Stat. Distribution to receive same, without taking out letters of administration:—Held: (1) the true construction of the rules was that, whenever there was a competition between persons who had given notice to withdraw their shares & the widows & children of deceased members whom the society was bound to recognise under clause 25, then the widows & children should always have precedence; (2) under the scheme, such widows & children were entitled to be paid in priority to the other shareholders of the society, such widows

In the winding-up of the society:—Held: these two classes stood in the position of creditors entitled to be paid in priority to "investing" members, who had not made up their shares, & had given no notice of withdrawal.—*Re NORWICH & NORFOLK PROVIDENT BUILDING SOCIETY, Ex p. society provided that any member desirous of withdrawing should, by giving a month's notice in writing, be entitled to receive back his subscription money in the manner therein mentioned; that members withdrawing, whose shares were fully paid up, should be entitled to 5 per cent. interest from the time such shares were so paid up, or from the time the previous dividend was paid, & that if more than one member should give notice to withdraw they should be paid in rotation according to the priority of their notices. The society was ordered to be wound up under Cos. Acts, & at the date of the winding-up the shareholders consisted of three classes, viz.: (1) members who gave early notices of withdrawal of their shares, & who claimed to be paid out of the assets in priority to those who gave later notices; (2) members who gave later notices & who claimed that all the withdrawing members should be paid pari passu; & (3) members who gave no notices. The question being, whether the assets should be distributed pro rata amongst all the members who gave notice of withdrawal before the winding-up commenced, or ought to be distributed amongst them in priority & rotation according to the successive dates of their respective notices:—Held: the members who gave notice of withdrawal prior to the commencement of the winding-up were entitled to be repaid the amount of their shares in priority to the other members, according to the respective dates of their notices.—Re MIDDLESBROUGH, REDCAR, SALTBURN-BY-THE-SEA, & CLEVELAND DISTRICT PERMANENT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY (No. 2) (1885), 53 L. 367. — Of lenders over shareholders & members—Money borrowed under unlimited power of borrowing—Claim to special equitable charges.—By the rules of an unincorporated building society, the directors were authorised from time to time, as occasion might require, to borrow any sums of money at interest from any persons, the borrowed money to be a first charge upon the funds & property of the society. Under the rule the directors borrowed large sums for the proper purposes of the society, & deposited with the lenders, as security, title deeds of properties which had been mortgaged to the society by advanced members:—Held: the rule was valid, & the lenders were entitled in the winding-up to payment out of the assets, after satisfaction of the outside creditors, & in priority to the claims of all shareholders or members, but the lenders must give up their securities to the official liquidator, the claim to special equitable charges upon specific properties being inconsistent with the true meaning of the rule, which was that all the money borrowed under it was to have the benefit, equally & pari passu, of a first charge upon the general funds & property.—*MURRAY v. — Money raised by subscriptions & deposits on loan—From persons not members.]—

By r. 1 of a building society, formed under 1836 Act, it was declared that the society was established “for the purpose of raising, by monthly subscriptions & deposits on loans, a fund to make advances to members of the value of their shares,” to enable them to erect or purchase houses to be mortgaged to the society for the purpose of securing the payments prescribed by the rules of the society. A second rule provided that the directors should meet at certain times “for the purpose of conducting the business of the society.” A third rule provided that at the end of every five years a general account of the affairs of the society was to be prepared, showing the gross receipts & expenditure & liabilities, & if in taking the accounts there appeared to be a deficiency of income, by which the society might be prevented from meeting its anticipated expenditure & liabilities, the amount of such deficiency should be equally apportioned by the directors between the investing & borrowing members, & be paid forthwith by such monthly or quarterly instalments as the directors should determine:—Held: the lenders of money to the society were entitled in the winding-up of the society to priority over the members of the society.—Re MUTUAL AID PERMANENT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY (1885), 30 Ch. 369. — Of shareholders over unadvanced members—Issue of deposit or paid up shares—Preferential payment authorised by rules.—By the rules of an unincorporated building society the board was authorised to issue deposit or paid up shares for £30 each at 5 per cent. interest with the right of withdrawing the whole or part of the deposit upon notice in preference to all other shares. That rule was struck out by the certifying barrister, but the directors printed & acted upon it by issuing shares accordingly. Some years afterwards the rule was amended, by altering £30 into £1, & the amendment was certified by the barrister, & those who had taken £30 shares had them exchanged for £1 shares, & other £1 shares were issued to new shareholders. The money paid by those shareholders was applied for the purposes of the society:—Held: such shareholders, whether they had become so before or after the amendment was certified, & whether they had given notice of withdrawal or not, were

370. Of depositors & unadvanced members—Ultra vires banking business—Distribution of assets pari passu.]—A building society formed in 1851 under 1836 Act, & empowered by its rules to borrow to an unlimited extent, started & developed a banking business. In 1911 the society was ordered to be wound up, & questions of priority arose between the outside creditors, the unadvanced shareholders, & the bank customers on current and deposit account, for convenience called the depositors. The assets were insufficient for payment of all claimants in full, but were more than sufficient for payment of the outside creditors, who were subsequently paid by arrangement, & the shareholders:—Held: (1) the depositors were not entitled to recover money paid by them on an ultra vires contract of loan on the footing of money had & received by the society to their use; (2) the assets remaining after payment of the outside creditors must be taken to represent in part money which the depositors could follow, as having been invalidly borrowed, & in part money which the society could follow, as having been wrongfully employed by its agents in the banking business, & subject to a view to tracing his own money into any particular asset, & to the costs of the liquidation, ought to be distributed pari passu between the depositors & the unadvanced shareholders according to the amounts respectively credited to them in the books of the society at the commencement of the winding-up.—*SINCLAIR v. 371. Recovery of money overpaid—Shareholders paid in full by mistake of law—Liability to refund excess.]—In the winding-up of a building society the Ct. of Appeal affirmed the decision of the lower ct. that the A. & B. shareholders of the society were entitled to be paid in full out of the assets of the society in priority to a third class of creditors called depositors. The assets being amply sufficient for that purpose the liquidator, who was the official receiver, thereupon paid the claims of the B. shareholders in full before he received notice of an appeal by the depositors to the House of Lords. The House of Lords varied the judgment of the Ct. of Appeal by directing that the depositors were entitled to share ratably with the A. & B. shareholders in the assets, & that decision gave an all-round dividend of 16s. in the pound. On the application of the liquidator the B. shareholders were ordered to refund 4s. in the pound, being the amount they had received in excess of 16s. in the pound.—Re BIRKBECK PERMANENT BENEFIT BUILDING SOCIETY, [1915] 1 Ch. 91; 84 L. G. S., the heir-at-law & one of the next of kin, took out administration to deceased with the consent of most of the remaining next of kin. The funeral expenses amounted to £1,200, G. S. being encouraged in going to this expense by two of the next of kin, for the purpose of deriving a profit from it to themselves as tradesmen:—Held:

G. S. was bound to control the funeral expenses & the other next of kin could not be charged for the acts of the two.—STACPOOLE v. STACPOOLE

37. Heir at law—Voluntary payment—Whether personal estate liable.]—The heir-at-law of an intestate paid the funeral expenses out of his own moneys as a matter of bounty, but afterwards claimed to be allowed such payment out of the personal estate:—Held: he was not entitled to be repaid.—COLEBY v. COLEBY (1866), L. R. 2 Eq.

38. Husband—Order by third person.]—When a wife dies, her husband is bound to provide her with a funeral at a reasonable expense, & if he does not do so, any person who voluntarily employs an undertaker & pays him for performing such a funeral, is entitled to recover the sum so expended, from the husband, in an action for money paid.—

Wife's father.]—Where a husband goes abroad & leaves his wife, who dies in his absence, a third person who voluntarily pays the expenses of her funeral, suitable to the rank & fortune of the husband, though without the knowledge of the husband, may recover from him the money so laid out, especially if such third person be the father of the wife.—JENKINS v. TUCKER (1788), 1 Hy. Bl.

40. ——— Wife living separate—Order by stranger.]—A husband & wife were living separate, the wife receiving an allowance from the husband, which was regularly paid to the time of the wife's death. The daughter of the wife by a former marriage lived with her, & at her death ordered her funeral, which, in consequence of the wife's desire to be buried at a considerable distance, was a very expensive one:—Held: the husband was liable for reasonable funeral expenses, & it was for the jury to say whether the expense of burial at a distance was a reasonable expense.—BINGHAM v.
WALKER (1848), 11 L. T. O. S. 151.

41. ——— ———.]—Deft.'s wife many years ago voluntarily left his house, & went to reside at her brother's, about a mile distant, where she continued to live apart from her husband until her death, when her brother, without any communication with the husband, buried her in a suitable manner:—Held: the brother was entitled to sue

66. Vicar—Divided parish—New Parishes Act, 1856 (c. 104).]—In 1816, under a local Act, a new church was built in St. P., which was to be the parish church, the old church being thereby converted into a "parish chapel." In 1853, by an Order in Council, the original burial place for the parish, which surrounded the old church, & also an additional ground provided under an earlier local Act, were closed, & a cemetery was provided for the whole parish. In 1863, that part of the parish in which the old church stood was formed into a new district, & the "parish chapel" was declared to be the church of that district:—Held: New Parishes Act, 1856, s. 10, did not operate to vest the old churchyard in the incumbent of the new district church, but the freehold still remained in the vicar of the parish.—CHAMPNEYS v. ARROWSMITH (1867), L. R. 3 C. P. 107; 37 L. J. C. P. 22; 17 L. T. 261; 31 J. P. 803; 16 W. R. 277, Ex. Ch.

Annotation:—Reid. Stewart v. West Derby Burial Board (1886), 34 Ch. D. 314.

67. — — — 1816 Act—London Government Act, 1899 (c. 14).]—An Act of 1719 passed to authorise the rebuilding of the parish church of St. M. provided (inter alia) for the enlargement of the churchyard & for the erection of a vestry room for the parish. Under that Act land was acquired & conveyed to trustees upon trust "for the parish & parishioners, & that same was to be made part of the site of the parish church now to be rebuilt, or to be laid out as part of the churchyard." The vestry room was erected upon part of such land. The site of the vestry room, together with vaults, constructed underneath it, was duly consecrated for burial; but the room itself was not consecrated. By an Act of 1826 passed to authorise certain street improvements, the Commissioners of Woods & Forests were empowered to remove the vestry room & to provide a new vestry room in its stead, which, by the terms of the Act, was to vest in the persons in whom the previous room would have been vested had the Act not been passed. The Commissioners removed the old vestry room accordingly, & erected a building comprising a new vestry room, together with other accommodation:—Held: (1) the earlier vestry room became vested in the vicar of the parish by virtue of 1816 Act, s. 4, & remained vested in the vicar notwithstanding Poor Relief Act, 1819 (c. 95), s. 17, vesting parish property in the churchwardens & overseers; (2) the fact that it was used for civil purposes by the vestry both before & after the establishment of an elective vestry for the parish under the Metropolis Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), did not affect the title to the room, which remained vested in the vicar & was not subject to London Government Act, 1899, transferring the property of metropolitan vestries & of the churchwardens & overseers of metropolitan parishes to the metropolitan borough councils.—*WESTMINSTER CORPN. v. 69. Duty of churchwardens—Whether faculty requisite.]—A contractor when rebuilding a house abutting on a churchyard unlawfully pulled down the churchyard wall for the purpose of obtaining for the lower windows of the house light & air from the churchyard, & rebuilt the house a few inches from the site of the old wall, & outside the churchyard. The rector & churchwardens, in order to vindicate their right to rebuild the wall, placed an iron screen of the same height as the old wall immediately opposite to the windows of the new house. On an application by the rector & churchwardens for a faculty to rebuild the wall:—Held: where a churchyard wall has been wilfully pulled down, or fallen down, it is the duty of the churchwardens to rebuild it, & if they do so without alteration no faculty is necessary, unless their right to rebuild it is in dispute.—ST. STEPHEN, WALBROOK (RECTOR & CHURCHWARDENS) &

This is a permission, undoubtedly, which should be sparingly granted, since there can be no absolute claim of that kind; but I think there is enough shown to prove that the churchwardens in this parish are authorised to give such leave, since there is a table of fees produced, in which there is one "for the burial of strangers" (SIR W. PART III. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 1.—A.

71 i. Without leave of rector.]—A., with leave from the sexton, but not from the rector, buried a parishioner in a graveyard vested in the Representative Church Body: the grave was the proper one, according to custom, in which to bury deceased:—Held: the rector is the person alone entitled to point out graves, & give permission to inter in such graveyard, & burial in the same without permission is a trespass.—CHURCH REPRESENTATIVE BODY v. M'LOUGHLIN, [1896] 31 I. L. T. 43.—IR.

72 i. At common law.]—At common law a parishioner cannot acquire an exclusive right of burial in the parish graveyard, save by faculty or prescription supposing a faculty, annexing the right to an ancient message, & in absence of such can only acquire an exclusive right to burial under Public Health (Ir.) Act, 1878, s. 170.—

77. — Discretionary—Convenience of parishioners.]—A practice had prevailed during the incumbency of several vicars, that upon the burial of any stranger in the parish of H. certain fees should be paid, of which the vicar took one moiety & the churchwardens the other for the use of the poor. The fees were paid to the sexton, who paid over the moieties to the respective parties. A new vicar refused to accede to this arrangement, he buried several strangers, & procured the sexton, to whom the fees were paid, to pay over the entire fees to himself:—Held: the churchwardens might recover one moiety as had & received to their use.

I do not apprehend that the churchwardens would be liable to censure either by the civil or ecclesiastical law in joining with the vicar in permitting strangers to be buried in the churchyard & receiving fees for that permission, provided no inconvenience were sustained by the parish. If it could be shown that other parishioners sustained actual inconvenience, it might be different (GIBBS, C.J.).—LITTLEWOOD v. WILLIAMS (1815), 6 Taunt. 277; 1 Marsh. 589; 128 E. R. 1041.

84. By prescription.]—Pltf., seised of the manor of R., claimed against P., clerk of the parish of H., that whereas he, pltf., was so seised & he & his ancestors had been in the habit from time, etc., of burying their dead without fee or payment within the church of H., yet P. knowing these facts had maliciously prevented pltf. from making a grave there wherein to bury his father then deceased, who was a resident within the parish:—Held: pltf. was entitled to judgment.—HARVEY v. 87. Cremation urn — Faculty — Jurisdiction.]—The vicar & churchwardens of a parish church, in the diocese of L., built under Church Building Act, 1818 (c. 45), & closed for burials by virtue of an Order in Council under 1853 Act, concurred in an application by the widow of a parishioner whose dead body had been cremated praying the Consistory Ct. of London to authorise by faculty the formation of a niche in the wall of the church inside the church, & above the level of the floor, & the permanently placing therein of a sealed urn containing the cremated ashes of such dead body. Deceased during his life had expressed a wish that in the event of his death his remains might be cremated, & a certificate was brought in to the effect that the vestry of the parish was in favour of the remains being interred beneath the church:—Held: (1) the burial of the cremated ashes of a dead body in the church had not been prohibited by Church Building Act, 1818, Public Health Acts, 1848 (c. 63), & 1875 (c. 55), or by the Order in Council closing the church under 1853 Act; the provisions in those Acts as to burial not applying to the burial of the remains of a corpse after it had been reduced to ashes, & the ct. had jurisdiction in its discretion to grant the faculty as prayed, but must decline to do so having regard to the inconvenience which might ensue in case of alterations in the church, etc., if the urn was deposited in the church wall according to the proposal of the applicant; (2) the ct. having ascertained from the Home Office that no objection on sanitary grounds was entertained by the Home Secretary to the interment of the urn containing the remains below the floor of the church, was prepared, at the request of appct. to decree the issue of a faculty for the urn & its contents being interred below the church. Semble: cremated remains cannot lawfully be interred in or under a parish church except under the authority of a faculty

89. Non-parishioner—Of family of parishioner—Closed churchyard.—By an Order in Council a churchyard was closed except as to burials in reserved grave spaces allotted to members of the families of parishioners:—Held: a faculty for the reservation of a space in the churchyard for exclusive burial could be granted to a living non-parishioner, member of the family of a parishioner.—Re SARGENT (1890), 15 P. D. 168.

90. — Faculty — Restrictions.—With the concurrence of the incumbent of a parish church a non-parishioner petitioned the ordinary to sanction by a confirmatory faculty the exclusive grant of the reservation for the sole use of herself, her exors., administrators & assigns, of a portion of ground in the parish churchyard as a place of burial. The grant of the faculty was opposed by one of the churchwardens of the parish on the ground that the granting of it would be detrimental to the rights of the parishioners to be buried in the churchyard in preference to non-parishioners. At the hearing of the suit it appeared that petitioner had paid to the incumbent a considerable extra burial fee for the grant of the reservation according to the custom of the parish; that the population of the parish only amounted to forty-six persons; that on the average the number of burials of parishioners was one per annum, & that there was room for about seventy interments in the churchyard, an addition to which had been consecrated some years back with a view of non-parishioners being buried there. The ct. granted the faculty as prayed, but made an order on the incumbent that he should make no further grants of reservations of grave spaces to non-parishioners during his tenure of the living: Semble: the incumbent of a parish church may make grants of the reservation of grave spaces to non-parishioners on their paying to him, or in some cases to him & the churchwardens, special burial fees, but to complete their title to the grant a faculty from the ordinary is necessary.—DE ROMANA v. ROBERTS, [1906] P. 332. Annotation :—Reid. Kellett v. St. John's, Burscough Bridge (1916), 32 T. L. R. 571.

91. — Transfer of right.—In May, 1896, the husband of petitioner purchased from the then vicar & churchwardens of H. in the diocese of London two plots of ground in the churchyard at the request of his wife as a burial place, & as they were non-parishioners they were charged, as was usual, double fees. The receipt was signed by the parish clerk on behalf of the vicar & churchwardens. In Dec., 1900, petitioner ceased to live with her husband, who admitted her right to the two plots of ground in H. churchyard as her property, & indorsed on the back of the receipt a transfer of all his interest to his wife. Subsequently petitioner presented a petition for a faculty to confirm the grant of the two plots:—Held: (1) the vicar had a right with the consent of the churchwardens to grant the two sites to petitioner's husband for burials, & the husband was entitled to have that grant confirmed by faculty; (2) he having transferred his right to the graves to his wife by the memorandum on the back of the receipt, she was entitled to apply to have the transfer confirmed by faculty.—HENDON CHURCHYARD CASE (1910), 27 T. PART III. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 1.

1. Presumption of right—For relatives—Lay property.—Where a person exercised for over forty years the ex-ordinary. The ecclesiastical law requires, before such faculty is decreed, that all persons interested in opposing the grant should be heard before the ordinary. The vicar or perpetual curate of a church, though entitled to officiate in & have free access to the chancel, has no right to fees for the erection of monumental tablets, or for the construction of vaults in the chancel. A faculty for that purpose may be legally granted without his consent; but he has a locus standi, by reason of his position as incumbent, to oppose the grant of such a faculty.

A faculty for the appropriation of a family vault under the chancel of a district church, having been applied for by the lay proprietor of the great tithes, & the owner of the land immediately adjacent to & in the vicinity of the church, was objected to by the vicar of the parish, because the access to it being only from the exterior, & no churchyard or burial ground attached, there was no consecrated ground outside the church on which any part of the burial service could be performed. Such faculty having been granted:—Held: though the granting of such a faculty was entirely within the discretion of the ordinary, such discretion ought to be exercised so as to prevent the possibility of a misuse by the grantee, &, in the circumstances, the grant ought only to issue on the condition that the grantee appropriated & consented to the consecration of a sufficient piece of ground near the opening of the vault, to be so consecrated for the sole & special purpose of burials in the vault, & such faculty decreed accordingly.—*RUGG v. 104. Whole service must be read.]—Summary proceeding, under Church Discipline Act, 1840 (c. 86), against a clerk in Holy Orders, for omitting certain words in the office of burial. Upon a report of the comrs., the party proceeded against consented that sentence should be pronounced by the bishop of the diocese.

A clerk, in the performance of the burial service over the corpse of a person who had died in a state of intoxication, is not at liberty to omit the words expressing a hope that the deceased "resteth in our Lord Jesus Christ."—Re TODD (1844), 3 Notes of Cases, Supp. 51.

105. By unauthorised person.]—It is illegal for any one, unless he be lawfully authorised, to read or assist in reading a burial service in consecrated ground over a dead body.

It is clearly illegal to collect an assemblage of persons in a churchyard for the purpose of forcibly burying the corpse of an unbaptised person or to read a service over such corpse. PART III. SECT. 5.

g. Member of censured society—Not excommunicated.]—Circumstances in which:—Held: deceased, a member of a literary society which had incurred ecclesiastical censures, never having been excommunicated nominatim, & never having been adjudged or proved to be an un pœcheur public within the Quebec ritual, was not at the time of his death under any such valid ecclesiastical sentence or censure as would according to the Quebec ritual, or any

SUB-SECT. 2.—IN CHURCHYARDS.

132. Right to erect—By whose authority—Ordinary.]—Proceedings against a person for erecting tombs in the churchyard without due authority, sustained.

The ordinary is to judge of the convenience of allowing tombs or monuments to be erected, & if done without his consent, he has sufficient authority to decree a removal (Sir W. SCOTT).—BARDIN v. CALCOTT (1789), 1 Hag. Con. 14; 161 E. R. 459.

133. Property in.]—Trespass may be maintained for taking away a tombstone from a churchyard, & obliterating an inscription made upon it, at the suit of the party by whom it is erected, although the freehold of the churchyard is in the parson, as the right to a tombstone vests in the person who erects it, or in the heirs of the deceased, in whose memory it is set up.—SPOONER v. WALFORD (1838), 2 J. P. 310; 2 Jur. 326.

135. Right to repair—Leave of churchwardens.]—BARDIN v. CALCOTT (1789), 1 Hag. Con. 14; 161 E. R. 459.

136. Removal of—By faculty to incumbent.]—The incumbent of a parish church objected to the retention on a newly erected tombstone in the parish churchyard of an inscription which had been placed there without his consent or the sanction of a faculty, & the material portion of which consisted of the following words:—"Of your charity pray for the repose of the souls of the beloved son, of . . . & . . ., died . . ., also of . . . son of the above . . . died . . . On whose souls sweet Jesus have mercy"; & subsequently applied to the ordinary for a faculty for the removal of the tombstone out of the churchyard. The parishioner who had caused the tombstone to be erected appeared as resp. in the suit, & further, himself instituted a suit praying for a confirmatory faculty confirming the erection of the tombstone & its retention in the churchyard with the above inscription on it. The two suits were heard together, & at the hearing it appeared that the deceased persons named on the tombstone were members of a Roman Catholic family, & that the inscription had been composed as being the usual inscription placed on tombstones erected to the memory of Roman Catholics:—Held: (1) the onus of satisfying the ct. that the inscription was in all respects unobjectionable lay upon petitioner for the confirmatory faculty, & had not been discharged; (2) the evidence supported the presumption that the inscription was intended to be an appropriate one in memory of Roman Catholics, & in regard to prayers for the dead in conformity with the doctrine of purgatory as recognised & enjoined by the Roman Catholic Church, & the ct., whilst declining on these grounds & the further grounds that the churchwardens & those parishioners who were members of the Church of England entertained conscientious objections to the retention of the inscription, to decree a confirmatory faculty, must decree a faculty to issue to the incumbent authorising him to remove the tombstone.

Inscriptions proposed to be placed on the tombstones in a parish churchyard are in the first instance subject to the control of the incumbent of the parish, but any decision come to by him may be reviewed by the ordinary on proper application being made to the Ecclesiastical Ct. of the diocese.—PEARSON v. STEAD, STEAD v. PEARSON, [1903] P. 66; 18 T. L. R. 331.

137. Levelling tombstones — Faculty — Expense.]—Where no substantial inconvenience was shown by one individual, who opposed the faculty, & the plan had been adopted at a vestry on the unanimous report of a committee:—Held: the ct. would grant a faculty to level a churchyard & lay flat upright head & foot stones, with a clause that no expense should fall on individuals.—SHARPE v. HANSARD (1830), 3 Hag. Ecc. 335; 162 E. R. 1177. Annotation:—Mentd. Kellett v. St. John's, Burscough Bridge (1916), 32 T. L. R. 571.

138. Inscription — Control by incumbent.]—Prayers for the dead are not prohibited by the Church of England, & the following inscription:—"Pray for the soul of J. W. It is a holy & wholesome thought to pray for the dead (2 Mac. xii. 46)":—Held: unobjectionable.

To the incumbent belongs the superintendence of the church & churchyard, & it is his duty to take care that no inscription should be placed there which could be made the means of disseminating doctrines inconsistent with those of the established religion (Sir H. JENNER).—BREEKS v. WOOLFREY (1838), 1 Curt. 880; 163 E. R. 304.

139. — Right of rejection.]—The daughter of H. K., a Wesleyan minister, was buried in the churchyard of the parish where her father resided. The incumbent of the parish refused to allow a stone with an inscription describing deceased as daughter of "the Rev." H. K., "Wesleyan minister," to be erected over the grave:—Held: the presence of the words "The Rev." before "H. K., Wesleyan minister," in the inscription, which was otherwise unobjectionable, was not a sufficient justification for the incumbent refusing to allow the tombstone to be erected within the churchyard, as the word "reverend" was not a title of honour or dignity, & a person prefixing the word to his name did not thereby claim to be a person in Holy Orders.—KEET v. SMITH (1876), 1 P. D. 73; 45 L. J. P. C. 10; 33 L. T. 794; 40 J. P. 196; 24 W. R. 375, P. C.

SECT. 7.—WINDOWS, COATS OF ARMS, ETC., AS MEMORIALS.

141. Window — Sanction of ordinary—Inscription.]—An application was made to the consistory ct. of Chester to authorise by faculty the erection in a parish church in the diocese of a stained glass memorial window, having placed below it an inscription in Latin, the translation of a portion of which was as follows: "Of your charity pray for the soul of H. F., deceased, & for the soul of J. H. C., deceased":—Held: the ordinary ought not in his discretion to sanction the introduction into the church of any inscription of which the above words would form part, & so much of the application as prayed that a faculty might be granted for placing such words beneath the proposed window must be rejected.—EGERTON v. ALL OF ODD RODE, [1894] P. 15.

Annotation:—Reid. Pearson v. Stead, Stead v. Pearson, [1903] P. 66.

142. ——— Subject—Appeal.]—A faculty was granted for the insertion in the centre compartment of the east window of a parish church of a representation in stained glass of the Crucifixion of Our Saviour, with the figure of the Virgin Mary in one side compartment of the window & of St. John in the other side compartment, the representation being of an historical nature & one to which, having regard to the services in the church & other circumstances, there would be no likelihood that superstitious reverence would be paid.

The vicar & churchwardens of a parish church in the diocese of Carlisle, with the unanimous consent of the vestry of the parish, applied to the ordinary for a faculty authorising them to insert in the central compartment of the east window of the church, a window of three lower compartments divided by stone mullions, an historical representation of the Crucifixion of Our Saviour with the arms of the figure on the cross carried from the centre compartment into the compartments on either side, & in one of these side compartments a figure of the Virgin Mary, & in the other side compartment the figure of St. John, the window to have in it the following inscription: "To the glory of God & in memory of the men of this parish & church who gave their lives for King & Country in the Great War, 1914." Evidence was given to show that if the faculty was granted there would be no likelihood of superstitious reverence being paid to the window or to the representation proposed to be inserted therein. The ordinary dismissed the application, holding the representation to be, apart from its questionable legality, unsuitable & inappropriate for a war memorial. The promovents appealed to the Chancery Ct. of York. The official principal of the Chancery Ct. of York, being of opinion that no question arose as to the legality of the representation in stained glass of the Crucifixion with the accompanying figures & inscription, & that the ordinary had in refusing the application exercised a wrong discretion, allowed the appeal, & retaining the cause decreed the issue of the faculty applied for.—Re ST. PAUL'S, CARLISLE, [1919] P. 134.

143. Arms & helmet—Right to remove—Action of trespass.]—Lady G., at the funeral of her husband, left his arms & helmet in the church. The parson destroyed them, & she brought an action of trespass:—Held: this action was maintainable.—WYCHE'S (LADY) CASE (1469), Y. B. 9 Edw. IV., fo. 14, pl. 8; *sub nom. Upon the motion of the rector & parishioners a prohibition was granted, for the Ecclesiastical Ct. had nothing to do with this, & could not compel them without their consent.—*ST. SECT. 9.—ALIENATION OF CONSECRATED GROUND.

151. Vesting on death of trustee—1816 Act—London Government Act, 1899 (c. 14).]—An Act of 1719 provided for the rebuilding of the parish church of St. M., & also for the building of a vestry room. The new vestry room was erected upon ground which was added to the churchyard, & such additional ground, including the site of the vestry room, was consecrated as a place for burials. Under 7 Geo. 4, c. 77, this vestry room was pulled down & another built in its stead. The basement was composed of vaults & was used for burials, having been duly consecrated for that purpose in 1831. The new vestry room was vested in the same person or persons as the previous vestry room had been vested in. Under Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855 (c. 120), an elective vestry for the parish of St. M. was constituted & incorporated, before that Act the vestry, as a vestry, having no corporate existence. In 1891 the vestry, having erected a more commodious meeting place, by resolution gave up possession of the old vestry room to the vicar & churchwardens, who had been made a corp., & who were at that time using, as they still did, a considerable portion of the premises in question for services & meetings. Under London Government Act, 1899, the secular powers & property of the vestry of St. M. were, speaking generally, transferred to the mayor, etc., of the city of W. In 1903 the mayor, etc., of the city of W. instituted an action against the vicar & churchwardens of the parish of St. M. for a declaration that the old vestry hall & the site thereof belonged to the corp.:—Held: (1) by virtue of 1816 Act, s. 4, the then vestry room became vested in the vicar of the parish of St. M., & it was not divested by Poor Relief Act, 1819 (c. 12); (2) the vestry room in question likewise became vested in the vicar, & the property in such vestry room did not become transferred to the corp. of W. under the London Government Act, 1899.—*WESTMINSTER CORPN. v. 153. — Permission by burial board.]—Apart from 1880 Act, a person commits an ecclesiastical offence if not being in orders, or not being authorised in that behalf by the incumbent of the parish, he conducts a religious service at a burial in the consecrated portion of a cemetery which is the burial ground of such parish; & it is an illegal act on the part of a burial board knowingly to permit such unqualified or unauthorised person so to act.—*WOOD v. bury the child, because the churchyard was full, but afterwards room was found. H. attended with his friends on the day named in the notice, but had to postpone the funeral to a future day. H. sued the vicar for the expenses of the abortive funeral on the first day:—Held: the notice of burial was bad, & the defect was not waived by what the vicar had done thereafter.—*HOARE v. 155. — By burial board—To incumbent—Cemetery.]—There is no obligation upon a burial board to cause the notice required by 1880 Act, s. 1, to be given to an incumbent before such board permits a burial to take place in the consecrated portion of their cemetery without the performance of the burial service according to the rites of the Church of England.—*WOOD v. SECT. 2.—BY STATUTE.

171. When applicable—Sanction of vestrymen necessary—New church & cemetery.]—By a local Act a new church & cemetery were directed to be built, & made in the parish of St. M., & the vestrymen of the parish were thereby authorised to settle a table of fees for burials in such new church & cemetery, which were not to be fixed at a lower amount than the fees which had been customarily paid for burials in the old church & burial ground. The vestrymen had not settled any such table of fees:—Held: the ct. could not enforce the payment of fees for burials in the new church & cemetery, same not having been fixed by the vestrymen.—SPRY v. ST. MARYLEBONE (DIRECTORS & GUARDIANS) (1839), 2 Curt. 5; 3 J. P. 66; 163 E. R. 318.

172. Persons entitled—Chapel & additional cemetery provided—Fees reserved to lay rector—Surplice fees.]—Before the passing of a local Act, the incumbent or minister of the parish of St. M., which was a lay rectory, by himself or his curates, performed the duty on all burials in the parish, & received the surplice fees thereon, as part of the profits of the living. By that Act the vestry of the parish were empowered to provide an additional cemetery for the parish, & erect a chapel thereon, & by s. 41, the lay rector was empowered to appoint a burying minister, to officiate in burying the dead in the cemetery, a reader to perform divine service, & preach in the chapel, & if it should seem right to the vestry, another minister to be preacher in the chapel, such reader & preacher to receive for their salaries such sums as the vestry should appoint. By s. 89, nothing therein contained was to lessen or alter the title of the lay rector, or the person for the time being entitled to the rectory & advowson, to the ecclesiastical dues, oblations, & obventions belonging thereto. By a subsequent Act, for effectuating the building of four district churches within the parish, it was enacted that the parish should remain & be one entire & undivided parish for all ecclesiastical & civil purposes, & pltf. was subsequently appointed rector of the parish. By a later Act, whereby the four districts were made district rectories for certain purposes, the district rectors were empowered to solemnise marriages & baptisms, & take all fees for same, but nothing therein contained was to alter or affect the law respecting burials or burial fees within the parish. In 1824, W. was presented by the Crown, in whose hands the lay rectory then was, to the chapel built under the first Act, & thenceforth performed all the burials there, & received the burial fees, which he paid over to pltf., the rector, until 1839, when deft., by direction of the vestry, received & retained them:—Held: pltf. was entitled to recover the amount of such fees in an action for money had & received.—SPRY v. EMPEROR (1840), 6 M. & W. 639; 10 L. J. Ex. 50; 151 E. R. 568.

173. Burial of paupers.]—Upon a special case stated as to the right of pltf., as rector of the parish of St. M., & minister of the new church of that parish, to recover certain fees alleged to be due from the burial of certain paupers in the new burial ground of the parish, it appeared that, in 1733, the then minister or rector of the parish, & the parochial authorities, referred to a third person the settlement of the minister's fees, & a table of fees was prepared by the referee. From that time down to 1838, a fee of 1s. 6d. was paid by the parish officers to the minister or rector of the parish for the burial of a pauper in any of the cemeteries of the parish. By a local Act, the vestrymen of St. M. were empowered to purchase land for erecting a new church & new chapels, & making a new burial ground. By s. 35, H., the then rector, & his successors, were declared to be ministers of the new church, & the patron of the living was empowered to appoint successively ministers of the new church who were to enjoy such oblations, mortuaries, glebes, tithes, profits, & other ecclesiastical dues, as the present minister ought to have. Power was also given to the patron to appoint a minister to officiate in burying the dead in the new burial ground, but no person was appointed in pursuance thereof. By s. 49 the vestrymen were empowered to settle the rates & fees for burial in the new burial ground, & to alter & amend same. By s. 50, they were prohibited from reducing the burial fees below the amount then payable for burials in the parish. By s. 71, they were empowered to borrow £150,000 on credit of the rates & burial fees, & to assign any portion of such rates or fees to the persons advancing the money. In pursuance of the Act, the vestry, in 1835, settled a table of fees, of which an item was: "Paupers from the workhouse 2s. 6d."; & from that time 1s. 6d. had been paid to the rector, & 1s. to the clerk & sexton, on such burials. The burial service had not been performed by the rector or any of his curates, but by the reader of one of the new chapels:—Held: (1) no fee was shown to be due to pltf., either by custom or by virtue of the Act of Parliament; (2) if such fee were due, it must be recovered in the Ecclesiastical Ct.—SPRY v. GALLOP (1847), 16 M. & W. 716; Cripps' Church Cas. 28; 16 L. J. Ex. 218; 12 J. P. 233; 153 E. R. 1378.

174. — Divided parish.]—Under Church Building Act, 1819 (c. 134), & by an Order in Council, a district, with a district church, was parted off from the parish of St. M., but the Order in Council directed that, during the incumbency of the then rector of St. M., two-thirds of the fees to be received for (inter alia) burials at the district church should "belong & be paid" to the rector, & one-third to the district minister:—Held: where the minister had actually received the entire fees, the rector might recover from him the two-thirds in an action for money had & received, but the Act & Order in Council did not oblige the minister to receive the fees or any part of them, & the rector could not maintain assumpsit against him on a supposed duty to take the fees & pay the rector his two-thirds.—KING v. ALSTON (1848), 12 Q. B. 971; 18 L. J. Q. B. 59; 12 L. T. O. S. 241; 13 Jur. 297; 116 E. R. 1134.

Annotation:—Distd. Aulton v. Roberts (1857), 26 L. J. Ex. 380.

175. — Burials in cemetery.]—In 1823, a piece of ground in the parish of St. M., L., was purchased by subscription of the inhabitants, & conveyed to the comrs. for building new churches, who erected a chapel on part of it & inclosed the remainder for a burial ground. In 1827, the chapel & burial ground were consecrated. In 1828 an Order in Council was made & published, whereby, after reciting Church Building Act, 1818 (c. 45), ss. 16, 22, & also reciting that the comrs. had made a representation to the Crown respecting the increase of population & insufficient church accommodation in the parish, & that it appeared to the comrs. expedient that an ecclesiastical district should be assigned to the new chapel under Church Building Act, 1819 (c. 134), & that the consent of the bishop had been obtained, his Majesty ordered that the proposed division should be made & effected according to the above Acts. The boundaries of the district were duly enrolled. No Order in Council was made respecting the performance of the offices of the church in the chapel, or the appropriation of the fees payable in respect thereof, nor did the comrs. make any order as to whether the fees for burials, etc., were to be reserved to the incumbent of the parish, or assigned to the curate of the chapel, or whether burials, etc., should be performed in such chapel. In 1848, the L. corpn. established a cemetery within the borough, under a local Act, by which the burial service over deceased persons removed for interment in the cemetery was to be performed by, & the fees paid to, the incumbent, who might have been required to perform the service, & would have been entitled to the fees, if the interment had taken place in his parish or ecclesiastical district:—Held: the Order in Council was made under Church Building Act, 1818, s. 21, & not under Church Building Act, 1819, s. 16, & upon enrolment of the boundaries, the chapelry became a separate district parish for all ecclesiastical purposes, & after the death of the then incumbent of the original parish, the curate of the district parish was entitled to the fees for burial, both in his parish & in respect of deceased persons removed therefrom for interment in the cemetery.—EDGEELL v. BURNABY (1853), 8 Exch. 788; 23 L. J. Ex. 65; 21 L. T. O. S. 144; 17 J. P. 520; 155 E. R. 1571.

176. — Surplus fees.]—Held: under a local Act which made the parish of W. a district parish from that of St. D., the rector for the time being of the parish of W. was entitled to receive from the churchwardens the yearly sum of £100 out of the burial fees of the parish, but was not entitled to the surplus burial fees beyond the amount of £100, such fees being applicable by the churchwardens to parochial purposes.—KING v. LIQUORISH (1852), 18 L. T. O. S. 302; 16 J. P. Jo. 101.

177. — District chapelry.]—In 1810, a chapel was purchased for the purpose of being consecrated as a chapel of ease in the parish of A. The chapel was consecrated under a deed, dated Aug. 25, 1810, by which the parish clerk & sexton were to be entitled to the fees for (inter alia) burials in the chapel & cemetery thereof, as if they had taken place in the mother church. By an Order in Council, of Aug. 2, 1853, the chapel was created a district chapelry under Church Building Act, 1819 (c. 134), s. 16. Pltf., who was clerk & sexton of the parish of A., having brought an action for money had & received, against deft., the clerk & sexton of the chapel, for the fees received by him for burials in the chapel:—Held: (1) the action for money had & received would lie for these fees; (2) this being a "district chapelry," was not within Church Building Act, 1819, s. 10,

178. — Burials by cemetery company.]—

By a private Act of Parliament establishing a cemetery co. it was enacted that upon the interment of every person within the cemetery the co. should pay to the incumbent for the time being of the church or chapel of the parish, or other ecclesiastical division of the parish, from which such person should be removed for the purpose of interment, certain fees. The district chapelry of J. was carved out of the larger district parish of M. after the passing of the Act, & never had any burial ground of its own:—Held: the incumbent of J., & not of M., was entitled to the fees payable by the cemetery co. for the interment of persons removed from the district of J., & this, notwithstanding the district of J. had been constituted since the passing of the cemetery co.'s Act.—VAUGHAN v. SOUTH METROPOLITAN CEMETERY CO. (1860), 1 John. & H. 256; 30 L. J. Ch. 265; 3 L. T. 727; 25 J. P. 212; 7 Jur. N. S. 159; 9 W. R. 228; 70 E. R. 743.

—A cemetery co. were incorporated by a local Act, & by one sect. it was enacted that "upon the interment of every person within the consecrated part of the cemetery who shall appear by the books of the co. to have been removed for the purpose of interment from" certain parishes including C., "the co. shall pay unto the incumbent for the time being of the church or chapel of the parish, or other ecclesiastical district or division of the parish, from which such person shall be so removed" certain fees. By another sect. "every such incumbent shall pay to the churchwardens or chapelwardens for the time being of his church or chapel" out of the fees received by him certain amounts, "to be respectively paid & applied by them in the same manner & amongst the same persons, including the incumbents of such churches & chapels, & in the same proportions as the fees on interments, which the churchwardens & chapelwardens are entitled to receive in their respective parishes, districts, or divisions of parishes, are & ought by law & custom to be paid & applied." Pltf. was the rector of C., & defts. were respectively the incumbents of three ecclesiastical districts originally comprised within the limits of C.; none of them were in existence at the time of passing the local Act. For some years previous to the establishment of the cemetery the churchyard of C. was used as a place of interment of persons dying within the parish, & the rector of C. for the time being was entitled to all fees arising or accruing in respect of such interments. Pltf., as rector of C., claimed to recover against defts. respectively the fees for the interment of persons removed from the ecclesiastical districts of which they respectively were incumbents:—Held: defts. were entitled to the fees claimed by pltf.—BOWYER v. STANTIAL (1878), 3 Ex. D. 315; sub nom. BOWYER v. SOUTH METROPOLITAN CEMETERY CO., 38 L. T. 271; 42 J. P. 389, C. A.

180. Amount recoverable—Whether power to increase fees.]—One sect. of a local Act directed that fees in the schedule thereto, & no other, should be taken in the parish of L. Another sect. empowered the Church Building Comrs., with the consent of the vestry of L. & the bishop of C., to make & fix, & to make alterations in, the table of fees for the parish of L. A third sect. referred to two cemeteries in L., & enacted that such fees only should be demanded & exacted for burials at the cemeteries as were specified & enumerated in the schedule to the Act, as the fees payable at the parish church or parochial chapel. The fees for the parish & the parochial churchyards were afterwards increased by the Church Building Comrs., with the consent of the vestry & bishop, & such increased fees were demanded & received at the cemeteries for burials therein, & subsequently paid by the vestry to the rector:—Held: there was no power to increase the fees for burials in the cemeteries, & the auditor had to the extent of the increase properly disallowed & surcharged the rector with those fees.—R. v. CAMPBELL (1856), 26 L. T. O. S. 239; 20 J. P. 71.

188. Custom admitted—Jurisdiction of spiritual court—Person entitled—Vicar or impropriator.]—On motion for a prohibition because the vicar sued in the spiritual ct. for a mortuary on the suggestion that it was not due by custom to the vicar, but to the impropriator:—Held: prohibition must be refused, because the spiritual ct.

held pleas of mortuaries notwithstanding 21 Hen. 8, c. 6, for that Act only dealt with those which were not due by custom, & in this case it was admitted that the mortuary was due by custom, but the ct. differed as to the person to whom it should be paid.—*MARKE v. 197. Sanction of ordinary—Statutory & other fees.]—The ordinary has jurisdiction in the case of a new parish to settle & approve the propriety of burial fees, although they may not be fees included in those which he has statutory power to fix.

On an application by the vicar & churchwardens of a new parish in the diocese of L. within New Parishes Act, 1843 (c. 37), s. 15, the Chancellor of that diocese fixed for the parish a table of fees containing all such fees as he was empowered & required to fix in pursuance of the above sect., & also confirmed the propriety of whatever fees contained in the table of fees were not included in fees which he was required to fix under the sect., & he ordered that a portion of the burial fees to be received in pursuance of the table of fees fixed by him should be allocated to form a fund for the maintenance & extension of the parish churchyard.—Re HAIGH WITH ASPULL NEW PARISH, [1919] P. 143; 35 T. 199. Validity of rate—Other purposes included—Whether “church” includes “churchyard.”]—

Where the churchwardens of a parish made a single rate for providing necessary additional burial ground for the parish, which could only be done, if at all, under the powers given by Church Building Acts, & also for draining & spouting a chapel in the parish, as at common law:—Held: the rate could not be enforced. Qu.: whether there is any power to make a rate for enlarging or for purchasing a burial ground.

Where the statutes referred to in this argument speak of “existing churches,” those words may include churchyards as well as the building itself (ERLE, J.).—*R. v. has not been given, the latter statute not repealing the former, but merely providing a further mode of raising the necessary funds.—FARNELL v. SMITH (1855), 15 C. B. 572; 25 L. T. O. S. 68; 19 J. P. 87; 3 W. R. 184; 139 E. R. 548.

201. — Poll refused—Jurisdiction of spiritual court—Prohibition.]—At a vestry held for the parish of P., a resolution was passed, authorising the churchwardens to purchase on behalf of the parish a piece of land for an additional burial ground. A poll was demanded & refused. Upon the authority of this resolution, the Church Building Comrs., acting under Church Building Act, 1822 (c. 72), s. 26, authorised the parish to purchase the land & to levy rates to defray the expenses, which the parish did. Pltf. declined to pay the rate, & a suit for subtraction of church rates was commenced against him in the Ecclesiastical Ct., which he defended on the ground that a poll having been demanded & refused, the desire of the parish to enlarge their burial ground had not, as required by the above Act, been legally expressed. The Ecclesiastical Ct. having decided in favour of the churchwardens by rejecting this defence:—Held: (1) a prohibition to the Ecclesiastical Ct. ought to issue, as the above sect. did not, by giving to the parish in these cases the powers conferred by Church Building Act, 1819 (c. 134), s. 25, impliedly take away the common law right to a poll, for, whatever might be the effect of that sect. in cases where it was applicable, it only applied to the power of a vestry in raising rates, & not to such a proceeding as this; (2) as the Ecclesiastical Ct. had rejected a defence which, if true, was a complete & substantial answer to the libel, & as pltf. was bound in the temporal ct. to establish the truth of this defence, the prohibition ought to be that no further proceedings be taken in the Ecclesiastical Ct., & not merely until that ct. should alter its decision on the point of law.—WHITE v. STEELE (1862), 12 C. B. N. S. 383; 31 L. J. C. P. 265; 6 L. T. 686; 8 Jur. N. S. 1177; 142 E. R. 1191; subsequent proceedings, 13 C. B. N. S. 231.

202. "Parish"—Separate overseers—Separate maintenance of poor.]—1852 Act, authorising the formation of a burial board in a "parish," is applicable to a parish not having separate overseers, nor separately maintaining its poor. The interpretation clause, s. 52, extends the meaning of the word to places, not parishes, having separate overseers & separately maintaining their own poor, but does not exclude parishes which, for any reason, do not fulfil those conditions.—R. v. SUDBURY BURIAL BOARD (1858), E. B. & E. 264; 27 L. J. Q. B. 232; 31 L. T. O. S. 161; 22 J. P. 706; 4 Jur. N. S. 948; 6 W. R. 551; 120 E. R. 506.

SECT. 2.—OPENING NEW BURIAL GROUNDS OR ADDITIONS.

203. Prohibition by Order in Council—Approval of Secretary of State—Addition to cemetery.]—The burial board of P., where by Order in Council no new burial ground was to be opened without the previous approval of one of the Secretaries of State, contracted in 1889 with the consent of the vestry for the purchase of a piece of land for the purpose of adding to their existing cemetery. The purchase was not to be completed till June, 1896. In the meantime no interest was to run, & the vendor was to be at liberty to remove the clay & make bricks on the land. In 1895 the property & liabilities of the board were transferred to the corp'n. Shortly before the time for completion the corp'n. applied to the Home Secretary for his approval of the land as a burial ground, which he refused to give. The corp'n. then declined to complete, & the vendor sued for specific performance or damages:—Held: (1) 1853 Act, s. 6, applied to an addition to an existing burial ground; (2) the sect. did not prohibit the contracting to purchase land with the consent of the vestry for the purpose of a burial ground without the approval of a Secretary of State, & the contract was binding & the vendor entitled to damages for the breach of it, he not insisting on specific performance.—WARD v. PORTSMOUTH CORPN., [1898] 2 Ch. 191; 67 L. J. Ch. 489; 78 L. T. 771; 62 J. P. 820; 46 W. R. 610; 14 T. L. R. 472, C. A.

204. — — —.]—1853 Act, ss. 1, 6, apply to an addition to an existing burial ground as well as to an altogether new burial ground.

Where a piece of land was set apart for the purposes of interment, & part of it was used for those purposes, in contravention of an Order in Council made under 1853 Act, s. 1:—Held: the definition of a "burial ground" in Open Spaces Act, 1887 (c. 32), s. 4, which was by that Act rendered applicable to 1884 Act, included land which had been "set apart for the purposes of interment," even though it was so set apart in contravention of the Order in Council, & could never have been lawfully used for the purposes of interment, & s. 3 of the last-mentioned Act prohibited the use of any part of the land so set apart for building purposes.—Re BOSWORTH & GRAVESEND CORPN., [1905] 2 K. SECT. 3.—VESTRIES AND MEETINGS IN NATURE OF VESTRY.

205. Voting at meeting—Demand of poll—"Division."]—A local Act, for regulating the affairs & the mode of conducting the business of a parish, containing upwards of 10,000 ratepayers entitled to vote at the vestry meetings, directed that at such meetings all questions should in the first instance be determined by a show of hands, which determination should be conclusive unless a "division" was demanded. It also enacted, that in all cases of "division" the votes should be taken in the manner prescribed by 58 Geo. 3, c. 69. At a vestry meeting duly convened, after a show of hands had been taken upon a question before the meeting, a division was demanded, & thereupon a poll of the whole parish was taken:—Held: having regard to the number of persons entitled to vote, & the plurality of votes given to the ratepayers by 58 Geo. 3, c. 69, a "division" must be construed as equivalent to a poll of the parish, & not be confined to the ratepayers actually present at the meeting. The best mode of putting resolutions & amendments pointed out.—ELT v. ST. MARY'S, ISLINGTON, BURIAL BOARD (1854), Kay, 449; 18 J. P. 229; 69 E. R. 190.

206. What vestry has power—Election under local Act.]—By a local Act for making the township of S. a distinct parish, it was enacted that a new church & burial place adjoining should be the parish church & churchyard of the parish, & a vestry was constituted "for the preserving better order in the parish," & for other enumerated purposes relating to the church. On mandamus to convene a meeting of this vestry for determining whether a burial ground should be provided, under 1853 Act:—Held: this vestry was "a vestry elected under the provisions of a local Act" within 1852 Act, s. 52.—R. v. PETERS (1856), 6 E. & B. 225; 119 E. R. 848; sub nom. Re SUNDERLAND VESTRY, 25 L. J. Q. B. 271; 20 J. P. 581; 2 Jur. N. S. 424; 4 W. R. 480.

207. — General vestry.]—Under a local Act for the administration of the poor laws in the parish of L. a select vestry was to be elected to carry out the Act & to be the board of guardians of the poor, with the duties & privileges of such guardians in general. A select vestry was elected, & performed the duties imposed by the Act, the vestry of the parish at large retaining all its functions in the general management of the parish:—Held: the select vestry was not "a vestry elected under a local Act for the government of the parish" within 1852 Act, s. 52, & the right to appoint a burial board under ss. 10, 11, was in the general vestry.—R. v. GLADSTONE (1857), 7 E. & B. 575; 5 W. R. 530; 119 E. R. 1359; sub nom. Re LIVERPOOL BURIAL BOARD, Ex p. URQUHART, 26 L. J. Q. B. 213; 29 L. T. O. S. 90; 21 J. P. 726; 3 Jur. N. S. 441.

TONBRIDGE OVERSEERS* (1859), 2 E. & E. 9; 28 L. J. M. C. 251; 33 L. T. O. S. 202; 23 J. P. 773; 5 Jur. N. S. 1293; 7 W. R. 553; 121 E. R. 4.

210. — — —]—The existence of a legally constituted burial board for the whole of a parish, does not prevent the vestry of an ecclesiastical district formed out of such parish under Church Building Act, 1831 (c. 38), & which does not separately maintain its own poor, from legally appointing a burial board for such district under 1855 Act, s. 12.—*R. v. 211. Whole parish—Although divided.]—The fact that a common law parish has been divided, under Church Building Act, 1818 (c. 45), into district parishes for ecclesiastical purposes, does not disentitle the ratepayers of such common law parish from meeting in vestry & resolving upon having a burial ground, & nominating a burial board for such common law parish.

The common law parish of W. was in 1840, by an Order in Council, divided into three district parishes for ecclesiastical purposes, pursuant to Church Building Act, 1818, the old burial ground remaining common to the new districts. At a vestry of the common law parish, held pursuant to 1852 Act, s. 10, & 1853 Act, s. 7, it was resolved that a burial ground should be provided for such parish, & a burial board was then appointed:—Held: the proceedings were lawful, & the board was well constituted for the entire common law parish.—R. v. WALCOT OVERSEERS (1862), 2 B. & S. 555; 31 L. J. M. C. 217; 6 L. T. 320; 26 J. P. 500; 10 W. R. 599; 121 E. R. 1179.

212. United parishes—Single burial board.]—The parish of A. & the hamlet of C. constituted for all ecclesiastical purposes one parish; each place separately maintained its own poor, appointed its own overseers, surveyors of highways, etc., but the ratepayers of each were accustomed to meet in one vestry & transact all business usually transacted at a parish vestry, excepting the above matters. By an Order in Council the burial ground for the parish & hamlet was ordered to be closed, whereupon a vestry of the two places met, & resolved that a burial ground should be provided for the parish, & a burial board was afterwards appointed, the Secretary of State having certified his approval. Money was afterwards borrowed to provide a burial ground, which was charged upon the parish of A. The burial board having required a sum of money for paying the interest upon the money borrowed, & for a sinking fund, they made an order upon the overseers of C. for the payment of a certain sum as their proportion:—Held: A. & C. were united parishes within 1855 Act, s. 11, & the united board was well formed, & C. was bound to pay the amount required.—*R. v. B. Membership.

215. Vacancy—How filled.]—A vacancy in a burial board having occurred, & the vestry not having filled it up within one month, as required by 1855 Act, s. 4, nor the burial board having done so:—Held: the vestry was not divested of the power still to appoint.—R. v. SOUTH WREALD OVERSEERS (1864), 5 B. & S. 391; 4 New Rep. 323; 33 L. J. M. C. 193; 10 L. T. 498; 28 J. P. 708; 10 Jur. N. S. 1099; 12 W. R. 873; 122 E. R. 876.

216. Member declining to act—Quo warranto.]—J. presided at a vestry meeting for electing a burial board under 1852 Act, s. 12, & declared himself elected, along with others. The clerk of the vestry duly announced such election to the clerk of the burial board, & the vestry meeting's minutes were duly confirmed, but J. never attended or acted at any meeting of the burial board, nor claimed a right to do so:—Held: as J. had not used the office, an information of quo warranto was not applicable.—R. v. JONES (1873), 28 L. T. 270; 37 J. P. 453.

C. Sanction of Establishment.

217. By Secretary of State.]—The parish of M. was divided into fourteen townships, each maintaining its own poor & raising its own poor rate, though it had four churchwardens for the whole parish, & had an ancient church & burial ground. In June, 1858, a vestry of the entire parish resolved upon having a new burial ground, & a burial board was appointed. £3,000 having been borrowed for the purposes of the new burial ground, it became necessary to call for £303 6s. 5d. out of the poor rates, to pay the interest, etc., & £55 8s. 7d. was apportioned upon the township, one of the fourteen, of V. The overseers of that township having refused to pay, a mandamus issued to compel payment, to which they made a return that the approval of the Secretary of State had not been obtained to the formation of the burial board, as required by 1857 Act, s. 9, & that the board was not legally formed:—Held: the return was a good answer to the mandamus.—R. v. WRIGHT (1861), 5 L. T. 345; 26 J. P. 23; 8 Jur. N. S. 260; 10 W. R. 86.

SUB-SECT. 2.—JOINT BURIAL BOARDS.

218. Parishes without separate overseers—Joining with hamlet.]—Three parishes, not having separate overseers, & not separately maintaining their own poor, concurred with a hamlet in providing a common burial ground. On application for a mandamus to the burial board for those parishes to raise the purchase-money of the burial ground:—Held: these parishes were not, by 1852 Act, s. 52, precluded from availing themselves of the powers given by 1852 & 1853 Acts.—R. v. SUDBURY BURIAL BOARD (1858), E. B. & E. 264; 27 L. J. Q. B. 232; 31 L. T. O. S. 161; 22 J. P. 706; 4 Jur. N. S. 948; 6 W. R. 551; 120 E. R. 506.

SUB-SECT. 3.—PROCEEDINGS AND POWERS OF BURIAL BOARDS.

219. To raise money—Purposes not stated—Consent of vestry or Secretary of State.]—A burial board cannot raise money for the purposes of the board under Burial Acts without the consent of the vestry or Home Secretary, & where a certificate is signed directing the overseers to pay the board any sum from the rates for defraying the expenses of the board, the certificate must set out the items in respect of which the money is wanted.—R. v. KILHAM, YORKSHIRE, BURIAL BOARD (1885), 1 T. L. R. 678, C. A.

220. To contract—Extras ordered verbally—By surveyor.]—Pltf. contracted to do certain repairs to the chapels & premises of defts. for £38. The contract was accepted by defts., & the seal of the board was affixed to it. During the work the surveyor of defts. verbally ordered pltf. to do many extra small repairs which were not included in the contract. Pltf. sought to recover £13, the cost of these extras, from defts., who denied their liability on the ground that they had not been contracted for under the seal of the board:—Held: the board was not liable, as they were bound to contract for such work as pltf. had executed strictly in accordance with 1852 Act, s. 31.—STEVENS v. HOUNSLOW BURIAL BOARD (1889), 61 L. T. 839; 54 J. P. 309; 38 W. R. 236, D. C.

See, generally, CORPORATIONS.

221. Minute books—Inspection by solicitor—Acting for third party—Mandamus.]—A ratepayer made an application to an urban district council, being the burial board, for his solrs. to inspect & take copies of the minutes. The solrs. were acting for a co., which for another matter wished to obtain inspection of the books. The board refused to allow the solrs. to inspect, on the ground that the ratepayer alone was the person to whom they were bound to produce the books, & that the application was not made bonâ fide, but for another purpose, that was indirectly obtaining inspection on behalf of the co. for which the solrs. were also acting:—Held: the ct. would not, in the exercise of their discretion, make absolute a rule for a writ of mandamus, as the application was not made bonâ fide for the purpose of the ratepayer, but for another purpose.—R. v. WIMBLEDON URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL, Ex p. HATTON (1897), 77 L. T. 599; 62 J. P. 84; 14 T. L. R. 146, D. C.

SUB-SECT. 4.—FINANCES OF BURIAL BOARDS.

222. Borrowing powers—Consent of vestry.]—A burial board, appointed under 1852 Act, laid before the vestry of the parish a proposal that the board should be authorised to borrow any sums of money not exceeding £20,000, for their purposes. This proposal was not put to the vote by a show of hands, but was met by an amendment that the matter should be referred back to the board to be reconsidered, & a show of hands being taken upon this amendment, it was carried by a majority. A division was then demanded, whereupon the chairman said that there should be a poll upon the original proposal & the amendment together, & that the votes must be affirmatively for one or the other, & not negatively as to either, & that no further amendment could afterwards be received. A majority of affirmative votes were given for the original resolution:—Held: the proceeding was too informal to authorise the burial board to borrow the money.—ELT v. ST. MARY'S, ISLINGTON, BURIAL BOARD (1854), Kay, 449; 18 J. P. 229; 69 E. R. 190.

constituted under 1852 Act, & in pursuance of the Act a burial ground was provided with money charged upon the poor rate of the parish, & the surplus over expenditure of the income derived from the fees charged by the board was regularly applied in aid of the poor rate:—Held: the board were liable to be assessed to income tax in respect of such surplus, inasmuch as the provision requiring it to be applied in aid of the poor rate did not prevent it from being a "profit" within Income Tax Act, 1842 (c. 35), s. 60.—PADDINGTON BURIAL BOARD v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS. (1884), 13 Q. B. D. 9; 53 L. J. Q. B. 224; 50 L. T. 211; 48 J. P. 311; 32 W. R. 551; 2 Tax Cas. 46, D. C.

225. Fees payable to vestry—"Parochial purpose"—1852 Act, s. 36.]—The repair of a parish church is a "parochial purpose" within the above sect., & fees received by a burial board under s. 34 are applicable to that purpose.—R. v. ST. MARYLEBONE VESTRY, [1895] 1 Q. B. 771; 64 L. J. Q. B. 622; 72 L. T. 11; 11 T. L. R. 120; 14 R. 172, C. A.

SUB-SECT. 5.—ACQUISITION OF LAND.

226. Purchase-price—By annual payments.—A burial board duly constituted under 1852 & 1853 Acts, agreed to purchase parish lands on the terms of paying an annual sum, the principal to be secured either on the land or as a charge on the church rate or poor rate. On petition to carry out this agreement:—Held: the money must be paid into ct. in a gross sum, the dividends to be paid to the vendors until invested in land, & the costs to be paid by the burial board. Semble: the ct. would not sanction a perpetual charge.—Re BARROW (1855), 3 W. R. 635.

227. Charity lands—Application to court—Sanction of Charity Commissioners.—The ct. refused to entertain an application by a burial board for the purchase of a piece of land for the purposes of their cemetery, where the sanction of the Charity Comrs. to the application had not first been obtained, although the matter was of a pressing nature.

In such an application it is not necessary to show that the comrs. approve the proposal, but only that the application to the ct. is made with their permission.—Re WATFORD BURIAL BOARD, Ex p. WATFORD BURIAL BOARD (1856), 27 L. T. O. S. 316; 20 J. P. 741; 2 Jur. N. S. 1045.

228. — Approval by vestry.—A burial board made their report to the vestry approving a site for a burial ground, & representing that it could be obtained without any cost to the parish, it being charity land belonging to the parish. A resolution of the vestry was passed approving of the site, as required by 1852 Act, s. 29. The approval of the Poor Law Board, the Charity Comrs., & the Secretary of State was also obtained. It was afterwards ascertained that the land belonged to a charity not for the benefit of the parish generally, but of a particular class of householders, & another vestry meeting was held, at which, upon a poll being taken, the former resolution of the vestry was reversed. The burial board thereupon presented their petition to obtain the authority of the ct. to take the proposed site, the board offering to pay for the site such sum as the ct. should think proper:—Held: there had been no due "approval of the vestry" within s. 29, & the petition must be dismissed, but without costs.—Re EGHAM BURIAL BOARD (1857), 30 L. T. O. S. 163; 21 J. P. 563; 3 Jur. N. S. 956.

SUB-SECT. 6.—CONTROL OF BURIAL GROUNDS.

229. Inscription on memorial—Jurisdiction of consistory court.—A burial board may object to the inscription on a memorial, but any person so hindered by the board may appeal to the consistory ct.—CARLISLE'S (DEAN) CASE (1866), Times, Dec. 21st.

230. Planting & ornamenting grave—Grant of exclusive right—Subsequent regulations.—A burial board granted to R. "the right & privilege of constructing a private grave" in their cemetery, & "the exclusive right of burial & interment therein," "to hold to her in perpetuity, for the purpose of burial & of erecting or placing therein a monument or stone," with a proviso that, if such monument or stone with the appurtenances should not be kept in repair, according to such regulations as should be made by the board for the management of the cemetery, the grant should be void. R. constructed a grave, & placed a headstone & a kerb round it, & planted the space with shrubs & flowers:—Held: it was not competent to the board by a regulation subsequently made by them for the management of the cemetery to deprive R. of the right of planting & ornamenting the grave.—ASHBY v. HARRIS (1868), L. R. 3 C. P. 523; 37 L. J. M. C. 164; 18 L. T. 719; 32 J. P. 567; 16 W. R. 869.

231. ——Defts., a burial board, had provided a burial ground under 1852 Act. For the purpose of burying a deceased daughter, pltf. purchased from defts., & they conveyed to him, "the exclusive right of burial" in a grave space in their burial ground in perpetuity, & they also granted him the right to erect a gravestone on the grave. He afterwards placed upon the grave a wreath &, to protect it, a glass shade covered with a wire frame. It was the general rule of defts. never to allow the placing of such glass shades on the graves in their burial ground, & defts. removed the glass shade & wire frame without the consent of pltf.:—Held: (1) pltf. had only acquired such rights as, under 1852 Act, s. 33, defts. were empowered to sell, & such rights did not include a right to place the glass shade & wire covering on the grave; (2) in the exercise of the control vested in them by s. 38, defts. were entitled to remove same.—*MCGOUGH v. 235. — Additional ground—Mandamus.]—In 1894 certain land was purchased as an addition to the old burial ground of B. The new portion had been divided, & the Home Secretary had given his sanction for interments in the additional ground. The burial board refused to apply to the bishop of the diocese to consecrate a portion of the additional ground under 1857 Act, s. 12, on the ground that that sect. only applied to new burial grounds, & not to additions to an old burial ground:—Held: the mandamus must go.—R. v. BASINGSTOKE BURIAL BOARD (1896), 41 Sol. Jo. 30; 60 J. P. Jo. 708.

236. — Plot included in error—Effect of consecration.]—A burial authority, which had acquired land for a new cemetery, petitioned the Secretary of State, under 1853 Act, s. 7, for his sanction to the division of the ground into four approximately equal parts, of which one part, called plot A, was to be consecrated; the sanction was duly given. Subsequently a petition was presented on behalf of the burial board to the bishop of the diocese, praying for the consecration of plots A & C; the latter was apparently inserted in error. Both plots were duly consecrated, all the legal requirements & formalities as to the consecration being complied with:—Held: plot C, having once been consecrated with the proper legal formalities, remained consecrated ground, notwithstanding the want of the sanction of the Secretary of State to its consecration.—WILLIAMS v. BRITON FERRY BURIAL BOARD, [1905] 2 K. B. 565; 74 L. J. K. B. 840; 92 L. T. 696; 69 J. P. 313; 54 W. R. 187; 3 L. G. R. 859, D. C.

237. Conduct of service in.]—1852 Act, s. 32, preserves to the sexton of a parish the right of performing, in the burial ground established under that Act, his duties as sexton in respect of the burial of parishioners & inhabitants of the parish, & the burial board are not entitled to refuse to allow him to perform those duties on the ground that they choose to have them performed by their own servants; & the sexton can justify an entry on the ground, notwithstanding the board's refusal to admit him, in order to perform his duties in circumstances in which he would have been entitled to perform similar duties in the old parish burying ground.

It is the intention of the above Act, that the burials of parishioners in the consecrated part of the new burial ground established under that Act, shall be conducted with the same ceremonies & in the same manner as they would have been in the old parish burying ground, & the effect of ss. 30, 32, taken together, is to make the chapel erected in the consecrated part of the new burial ground a substitute for the parish church for the purposes of such burials; & the sexton is entitled to toll the bell in the chapel at such burial, the tolling of the bell being part of the burial rite of the Church of England.

The sexton may delegate the performance of his duties to a deputy.—ST. MARGARET'S, ROCHESTER BURIAL BOARD v. THOMPSON (1871), L. R. 6 C. P.

SUB-SECT. 9.—PERFORMANCE OF SERVICES.

A. By Incumbent.

239. Who entitled—Whether incumbent of district without burial ground—Or where interment by purchase only—Divided district.]—An incumbent of a church or ecclesiastical district, to sustain his right to perform the burial service & receive the fees for interment in a cemetery established under Burial Acts, must show that the inhabitants of the parish or district from which the person dying came had a right to be interred in the churchyard or burial ground of the parish or district, & that he would have had a right to the fees had the person dying been interred therein. But an incumbent of a parish or district having neither a churchyard nor burial ground belonging to the church, or having only a burial ground in which the right to interment could only be obtained by purchase, is not entitled to perform the burial service in a cemetery over the body of a late inhabitant of his district or to claim any fees for the interment, though the burials in the ground in which interments might be purchased are diminished.

In a divided district neither the vicar of the parish nor the incumbents of the churches can claim the fees paid for the burials in a cemetery formed within the district, as none of them collectively or individually fill the character of incumbent within Burial Acts.—HORNBY v. TOXTETH PARK BURIAL BOARD (1862), 31 Beav. 52; 31 L. J. Ch. 643; 6 L. T. 146; 8 Jur. N. S. 531; 10 W. R. 550; 54 E. R. 1056.

240. Divided district.]—In 1851 the church of St. T. was built & consecrated. In 1852, an Order in Council under Church Building Act, 1819 (c. 134), s. 16, authorised services to be performed in the new church, assigned a district to it out of the ancient parish of W., in which it was situated, & granted the incumbent the fees. There was then no burial ground in the district, & the persons dying in it continued to be buried as before in the churchyard of the parish. Pltf. was appointed incumbent of this church in 1854, & in 1856 a burial ground for the whole parish was consecrated, the district of the new church contributing to the rates for providing it. A new rector of the parish was appointed in 1864:—Held: the district of St. T. was a "new parish" within 1857 Act, & pltf., on the first avoidance of the rectory, was entitled to the burial fees in respect of parishioners of St. T. buried within the parish.—CRONSHAW v. WIGAN BURIAL BOARD (1873), L. R. 8 Q. B. 217; 42 L. J. Q. B. 137; 28 L. T. 283, Ex. Ch.

SECT. 4.—ALIENATION OF LAND.

269. Settled land—Specific performance.]—By settlement on marriage it was provided that pltf., tenant for life, should have power to contract for the sale of, & to convey any part of the lands in settlement, in case same should, by virtue of any powers to be contained in any Act of Parliament, be required for the purpose of any railroad, canal, or other undertaking, etc. By an Act of Parliament passed subsequently to the date of the settlement, certain persons, an incorporated body, had power & authority given them to treat & contract for, & purchase & hold lands for the purpose of making a cemetery:—Held: the making of a cemetery was an undertaking authorised by an Act of Parliament, under the words of the settlement, & pltf. was entitled to a specific performance of a contract for sale by him to the co. of part of the lands in settlement.—KENSINGTON (LORD) v. WEST LONDON CEMETERY Co. (1838), 8 L. J. Ch. 81, L. C.

270. For the poor—Gift a charity.]—Under the powers of an Act of Parliament, assented to by the Crown, as lord of a manor, & by the commoners, the Crown granted to the vestry of R. a portion of the common for a workhouse, a cemetery, & "in trust for the employment & support of the poor of the parish":—Held: although this was a charity, the income might properly be applied in aid of the poor rates, & so in relief of the parish.—A.-G. v. BLIZARD (1855), 21 Beav. 233; 25 L. J. Ch. 171; 26 L. T. O. S. 181; 20 J. P. 3; 1 Jur. N. S. 1195; 52 E. R. 848. Annotations:—Distd. A.-G. v. Bushby (1857), 24 Beav. 299. *Consd. Part X.—Position of Burial Grounds.

271. Proximity to dwelling-house—Nonconformist burial ground.]—In the Acts of Parliament in force relating to the burial of the dead certain provisions were contained requiring the consent of the owner & occupier of any dwelling-house within 100 yards of any new burial ground to be given before it was used for burials:—Held: the words prohibitive of opening new burial grounds being general, were not restricted by other parts of the Acts importing that they only applied to grounds established by burial boards under the Acts, & the prohibition extended to burial grounds established by special Nonconformist societies for the use of their members.—GREENWOOD v. WADSWORTH (1873), L. R. 16 Eq. 288; 43 L. J. Ch. 78; 29 L. T. 88; 38 J. P. 116; 21 W. R. 722.

272. — Cemetery—Actual user—Injunction.]—Deft., in 1865, obtained leave from the Home Secretary to convert a piece of land containing twenty acres into a cemetery. He could not succeed in doing so, & the land remained unaltered. In 1876 an attempt was made to get up a co. for the purpose, but the attempt failed. In the following year pltf., owner of a dwelling-house within 100 yards of the nearest part of the land, wrote to deft. to the effect that unless deft. would give an undertaking not to use any part of the land for a cemetery, he should take legal proceedings. Deft. replied to the effect that he had no present intention of converting the land into a cemetery, that he would not give any undertaking not to do so if he found it desirable, but that if he should hereafter wish to use the property in that way, he would give pltf. two months' notice of his intention to do so; & he stated that he should not bury within 100 yards of pltf.'s house without consent. Pltf. thereupon commenced an action, & the ct. granted an interlocutory injunction restraining deft. from using, "for burial or for a cemetery," the ground in question, "or any part thereof":—Held: (1) the injunction must be dissolved, for there was no such threat or intention to use any part of the ground for a cemetery as to warrant the interference of the ct. by injunction, supposing such use to be unlawful; (2) an injunction in the above form could not, in any case, have been supported, for under 1855 Act, s. 9, a cemetery might come within 100 yards of a house, the only thing prohibited being actual

A congregation assembled: several years afterwards the great body of the congregation abandoned their connection with the Free Church; & they, in conjunction with the vendor, assumed to exclude such of the members as continued to adhere to the Free Church:—Held: (1) so long as even one member remained to claim on behalf of the Free Church, the right of that body continued, notwithstanding change of opinion in the body of the members; (2) any interference with such right must be restrained; (3) specific performance of the contract must be decreed.—*A.-G. v. 274. — Objection by vendor of land to burial board.—An action having been brought to restrain an urban district council from using land as a cemetery, except beyond a radius of 100 yards from pltf.'s dwelling-house, it was dismissed on the ground that pltf. was really the mere nominee of the owner of the house & land, who had himself granted the land to the council for the very purpose of the cemetery, & could not thus derogate from his own grant.—TOMS v. 277. Restraint by bye-law — Whether reasonable.—A municipal council in 1884 passed a bye-law forbidding burials "in any existing cemetery now open for burials within the distance of 100 yards from any public building, place of worship, schoolroom, dwelling-house, public pathway, street, road, or place within the borough." There was a cemetery in the borough which had been used since 1862, no part of which was more than 100 yards distant from a place of worship, etc., as mentioned in the bye-law:—Held: the bye-law could not be held to be ultra vires because it had the effect of closing the particular cemetery altogether, & of depriving applt., who had bought a portion of the cemetery in 1879 as a permanent burial place for his family, of the use & enjoyment of his property.—SLATTERY v. 279. Rights of mortgagee — Future interments — Injunction.—The mtgee. of a burial ground has

In 1831 a chapel & a burial ground adjoining were mortgaged. The mtgors. remained in possession, & afterwards, in 1833, graves were sold in perpetuity to different persons, without the concurrence of the mtgees. The burial ground was afterwards closed by Order in Council, & the mtgees. thereupon began to level the ground & deface & destroy the tombstones, etc.:—Held: the mtgees. were bound by the rights granted, & must be restrained from doing any act which would prevent future interments in the family graves with the permission of the Secretary of State, & from removing or injuring the graves or the tombstones, & the mtgees. must replace those which had been removed.—MORELAND v. 280. Compulsory sale—Right to proceeds—Jurisdiction.]—By a local Act of 1792, land was directed to be purchased for an additional burial ground of a parish, & it was provided that the land when purchased was to vest in the vicar & churchwardens of the parish & their successors, for the purpose of a burying ground for the use of the parish for ever. The fees were to be received by the churchwardens, & accounted for to the trustees. In 1816, a body was constituted called the church trustees, consisting of the vicar, churchwardens, & other parishioners; & by a statute in 1821, the Act of 1792 was repealed, except that the additional burying ground purchased under the Act was to remain vested in the vicar & churchwardens & their successors, for ever, for the use of the parish. The church trustees were to fix the amount of the burial fees, which were to be received by the churchwardens, & when they amounted to £200 were to be paid over to the church trustees, who were to apply them to certain defined charitable purposes. Afterwards, by an Order in Council, the additional burial ground was closed for the purposes of burial, but the church trustees continued to receive burial fees for interments in a new cemetery which had been provided. A railway co. having taken part of the additional burial ground, the church trustees petitioned the ct., under Railway Acts, that the purchase-money might be invested to their account & the dividends paid to them:—Held: the ct. had no jurisdiction under Railway Acts to make the order as prayed.

Upon a second petition being presented by the A.-G. for a scheme:—Held: upon the two petitions, the ct. had jurisdiction, & petitioners' rights were not extinguished, but only suspended, & they were entitled to the order as prayed.—Re SR. 281. ——— Persons entitled to burial fees.]—Where a portion of a burial ground was taken up for a certain improvement:—Held: the income of the money produced by the sale of the land should be paid to the persons who would have been entitled to the burial fees, if it had been used for the purpose for which it was dedicated.—*Ex p. Subsequently a portion of the land was taken for public purposes, & a sum paid into ct. under Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 18):—Held: inasmuch as the freehold was in the rector, & he received the burial fees, he was entitled to receive the dividends of the fund in ct. Semle: the parish clerk & sexton had no right to any interest in the fund, although they received certain fees for burials.—*Ex p. 283. ——— Additional ground.]—A rector who has enjoyed the right to burial fees from a burial ground, the freehold of which is vested in trustees, is the person entitled under Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, s. 76, to the receipt of the rents & profits.

By a local Act reciting the insufficiency of an existing churchyard, the rector & churchwardens & certain other persons were constituted trustees, & empowered to enlarge the existing churchyard & to buy land for an additional burial ground, to be conveyed to the rector & churchwardens "for the use of the inhabitants of the parish." In 1849 a portion of the land purchased under the Act was taken by a railway co., & the purchase-money paid into ct. under Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845. The burial ground was subsequently closed for burials:—Held: inasmuch as the land was intended as an addition to the churchyard, the rights of the rector therein were the same as his rights in the old churchyard, so far as they were not affected by the Act under which the land was purchased, & he was entitled to the dividends on the fund in ct. so long as it remained there.—*Ex p. Pltf., the rector, claimed compensation under Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, incorporated with Metropolis Improvement Act, 1863, in respect of the lands so taken, of which he was the owner:—Held: he was entitled to be compensated for the loss which he suffered, but he was not entitled to be compensated upon the principle of treating the land as secularised, & as being of greater value than they were while in his hands, & while they were appropriated to spiritual purposes.—STEBBING v. METROPOLITAN BOARD OF WORKS (1870), L. R. 6 Q. B. 37; 40 L. J. Q. B. 1; 23 L. T. 530; 35 J. P. 437; 19 W. R. 73.

285. Whether land reverts to grantor.]—By an Act of Will. 3, certain land belonging to the parish of L. was set apart & dedicated to the use of a burial ground, & by the sentence of consecration the corp'n. renounced all right to the land. In 1854 the ground was closed against burials by an Order in Council. In 1866 the corp'n. being authorised to take a portion of the burial ground under a local Act, served upon the rector, ordinary, & patron of the parish the usual notice to treat, & upon a reference to arbn. a sum of money was awarded for compensation. The corp'n. subsequently refused to pay, upon the ground that the fee simple of the land reverted to the corp'n. upon its being closed against burials, & the use for which it was dedicated having come an end:—Held: by the Act of Parliament, followed by the sentence of consecration, the land was dedicated for ever to the use of a burial ground, & there was no reverter of the fee to the corpn., but, if necessary, the ct. would presume a conveyance of the legal estate by the corpn.—*CAMPBELL v. 287. Unconsecrated portion—Building leases—Transfer to borough council—Local Government Act, 1899 (c. 14).]—Land bought with ecclesiastical funds was by a private Act vested in the rector & churchwardens of St. G., for ever for a burial ground for the inhabitants of the parish. The rector & his successors were to have the burial fees. Under the direction of the vestry, the rector & churchwardens granted building leases of the unconsecrated part of the land. In 1854 the burial ground was closed by an Order in Council. As the building leases fell in & the buildings were pulled down the rector & churchwardens, under the direction of the vestry, granted fresh leases:—Held: (1) the land was originally Church property & did not cease to be Church property by virtue of 1857 Act, s. 24, & on the passing of London Government Act, 1899, which by s. 4 transferred the powers & duties of vestries to borough councils, but by s. 23 excepted any powers or duties relating to the affairs of the Church or any interest of a vestry in any Church property, the power & duty to direct the application of the proceeds of the leases did not pass to the W. corpn. as the borough council, but remained in the vestry under 1857 Act, s. 24; (2) the question to what purposes the proceeds of the leases ought to be applied could not be determined in this litigation.—*ST. 289. — Churchyard—Duty of churchwardens—Distinct townships.]—The churchyard of the parish of W. having become insufficient for the purposes of burial, a detached piece of land was in 1838 conveyed to the comrs. under Church Building Acts as an addition to it. The parish of W. consisted of the township of W. & five other townships, each of these six townships having separate overseers & a separate poor rate. The above piece of land, which was situate in the township of W., was used as the burial ground for the whole parish until 1854, when it was closed by Order in Council, & a burial board for the township of W. was formed:—Held: (1) under 1855 Act, s. 18, where a burial ground was closed by Order in Council, if it was a churchyard it must be kept in order by the churchwardens, & if a cemetery formed by a burial board, then by the burial board, & the ground in question, being a churchyard, was to be kept in order, not by the burial board, but by the churchwardens; (2) the expenses of keeping the ground in order were to be repaid to the churchwardens out of the rate for the township of W., being a place having a separate poor rate within which the ground was situate, & not out of the rates of all the townships composing the parish of which it had been the burial ground.—*R. v. Subsequently the vestry sanctioned extensive alterations to the walls of a burial ground, & the senior churchwarden, acting upon such sanction, obtained tenders for the work & entered into contracts, by which he rendered himself liable for the costs of the alterations. Before the contracts were actually signed or any money paid under them by the churchwarden, he sent to the vestry a letter or precept requiring the payment of a sum of money within the amount for which he had made himself liable under the contracts:—Held: (1) the vestry were bound to pay to the churchwarden the amount of expenses for which he, acting under their authority, had rendered himself liable, although not actually paid by him; (2) a letter or precept written by the churchwarden, & stating the sum required, was a sufficient certificate within 1855 Act, s. 18.—*R. v. the co., having ceased to use the land for burial, walled off a portion in which no interment had ever taken place, & sold it. The grant of a faculty was opposed, on the ground that the part of the churchyard to be covered by the extension was a disused burial ground, closed by an Order in Council, & that, by 1884 Act, s. 3, it was not lawful to erect any buildings thereon except for the enlargement of the church:—Held: on the balance of the evidence the part of the churchyard over which it was desired to build formed a portion of the western end of the church destroyed at the time of the Great Fire, which stood east & west, & it had never been set apart or used for burials, & this site, now part of a churchyard, was not a burial ground, & the faculty should issue.—*ST. The trustees sold by auction a disused burial ground, part of these lands, describing it as "building land." The purchasers objecting to complete on the ground that 1884 Act forbade building on the land, the trustees took out a summons to enforce completion of the purchase, & contended that the private Act of 1883 constituted a sale or disposition under the authority of an Act of Parliament so as to bring this land within the exception in 1884 Act, s. 5:—Held: the Act of 1883 did not constitute a sale or disposition under the authority of an Act of Parliament, & the trustees had no power to sell the land as building land.—*Re ST. A portion of the land so acquired was afterwards resold by the comrs. as surplus land to the defts., a body of charity trustees who, with the consent of the Charity Comrs., let it for general building purposes. In an action for an injunction to restrain defts. from building upon the land:—Held: (1) it had been "sold under the authority of an Act of Parliament" within 1884 Act, s. 5, & was excepted from the operation of that Act; (2) s. 5 applied to a sale or disposition made after the commencement of the Act.—*A.-G. v. 299. Wall for covered way.—A faculty for the erection on a disused burial ground of a churchyard wall, one side of which would be so built as to form an arcade or covered way for the protection from the weather of frescoes proposed to be painted on the panels of that side of the wall which would be inside the churchyard, was granted, the ordinary being of opinion that the wall or structure in question was not a "building" prohibited to be erected on a disused burial ground by 1st Act, & Open Spaces Act, 1887 (c. 32).—*ST. An adjoining landowner built on his land houses which overlooked the churchyard. To prevent these houses from acquiring any right of light, & to administer the ground with a view to its enjoyment by the public as an open space, the council proposed to erect a screen in the churchyard:—Held: a screen erected for such a purpose would not be a "building" prohibited by the Acts, & the council in erecting it would be rightly administering the Acts.—*PADDINGTON CORPN. v. 306. Workhouse chapel & buildings—Erection before application—Prohibition.—The guardians of the poor of a parish, being owners in fee of land on part of which a parish workhouse had been erected, & another part of which had been consecrated as a burial ground, prayed a faculty in the consistory ct. to authorise the erection of a chapel for the inmates of the workhouse & other buildings connected with the workhouse on a part of the consecrated ground in which no bodies had been buried. The guardians had erected the buildings in ignorance that the ground had once been consecrated for burial. No sentence had been pronounced by the consistory ct., & B., a stranger to the parish & having no interest in the matter, obtained a rule for a prohibition to prohibit proceedings in the suit:—Held: the rule should be discharged because (1) although a faculty ought not to be granted to apply consecrated ground to secular purposes, yet a distinction might be made as to the chapel being an ecclesiastical purpose, & it was not to be presumed that the inferior ct. would exceed its jurisdiction, & grant the faculty for both the purposes prayed; (2) in the exercise of its discretion, the ct. would not interfere at the instance of a stranger.—*R. v. 307. Mortuary—Limitation of user.—The vicar & churchwardens of a parish church petitioned the ordinary for a grant of a faculty, authorising them to erect in a part of the parish churchyard, closed for burials under Order in Council, a mortuary, portions of which would be appropriated to a post-mortem room, to rooms for holding coroners' inquests, & living rooms for the keeper of the mortuary. The grant of the faculty was opposed by a non-resident owner of freehold property in the immediate vicinity of the site of the proposed mortuary, on the ground that the proposed appropriation & use of the churchyard would be contrary to ecclesiastical law:—Held: it being requisite for the health of the parish that a mortuary should be provided & the churchyard being the most suitable site for its erection, the ct. had jurisdiction to grant a faculty for the erection of a mortuary on a portion of the churchyard, with a room to be appropriated to post-mortem examinations, but the ct. ought not to sanction the erection of rooms for holding coroners' inquests or living rooms as adjunct to a mortuary erected in a churchyard.—*HANSARD v. 311. Vestry—Limitation of user.]—The ct. is not precluded by 1884 Act, s. 3, from granting a faculty for the erection on a disused burial ground of a vestry hall abutting on a church with doors leading out of it into the church. The ct. worded the faculty so as to preclude the hall from being used for secular purposes, allowing it to be used for ecclesiastical & charitable purposes.—Re HOLY TRINITY, STEPNEY (1902), 18 T. L. R. 789.

312. — & enlargement of existing vestry.]—The rector & churchwardens of a parish united with six other parishes in the city of London, & the churchwardens of such six parishes petitioned the ordinary for a faculty authorising a choir vestry for the choir of the parish church of the united parishes & an extension of the clergy vestry of the same church being built on a disused burial ground adjoining the church, & to which 1884 Act applied, the choir vestry & extension of the clergy vestry to be placed close alongside the church & with a door leading into it. The grant of the faculty was opposed by the London Cty. Council. It appeared in evidence that the existing accommodation for the robing of the choir was most inconvenient & unsuitable, & that there was no reasonable objection to the proposed extension of the clergy vestry, special services attended by very many clergy being held in the church, & members of the London corpn. when attending the ordinary services robing in the clergy vestry. It further appeared that it was desired by the rector that the two vestries should be separated by a movable wooden partition, so that on occasions they might on the removal of the partition form one long room:—Held: (1) the ct. in its discretion would decree a faculty to issue for the erection of the choir vestry & the extension of the clergy vestry, but a movable partition between them could not be sanctioned, as the two vestries when they formed one room, upwards of 50 feet long & 26 feet wide, would give much more accommodation than would be necessary for the clergy & choir to robe in when in attendance for the services of the church; (2) what was authorised by the faculty was an "enlargement of the church" within 1884 Act, s. 3.—ST. MARGARET'S, LOTHBURY (RECTOR, ETC.) v. LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL, [1909] P. 310; 25 T. L. R. 734.

315. Revocation of faculty—Jurisdiction—Appeal—Infringement of 1884 Act.]—A faculty granted by the ordinary after citation & unappealed against cannot, in the absence of the consent of all the parties interested, be revoked for any cause other than fraud.

In June, 1901, on the application of the vicar & churchwardens of a parish church in the diocese of London within the metropolis, the ordinary sanctioned by faculty the erection on a portion of the churchyard of the parish, a disused burial ground within 1884 Act, in substitution for the erection on the same churchyard of a parish room over two vestries at the south end of the church sanctioned by a previous faculty, granted in Sept., 1900, of a larger hall capable of seating two hundred & forty persons, abutting on the church on its north side immediately behind the chancel, & communicating with the church by means of a door or doors, together with two vestries on the east side of the church, & lavatories & a kitchen on the sides of the hall, the hall to be used when required as a vestry & for Sunday schools & mission services & other parochial purposes. Citations to lead these faculties had been duly served, but no appearance had been entered thereto, & the decrees in pursuance of which they had been granted were not appealed against. In Mar., 1902, the London Cty. Council, the statutory authority to enforce 1884 Act within the metropolis, instituted a suit in the consistory ct. of London, & in their petition prayed that the faculty of June, 1901, should be revoked or amended in such manner that no authority should be given therein to contravene 1884 Act, s. 3. The vicar & churchwardens appeared to defend the suit, & pleaded that the ct. had no jurisdiction to rescind the faculty, but the sole question relied on & argued at the hearing was whether the faculty sought to be revoked contravened the Act. Petitioners did not ask for the revocation of the faculty on the ground of fraud, & gave no evidence either of fraud or of the ct. having been deceived by resps. or third parties. The consistory ct. of London refused to revoke the faculty as prayed, holding that the faculty had been properly granted, as the buildings the erection of which had been sanctioned by it were buildings erected for the purpose of enlarging the church within the exception contained in s. 3:—Held: (1) the refusal of the consistory ct. to revoke the faculty was right, as where in a faculty suit a citation has been duly served no ecclesiastical ct. has jurisdiction in the absence of consent to revoke a faculty obtained in the suit without fraud & unappealed against; (2) the appeal must be dismissed without costs, as the point on which resps. succeeded as to the irrevocability of the faculty, though raised on the —, had not been relied on or argued in the Semble: the faculty sought to be authorised an infringement of 1884 Act, far as it sanctioned the erection of the parish hall & the lavatories & kitchen connected with it, & was to that extent a nullity, & s. 3 did not extend to render lawful the erecting of buildings which, though under the same roof as the church & in physical communication with it, were intended to be used for ecclesiastical purposes for which the church would not be used in ordinary course, & so far as s. 3 related to churches it only permitted buildings to be erected which were in physical communication with the church & enlarged it for the main & primary purpose of religious worship. —LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. 324. By faculty—Removal of bodies.]—The vicar & churchwardens of a parish church in the city of London applied to the ct. to sanction an agreement between the vicar & the Comrs. of Sewers of the city of London to appropriate a portion of the parish churchyard closed for burials, for the widening of an adjoining street. At the hearing of the application it was proved that the proposed widening would be of great convenience to the congregation of the church, & to the public generally:—Held: the ct. had jurisdiction to authorise by faculty the appropriation of the portion of the churchyard required for the proposed widening of the street, so long as it should be used for the purpose, & the removal to a vault to be constructed in the churchyard of all human remains disturbed in carrying out the works authorised by the faculty.

There being no room in the churchyard for the vault directed to be constructed as above mentioned, the ct. ordered the remains disturbed to be placed in the crypts of the church. The Comrs. of Sewers & the vicar & churchwardens subsequently petitioned the ct. to authorise the remains placed in the crypts under the order of the ct., as well as certain other remains found in one of the crypts to be removed to the city of London cemetery at I. in Essex, & it appeared that such removal was expedient on sanitary grounds:—Held: the ct. had jurisdiction to authorise the remains to be removed as prayed, & to be reinterred in the consecrated portion of the I

The churchyard had been closed for burials by an Order in Council except as regarded members of certain families buried there:—Held: (1) an ecclesiastical authority had a discretionary power to make such an order; (2) in the circumstances the faculty should be granted subject to the provision that the remains to be removed should be reinterred in vacant parts of the churchyard, or, if the families interested preferred it, in the parish cemetery, the families interested to be at liberty to superintend the removal of the remains & to select the site of their reinterment, & to have the same right of interment in the new graves as was reserved to them by the Order in Council.—ST. The corp. had joined in petitioning for the faculty, but was omitted from the grant, the ordinary being of opinion that it was preferable that the grant should be made to individuals.—ST. 329. ——— Jurisdiction.]—The vicar & churchwardens of a parish church in the diocese of R.

petitioned the ordinary to decree a faculty to authorise a strip of consecrated ground, added to the churchyard under 1852 Act, but in which burials were prohibited by a Secretary of State's order, being taken therefrom & made part of an adjoining public highway for the purpose of widening same. In their petition they alleged (inter alia) that no interments had ever been made within the portion of the churchyard proposed to be dealt with by the faculty, that inconvenience was caused to persons attending the church from there being no pathway on the side of the highway adjacent to the churchyard, & that the proposed widening would enable such a pathway to be made, & would greatly conduce to the convenience of those attending the church as well as of the general public. The citation to lead the faculty was by order moved for in ct. On the hearing of the motion the Chancellor of the diocese, being of opinion that by granting the faculty prayed for he would be authorising the appropriation of consecrated ground to secular uses, thus entertaining a cause beyond the jurisdiction of the ct., refused the motion.—RE PLUMSTEAD BURIAL GROUND, [1895] P. 225.

330. ——— Appeal—Payment for land.]
The ordinary has jurisdiction to grant a faculty authorising a portion of a consecrated cemetery or churchyard, closed for burials by Order in Council, to be used for widening a public street. Any faculty granted for this purpose should contain exact particulars of the measurements of the portion of the cemetery or churchyard proposed to be used for the widening.

The rector & churchwardens of a parish church in the diocese of E., & the corp. of a borough in which a consecrated cemetery forming an addition to the parish churchyard was situate, petitioned the ordinary for a faculty to authorise a strip of the cemetery being used for widening an adjoining public street, & the boundary wall of the cemetery being set back, so as to form a boundary wall between the remaining portion of the cemetery & the widened street. It appeared that the street proposed to be widened was only 16 ft. wide, & too narrow for the traffic along it, & that the proposed widening would be not only for the general convenience & safety of the public, but particularly of the rector & his parishioners, to the former of whom & the churchwardens moreover, by way of consideration, a sum of money was intended to be paid by the corp. It also appeared that the strip of the cemetery proposed to be thrown into the street had been closed for interments under an Order in Council, & that the proposed alteration of the width of the street had been unanimously approved by the parish vestry. The Chancellor of the diocese refused to issue citation, being of opinion that he had no jurisdiction to grant the faculty prayed for. Petitioners appealed to the Arches Ct. of Canterbury. The Dean of Arches allowed the appeal, retained the cause, & the allegations in the petition having been verified by affidavit, decreed a faculty to issue in accordance with the prayer of petitioners.—RE BIDEFORD PARISH, Ex p. 331. ——— Discretion—No immediate necessity.]

part of a disused burial ground for widening a highway is one which must be exercised with great discretion & reserve, & where the proposal involves an extensive disturbance of graves & is reasonably obnoxious to many of the relatives of the persons buried there, & where there has been no approval by the vicar, churchwardens, & parishioners, such use ought not to be sanctioned is urgent & immediate necessity.—

332. — Grant of user—Acquisition of freehold.]—On an application by the rector & churchwardens & by the London Cty. Council for a faculty authorising an agreement by which the council was to acquire a strip of a disused burial ground for widening a road, the ct. declined to decide whether the council had statutory authority to acquire the freehold of consecrated land, & determined to deal with the case in its discretion under the usual procedure, which was to grant a user of the land.—Re ST. ANNE, LIMEHOUSE (1915), 31 T. L. R. 539.

333. — Land previously vested as open space.]—A private Act of 1898 vested in the local authority a closed burial ground in the metropolis, to be maintained by them as an open space, under & subject to Open Spaces Acts, 1877 (c. 35)—1890 (c. 15). By Metropolitan Open Spaces Act, 1881 (c. 34), s. 5, the estate acquired in any old burial ground was to be held in trust for the enjoyment of the public as an open space. That Act was repealed by Open Spaces Act, 1906 (c. 25), s. 10 of which contained similar provisions:—Held: there was no power by faculty to authorise the local authority to take a portion of the ground for widening the highway, as such action by the local authority would be a breach of the statutory trust.—Ex p. ST. MARYLEBONE BOROUGH COUNCIL (1920), 36 T. L. R. 256.

SUB-SECT. 3.—FOOTPATHS.

334. Public path—Grant of user—Reversion on non-user.]—The use of a small strip of a churchyard, which had been closed for burials, was granted by faculty, so long as it might be required for the purpose, for a public footway to be constructed outside the churchyard wall, the ct. being satisfied that the reasonable convenience of the parishioners attending the church, as well as of the public, could not be otherwise provided for.

If at any future time the ground in question were to cease to be required for this purpose, it would revert to the church.

The ct. has no power to grant the freehold or fee of consecrated ground to a local board, or to any other person, but only the use of it by faculty.—ST. MARY ABBOTS, KENSINGTON (VICAR & CHURCHWARDENS) v. ST. MARY ABBOTS, KENSINGTON (INHABITANTS) (1873), Trist. 17.

335. — Limitation of user.]—In a faculty granted for a fenced-in footpath across a closed parish churchyard for the use of the parishioners with right of way for the public, a proviso was inserted for the footpath to be closed on one day in the year, in order to show that it remained an integral portion of the churchyard with certain

337. Private path—Extension of use—Derogation of grant.]—In 1891 a faculty issued from the registry of the consistory ct. of London authorising the rector & churchwardens of a parish in the city of London, in conjunction with a co. owning premises abutting on the churchyard of the parish, a churchyard closed for burials under Order in Council, to make a private pathway inclosed on the sides by railings, across the churchyard from the co.'s premises to a public thoroughfare on the opposite side of the churchyard, provided a specified rent was paid to the rector & his successors during a term of years. The faculty recited an agreement between the rector & churchwardens & the co. whereby the former agreed to concur in granting to the co. a right of way over the pathway afterwards authorised by the faculty for the term, & on payment of the rent there mentioned, all the works to be done at the co.'s costs, & "such right of footway to be for themselves their tenants & any others authorised by them in common with the rector & churchwardens & any others authorised by the rector & churchwardens." In 1892, after the co. had done & paid for the works & whilst the term of years was still unexpired, the rector & churchwardens agreed with other owners of premises abutting on the churchyard adjacent to the co.'s premises to concur in granting to such owners a right of footway over the pathway made under the faculty of 1891, subject to the rights of the co., & also over a new footpath to be made over a piece of the churchyard to join the footpath so already made, & petitioned the consistory ct. of London for a faculty to make the new footpath & to remove a portion of the above-mentioned railings, the owners of the premises desiring the right of way over the two footpaths intervening in support of the petition. The consistory ct. decided (1) the faculty asked for must be refused, as the faculty of 1891 had granted to the co. & their assigns the enjoyment for a term of years not yet expired of the pathway made under that faculty to the exclusion of the other occupiers of premises abutting on the churchyard, & the ordinary ought not to sanction by faculty anything being done in derogation of the exclusive right so granted; (2) the operation of Ecclesiastical Leasing Acts, 1842 (c. 108) & 1858 (c. 57), did not extend to enable the incumbent of a parish, with the consent of the patron of the living & the Ecclesiastical Comrs., to grant leases of or rights over all or any portion of the churchyard of the parish. On appeal to the Arches Ct. of Canterbury:—Held: the construction put on that faculty by the ct. below was correct &, the grant or refusal of the faculty prayed being in the discretion of the ordinary, by whom that discretion had been properly exercised, the appellate ct. ought not to interfere. Part XII.—Supervision of Burial Grounds by Government Departments.

338. Order in Council—Disused burial ground—Validity—Liability of churchwardens.]—1857 Act, s. 23 applies, & the authority of the Queen in Council can be exercised, only where an existing burial ground is under the care of churchwardens, or other persons who have the charge of it, for the purpose of the burial of the dead.

From 1679 till 1844, land was held by a corp., from time to time, under long leases as a burial ground, & afterwards from year to year, till 1855. No burials took place after 1844, & in 1854 an Order in Council, under 1852 Act, s. 2, was made that burials should be discontinued. In 1857, the freeholder demised the ground for ninety-nine years to S., who entered & put some rubbish on the land; in 1859, S. demised to pltf. for fifty years, & he entered on the land. In the same year, an Order in Council was made under 1857 Act, s. 23, directed to "the person having the care of the burial ground," & served on pltf., to do certain acts. Pltf. disregarded the order, & thereupon the Secretary of State made an order, under 1859 Act, s. 1, on the churchwardens of the parish in which the ground was situate, to do the acts. The churchwardens having entered in pursuance of the order:—Held: the sects. did not apply, & the orders were invalid, & the churchwardens liable as trespassers.—FOSTER v. DODD (1867), L. R. 3 Q. 340. ——— Faculty in aid of Order—Removal of remains from church vaults—Re-interment.]—An Order in Council was made under 1857 Act, s. 23, whereby it was ordered that the churchwardens of the parishes of St. M. & St. A., in the city of London, or such other person or persons as might have the care of the vaults under the parish church of the parishes, should adopt or cause to be adopted the following measures, viz., that all human remains found beneath the floor of the parish church should be removed & forthwith reburied in N. cemetery or some other consecrated burial ground in which interments could legally take place, the work to be carried out under the supervision & to the satisfaction of the medical officer of health for the city of London. After notice of this Order, the rector & churchwardens of the united parishes petitioned the ct. for a faculty for the removal of the remains underneath the parish church to a consecrated site in N. cemetery:—Held: petitioners had taken the proper course, & it was the duty of the ct. to decree a faculty directing the churchwardens to do what was required to be done by the Order in Council, with provisos inserted for the safeguard of the fabric of the church, & for authorising the families of persons buried in the vaults to remove the remains of their relatives to any consecrated burial ground they might select.—ST. MARY-AT-HILL WITH ST. ANDREW HUBBARD (RECTOR, ETC.) v. ST. MARY-AT-HILL WITH ST. ANDREW HUBBARD (PARISHIONERS), [1892] P. 394; 56 J. P. 824.

341. ———]—The powers for preventing vaults or burial places becoming or continuing dangerous or injurious to public health which Her Majesty is empowered to exercise by Order in Council under 1857 Act, s. 23, are not inconsistent with the ct. of the ordinary possessing exclusive jurisdiction to authorise the removal & reinterment of remains buried in consecrated burial places or vaults in consecrated ground.

Where an Order in Council made under the above Act directed the churchwardens of a parish church to remove remains buried beneath the church to some other consecrated burial ground & there to rebury them, & it appeared that such removal was advisable on sanitary grounds, the ct., on the application of the rector & churchwardens of the parish church, decreed a faculty to issue giving authority for the removal & reinterment of the remains, but confining the reinterment to a place of burial to be specified in such faculty, & containing provisos as to the mode & manner in which the removal & reinterment should be carried out, & for safeguarding the interests of the relatives of persons whose remains were proved to have been buried beneath the church.—*ST. 342. ——— Necessity for.]—The churchwardens of a parish church wholly closed for burials, who, purporting to act under an Order in Council under 1857 Act, s. 23, directing the removal & reinterment elsewhere of human remains underneath the church, do or cause to be done the acts therein directed without obtaining a faculty from the ordinary, are guilty of an offence against the laws ecclesiastical, in respect of which they may be cited to appear to answer articles to be administered to them in a criminal suit.

Orders in Council issued under 1857 Act, s. 23, & served on the churchwardens of a parish church ordered that the churchwardens or the persons having care of the vaults under the church should adopt or cause to be adopted the following measures, viz., that the whole of the human remains lying beneath the floor of the church should be removed, & reburied in a specified cemetery or in some other legal burial ground. In consequence of the service of these Orders in Council, the churchwardens, without having obtained any faculty from the ordinary, pulled down all the pews in the church, took up the flooring & monumental slabs in same, & removed certain coffins & human remains buried thereunder, for the purpose of reintering them elsewhere. Burials in the parish had been by law wholly discontinued in 1853, & since that year no burial was recorded to have taken place there:—Held: (1) the acts of the Doft. failed to comply with the order, alleging that he was unable to do so by reason that the field, in which the bones & earth had been placed, was no longer in his occupation or possession:—Held: his conduct amounted to contempt of ct., & unless he obeyed the monition within six days, & certified that he had done so, the ct. would pronounce him in contempt, & signify the contempt to the Ct. of Ch.—ADLAM v. Faculty—Authority exceeded—Revocation.]—In 1854 a local Act of Parliament was obtained to enable the granting of building leases of a certain portion of the cemetery belonging to the parish of A. which had not previously, it was then supposed, been used for the purposes of interment, & which was particularly described in the schedule annexed to the Act. The trustees, under the powers of the Act, contracted for the sale of the ground so described in the schedule, but the contractor, on making excavations therein, found some coffins & remains of bodies. In June, 1858, on the representation that these did not exceed twenty in number, a licence or faculty issued from the consistory ct. for the removal of such coffins & remains, in order that they might be decently & properly interred in the inclosed part of the cemetery. Subsequently, without any further authority, between four hundred & five hundred more coffins were disinterred:—Held: the vicar & churchwardens, to whom the faculty had been directed, had exceeded the powers confided to them by the ordinary, & they must return the faculty into the registry, be admonished to reinter decently all the remains that had been disinterred, & to refrain from disturbing the remains of the dead which had been interred in any portion of the cemetery, & they must pay the costs of the proceedings.—ST. In a faculty authorising, on sanitary grounds, the removal of human remains interred in a parish church, provisions were, by the directions of the ct., inserted exempting from the operation of the faculty several ancient family vaults.—ST. Licence of Secretary of State.]—The Superior of St. Edmund's College, one of the Roman Catholic theological colleges in England, applied to the ct. for a faculty to authorise the removal of the remains of a former superior of the college from their place of interment in a vault in the churchyard of a parish church in the diocese of London to a vault under the chapel of the college wherein three of the predecessors of petitioner & deceased lay buried. The owner of the vault from which it was proposed to remove the remains of deceased could not be discovered, but the incumbent of the parish church in whom the freehold of the churchyard was vested & the next-of-kin of deceased consented to the proposed removal. No evidence was given that the vault under the college chapel had ever been consecrated. The ct. in its discretion granted the faculty, but, being of opinion that the vault under the college chapel was not a consecrated place of burial within 1857 Act, s. 25, directed that the faculty should issue upon condition that it was not to be acted upon until a licence approving the place of reinterment had been obtained from a Secretary of State.

The removal of remains from unconsecrated places of burial being by the above sect. placed under the control of a Secretary of State, the ct. cannot now, as it would have done before the passing of the Act, refuse to exercise whatever

The ordinary may grant a faculty for the exhumation, for the purpose of identification, of a body which has been buried in consecrated ground, & the licence of the Secretary of State is not a condition precedent to the grant, although the faculty may be inoperative until the licence has been obtained. Semble: a body buried in consecrated ground cannot be removed without the sanction of the ordinary.—R. v. TRISTRAM, [1898] 2 Q. B. 371; 67 L. J. Q. B. 857; 79 L. T. 74; 46 W. R. 653; 42 Sol. Jo. 510, D. C.; subsequent proceedings (1899), 80 L. T. 414, D. C.

364. ——— Letters of request.—The Chancellor of the diocese of London, in the exercise of his judicial discretion, may accept letters of request, signed by the President of the Probate, Divorce, & Admty. Div., requesting that in aid of the trial of an issue in a probate action a faculty may be granted authorising the opening of a vault in a consecrated burial ground in the diocese, & the opening & inspection of a coffin there buried, for the purpose of identification, & issue a faculty to give effect to such letters of request.

During the hearing of an opposed cause of faculty instituted for the purpose of obtaining a faculty for the opening of a vault in the consecrated portion of a cemetery at H., & the opening & inspection of a coffin there buried, the Chancellor, with the consent of all parties, adjourned the case to enable petitioners to apply to the President of the Probate, Divorce, & Admty. Div. to issue letters of request to the Chancellor to grant a faculty for the above-mentioned purposes in aid of justice, & of an issue in a pending probate action in which one of petitioners was pltf. On the application before the President it appeared that the probate action had been brought for the revocation of the probate of the will & codicil of a testator, a relative of petitioners, alleged to have been buried in the coffin required to be opened, & on prima facie evidence having been given that testator had been seen alive after the date of the grant of the probate sought to be revoked, the President ordered letters of request to issue. Some evidence to the same effect had also been given in the faculty suit previously to the issue of the letters of request, & it had been proved there that one of petitioners was registered in the books of the cemetery, a cemetery established under a private Act of Parliament, as the owner of the vault proposed to be opened. The grant of the faculty was opposed by the surviving exor. of testator & by other parties interested under the will, & on their behalf evidence was tendered to the Chancellor to show that testator had died before the date of the probate, & had been buried in the coffin proposed to be opened:—Held: (1) the ct. in the exercise of its discretion, would accept the letters of request, reject the evidence tendered on behalf of the opponents, & decree a faculty to issue according to the tenor of the letters of request; (2) 1857 Act, s. 25, did not require that a proviso should be inserted in the faculty that the faculty was granted subject to the licence of one of Her Majesty's principal Secretaries of State. Semble: the faculty might be lawfully acted upon without any such licence having been obtained.—DRUCE v. YOUNG, [1899] P. 84.

365. ——— Jurisdiction of ecclesiastical court—Cemetery company.—An ecclesiastical ct. has no power, in granting a faculty to disinter a body buried in consecrated ground, to cite the cemetery co. to whom the ground belongs to appear before it for the purpose of making an order against such cemetery co. that the body should be disinterred.

A faculty was granted by an ecclesiastical ct. to open a certain vault in consecrated ground & to open the lid of a coffin interred therein. In order to open the lid of the coffin it would be necessary to remove another coffin which contained a body. Semble: a licence of a Secretary of State, pursuant to 1857 Act, s. 25, was required for such removal in addition to the faculty.—R. v. TRISTRAM (1899), 80 L. T. 414; 63 J. P. 391; 47 W. R. 639; 15 T. L. R. 214; 43 Sol. Jo. 280, D. C.

367. Removal to another vault—Not consecrated—Licence of Secretary of State.—Re TALBOT, No. 361, ante.

368. Removal to Roman Catholic cemetery—From Protestant cemetery—Faculty granted subject to licence of Secretary of State.—Re SEWARD & CASELLA (1909), Times, Nov. 27th.

369. Cremation—Scope of faculty.—The dead body of testator whose will contained no direction as to the mode or place of his burial, but who had expressed a wish that his wife should have the option of disposing of his remains in one of two ways, either by burial or cremation, was buried by his widow in a mausoleum in the consecrated part of a cemetery. Eighteen years afterwards the widow applied to the ct. for a faculty for the removal of the remains from the mausoleum where they had been so buried to a crematorium at W. for the purpose of being there cremated, the ashes resulting from the cremation to be then placed in an urn, & the urn & its contents deposited in the mausoleum. The ct. having directed that the exors. of the will, if living, should have notice of the application, & that evidence should be brought in as to whether the cremation could be carried out without any difficulties as to sanitation, it appeared that the exors. were dead & that the cremation could be carried out so as to be perfectly decent & harmless to health:—Held: the faculty must be refused.

The ct. is accustomed in proper cases to grant faculties for the removal of the remains buried in consecrated ground for the sole purpose of such remains being reinterred in other consecrated

SECT. 1.—BURIALS IN CHURCHYARDS.

371. Register—As evidence—Copy.]—To prove that W. of L. was dead, his will, dated in 1817, from the Prerogative Ct., was produced, & an examined copy of the register of burials of L. of 1817, containing an entry of the burial of "W. of L."; & it was stated by a niece of W. that he was dead, & that she had received a legacy of £100 under his will, but was not at the place when he died:—Held: to be sufficient evidence of the death of W.—DOE d. HALL v. PENFOLD (1838), 8 C. & P. 536, N. P.

372. ——— Extracts—Signature—Officer having custody.]—Under Evidence Act, 1851 (c. 99), s. 14, extracts from parish registers of deaths, purporting to be signed, some by the "incumbent," some by the "rector," some by the "vicar," & some by the "curate" of the parishes:—Held: to be receivable in evidence on a petition for the payment of money out of ct., each incumbent being an "officer to whose custody," etc. within the Act.—Re HALL'S ESTATE (1852), 2 De G. M. & G. 748; 9 Hare, App. 1, xvi.; 22 L. J. Ch. 177; 20 L. T. O. S. 187; 17 Jur. 29; 1 W. R. 2; 42 E. R. 1064, L. J.

373. ——— ——— ———.]—An extract from a parish register (certificate of burial), signed by the curate of the parish, is admissible in evidence under Evidence Act, 1851, s. 14.—Re PORTER'S TRUSTS (1856), 25 L. J. Ch. 688; 20 J. P. 741; 2 Jur. N. S. 349; 4 W. R. 443.

374. ——— Custody—Parish clerk.]—A witness on a trial stated that he went to K. for the purpose of comparing a certificate of burial with the parish register, & was directed to the clerk's house, & there saw a person who said he was parish clerk, & who produced to him a book containing entries of burials with which he compared the certificate:—Held: as Parochial Registers Act, 1812 (c. 150), s. 5, directed the parish registers to be kept by the clergyman, & as no explanation was given of the book being in the possession of the clerk, it had not been produced from the proper custody, & the evidence was inadmissible.—DOE d. ARUNDEL (LORD) v. FOWLER (1850), 14 Q. B. 700; 19 L. J. Q. B. 151; 14 L. T. O. S. 417; 14 J. P. 114; 14 Jur. 179; 117 E. R. 270.

375. ——— Search—Charge for extracts.]—Pltf. applied to deft., a parish clerk, for liberty to search the register book of burials. He told deft. that he did not want certificates, but only to make extracts. Deft. said the charge would be the same whether he made extracts or had certificates. Pltf. searched through four years, & made twenty-five extracts, for which deft. charged him 3s. 6d. each, & he paid deft. £4 7s. 6d.:—Held: (1) the charge for extracts was illegal, since the Births & Deaths Registration Act, 1836 (c. 86), s. 35, only authorised a charge for a search, & for a certified copy; (2) the payment was not voluntary, so as to preclude pltf. from recovering back the excess; (3) deft. was the proper person to be sued.—*STEELE v. 376. Register—As evidence—Wesleyan burial ground.]—In an action for use & occupation by the reversioner, against a person who had been tenant for years, determinable on three lives, a register of burials of a Wesleyan chapel is not admissible to prove the death of one of the cestuis que vie. Semble: a copy of an inscription on a tombstone in the burial ground of a Wesleyan chapel is also not evidence for this purpose.—*WHITTUCK v. Deft. pleaded that he was not bound by statute or common law to register any one:—Held: Parochial Registers Act, 1812 (c. 146), s. 3, & 1880 Act, s. 10, made it the duty of deft. to register the burial.—*R. v. The body was buried in unconsecrated ground with the assent of the exors. Afterwards W. representing to the Under-Secretary of State that she intended to bury it in consecrated ground, obtained his licence to remove it. She caused it to be burnt in Italy, & then brought an action against the exors. for the expenses:—Held: a direction by will as to the disposition of testator's body could not be enforced. Qu.: whether it was lawful to burn a dead body. —WILLIAMS v. 380. — Prevention of Inquest—Nuisance.]—To burn a dead body, instead of burying it, is not a misdemeanour, unless it is so done as to amount to a public nuisance. If an inquest ought to be held upon a dead body, it is a misdemeanour so to dispose of the body as to prevent the coroner from holding the inquest.—R. v. PRICE (1884), 12 Q. B. D. 247; 53 L. J. M. 382. — In private house—1902 Act, s. 8 (3).—J. was indicted in four counts under 1902 Act, s. 8 (3), for that she, with intent to conceal the commission of certain offences therein specified, procured the cremation of certain dead bodies. The bodies, which were those of children, were burnt by prisoner in a kitchen range or stove in prisoner's own house. Counsel for the defence having submitted that "cremation" in the sect. did not mean burning, but burning in a crematorium:—Held: there was no evidence on these counts "of procuring the cremation of any body" to go to the jury.—R. v. BYERS (1907), 71 J. P. 205.

383. Disposal of ashes—In consecrated ground—With burial service.]—Semble: where there has been a previous cremation in pursuance of directions left by deceased, there is no legal objection to the ashes resulting therefrom being buried in consecrated ground, accompanied with the use of the burial service.—Re DIXON, [1892] P. 386; 56 J. P. 841; 8 T. L. R. 714.

384. — In parish church—Closed for burials—Faculty.]—The vicar & churchwardens of a parish church, in the diocese of London, built under Church Building Act, 1818 (c. 47), & closed for burials by virtue of an Order in Council under 1853 Act, concurred in an application by the widow of a parishioner, whose dead body had been cremated, praying the consistory ct. to authorise by faculty the formation of a niche in the wall of the church & above the level of the floor, & the permanently placing therein of a sealed urn, containing the cremated ashes of such dead body. By the affidavit to lead the faculty it appeared that deceased during his life had expressed a wish that in the event of his death his remains might be cremated, & a certificate was brought in to the effect that the vestry of the parish was in favour of the remains being interred beneath the church:—Held: (1) the burial of the cremated ashes of a dead body in the church had not been prohibited by Church Building Act, 1818, Public Health Acts, 1848 (c. 63) & 1875 (c. 55), or by the Order in Council closing the church under 1853 Act, the provisions in those Acts as to "burial" not applying to the burial of the remains of a corpse after it had been reduced to ashes, & the ct. had jurisdiction in its discretion to grant the faculty as prayed, but must decline to do so having regard to the inconvenience which might ensue in case of alterations in the church, etc., if the urn was deposited in the church wall according to the proposal of appct.; (2) the ct. having ascertained from the Home Office that no objection on sanitary grounds was entertained by the Home Secretary to the interment of the urn containing the remains below the floor of the church, was prepared at the request of appct. to decree the issue of a faculty for the urn & its contents being so interred below the church, subject to a proper fee for the interment being paid to the incumbent of the parish. Semble: (1) cremated remains cannot lawfully be interred in or under a parish church except under the authority of a faculty from the ordinary; (2) notice of the burial of the remains should be entered in a parochial burial register to be kept in the church.—Re KERR, [1894] P. 284; 10 T. g. Whether a public nuisance.]—Held: persons, entitled to use particular spots dedicated for the communal purpose of cremation, who use it for that purpose in a manner neither unusual nor calculated to aggravate the inconveniences necessarily incidental to such act cannot be convicted of a public nuisance on the ground that their act caused material annoyance & discomfort to persons near the place on a particular occasion.—R. v. 386. Income tax—Cemetery company—Keeping graves in order—Lump sum payment.]—Appls. were a commercial & dividend paying co. owning & occupying two cemeteries of which they were the freeholders. They undertook in perpetuity the repair of graves & monuments, & the decoration of graves, upon payment of lump sums of money:—Held: in calculating the balance of profits upon which applts. were liable to be assessed to income tax under Income Tax Act, 1842, s. 60, Sched. A., No. 3, there ought to be set against the lump sums not merely the sums annually expended by applts. in the maintenance, repair, & decoration of the graves & monuments, but the capitalised value of the whole of the expenditure that applts. might be estimated to incur in discharging the obligations in perpetuity in respect of which the lump sums had been paid.—*LONDON CEMETERY CO. v. Poor rate—Cemetery company—Sale of exclusive rights.]—A co., incorporated by statute, had power to purchase land for the purpose of a cemetery, to make vaults & catacombs in it, & to sell, in perpetuity or for a term, the exclusive right of burial therein, subject to the rules & regulations of the co., & to payment of burial fees to them. They were bound to keep the buildings, external walls, & every part of the cemetery in repair:—Held: (1) the co. were liable to be rated to the relief of the poor as occupiers of the whole cemetery, though they had, in fact, sold in perpetuity the exclusive right of burial in the vaults, catacombs, etc., made by them, had ceased to exercise any act of ownership over them after the sale, & had delivered the keys to the purchasers; (2) the profits, arising from such sales, ought to be included in the ratable value of the cemetery.—*R. v. 388. ———.]—A co. purchased lands & laid them out as a cemetery. They received fees for interments & conveyed plots of ground to be used as graves. In one year £2,333 was received by the co. as purchase-money for such plots of ground. Each plot was conveyed by indenture purporting to grant it in fee simple upon trust that the grantee might use it as a place of burial, subject to the regulations of the co., & subject to such trusts, in trust for the co. as part of their property. The co. were rated as the occupiers of the lands & upon the principle that the £2,333 was to be treated as part of the annual value of the occupation of the lands by the co. in that year:—Held: the co. were in occupation of the plots of ground which had been sold, & the principle upon which they were rated was correct.—*R. v. Improvement expenses—Burial fees.]—By a local Act it was provided that the owners & occupiers of houses, buildings, ground or land within or adjoining certain new streets, for the purpose of laying out & erecting which the Act was passed, should be liable to contribute towards certain preliminary expenses. Among the improvements contemplated & carried out under the Act, was the erection of a church & churchyard in a square, & by the deed of consecration the Rev.
